fetched him back than Mr. Harold is. I tell you, it's as sartain as that yon sun 'll set i' the west when his day's jonnay's ower. All that you ha' to do, Sir Godwin, is to sit still an' see the salvation o' God. It may be that the Lord's compelled you to sit, so that you mayn't interfere with His designs. Oh, Sir Godwin, have faith in God! I said that the mouth of the Lord hath spokken it. Believe Him! If you do, it will be better for yourself an' for Miss Ethel and for Mr. Harold, an' all."

"Well, Simon," said the baronet with a sigh that was half faith and half fear, "I cannot deny it. It's all very strange. I could wish that I had your firm, unquestioning faith."

"An' why shouldn't you, Sir Godwin?" said Simon, quietly and encouragingly. "It's for you as much as for onybody else. The good God wants to strengthen an' save you an' comfort you. I don't kno' onybody that needs Him more, and I kno' there's nobody i' the wo'ld more welcome to all that He can do."

(To be continued.)

JOSEPH SOLD INTO EGYPT.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for April 3, Gen. 37 : 23-36. Golden Text, Gen. 39 : 21.

Jacob an Unjust Father—His Partiality a Source of Family Discord—Brings Misery to Joseph as well as to his Brothers—The Brothers Jealous—Sceptical About the Visions—The Discipline of Persecution—Joseph Sent to Look After the Brothers—Their Scheme to Thwart the Visions—The God-appointed Test of Spirituality—Reuben's Weakness—Judah's Proposal Adopted—God Overruling the Plots of Wicked Men—The Deceiver of Isaac Deceived.

JACOB never saw his mother again, but he saw his father Isaac, and was present with Esau at his burial. After his father's death, he "dwelt in the land wherein his father was a stranger, in the land of Canaan." His family had grown large, and all but the two youngest were grown to manhood. But there is no evidence that any of them, except Joseph, were "alive unto God." Jacob's spiritual sympathies very naturally went out to his young son who shared his thoughts and feelings, "he loved Joseph more than all his children." This roused the jealousy and indignation of Joseph's brethren, and they hated him, not because of anything in him which they could complain of, but because of their father's injustice. So Joseph became an object of love on the one hand, and of hate on the other, and both were equally trying.

Partiality in Families is a terrible curse, and it often leads to terrible sin. By nature we think of what is due to us and measure everybody by their relations to us; if they do not come up to our standard in their treatment of us, we can see no good in them. It was thus with the unconverted sons of Jacob in regard to their father, but, just like the unreasonableness and cowardice of self, they vented their anger, not on their father, for whom they still had some respect, but on their young brother who was the innocent cause of their bitter jealousy. They had, too, a consciousness of his real superiority to them in things spiritual, and this maddened them and made them all the more angry. It is easy for a would-be professor to vaunt his own holiness and devotion, but few, unless they were the most hardened hypocrites, would invent communications from God to them. Joseph knew what it was

To Have God Speak to Him.

In all the sadness of his life in his family, Joseph had made an acquaintance with God which would never have been so true and close but for the trial of his faith. Like Job, he felt that when he was tried he would "come forth as gold" (Job 23 : 10).* But Joseph acted as many young believers do—he told his dreams into the unwilling ears of his brothers; and it had no good effect on them, but only intensified their hatred of him. Who was he, the youngest among them, that God should speak to him? and they would not believe he had those visions. But between him and God it was no uncertain thing that the Joseph who was oppressed, despised, hated of his brethren, should be exalted above them all. Thus Joseph lived an inner life with God in the midst of all his trials. It seems necessary that many of God's dear children, who are appointed by Him to be eminently useful in the world, should go through much of suffering in their early Christian life, in order that, by learning to be "faithful in that which is least," they may know how to "be faithful also in much" (Luke 16 : 10). Joseph stood true to God; while his brethren hated him, he continued to love them, and he never took up his own cause but left God to order it.

Jacob's riches had increased, and his flocks and herds had to be taken long distances to find pasture. His sons, of course, were partners with him in the cattle trade, and one day Jacob sent Joseph to a considerable distance to visit them, and report of their welfare, and how the farm stock prospered. Joseph was not unwilling; the very nearness of his heart to God made it easy to him to love without return; his love was not the satisfaction of a heart in that which pleased itself, it was the outflow of a heart which could give all without asking anything in return. In the love of God and that of his father he had enough.

Joseph took pains to find his brethren. There are some persons who, when they are on an unpleasant errand, are only too thankful if something turns up which may be taken as a plausible excuse for neglecting their mission. But the Lord was with him, and he had no wish to shirk a meeting with his brethren, however unpleasant it might be. The principle which guided him was not, "What would I like? What would be most pleasant and easy to me?" But, "What would please God?" So, not finding his brethren at Shechem, he followed them until he found traces of them at Dothan. Full of love to them, he found them full of bitterness against him. Even before he reached them, their scornful animosity broke out in the words, "Behold, this dreamer cometh. Come now therefore, and led us slay him, and cast him into some pit: and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams." If they could prove that his communion with God came to nothing, then they would have to boast, either that God did not keep His word, or that Joseph's relations with Him were false and unreal, and thus they would be the righteous exposers of a hypocrite instead of the persecutors of a true child of God, and, as such, acting in enmity to Him. Oh how many men of the world take all Christians for hypocrites without regard to

Joseph Lived Before God,

The Test which God has Provided.

"By their fruits ye shall know them" (Matt. 7 : 20). If professors of Christianity do not show forth the love, the truth, the purity which belongs to the true disciples of Christ, we cannot expect that they shall be recognized as belonging to Him, but if they do, then men are bound to recognize them as His.

Reuben, feeling his responsibility as the eldest son, delivered Joseph out of his brothers' hands, saying, "Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness." Reuben thought to deliver him altogether, and to bring him back to his father, but Reuben was "unstable as water" (Gen. 49 : 3), and when he found that all his other brethren were against him, he had no grace of God, nor even upright principle to make him firm to do the right thing. How many Christians are swayed in a similar manner by the last influence brought to bear upon them. Nothing but the knowledge of God's presence with us, the consciousness of His being more really to be trusted than those who surround us, that He really does undertake that which is committed to Him, makes us independent of man.

Joseph's brethren had their way. Having first, in their heartless injustice and cruelty, enjoyed a hearty meal, while Joseph was suffering all the horrors of an expected murder in the pit, they were about to consider the next step, when a company of Ishmaelites came by, a caravan engaged in commercial traffic, probably between Damascus and Egypt. Judah, who was a stronger character than his brother Reuben, and who usually took the lead, proposed, as an amendment to their first plan, that Joseph should be sold instead of killed. "What profit is it if we slay our brother and conceal his blood? Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmaelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother and our flesh." Judah prevailed, his brethren agreed, and the fate of the innocent Joseph was thus sealed. Another merchant company, Midianites, passed by, and to them Joseph was sold in spite of "the anguish of his soul" when he entreated them to release him (Gen. 42 : 21).

But his brethren could not take Joseph out of the hands of God. "The wicked plotteth against the just, and gnasheth upon h m with his teeth." "Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down: for the Lord upholdeth him with His hand" (Ps. 37 : 12, 24).

God Overruled

and worked out His own purposes through the wrongdoing of man. And He is doing so still. A mighty unseen engine is at work in the life of each one of us. "My Father worketh hitherto and I work" (John 5 : 17). He makes "all things work together for good to them that love God." In all which happens He keeps His hand upon the spring, and no word or deed, no sickness, no loss can be greater or more trying than He permits. A certain amount of strain is brought upon His work that it may be fairly tested, but as soon as the work is proved it is taken off. The future ruler of Egypt must be he needed quite another education from that of his brethren. Thus, while their wicked plot seemed to succeed, and they seemed to have everything their own way, Joseph, who might have been thought to deserve success, was thwarted and oppressed on every hand. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth" (Heb. 12 : 6).

Fitted for the Position;

But Joseph's brethren, how was it with them? The wicked flourish like a green bay-tree sometimes, but it is not forever. They kept their secret, but tore their father's heart with sorrow in the belief that his son Joseph had been torn by wild beasts, in proof of which they brought his coat of many colors, his father's gift to him, stained with the blood of a kid which they had killed on purpose. The poor old man was, all unknown to himself, reaping the fruits of his sinful partiality, and sadly, indeed, did the duplicity of the father live again in his children. They played their part well; in assumed ignorance they brought the stained coat to their father as though it had been accidentally discovered. He was taken in, and said, "It is my son's coat; an evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces;" and for many a long day Jacob mourned, and all attempts to comfort him were unavailing. In this, too, God was at work.

* We could not afford to lose one trial through which God leads us. "Tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience," (Rom. 5 : 3, 4.)

The Prophetic News and Israel's Watchman (London), edited by the Rev. M Baxter, may be had from the office of this journal, 63 Bible House, New York, price, six cents, including postage. Annual subscription, seventy cents. The following articles among others are contained in the number for March:

Break-up of Political Parties.
Review of Current Theories of Socialism.
The Wire-Puller of the World.
The Napoleonic Theory of the Antichrist.
The Antichrist of Scripture. By Mr. W. Greene, C.E.
"Over Whom will Christ Reign During the Millennium?"
A Leader in Israel; Joseph Rabinowitz.
Condition of the Church and World.
Earthquakes in France and Italy.
Passing Events Viewed from a Prophetic Standpoint.

[Bound volumes containing the monthly numbers for 1884 or 1883 may be had, price, $1.]

HE CARETH.

"Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you. 1 PETER v, 7.

WHAT can it mean? Is it aught to Him
That the nights are long and the days are dim?
Can He be touched by the griefs I bear,
Which sadden the heart and whiten the hair?
Around His throne are eternal calms,
And strong glad music of happy psalms,
And bliss unruffled by any strife.
How can He care for my little life?

And yet I want Him to care for me
While I live in this world where the sorrows be.
When the lights die down from the path I take,
When strength is feeble and friends forsake,
When love and music, that once did bless,
Have left me to silence and loneliness,
And my life-song changes to sobbing prayers,
Then my heart cries out for a God who cares.

When shadows hang o'er me the whole day long,
And my spirit is bowed with shame and wrong,
When I am not good, and the deeper shade
Of conscious sin makes my heart afraid,
And the busy world has too much to do
To stay in its course to help me through,
And I long for a Saviour—can it be
That the God of the universe cares for me?

Oh, wonderful story of deathless love!
Each child is dear to that heart above.
He fights for me when I cannot fight,
He comforts me in the gloom of night;
He lifts the burden, for He is strong,
He stills the sigh and awakens the song;
The sorrows that bowed me down He bears,
And loves and pardons because He cares.

Let all who are sad take heart again;
We are not alone in our hours of pain;
Our Father stoops from His throne above
To soothe and quiet us with His love.
He leaves us not when the storm is high
And we have safety, for He is nigh,
Can it be trouble which He doth share?
Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord does care.

Sunday.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poems in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST AT HAND.—We live in those days wherein the Lord will gather His Israel out of both Jew and Christian Churches, that their spirit, soul and body may be preserved blameless to receive the Lord at His coming. Rom. ix, 4; Isa. xi, 11, 12; Rev. vii, 4; Rom. viii, 29; Rev. xvi, 1; 1 Thess. v, 20, 21, 23; 1 Cor. xv, 52, 53; Phi. iii, 21; Mark xiii, 20; Math. xxiv, 14; Rom. viii, 11, 22, 23; Rev. xxi, 1, 4, 5; John xiv, 16, 17, 20. Further information can be obtained in two different book at 12c. each. Mention this paper. Address:
J. WIELE, 143 N. Sixth St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF HENRY WARD BEECHER
by THOS. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

MOTH-WAX.
Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller. It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.
In one pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every county, town and county.
WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LANE, N. Y.
For sale by W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & CO., 170 and 172 William St., N. Y., and the wholesale drug trade.

FLOWERS QUEENS NURSERY, Established 1870. New Choice Flower Seeds and Fancy Novelties. Plants tested and found of sterling merit, and choicest seeds for Summer bloom only sent out. Catalogue mailed free.
WAYTE & CO., Queens, New York.

Pall Mall Electric Association, London. Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CURLER. Sent on Trial Postpaid. 50c.

By its aid the hair, beard or moustache can be curled any desired style in from one to two minutes. For ladies it produces the "Langtry Style," the "Pat" Bang," the "Montague Curl," and any other form desired by ladies wearing their hair in the fashionable "loose and fluffy" mode. Gentlemen's moustaches and beards curled for the day in a few seconds. A beautiful article; handle of rosewood, other part nickel-plated.

Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC TOOTH BRUSH. 50c.

Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC TOOTH BRUSH. The finest Tooth Brush ever made, construct by a new patented process which renders it impossible for bristles to come out in use. Each of above articl guaranteed and sent on trial, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50cts., or both for $1. They may be returned not satisfactory. CANVASSING AGENTS WANTED for Dr. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CORSET BRUSHES, BELTS, Etc. No risk, quick sales. GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, New York. Sold at Drug and Fancy Stores. Mention this publicatio

COMFORT OF THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.
SOMETHING NEW.

An exquisitely colored picture, with illuminated text. The central thought is a shepherd leading his flock by the still waters; the halo around his head, reminding all of the Great Sheperd of whom David wrote when he sang this psalm. The verses which tell of the comfort are printed in dark blue and gold upon a delicately tinted background. It is a gem of art, and will bring bright sunshine to every home and comfort to every sick room. This card, 8 x 10, has just been published, and is obtainable only through our house. It has the advantage of needing with a gold border upon heavy card plate. Safely packed, we send it postage paid on receipt of twenty-five cents; three copies, fifty cents; seven copies, one dollar. Lower prices for large orders.
WM. P. BRECK & CO., 12 Cortlandt Street, New York.
☞ To Dealers, Agents, and Sunday-School Teachers, Special Rates.

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1887
Will be sent FREE to all who write for it. It is a Handsome Book of 128 pages, with hundreds of illustrations, Three Colored Plates, and tells all about THE BEST Garden, Farm and Flower Seeds, Bulbs, Plants, Thoroughbred Stock and Fancy Poultry. It describes RARE NOVELTIES in VEGETABLES and FLOWERS, of real value, which cannot be obtained elsewhere. Send address on a postal for the most complete Catalogue published, to
W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SCOTT'S FLOWERS
38 Years' Experience in growing our strong and reliable ROSES. Grand Specialties in PLANTS, BULBS & FLOWER SEEDS of extra choice quality. Rare Novelties of great beauty. Handsomely illustrated Catalogue for 1887 with a lovely Colored Plate of Scott's Mammoth Pansies sent FREE to any address. Send for it now. ROBERT SCOTT & SON, Philadelphia, Pa

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING ROSES
For 18 Years our Great Specialty has been growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the Latest Novelties and finest standard sorts in different sizes and prices to suit all. We send STRONG, VIGOROUS PLANTS safely by mail or express to all points.
3 TO 12 PLANTS $1, $8 to $25 per Hundred.
Our New Guide, 88 pp., describes nearly 500 finest varieties of Roses, the best Hardy Shrubs, & Climbing Vines, and New and Rare Flower Seeds, and tells how to grow them—FREE. Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa

CLUB ORDERS
We have made a specialty since 1871 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Cruets as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Ware Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.
GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

AGENTS WANTED Samples Free; for DR. SCOTT'S beautiful Eclectic Corsets, Brushes, Belts, Etc. No risk, quick sales. Territory given. Satisfaction guaranteed.
DR. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, New York.

FARM SEEDS. Send for circular giving full description and price list of best farm seeds, including corn, oats and potatoes.
ISAAC SELTZER, Jr.,
Glen Tree, Chester Co., Pa.

MANHATTAN
LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
NEW YORK.
The leading features of this sterling company are:
1. Strength. It has the largest clear surplus over liabilities.
2. Careful Conservatism. Shown by thirty-five years of experience.
3. Liberality and Fair Dealing. Its policy contracts are free from all objectionable restrictions. Every policy issued by this company for more than twenty years contains an incontestable clause.
4. It is Just and Equitable. As demonstrated by large dividends paid to holders.
THE NEW ENDOWMENT PLAN.
of this company is the most attractive feature of life underwriting. It gives the best combination of advantages offered by any plan in use.
This will will be fully explained if you call or write.
JAMES M. McLEAN, President.
J. L. HALSEY, 1st Vice-Pres't. H. Y. WEMPLE, Secretary.
H. B. STOKES, 2d Vice-Pres't. S. N. STEBBINS, Actuary.

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE
A new book containing plans and specifications for 25 houses, all sizes, from 2 rooms up. Sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents, by J. S. OGILVIE & CO., 31 Rose Street, New York.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED for PLATFORM ECHOES or LIVING TRUTHS FOR HEAD AND HEART,
By John B. Gough.
His last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos. Bright, pure, and good, full of "laughter and tears," it sells at sight to all. To it is added the Life and Death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. LYMAN ABBOTT. 1000 Agents Wanted.—Men and Women. $100 to $200 a month made. No Distance no hindrance as we give Extra Terms and Duy Freights. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

UNIVERSITY ORGANS.
They Lead the World. $35 to $500. Sold Direct to Families. No Middlemen. Solid Walnut 5 Octaves Double Couplers. Guaranteed for Six Years and sent, with Stool and Book, for TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. $35
ESTABLISHED 1859. MARCHAL & SMITH,
285 East 21st Street, New York.

JAMES McCREERY & CO in order to insure the immediate disp of the balance of last season's stock of BLACK VELVET GRENADINES, have made the following remarkabl ductions: $1.50, $2 and $3 per yard: duced from $4.50, $3.50 and $5.
They also continue to offer BLACK B. CADED GRENADINES at the unusu low price of $1 per yard; former pr $2.75c. per yard; former price, $1.50.
This is a rare chance to secure relia materials on the most economical basis Orders by mail carefully filled.
Address
James McCreery & C
Broadway, cor. Eleventh St.,
NEW YORK.

THINK FOR YOURSEL
IF YOU ARE A SENSIBLE WOMA AND BELIEVE THAT Health, Comfort, and Beau ARE DESIRABLE THINGS, BUY GOOD SENS
CORDED CORSET WAIS
Beautifully made of BE MATERIALS throughc
THOUSANDS NOW IN US
☞ Be sure your Corset stamped "Good Sense FIT ALL AGES—Infa to Adults. Sold by LEADING RETAILER everywhere. Send for circul
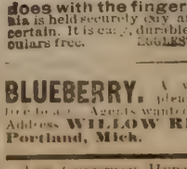
FERRIS BROS., Manufacture
341 Broadway, NEW YORK

For Easter
"Christ Triumphant." Thorough Scriptural a Devotional for Easter Sunday. A strong and insp ating Service, by Rev. ROBERT LOWRY.
Price $4 per 100; 5 cts. each by Mail.
Easter Annual No. 11. New and origi Easter Carols able composers. Just issued. Very useful for Sc day School Festivals. Nos. 1 to 10 also furnish same price.
Price $4 per 100; 5 cts. each if by Mai
A fine assortment of Easter Anthems from 5 cts to 25 cents each.
A complete Catalogue of Easter Music, Service Carols, Anthems, etc., sent on request.
BIGLOW & MAIN,
76 East Ninth Street, New York
CHICAGO HOUSE, 81 Randolph St.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL
THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS



Has a Pad different from a others, is cup shape, with Self adjusting Ball in center, adapt itself to all positions of t body while the ball in the ce presses back the intes tines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Her nia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is cheap, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Cir culars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

BLUEBERRY. A valuable fruit to grow for profit and pleasure and profit. Price list free. Agents wanted to sell plants. Outfit free. Address WILLOW RIDGE FRUIT FARM, Portland, Mich.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 13. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1887. Price, 3 Cents. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PICTURES OF SCENES IN THE RIVIERA EARTHQUAKE ON FEBRUARY 23.

A BROAD GOSPEL. Dr. Talmage's Sermon at Des Moines, Ia., Last Sunday Morning.

EVENTS OF THE FINAL THIRTEEN YEARS OF THIS AGE. By Rev. M. Baxter.

A Chinese Governor's Warning—Dr. Justin Fulton's Crusade Against Popery—A Prince in a Kitchen—The First Moorish Convert, etc.

PICTURE OF THE FIRE AT THE RICHMOND HOTEL, AT BUFFALO, N. Y., ON MARCH 18.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Interstate Commerce Commission Appointed—Senator Sherman in Nashville—The New Minister to Turkey—A Scientist's Prediction of Earthquakes—Peace or War in Europe—The Irish Coercion Debate—Emperor William's Ninetieth Birthday Celebration—The Two Stowaways on the Kansas—Two Families Pursued by Floods—A Mouse Causing a Panic in Church, etc.

THE PLEADING OF THE LAST MESSENGER. A New Sermon by C. H. Spurgeon.

PORTRAITS OF SENATORS PADDOCK, STEWART AND TURPIE.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

Gems from New Books: The Way of the Ants.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

JOSEPH EXALTED. By Mrs. M. Baxter.

Scenes in the Appalling Earthquake in the Riviera on February 23.

FURTHER DETAILS OF THE EARTHQUAKE IN THE RIVIERA.

Scenes in the Riviera—The Panic in the Streets of Nice—A Press Correspondent's Experience in a Hotel—Searching the Ruins of Diano Marina—Prayers of Students Amid the Crashing Walls—A Child Extricated Alive—The Ruins of Mentone—The Exodus from Nice—A Vivid Narrative of an Eye-witness.

THE accounts of the appalling earthquake on February 23d, in the Riviera, published in this journal on March 3d and 10th, compiled from the cable reports, can this week be supplemented by the fuller intelligence which the mail has brought. A series of illustrations also sent to us from Europe, which appear on the first page, will enable readers to gain a vivid idea of the calamity. The first illustration represents a few minutes after the first shock, when belated revellers from the ball-rooms and awakened sleepers in hotels and private houses made a rush for the open spaces beyond the reach of falling buildings. A correspondent says, "The whole town was instantly awakened. The houses shook as if beaten by a hurricane. Walls cracked, balconies fell, holes opened in the floors. So violent was the agitation that some were thrown from their beds on to the floor. From private houses, hotels, and pensions an immediate stampede took place. Few waited to put on wraps, or any other clothes than those in which they were sleeping. Some were made prisoners in their rooms by the jamming of the doors. These were rescued by those without who broke open the doors. Then, all together, men, women, children, and servants rushed down the stairs."

The Scene in the Nice Streets

The correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette gives a graphic description of his own escape from his hotel. He says: "I was rudely awakened by feeling my bed violently shaken as if by some mighty hand! The room, too, I was immediately aware, was rocking from side to side, so that my candlesticks and my water-bottle fell with a crash, and as I sprang from the bed I was thrown forward, and could hardly stand. At the same time there was a fearful sound of

People Running and Shouting

on the promenade outside; there were doors opening hurriedly inside, and cries of terror. I grasped at once the idea of what it must be, and the whole thing was so sudden that I felt no alarm whatever. I hastily put on everything I could find—a most incongruous mass of clothing—and went out to the corridor, which I found full of dust and flying plaster, the outer wall split down and gaping, and the stone staircase, up and down from my floor, covered thick with great pieces of fallen plaster, which left the walls open-mouthed, as it were, in the great spaces several feet square. I heard screams and horrible confusion above on the second floor, and knowing the ladies whose rooms were there, and full of curiosity and a not disagreeable excitement myself, I went up to them. I climbed, rather, for, as I said, the stairs were only a slope of débris, and the balustrade to which I clung shook under my grasp. In the corridor above I found damage and terror indescribable; the wall of the outer room, inhabited by two sisters, one of whom was in very delicate health, was split entirely down, and everything in the room overturned. The air was insufferable with dust, the floor covered with plaster and every kind of property, and the corridor was full of anxious ladies in scanty clothing, choked, terrified, and knowing not how to get down.

"Just then came the second shock. A young girl seized me and dragged me into her room, and as she did so we rocked against the door, and again the steady, went on. More crashing, more dust; cries of terror, and ejaculated prayers from those around me. I began to get alarmed; the sensation was awful; and if a third shock of any magnitude came suddenly the wing where we were must go down, and the end of that, for us, was not pleasant to contemplate. Every one then ran, slid, tumbled, rolled down the stairs; the invalid young lady fell from top to bottom. One could laugh now thinking of it. I regained my room, and putting on hat and ulster, and seizing my watch and purse, got ready to join the crowd already assembled on the beach. Once more the steady shake made itself felt, lasting two or three seconds only, and doing little more damage. However, I hastened now out to the shore, where were gathered all sorts and conditions of men, in every stage of undress and panic. Clear and beautiful the sun rose over the sea, which stretched waveless and lucent before us. Somebody produced a watch, and we gathered that it was nearly seven o'clock—at least I think we did. The panic was so great that no one knew anything rightly."

Stealthy, Horrible Shake

Illustration No. 2

represents the scene at Diano Marina later in the day, when the survivors were searching the ruins for any victims who might be still alive under the ruins. Diano Marina suffered severely. Many who were escaping from the falling houses were caught by the later shocks and buried under falling masonry. Several officers, who saw the disasters caused by the earthquake at Casamicciola, on July 28th, 1883, declare that this in the Riviera was more appalling. One reason of the fearful loss of life at Diano Marina was that all the houses were built over large vaults containing oil, the town having a large trade in that commodity with France and Germany. These vaults became so many sepulchres. Rescuers proceeded with the greatest caution to extricate the sufferers from under the ruins at the earliest moment.

The danger of the remaining walls falling in was so great that the utmost caution had to be taken. The inhabitants seemed paralyzed by the magnitude of the disaster, and looked on without taking any part in the efforts which were being made. Signor Genala, Minister of Public Works, sent two hundred workmen and troops to assist. This promptitude on the part of the minister made an excellent impression on the panic-stricken population. The most painful scenes happened during the work of rescue. A young judge, named Rossi, who was buried under the ruins of a house, was on the point of being extricated by two Carabinieri, when a large beam fell, crushing him, and injuring the two soldiers. Two other persons who fell from a fourth floor into a cellar were rescued alive.

Father Guillon, of the congregation of Oblates, and superior of a junior college at Diano Marina, gives a heartrending account of the horrors of the catastrophe which befell that place. The college fell in with the force of the principal shock, and the students betook themselves to of falling stones and timber, the shrieks of the injured, and the awful subterranean rumbling of the earth, which made every one, both young and old, believe that the Day of Judgment had come, and that the graves were giving up their dead. Outside in the town the panic was awful, some people running wildly toward the open country, and others calling loudly on their missing friends.

Prayer, Amid the Crash

Most of the sufferers at Diano Marina were young children, who were sleeping, tired out with the carnival festivities. While a gang of workmen were clearing away the débris with almost superhuman speed, they heard the voice of a child beneath. Presently an arm appeared, then the head emerged, and soon the little creature was extricated alive and unhurt. It looked around in the bright sunlight in a dazed way, and then asked for something to eat. While she was munching a crust she said with a smile, "Father is still sleeping down there." His corpse was found hopelessly crushed soon after.

At the penal prisons of Finale Borgo, a mutiny had to be suppressed among the prisoners, who, frightened by the violent shocks, asked to be set at liberty. At Finale the railway line was broken, and rendered utterly useless, owing to a large landslip. At Carlo Felice a priest, who was saying mass in one of the churches, was thrown violently to the ground. (See illustration No. 3). At Castellaro a magnificent church fell with a sudden crash, and left nothing but a heap of ruins, under which several people lay buried.

Illustration No. 4

represents the work of investigation in the ruins of Mentone. There the houses in the Place du Cap suffered most, many people in this locality being seriously injured. A bugle soon summoned the troops to the scene, and they showed the greatest energy in forcing those who were lingering in the houses to quit them, and in preventing those who had already escaped from re-entering their homes. Two companies of infantry were employed in guarding the houses which were likely to fall in, on the walls of which are to be seen marked in chalk, "No admittance." The survivors seemed dazed and stunned, and lost all consciousness of what was going on. Half-clothed people were seen wandering wildly about the seashore, exposed to the cold north wind and rain. Some were afterward found dead on the shore. (See illustration No. 5.) shows the beginning of the exodus from the shaken district. Wealthy visitors who happened to be without their carriages hired vehicles at fabulous prices, and lost no time in getting away. Soon the roads were thronged with carriages, cabs, and anything that had wheels. The platforms of the railroad station were one dense mass of people waiting quietly for trains to carry them away, until the trains came in sight, when a fierce struggle would agitate the mass to get first on board. All were going northward. Away from Cannes, Nice, Marseilles, Avignon.

Illustration No. 6

Illustration No. 7

represents an effort made by the mayor, aided by a committee of English guests, to relieve the pressing needs of the destitute. Soup and hot coffee were given out freely to the poor, and much suffering was thereby prevented. It is reported that some guests, whose money was in their trunks under the ruins of the hotels, and whose communications with home were cut off by the severing of the telegraph-wires, were glad to avail themselves of this charitable assistance.

The following graphic account from a correspondent on the spot of the appalling disaster as he saw it was sent to a London daily journal: "Last week I shared the opinion of most people that with wealth and leisure the Riviera is the place to winter, far away from troublesome catarrh and more perilous bronchial maladies. This luxurious theory has since Wednesday morning last been cruelly unhinged, and the strip of land between Toulon and Genoa, most of which goes by the name of the Riviera di Ponente, has had a reverse from which it will take some time to recover. I am writing this at Genoa, under influences which I cannot control and cannot easily describe. I have passed through over one hundred Miles of Hideous Devastation.

The realism comes in with the panorama of horrors now before my mind. I have seen rows of soldiers bleeding and dying along the vine-clad roads of France for Napoleon III. or for Prince Bismarck. I was in Paris when the Communists burned the houses and massacred their fellow-countrymen for reasons connected with humanitarian philosophy. But nothing can, to my mind, equal this earthquake disaster, which has blanched every cheek, has sent out thousands to camp in marshy fields or upon the chilly sea-beach, and has strewn a district which is a thing of beauty with more corpses than can be counted even yet. Imagine whole tracts of country, inhabited by a simple but thrifty population, brought from plenty to starvation!

"Leaving the devastation of Mentone behind me, I crossed the Italian frontier and made a short stay at Ventimiglia. While awaiting the making up of our train we visited the town. There were only two victims, but the houses are fearfully punished. Even the wall of the monumental refreshment-room has a long perpendicular split, and one of the waiters was injured by the sudden dislodging of a kind of huge tea-urn, which whirled round during the first shock and felled him to the floor. The village of Bussana, perched upon a rock, has been Shaken into a Wreck.

The local authorities beseech our official party to send volunteers to clear the ruins and to seek for victims. 'How many?' we anxiously ask. The reply is a sad but significant Italian shrug of the shoulders. Three hundred, perhaps more, and perhaps less. At San Lorenzo the people are camping out on the seashore in low tents, or, to speak more correctly, under the makeshift shelter of the family sheets sewn together. Near at hand a temporary altar has been erected on the beach. A Franciscan monk is preaching to a little crowd of worshippers.

"And now we are in earthquake land with a vengeance. Ruined Porto Maurizio is before us. The olive oil stowed away and buried will probably be lost to the tune of more than $300,000, a financial earthquake for the little town. But the victims here are fortunately few, and we have little time to think of the vicissitudes of the oil trade and of Signor somebody, a little commercial magnate, who whiningly tells us that he has lost 'molto denaro,' and who, I verily believe, supposes that the House of Savoy is in duty bound to compensate him. The train slowly enters Oneglia. Here we find a sad list. At Aurigo the church has fallen and buried some killing a dozen or so. There are twelve victims in Oneglia itself. I am speaking only of dead victims of course. The wounded are in railway vans or in hastily-constructed plank huts. Among the killed are Professor Demaria and his two charming daughters, who will be well remembered by English-speaking health-seekers as accomplished Italian girls, who spoke English and joined in the social gatherings of San Remo and Pegli. But all this is numerically trifling, and we find that we have not till we glide into the little station of Diano Marina. The station is in ruins. The railway business is being carried on under tarpaulin. The little platform is covered with troops. The survivors are almost imprisoned by the rough but kindly soldiers in covered railway trucks. One young fellow manages to evade the sentinel. He throws himself upon his knees, and implores me to take him away in the train. His father, his mother, and his sister have perished in the ruins of their little home. 'Take me away,' he cries, 'do not leave me here. I have no money, no food, no parents.' I turned aside sorrowfully, for I did not dare to interfere with official or military arrangements; and I knew full well that to establish a precedent might cause a mutiny. But General de Sonnaz was soon busy providing for the poor forlorn souls.

Forty Persons Under the Ruins,

Realized what an Earthquake is

"My flesh literally crept as I left the station and made for the village. The victims must be over five hundred all told. The houses are now sepulchres. A village carnival-ball, close to the church, which had been prolonging its innocent merriment till daybreak, was huddled suddenly into a chasm made by a broken flooring.

Not One of these Dancers Escaped.

The college of the Oblates counts half a dozen victims. Luckily some of the pupils were away for their carnival holiday. Signor Ardizzoni, the Syndic, is hard at work with three doctors and the archpriest Mantica superintending the troops who are hacking away to find the dead, for although there may be some miraculous cases of preservation, the mutilated corpses upon the ambulances tell a dread and despairing tale. Two priests in their shirt-sleeves, their round tonsures, and their knee-breeches, looking strange amid such surroundings, wash the faces of the dead. The Sisters of Charity are, as usual, doing their work noiselessly and practically. A few wailing relations stare hopelessly at the remains of those near and dear to them. They seem dazed and still under the influence of fear. The whole place is a charnel-house, and a bitter comment upon the modern conditions of human life.

Diano Marina is the plague-spot of this beautiful coast, and any details gathered up at Noli, Albissola, and other stations only repeat the same dismal story of Death, Disaster, and Ruin.

The rain was falling down upon the tents as we went along the latter part of the journey. Desolation crossed our path everywhere until we reached Voltri. Here in Genoa there is still a good deal of alarm; but the archbishop issued a reassuring pastoral, which was read in all the churches yesterday, and the vastness of the catastrophe in other places has lessened the fear of the Genoese. But the hotels are empty. Cholera and earthquake shocks have done their work. There must now be in Paris, Brussels, and Vienna over 90,000 people who not many days ago were sunning themselves upon the Promenade des Anglais at Nice or somewhere along the coast."

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

A Drowning Sailor's Cry.—Captain Hatfield said: "Two or three times I have heard the prayer of a dying sailor as the waves were just about to swallow him up. I remember one instance in particular. A sailor had fallen overboard; the wind was high and the water rough; there was no hope of a boat living in such a sea, and though there were many willing and strong hands on board, eager to go to the rescue at all risks, yet all knew any such attempt would only result in further loss of life; and they were obliged to leave their shipmate to die before their eyes. And as the wind whistled through the shrouds it brought down to us the last prayer of that poor fellow. Oh what anguish there seemed to be in his words, listening to them in such circumstances: 'Lord, have mercy on my soul.' Such prayers are from the heart, and are more truly prayers than eloquent and finely-phrased orations which proceed from the mouth only!"

The Secret of Mr. Moody's Success.—The same speaker observed: "I remember just such another night as this, when Mr. Moody said: 'I remember when I got the first baptism of the Holy Spirit. In my congregation, on the first bench, I noticed two ladies who came most regularly, and seemed to be engaged in constant prayer while I preached. And as I looked down upon them from the pulpit, it encouraged me very much to think that I had two such helpers. One day I went up to them, and said, "I am very grateful to you; you don't know how much your prayers for these people have encouraged me in my labors." "We are not praying for the people," they replied, "but for you. If the Lord bless you with His Holy Spirit, then there is no fear for the people." I went home thinking deeply, and then determined to have that power, if it were possible; and God, in His grace, was pleased so to bless me.' And see what the Lord has done through Mr. Moody—tens of thousands of souls have been brought to the Lord through him."

A Suicide Prevented.—The Same Friend Remarked: "I knew a mechanic, who, when employed could earn good wages, but for some time he had been unemployed. The little money he had saved was all gone. One by one articles of furniture and superfluous clothing had been parted with, that he and his family might have bread; and now they were in despair, in misery, knowing not where their next meal would come from. The man began to question if, after all, there were a God, because he had prayed constantly for daily bread, and it seemed to be so tardily measured out. As he walked along the streets thoughts of self-destruction arose in his mind. Presently he came to a stand where the daily papers were exposed for sale. Mechanically he stopped and glanced down the 'situations vacant' columns; and there he saw an opening for a man of his trade. To note the address to which to apply, and set off thither, was but the work of a moment. Arriving there, he stated his business, his former employers, and references. The proprietor said, 'Why, you are the very man we want; could you come in on Monday?' The man gladly replied that he could, and arrangements were then made for his entering upon his duties. Joyfully the man turned his footsteps homeward; no more dismal suicidal thoughts filled his mind. On the prospect of renewed employment, provisions were procured, the fire was kindled, and they were again happy. Yes, he had faith in his employer's promise, that on the following Saturday he would receive payment for work done. Now, if people would have the same faith in God as that man had in his employer, how much happier they would be."

Startling the Gamblers.—The same Gentle man said: "In a gambling club, the gamesters as they lounged about their luxuriantly furnished rooms, thought they would have some amusement at the expense of religion. It was a thing which they all affected to despise, and which they thought it quite safe to ridicule. So they called a negro, one of the servants of the place, and asked him to preach them a sermon. For some time the negro refused, then apparently yielding to their commands, he began, and in a clear ringing voice, said, 'I speak the truth and lie not, except ye repent and believe, ye shall be all damned.' The men were as if electrified. The Word of God thus spoken proved to be quick and powerful to convict, and struck home to the hearts of these sceptics. They had had enough of mimicking religion. The gamblers suddenly dispersed, and many wended their homeward way with very different thoughts from those which they had had for many a day. If not actually converted, they were certainly very considerably solemnized."

Lost on a Highland Moor.—A Friend Remarked: "When I was a boy I was once in the north of Scotland, and in walking across the moors I lost my way. The greater part of the afternoon I wandered hither and thither, vainly trying to find the path, until night was fast coming on, and I had the prospect of being alone on the moors all night. Shortly after it was fairly dark, I saw in the distance a moving light, and as it drew near, I saw it was a gamekeeper accompanied by his dog. Now I was never fond of dogs, and a dog at night was my special fear. But summoning up my courage, I approached the keeper, and asked him to show me the way home. He said it would be no use telling me, and then leaving me to go alone in the dark, and he had no time to go back with me; but I might take his lantern if I liked, as he knew the way blindfolded, and then, by the aid of his directions I should be able to get safely home. Similarly we poor sinners were all lost in the wild moorlands of sin, but the Lord Jesus found us, and set us on the way to our home in heaven, giving us the lamp of His Word to be a light unto our path."

Afraid of the Darkness.—An Evangelistic worker related the following experience: "I was one night going along a dark street in Glasgow, when I came across a little boy sitting cowering at the corner of a big dark entry. I went up to him and said, 'Well, my little man, what's wrong with you that you sit there?' 'Please, sir, I want tae gang hame.' 'Why, then, do you not run off at once?' 'Please, sir, I'm feart.' 'Where do you live?' I asked. 'Up that close, sir, and it's awfa dark. I'm feart tae gae up.' 'And would you not be afraid if I were to go with you? I might thrash you or hurt you. It is quite dark, and no one would see me.' 'Oh, sir,' he said, 'I wid'na be feart for you.' 'So you know me. Do you go to any of the meetings about here?' 'Yes, sir.' 'And have you never read the twenty-third Psalm?' 'Yes, sir, I know it.' 'And does it not say, "Yea, though I walk through death's dark vale, Yet will I fear no ill, For Thou art with me, and Thy rod and staff me comfort still," and yet you are afraid to go?' 'No, sir,' he cried, 'I am no feart now;' and off he scampered, leaving me standing at the entrance of the long dark close."

A BROAD GOSPEL.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, March 27, 1887, at Des Moines, Iowa.

"Come thou and all thy house into the ark."—Gen. 7 : 1.

Geological Proofs of the Deluge—The Refuge in the Catastrophe—The Great Eastern of Olden Times—A Great Storm Coming—A Refuge Provided—The Open Door of the Gospel—A Large Entrance—Rowland Hill's Expectation—A Door Swinging Both Ways—Has Fastenings—Good Against Financial Trouble—Domestic and Social Troubles—Men Put Off Going In—Some Restrained by Derision—The Family Invited—How to Get Them In—Eloquent Statistics—The Whispering Gallery in St. Paul's Cathedral—An Offer to a Poor Man Rejected—The One Step Inside.

We do not need the Bible to prove the deluge. The geologist's hammer announces it. Sea-shells and marine formations on the top of some of the highest mountains of the earth Drove that at some time the waters washed over the top of the Alps and the Andes. In what way the catastrophe came, we know not: whether by the stroke of a comet, or by flashes of lightning, changing the air into water, or by a stroke of the hand of God, like the stroke of the axe between the horns of the ox, the earth staggered. To meet the catastrophe, God ordered a great ship built. It was to be without prow, for it was to sail to no shore. It was to be without helm, for no human hand should guide it. It was a vast structure, probably as large as two or three Cunard steamers. It was

The Great Eastern of Olden Time.

The ship is done. The door is open. The lizards crawl in. The cattle walk in. The grasshoppers hop in. The birds fly in. The invitation goes forth to Noah: "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." Just one human family embark on the strange voyage, and I hear the door slam shut. A great storm sweeps along the hills, and bends the cedars until all the branches snap in the gale. There is a moan in the wind like unto the moan of a dying world. The blackness of the heavens is shattered by the flare of the lightnings, that look down into the waters, and throw a ghastliness on the face of the mountains. How strange it looks! How suffocating the air seems! The big drops of rain plash upon the upturned faces of those who are Watching the Tempest.

Crash! go the rocks in convulsion. Boom! go the bursting heavens. The inhabitants of the earth, instead of fleeing to house-top and mountain-top, as men have fancied, sit down in dumb, white horror to die. For when God grinds mountains to pieces, and lets the ocean slip its cable, there is no place for men to fly to. See the ark pitch and tumble in the surf; while from its windows the passengers look out upon the shipwreck of a race, and the carcases of a dead world. Woe to the mountains! Woe to the sea!

I am no alarmist. When, on the twentieth of September, after the wind has for three days been blowing from the northeast, you prophecy that the equinoctial storm is coming, you simply state a fact not to be disputed. Neither am I an alarmist when I say that compared with which Noah's deluge was but an April shower; and that it is wisest and safest for you and for me to get safely housed for eternity. The invitation that went forth to Noah sounds in our ears: "Come thou and all thy house into the ark."

A Storm is Coming,

Well, how did Noah and his family come into the ark? Did they climb in at the window, or come down the roof? No; they went through the door. And just so, if we get into the ark of God's mercy, it will be through Christ the Door.

The entrance to the ark of old must have been a very large entrance. We know that it was, from the fact that there were monster animals in the earlier ages; and, in order to get them into the ark two and two, according to the Bible statement, the door must have been very wide and very high. So the door into the mercy of God is a large door. We go in, not two by two, but by hundreds, and by thousands, and by millions. Yea, all the nations of the earth may go in, ten millions abreast.

The door of the ancient ark was in the side. So now it is through the side of Christ—the pierced side, the wide-open side,

The Heart Side

—that we enter. Aha! the Roman soldier, thrusting his spear into the Saviour's side, expected only to let the blood out, but he opened the way to let all the world in. Oh what a broad Gospel to preach! If a man is about to give an entertainment, he issues one or two hundred invitations, carefully put up and directed to the particular persons whom he wishes to entertain. But God our Father makes a banquet, and goes out to the front door of heaven, and stretches out his hands over land and sea, and, with a voice that penetrates the Hindoo jungle, and the Greenland ice-castle, and Brazilian grove, and English factory, and American home, cries: "Come, for all things are now ready." It is

A Wide Door!

The old cross has been taken apart, and its two pieces are stood up for the door-posts, so far apart that all the world can come in. Kings scatter treasures on days of great rejoicing. So Christ, our King, comes and scatters the jewels of heaven. Rowland Hill said that he hoped to get into heaven through the crevices of the door. But he was not obliged thus to go in. After having preached the Gospel in Surrey Chapel, going up toward heaven, the gate-keeper cried: "Lift up your heads, ye everlasting gates, and let this man come in." The dying thief went in. Richard Baxter and Robert Newton went in. Europe, Asia, Africa, North and South America, may yet go through this wide door without crowding. Ho, every one!—all conditions, all ranks, all people.

Luther said that this truth was worth carrying on one's knees from Rome to Jerusalem; but I think it worth carrying all around the globe, and all around the heavens, that "God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Whosoever will, let him come through the large door. Archimedes wanted a fulcrum on which to place his lever, and then he said that he could move the world. Calvary is the fulcrum, and the cross of Christ is the lever; and by that power all nations shall yet be lifted.

Further: It is a door that Swings Both Ways.

I do not know whether the door of the ancient ark was lifted, or rolled on hinges; but this door of Christ opens both ways. It swings out toward all our woes; it swings in toward the raptures of heaven. It swings in to let us in; it swings out to let our ministering ones come out. All are one in Christ—Christians on earth and saints in heaven.

> "One army of the living God,
> At His command we bow;
> Part of the host have crossed the flood,
> And part are crossing now."

Swing in, Oh blessed door, until all the earth shall go in and live! Swing out until all the heavens come forth to celebrate the victory.

But, further, it is

A Door With Fastenings.

The Bible says of Noah: "The Lord shut him in." A vessel without bulwarks or doors would not be a safe vessel to go in. When Noah and his family heard the fastening of the door of the ark, they were very glad. Without those doors were fastened, the first heavy surge of the sea would have whelmed them; and they might as well have perished outside the ark as inside the ark. "The Lord shut him in." Oh, the perfect safety of the ark! The surf of the sea and the lightnings of the sky may be twisted into a garland of snow and fire—deep to deep, storm to storm, darkness to darkness; but once in the ark, all is well. "God shut him in." There comes upon the good man

A Deluge of Financial Trouble.

He had his thousands to lend; now he cannot borrow a dollar. He once owned a store in New York, and had branch houses in Boston, Philadelphia, and New Orleans. He owned four horses, and employed a man to keep the dust off his coach, phaeton, carriage, and curricle; now he has hard work to get shoes in which to walk. The great deep of commercial disaster was broken up, and fore and aft, and across the hurricane deck, the waves struck him. But he was safely sheltered from the storm. "The Lord shut him in."

A flood of domestic troubles fell on him. Sickness and bereavement came. The rain pelted. The winds blew. The heavens are aflame. All the gardens of earthly delight are washed away. The fountains of joy are buried fifteen cubits deep. But, standing by the empty crib, and in the desolated nursery, and in the doleful hall, once a-ring with merry voices, now silent forever, he cried: "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." "The Lord shut him in." All the sins of a lifetime clamored for his overthrow. The broken vows, the dishonored Sabbaths, the outrageous profanities, the misdemeanors of twenty years, reached up their hands to the door of the ark to pull him out. The boundless ocean of his sin surrounded his soul, howling like a simoon, raving like a euroclydon. But, looking out of the window, he saw his sins sink like lead into the depths of the sea. The dove of heaven brought an olive-branch to the ark. The wrath of the billow only pushed him toward heaven. "The Lord shut him in."

The same door-fastenings that kept Noah in keep the world out. I am glad to know that when a man reaches heaven all earthly

Troubles are Done With him. Here he may have had it hard to get bread for his family; there he will never hunger any more. Here he may have wept bitterly; there "the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne will lead him to living fountains of water, and God will wipe away all tears from his eyes." Here he may have hard work to get a house; but in my Father's house are many mansions, and rent-day never comes. Here there are death-beds and coffins and graves; there no sickness, no weary watching, no choking cough, no consuming fever, no chattering chill, no tolling bell, no grave. The sorrows of life shall come up and knock at the door, but no admittance. The perplexities of life shall come up and knock at the door, but no admittance. Safe forever! All the agony of earth in one wave dashing against the bulwarks of the ship of celestial light shall not break them down. Howl on, ye winds, and rage, ye seas! The Lord—"the Lord shut him in." Oh what so wide, so easily swung both ways, and with such sure fastenings. No burglar's key can pick that lock. No swarthy arm of hell can shove back the bolt. I rejoice that I do not ask you to come aboard a crazy craft with leaking hulk and broken helm and unfastened door; but an ark fifty cubits wide, and three hundred cubits long, and a door so large that the round earth, without grazing the posts, might be bowled in.

A Grand Old Door!

Now, if the ark of Christ is so grand a place in which to live and die and triumph, come into the ark. Know well that the door that shut Noah in shut the world out; and though, when the pitiless storm came pelting on their heads, they beat upon the door, saying: "Let me in! let me in!" the door did not open. For one hundred and twenty years they were invited. They expected to come in; but the antediluvians said: "We must cultivate these fields; we must be worth more flocks of sheep and herds of cattle; we will wait until we get a little older; we will enjoy our old farm a little longer." But meanwhile the storm was brewing. The fountains of heaven were filling up. The pry was being placed beneath the foundations of the great deep. The last year had come, the last month, the last week, the last day, the last hour, the last moment. In an awful dash, an ocean dropped from the sky, and another rolled up from beneath; and God rolled the earth and sky into one wave of universal destruction. So

Men Put Off Going

into the ark. They say they will wait twenty years first. They will have a little longer time with their worldly associates. They will wait until they get older. They say: "You cannot expect a man of my attainments and of my position to surrender myself just now. But before the storm comes, I will go in. Yes, I will. I know what I am about. Trust me." After awhile, one night about twelve o'clock, going home, he passes a scaffolding as a gust of wind strikes it, and a plank falls. Dead, and outside the ark! Or, riding in the Park, a reckless vehicle crashes into him, and his horse becomes unmanageable, and he shouts, "Whoa! Whoa!" and takes another twist in the reins, and plants his feet against the dash-board, and pulls back. But no use. It is not so much down the avenue that he flies as on the way to eternity. Out of the wreck of the crash his body is drawn, but his soul is not picked up It fled behind a swifter courser into the great future. Dead! and outside the ark! Or, some night, he wakes up with a distress that momentarily increases, until he shrieks out with pain. The doctors come in, and they give him twenty drops, but no relief; forty drops, fifty drops, sixty drops, but no relief. No time for prayer. No time to read one of the promises. No time to get a single sin pardoned. The whole house is aroused in alarm. The children scream. The wife faints. The pulses fail. The heart stops. The soul flies. Oh, my God, dead, and outside the ark! I have no doubt that of the ark. The world laughed to see a man go in, and said: "Here is a man starting for the ark. Why, there will be no deluge. If there is one, that miserable ship will not weather it. Aha! going into the ark! Well, that is too good to keep. Here, fellows, have you heard the news? This man is going into the ark." Under this artillery of scorn the man's good resolution perished.

Derision Kept Many Out

And so there are hundreds kept out by the fear of derision. The young man asks himself: "What would they say at the store to-morrow morning if I should become a Christian? When I go down to the club-house they would shout: 'Here comes that new Christian. Suppose you will not have anything to do with us now. Suppose you are praying now. Get down on your knees and let us hear you pray. Come, now, give us a touch. Will not do it, eh? Pretty Christian you are.'" Is it not the fear of being laughed at that keeps you out of the kingdom of God? Which of these scorners will help you at the last? When you lie down on a dying pillow, which of them will be there? In the day of eternity, will they bail you out?

My friends and neighbors, come in right away.

Come In

through Christ, the wide door—the door that swings out toward you. Come in, and be saved. Come and be happy. "The Spirit and the Bride say, Come." Room in the ark! Room in the ark!

But do not come alone. The text invites you to bring your family. "Come thou and all thy house." That means your wife and your children. You cannot drive them in. If Noah had tried to drive the pigeons and the doves into the ark, he would only have scattered them. Some parents are not wise about these things. They make iron rules about Sabbaths, and they force the catechism down the throat, as they would hold the child's nose and force down a dose of rhubarb and calomel. You cannot drive your children into the ark. You can draw your children to Christ, but you cannot coerce them. The cross was lifted, not to drive, but to draw. "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." As the sun draws up the drops of morning dew, so the Sun of Righteousness exhales the tears of repentance.

"Come thou and all thy house into the ark." Be sure that you or wife with you. How would Noah have felt if, when he heard the rain pattering on the roof of the ark, he knew that his wife was outside in the storm? No; she went with him. And yet some of you are on the ship "outward-bound" for heaven, but your companion is unsheltered. You remember the day when the marriage-ring was set. Nothing has yet been able to break it. Sickness came, and the finger shrank, but the ring stayed on. The twain stood alone above a child's grave, and the dark mouth of the tomb swallowed up a thousand hopes; but the ring dropped not into the open grave. Days of poverty came, and the hand did many a hard day's work; but the rubbing of the work against the ring only made it shine brighter. Shall that ring ever be lost? Will the iron clang of the sepulchre-gate crush it forever? I pray God that you who have been married on earth may be together in heaven. Oh, by the quiet bliss of your earthly home; by the babe's cradle; by all the vows of that day when you started life together, I beg you to see to it that you both get into the ark!

Bring Your Husband

Come in, and bring your wife or your husband with you—not by fretting about religion, or ding-donging them about religion, but by a consistent life, and by a compelling prayer that shall bring the throne of God down into your bedroom. Better live in the smallest house in Brooklyn and get into heaven, than live fifty years in the finest house on Madison Square, and wake up at last and find that one of you, for all eternity, is outside the ark Go home to-night; lock the door of your room; take up the Bible and read it together, and then kneel down and commend your souls to Him who has watched you all these years; and, before you rise, there will be a fluttering of wings over your head, angel crying to angel: "Behold, they pray!" But this does not include all your family.

Bring the Children,

too. God bless the dear children! What would our homes be without them? We may have done much for them. They have done more for us. What a salve for a wounded heart there is in the soft palm of a child's hand! Did harp or flute ever have such music as there is in a child's "good-night?" From our coarse, rough life, the angels of God are often driven back; but who comes into the nursery without feeling that angels are hovering around? They who die in infancy go into glory, but you are expecting your children to grow up in this world. Is it not a question, then, that rings through all the corridors and windings and heights and depths of your soul, what is to become of your sons and daughters for time and for eternity. "Oh!" you say, "I mean to see that they have good manners." Very well. "I mean to dress them well, if I have myself to go shabby." Very good. "I shall give them an education, and I shall leave them a fortune." Very well. But is that all? Don't you mean to take them into the ark? Don't you know that the storm is coming, and that out of Christ there is no safety! no pardon! no hope! no heaven!

How to Get Them In?

Go in yourself. If Noah had stayed out, do you not suppose that his sons, Shem, Ham, and Japheth, would have stayed out? Your sons and daughters will be apt to do just as you do. Reject Christ yourself, and the probability is that your children will reject Him.

An account was taken of the religious condition of families in a certain district. In the families of pious parents, two thirds of the children were Christians. In the families where the parents were ungodly, only one twelfth of the children were Christians. Responsible as you are for their temporal existence, you are also responsible for their eternity. Which way will you take them? out into the deluge, or into the ark? Have you ever made one earnest prayer for their immortal souls? What will you say in the judgment, when God asks: "Where is George, or Henry, or Frank, or Mary, or Anna? Where are those precious souls whose interests I committed into your hands?"

A dying son said to his father: "Father, you gave me an education and good manners and everything that the world could do for me; but, father, you never told me how to die, and now my soul is going out in the darkness."

Go home and erect a family altar. You may break down in your prayer. But never mind. God will take what you mean, whether you express it intelligibly or not. Bring all your house into the ark. Is there one son whom you have given up? Is he so dissipated that you have stopped counselling and praying? Give him up? How dare you give him up? Did God ever give you up? While you have a single articulation of speech left, cease not to pray for the return of that prodigal. He may even now be standing on the beach at Hong Kong or Madras, meditating a return to his father's house. Give him up? Never give him up. Has God promised to hear thy prayer only to mock thee? It is not too late.

In St. Paul's, London, there is

A Whispering-Gallery.

A voice uttered most feebly at one side of the gallery is heard distinctly at the opposite side, a great distance off. So, every word of earnest prayer goes all around the earth, and makes heaven a whispering-gallery. Go into the ark—not to sit down, but to stand in the door, and call until all the family come in. Aged Noah, where is Japheth? David, where is Absalom? Hannah, where is Samuel? Bring them in through Christ the door. Would it not be pleasant to spend eternity with our families? Gladder than Christmas or Thanksgiving festival will be the reunion, if we get all our family into the ark. Which of them can we spare out of heaven? On one of the late steamers there were journeying. They seemed extremely poor. A benevolent gentleman stepped up to the poor man to proffer some form of relief, and said: "You seem to be very poor, sir." "Poor, sir," replied the man, "if there's a poorer man than me a-troubling the world, God pity both of us!" "I will take one of your children, and adopt it, if you say so. I think it would be a great relief to you." "A what?" said the poor man. "A relief." "Would it be a relief to have the hands chopped off from the body, or the heart torn from the breast? A relief, indeed! God be good to us! What do you mean, sir?"

A Father and Two Daughters

However many children we may have, we have none to give up. Which, of our families, can we afford to spare out of heaven? Come, father! Come, mother! Come, son! Come, daughter! Come, brother! Come, sister! Only one step, and we are in. Christ, the door, swings out to admit us; and it is not the hoarseness of a stormy blast that you hear, but the voice of a loving and patient God that addresses you, saying, "Come thou and all thy house into the ark."

And there may the Lord shut us in.

Volume IX. of the Christian Herald, Containing the Numbers for 1886, with complete index, bound in cloth, may be had from this office; price, $2.50, including postage. A few volumes of 1883, 1884, and 1885 are also for sale. We have none prior to 1883.

A Report of the Addresses Delivered at the Recent Prophetic Conference, at Chicago, with portraits of some of the speakers, may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. It contains 216 pages. Fifty cents in paper covers; Seventy-five cents bound in cloth.

Thy Healer and Faith Witness, a Monthly Magazine, edited by Mrs. M. Baxter, contains original articles on Holiness and Healing, Authentic Testimonies of Divine Healing, and Items of Intelligence from Heathen Lands where Missionaries are laboring in faith, soliciting no help from man but relying solely on God for support. Annual Subscription, 75 cents, may be sent to Mrs. M. Baxter, 10 Drayton Park, Highbury, London, England, or to the manager of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. The copies will be mailed each month direct from Bethshan, London, to American subscribers.

EVENTS OF THE FINAL THIRTEEN YEARS OF THIS AGE.

By Rev. M. Baxter.

A DECISIVELY crucial test will soon be applied by the onward march of Time to the interpretation of Biblical prophetic dates advanced in Matthew Henry's Commentary nearly 200 years ago, and maintained by others as well, that the End of this Age and personal descent of Christ upon this earth to commence His millennial reign over the nations for 1,000 years, will be about the End of this Nineteenth Century (Rev. 20). For Daniel specifically predicts certain during the penultimate semi-duodecennial period of half a dozen years, between six and twelve years before the End of this Age; and which therefore will occur between 1888–9 and 1894–5, if the End is to be in A.D. 1900–1.

Extraordinary Events to Occur

Examining retrogressively the events which that Prophet predicts, we find in Daniel 8 : 14, 12 : 11, 12, that the daily sacrifice is to be recommenced in a rebuilt

Temple at Jerusalem

2,345 literal days, i.e., about 6 years and 8 months before the End, that is to say, about 1894 if the end is to be in 1900–1. Then according to Daniel 9 : 27 a seven years' covenant must be made between the Personal Antichrist and the Jews about seven years before the End or Consummation, and therefore about 1893–4 if the End is in 1900–1. If so, the three years and a half of final Great Tribulation and Antichrist's Persecution, which constitute the latter half of that week of seven years, will, of course, commence toward the close of 1897.

Further, according to Daniel 7 : 20–24, 11 : 21,

This Personal Antichrist

is first to rise in the neighborhood of Turkey as a Little Horn, i.e., as a Monarch over a little kingdom in comparison with the larger Ten-Horn kingdoms, and is quickly to grow powerful and become King of Syria about the time he makes the covenant with the Jews. He should therefore rise as a Little Monarch not later than about 1891, as it will take at least a year or two or possibly even longer for him to make sufficient progress in "waxing great," as he is predicted to do in Daniel 8 : 9, 10, so that it will become worth while for the Jews to enter into a covenant with him about 1893–4 to secure his protection. This Personal Antichrist or Little Horn must be A NAPOLEON according to Revelation 9 : 11 and 13 : 18, for is in the Greek tongue Apollyon," and "the number of his name is 666," which is the sum total of the value of its letters in Greek in the dative inscriptive form—thus, ν 50, α 1, π 80, ο 70, λ 30, ε 5, ο 70, ν 50, τ 300, ι 10, added together amount to 666. The present Head of the Napoleon dynasty—Prince Jerome Napoleon—seems the most likely of any of the Bonapartes to become this Man of Prophecy.

"His Name

But still further, according to Daniel 7 : 24, the rise of this Napoleonic Little Horn as a reigning Monarch over a little kingdom (which we have shown to be not later than about 1891 if the End is in 1900–1), is not to occur until AFTER the Tenkingdomed Confederacy shall first be formed; and as it will probably not occur sooner than several months after the formation of that Confederacy, we can scarcely expect the Confederacy to be formed later than about 1890–1.

Now the tremendous European

Wars and Revolutions

inevitably requisite to change the existing twenty-three kingdoms into the above-mentioned TEN kingdoms, and then moreover to form those TEN into a permanent standing offensive and defensive Allied Confederacy against Germany and Russia (which are outside the Roman Empire ten kingdoms), must surely occupy at least three years, and if so, must commence by 1887 or 1888, because from thence three years would reach to 1890 or 1891, by which time at the latest the European wars should be terminated by the full development of the Tenkingdomed Confederacy—at least if the End is to be in 1900 or 1901. Assuming this to be so, the chronological adjustment of events will be as follows:

1887–8 to 1890–1	Three years from 1887 or 1888 to 1890 or 1891 seem little enough time for the great European wars which are to end in the peaceful settlement of Daniel's Tenkingdomed Confederacy in 1890 or 1891.
1891	Napoleon should arise not later than about 1891 as the Little Horn or King in or near Syria, after the Ten Horns have arisen. Dan. 7 : 24.
1893-4	Napoleon's Seven-years' Covenant with many Jews seven years and 75 days before the End, should be about 1893 or 1894. Dan. 9 : 27.
1894	Renewal of daily sacrifices in a rebuilt Jewish temple about 1894, 8⅓ months after the Covenant, and 2,345 literal days before the End.
1895-6	Translation to heaven of 144,000 living Christians at Christ's Advent in the air, two years and 1 to 3 weeks after the Covenant.
1897	Commencement of final 3½ years' Great Tribulation and universal Persecution of Christians by Napoleon, who then becomes Antichrist.
1900–1	Destruction of Antichrist and the wicked at Christ's descent on Mt. Olivet at the battle of Armageddon. Christ then reigns from heaven during the millennial 1,000 years over the nations of this earth.

The movable Jewish month Nisan (which extends from March 31 to April 27 in 1900, and from March 21 to April 17 in 1901), has some probability attaching to it as because the 2,345 years, as shown further on, appear to have commenced in Nisan B.C. 444–5 (Nehemiah 2 : 1) and therefore may be expected to end about Nisan 1901—the more so as the 483 years, which were foreshown in Daniel 9 : 25 to commence also in Nisan B.C. 444–5, did end in the month Nisan with Messiah's public entry, as a Prince, into Jerusalem, and His being "cut off" a few days later. Some Scripture periods, such as the 430 years in Exodus 12 : 41, have been fulfilled to the very day. Of course the Seven-years' Covenant which has to be made seven years and 75 days before the End, may be expected to be made sometime between January 7 and February 3 in 1894 if the End is to be in Nisan 1901. And in such case, the First Translation taking place two years and one to three weeks after the date of the Covenant, may be expected sometime between January 14 and February 24 in 1896.* Nevertheless, the precise week or month of this event cannot be known for certain until the date of the Covenant shall be ascertained by its actual confirmation between the Jews and the Coming Napoleon.

The Month of the End.

In the present month of March, 1887, in a condition of unbroken international peace. Bismarck has obtained a newly-elected Reichstag, which has just granted the Septennate measure for German military armaments, the obtaining of which was represented as necessary for the maintenance of peace between Germany and France. It naturally seems hazardous to predict that France must soon regain all the Rhine provinces by a victorious war against Germany, and that France must also organize all the countries of Cæsar's original Roman Empire into a Tenkingdomed Confederacy as early as 1890 or 1891. Yet this is what Daniel's prophecies appear to declare; for they show (as explained further on) that the End of this Age will be about A.D. 1900–1; and they also show that not later than about ten years before the End—i.e., about 1890–1, the Tenhorned Wild Beast, in other words, the Tenkingdomed Confederacy, will be fully formed (Daniel 7 : 24).

Europe Slumbers

The Ten Kingdoms

confederated together—prefigured by the Ten-horned Wild Beast, and Ten-toed image of a man (Daniel 2 : 31; 7 : 24), will be: 1—Britain, legislatively separated from Ireland, India, and its other colonies and territories, which never belonged to Cæsar's Roman Empire. 2—France, extended to the Rhine (by a future war with Germany), so as to annex to itself several Kingdoms or States—viz.: Belgium, Luxemburg, Rhenish Prussia, Switzerland, Baden, Wurtemberg, and part of Bavaria. 3—Spain with Portugal. 4—Italy. 5—Austria, losing Bohemia, Moravia, Galicia, and Eastern Hungary. 6—Greece, with Thessaly and Macedonia added to it. 7—Egypt. 8—Syria, separated from Turkey. 9—Thracian Turkey. 10—Bulgaria, Roumania, part of Servia, and Eastern Hungary) Slavonic States) united together.

As indicated in the Parable of the Virgins,

A Profound Sensation

and conviction of the nearness of the Advent of Christ and widespread excitement will be produced in the minds of many Christian people by the appearance of this Tenkingdomed Confederacy and the European wars that will have caused it. And this agitation will extend and deepen for about five years until the Second Advent takes place, and will be accompanied by a preaching of the Midnight Cry, Behold the Bridegroom cometh, which will wax louder and louder so as to cause ALL Christians—foolish as well as wise—in some sense to ARISE from their present slumber, according to Matthew 25 : 6, 7, before the Bridegroom comes. This stupendous religious agitation will also be the fulfilment of the Travail of the Sunclothed Woman before her Manchild (the company of 144,000 Wise Virgins) is caught up to heaven at Christ's Advent in Revelation 12 : 5. (See also Rev. 14 : 1–5; 1 Thess. 4 : 17.)

Hence we have not to wait until A.D. 1900–1 before whether that is to be the epoch of the End of this Age. But we can know as early as 1887–8, that unless by that period great European wars and revolutions measurably tending toward the formation of the tenkingdomed confederacy shall have commenced, there will be considerable reason to believe that the End of this Age must be later than 1900–1 in order to give time enough for all the predestined events (which, as above-mentioned, must occupy at least 12 or 13 years) to accomplish their march in stately array and solemn procession in Indian file upon the stage of action before the End.

We can Know for Certain

The Second Coming of Christ

"in the air" (1 Thess. 4 : 16, 17; Rev. 12 : 5; 14 : 1–6) to raise from their graves deceased saints and remove them to heaven together with 144,000 living translated Christians, will take place in its FIRST STAGE in about two years and one to three weeks after the Seven Years' Covenant is made between the coming Napoleon and the Jews. (And this covenant can scarcely be made earlier than three years after the Tenkingdomed Confederacy is formed.) Then there will be a great revival of religion and preaching of the Gospel on the earth for nearly a year (Rev. 14 : 6; 6 : 3); and subsequently the THREE YEARS AND A HALF of the Great Tribulation and Infidel Persecution will run its course, during which the earth will be like a Pandemonium, an Aceldama, a Golgotha, or field of blood (Daniel 7 : 25; 12 : 7; Revelation 11 : 2, 3; 12 : 6, 14; 13 : 5). Our Saviour Himself thus describes it: "Then shall be great Tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world—no, nor never shall be; and except those days should be shortened no flesh should be saved. And immediately after that Tribulation they shall see the Son of Man coming

* A Clergyman of Trinity College, Dublin, has published at Herbert's, Dublin, a pamphlet maintaining the view that 1890 will probably be the year of the Translation of Christians at Christ's Coming, as a Bridegroom, because in the Greek alphabet Alpha stands for 1 and Omega for 800, and he holds that a hidden intimation was conveyed in the opening words of Christ's salutation in A.D. 96 to the Apostle John in delivering to him the Revelation concerning His Second Coming, "I am Alpha and Omega," thereby secretly signifying that 1800 years would elapse from A.D. 96 until His Second Coming (Rev. 1 : 8). In Greek 1800 would be represented by α ω (Alpha, Omega).

in the clouds of heaven, and He shall send His angels and gather together His elect from the four winds." (Matt. 24 : 21, 31.). At this SECOND STAGE of Christ's Second Coming all the Christians remaining on the ea th will be translated to heaven. He will descend on Mount Olivet and Jerusalem and destroy Napoleon and convert the few Jews and Gentiles remaining on the earth and personally reign over them and their descendants during the subsequent Millennium of 1,000 years. (Revelation 19 and 20 ; Zech. 14 ; Daniel 7.)

REV. DR. FULTON'S CRUSADE AGAINST POPERY.

THE Rev. Justin D. Fulton mapped out his plan of campaign against the Roman Catholic Church on Sunday, March 20th, in bidding good-by to his Adelphi Street congregation, Brooklyn.

"Romanism," he said, "is popular in the United States and in Great Britain. We cannot close our eyes to its ascendancy in society and its influence with the press. Plainly, it has the inside track of other religions and all religions. In England Gladstone is wonderfully popular. Why? Because he is a co-worker with the Catholics and the servant of the Pope. That statesman has done more to betray Protestantism in the last thirty years than any other living man. I tell you that to-day in Rome we find Paganism revived in the constitution and the power of the Catholic Church. Its influence for good and ill extends to the remotest corners of the earth. The Pope is the Emperor and the College of Cardinals the Senate of the new Pagan domination. Zeus or Jupiter in the old mythology was the source of life, and the Pope to-day is regarded as the lord of the human heart and the arbiter between man and heaven. He is the infallible sovereign of 250,000,000 of people, 7,000,000 of whom acknowledge his supremacy in the United States. Do what we can, the shadow of Romanism steals into the churches of Jesus Christ and makes cowards of us all.

"Cardinal Manning has declared that the British Government is the great barrier confronting the Church of Romanism in its onward march. The Queen's supremacy, he says, is the essence of heresy. England is the last stronghold of Protestant power. To break the imperial will of the English race is the nineteenth century ambition of Rome. That ambition is behind the fierce fight for Home Rule in Ireland. Gladstone and Manning have joined forces in the interest of Rome. Every Romanist prays for the dismemberment of the British Empire, and to that end a Continental war is desired at Rome. Now it is your duty and mine as part and parcel of the English race to preach Christ everywhere and at all times. We Protestants are stronger than the Catholics, but we are not so splendidly disciplined. Still, we can turn the tide of Romanism if we show a united front.

"I hold that Romanism has no rights in this country except to be converted. History has shown it to be the foe of liberty and it is a menace to our own institutions. I thank God there is one Christian minister in this city not afraid to stand up and fight the power of Rome. I am that man. Bismarck surrendered something when he courted the Pope's help in the German elections. The Presidential candidate who cringes for the Catholic vote is not worthy the confidence of the American people. I have one great sorrow in leaving Brooklyn," said the reverend gentleman in conclusion, "and that is, that I must say farewell to a church where the word of Christ could be heard and taught without fear or a consideration of policy."

A collection was taken up to defray the expenses of Mr. Fulton's new campaign. Dr. Fulton, in the rôle of an evangelist, will deliver his first philippic against Romanism in the Masonic Temple, Twenty-third Street and Sixth Avenue, New York, on Sunday, April 3d. In the evening he will preach in the Rev. Dr. Armitage's church, and on April 10th in Rev. H. M. Pogson's Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. Professor A. D. Maxham, the revivalist singer, will be heard at Dr. Fulton's meetings. Every Sunday evening for some months Dr. Fulton will occupy the pulpits of Baptist ministers in New York, and denounce the insidious growth of the Papal influence.

A PRINCE IN A KITCHEN.

A SCION of royalty was in domestic service in San Francisco recently. The Examiner of that city states that some time ago an old and wealthy family there, engaged the services of a handsome Japanese young man, whose duties consisted in washing windows and polishing things up generally. He was always diligent at his work and never forgot his position as a domestic. He was called "Sol" by the family. He went away of his own accord, having laid by about $400 of his scanty earnings. Nothing more was heard or thought of him until recently. one of the daughters of the family, while travelling in Europe, attended a court ball in Berlin, and, to her amazement, there was Sol, blooming in the regimentals of the German Empire. The young lady was introduced to him by the master of the ceremonies as Lieutenant Karo Yatami. He was a nephew of the Mikado of Japan, and his appointment in the German army was due to the fact that his uncle, the Mikado, having determined to adopt the German military system had asked the Government to give his nephew a post that he might thoroughly learn the details. There could be no doubt about the genuineness of his royal connection as he held unimpeachable credentials. The young lady accosted him as "Sol" and asked him why he had accepted the menial position in their family. He said that he was rich, but he thought he could best serve his country by beginning just where he did, and gradually becoming acquainted with matters on the American side of the world. Evidently the young man loves his country. He has given practical proof of it by voluntarily humiliating himself to learn how to serve her efficiently. As we admire his patriotism we remember Him who "took upon Him the form of a servant" that He might redeem a lost world (Phil. 2 : 6–8).

THE FIRST MOORISH CONVERT.

AFTER long waiting and many years of toil, news comes from Morocco that a young Moor of noble family, a devout Mohammedan has abjured Islam and become a Christian. This step is not like the same step in Christian lands. It involves peril to life. The young convert may be killed with impunity, and so bitter are his own family that they are more likely than any one else to take his life. Recollecting that fact there is no reason to doubt that this conversion is genuine. The intelligence is thus reported by the Rev. E. F. Baldwin, who has long labored in Morocco. He says :

I first saw El Hasam last May, when on a journey in the mountains between here and Tetuan. He came to my tent one evening from the caravansary, where he was stopping for the night, that he might make my acquaintance. I was at once impressed with the pleasing countenance and bearing of this young Moorish gentleman. I found him remarkably intelligent and well educated for Morocco, and a devoted Moslem. I afterward learned that he was of one of the "best families" in Morocco, tracing their ancestry back to the time when, centuries ago, their home and possessions were in Andalusia, Spain. Some of his relatives are in high official position.

This acquaintance, thus begun in May, was renewed in June, when he came to Tangier at my desire, and was daily at the mission-house, occupied with Arabic literary work for us. Before meeting me he had never seen the Word of God, and when shown it he esteemed it lightly. But after a little time it began to assert its blessed mastery over his spirit, and he read it with delight. After being with us only three weeks a conviction of the truth of the Bible, and an uneasiness as to the reality of the religion of his fathers, appeared. He began saying if he read on, and stayed with us, he might have to become a Christian. But this was perhaps intellectual and not heart exercise. On going home to arrange for the education of my children, I left him translating book after book of the Old and New Testaments from Eastern Arabic into that of Morocco. God's blessed Word did its own sweet work. Miss Tulloch daily helped and guided him. Imagine her joy one morning on his coming to her with great eagerness and telling her of his having received forgiveness of sins the night before. He had been reading and pondering the First Epistle of John as he translated it on the preceding day.

That night, as he was reading it, he said a great light from God seemed to break into his soul, which he confessed had been very dark and hard. He went on to describe how it seemed to him that the Lord Jesus came near to him, and he said to Him, "Here, Lord Jesus, take my heart." He said he then lay still and wept upon his bed, and knew that he had received a new heart and had his sins forgiven.

A GRANDFATHER'S ANGER SUNG AWAY.

AN interesting incident related by Miss E Roderick, who is laboring in the Zenanas of India, is quoted in the annual report of the Woman's Union Missionary Society. She says : "One day as I was teaching my pupil in a house lately opened to me, the old grandfather came in, scolding and grumbling. 'No use in girls learning. The neighbors are raising the objection that it will compromise respectability if the girls learned of a lady ;' but one of the women requested me to sing, and was so earnest that I complied, expecting that the old man's prejudice would increase at the Christian words of the hymn. I had not sung many verses before the old grandfather was attentive and appreciative, and his comments were very different from what I had anticipated. He said to me, 'Lady, your words are true and good.' You can imagine how thankful I was, for I have continued my visits without further objections, and have since gained access to two new houses in the same neighborhood. We missionaries are on the winning side, though we may not always see it at the moment."

A CHINESE GOVERNOR'S WARNING.

THE respective governors of the various provinces of China are emphasizing the Emperor's decree, forbidding persecution of Christians, in communicating it to the public. The following is the proclamation issued by the governor of Cheh-Kiang, as reported in the Spirit of Missions. The governor, after reciting the Imperial decree, adds : "In respectful furtherance, therefore, of the benevolent intentions of the State, I feel it incumbent on me to put the matter plainly. Know, therefore, all men of whatsoever sort or condition, that the sole object of establishing chapels is to exhort men to do right ; those who embrace Christianity do not cease to be Chinese, and both sides should, therefore, continue to live in peace, and not let mutual jealousies be the cause of strife between them." The governor's proclamation then specifically orders the local courts to investigate impartially cases coming before them, having regard only to their merits, and not at all to the religion of the litigants. Decisions, also, must be given promptly, "thus neither party shall inflict injury on the other, each shall pursue in peace and quietude its various callings, and the desire of the State to include in its kindly benevolence the men from afar equally with its own people shall not, I trust, be frustrated." Having thus reasoned gently with his people, and appealed to their own sense of what is right, he concludes with threats of the direful consequences to those who disregard his injunctions. "From the date of this proclamation any lawless vagabonds who make trouble to stir up strife without a cause, shall be punished with the utmost rigor of the law, no mercy will be shown, so beware!"

CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

OFFICE, 63 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-Class Matter.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50.

Remittances by mail should be by bank cheques, Post-office orders, or Express money-orders whenever possible. If currency is sent it should be in a registered letter. Cheques and money-orders should be made payable to The Christian Herald. Making them payable to individuals often causes delay.

New subscriptions may commence at any time. When subscribers do not indicate their wish, they commence with the first number of the month in which the subscription is received.

The paper will be sent to any address for two months for twenty-five cents.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Names of the Interstate Commerce Commissioners were made public on March 23d. The selections give general satisfaction in business circles. Republican journals agree with Democratic journals in saying that the President has chosen wisely, and with an evident desire that the new law shall be executed with intelligence and fidelity. The chief place and the longest term on the Commission is given to Judge Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan, who is appointed for six years. He is an able jurist, and an acknowledged authority on corporation law. The other Republican on the Commission is Colonel Aldace F. Walker, of Vermont, whose familiarity with all railroad questions, and his legal knowledge, will render him a most useful member of the Commission. The three Democratic Commissioners are Mr. William R. Morrison, of Illinois; Mr. Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York, and Mr. Walter L. Bragg, of Alabama. As Colonel Morrison is not a member of the Fiftieth Congress, the country loses nothing, and may gain much by his appointment. Mr. Schoonmaker having been a close friend of Mr. Tilden, and an effective agent in carrying out Mr. Tilden's great work of purifying the administration of New York State after the Tweed scandal, he commands the confidence of the Empire State. Colonel Bragg has made a record as President of the Alabama Railroad Commission, which proves him to possess the courage and firmness which, in his new office, are indispensable qualifications for efficiency. It is clear that the new law will have an opportunity of showing whether it is as beneficial in its effects as its advocates claimed.

The Appointment of a Minister to Turkey in succession to Mr. S. S. Cox, was announced on Friday last. The President's selection is Mr. Oscar S. Straus, of New York. He is well and favorably known among business men in the city, and is also respected in political and literary circles. His book on the origin of "Republican Government" is a work displaying much ingenuity and learning. Many magazine articles, also from his pen, have attracted considerable attention. The most significant feature of the appointment, however, is that Mr. Straus is a Jew. That he should be the accredited representative of the United States to the Government at present holding sway over Jerusalem is a noteworthy fact, and may lead to important results. Before the appointment was made, the President ascertained that the Sultan would have no objection on the score of religion to receive him, and also that the Christian missionaries in Turkey were willing to accept him as the diplomatic guardian of their interests

Senator Sherman's Reception at Nashville, Tenn., and other places, reflects credit on the people of the South. The magnanimity with which they have passed over the utterances regarding their section, which came from the Senator on frequent occasions during the past few years is very creditable to them. They gave him a cordial reception, and he on his part, assured them that he "had not come to reproach any man for the part he took in that fight, or to revive in the heart of any one the triumphs of victory or the pangs of defeat." He said that while he had no apology to offer, he did not require any. As the Nashville people, to whom these remarks were addressed, on Thursday last, received them complacently, the nation at large may now congratulate itself that the war is over. No man has so tenaciously clung to the war issue in politics as Mr. Sherman. In abjuring it he has done a good thing.

Mayor Hewitt, of New York, Thinks he has been misunderstood and that the strictures on his attitude respecting the sale of wine and beer on Sundays are not deserved. He contends that he is acting in the interests of temperance. In an open letter, published last Thursday, he thus refers to the bill introduced at his request in the State Legislature: "This bill does not provide for opening the saloons on Sundays. On the contrary, they will all remain closed, as they now ought to be, but are not, under the terms of the law. But special licenses will be granted to a moderate number of reputable places of entertainment, where beer and light wines may be procured. It will be possible for the police to see to the strict enforcement of the law in those cases, because they will be few in number. Instead, therefore, of enlarging the temptation to indulgence in strong drinks, the proposed law will very largely reduce the opportunities for excess. I advocate it as a measure in the interest of temperance reform and for no other reason." At present none of the men who have been most active in promoting temperance reform have indorsed the Mayor's original idea. They regard it rather as conducive to increased drinking and desecration of the Lord's day.

Practical Results of a Beneficial Character may be expected from the sad railroad calamity near Boston, Mass., on March 14th, a picture of which appeared in this journal last week. The evidence given at the official investigation has prompted the Massachusetts Railroad Commissioners to require that the actual condition of all the other railroad bridges in the State should be disclosed. They have requested the officers of the several roads to send to them at the earliest practicable moment the strain sheets and records of the first and latest tests of all the bridges on their lines, and to state whether any parts of these bridges which are essential to safety are so covered as to be concealed from inspection. This is a wise decision, which should lead the Commissioners in other States to make a similar inquiry.

The Wreck of the Large Steamer Scotia on Fire Island, N. Y., on March 25th, caused much anxiety for a day and a night. She belongs to the Fabre Line, and came from Naples with over eight hundred immigrants on board. A large number of them had started on the Burgundia, and had been transferred to the Scotia when the Burgundia was run into by the war-ship Italia off the Italian coast. It was dark in the early morning of Friday when the Scotia went ashore on Fire Island. Though going at half speed, she struck with such force as to shatter her masts and to remain immovable by the tide. Her signals were seen at the Life-Saving Station, and a rocket line was soon sent over the vessel. It was some time before the crew understood its use, but eventually it was made fast, and operated. By that time the vessel was broadside on, and rocking like a huge cradle. This caused the rope to sway considerably, being at one moment tight, and at another almost in the water. Most of the passengers preferred the risk on the vessel to the journey by the rope. When the wind permitted, boats were sent out, and all the passengers were taken off. A mistake on the part of the captain as to the locality of the harbor light is said to have been the cause of the catastrophe.

A Scientist's Prediction of Coming Earthquakes in America was published on March 24th. Professor McGee, of the Geological Survey, who personally visited Charleston to investigate the earthquake and its causes, has stated that its area extended from Cuba to Canada, and from the Mississippi to the Bermudas, or, even if the most moderate estimate be made for its extent under the ocean, over nearly a million and a quarter square miles. "Few of the reliable recorded earthquakes of other countries," he said, "have affected so great areas as those of New Madrid and Charleston. That of Lisbon was, perhaps, felt over a greater area, but the data are uncertain." He added the prediction that "if, as seems evident, displacement and earthquakes go together, then the Eastern United States are in danger, for displacement is now in progress at a rate so astonishingly rapid as to occasion surprise that earthquakes are not more frequent, and in curious and unconscious defiance of the inevitable the cities of Pittsburg, Richmond, Fredericksburg, Washington, Baltimore, Port Deposit, Wilmington, Philadelphia, Trenton, and New York have been located on the very line of displacement."

The Pacific Speeches of Leading European statesmen have aroused the suspicion of the public that they protest too much. The financiers, evidently, have no confidence in their statements as the prices of securities are a clear evidence that war is expected at no distant date, though it may be delayed for a few months. Practical observers point to the inconsistency between the words of the statesmen and their actions, which are all of a warlike character. No reduction of armaments has taken place anywhere, and vigorous efforts are being made by the commanders to improve the efficiency of their corps. Prince Bismarck recently made an ominous remark which has been variously explained, but which has on no hypothesis a tranquillizing tone. He said: "We must aim to consolidate the unity of the entire German nation in view of the dangers to which it will be exposed at no distant time." This, with other rumors, leads to the fear that the danger of war has not entirely passed away.

The British Government has Asked the House of Commons to give its undivided and continuous attention to the Irish Coercion bill. A lengthy and vigorous debate ensued in which Mr. Gladstone led the opposition. Consent was eventually given on Friday last by a majority of eighty-nine. The vote was 349 to 260. The majority was smaller than was expected because some ten or twelve members who will vote for coercion disapproved of making it the exclusive business of Parliament at a time when other measures are awaiting consideration.

Emperor William of Germany Celebrated his ninetieth birthday on March 22d with extreme magnificence. The Prince of Wales, representing England, Prince Vladimir, Russia, and Prince Rudolph, Austria, participated in the festivities. A large number of German kings and princes were also present to offer congratulations to the venerable monarch. His first visitors were his two great-grandsons who took him an offering of flowers. They and their father, the eldest son of the Crown Prince, received an ovation from the crowd. Berlin was beautifully illuminated and the day was observed as a national holiday. Germans in New York and other American cities also held meetings to celebrate the day.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Two hundred persons are believed to have been converted at one station recently. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York N. Y. Received with thanks: From a Friend, Des Moines, Iowa, $5; A Few Christian Ladies, of Pilot Grove, Minn., $8; Donation by American Express, $3.

The Rev. M. Baxter had Large Meetings Last Sunday in the principal theatre of Richmond, Va., and will preach there again next Sunday. His congregations were very large, on the previous two Sundays, in the Mammoth Hall, North Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Chicago's Dread.—Mayor Harrison Expresses his fear of anarchy and bloodshed in Chicago during the next two years. He said, on March 21st: "I am sixty-two years old. A life of quiet for a few years may give me a happy and vigorous old age. A terrible strain during the next two years may make me a decrepit valetudinarian. I cannot get any more honor in this office. My fear is that we will have some terrible trouble in this city in the next two years, if the Supreme Court gives the anarchists a new trial. I have been successful in being able to quell disturbances hitherto with the police. The future may develop something different. If I should be elected Mayor again I should feel that I would not dare to be away from Chicago where a half day's ride could not bring me home." Mr. Harrison, on Friday, withdrew his name as a candidate for the Mayoralty.

The Power of the Pope is Fully Realized by Prince Bismarck, who is probably the most astute statesman in Europe. In a speech which he made in the Prussian Parliament on March 23d he said: "I regard peace with the Pope as important as peace with any other foreign Power. . . . In 1878 I planned a peace, but I see the helplessness of even an all-powerful Minister. I needed ten years to realize my plan. . . . The Pope and Emperor in the Socialist question have the same interests, and must make common cause to overcome it. I cannot allow myself to break my word to the Pope. At least I shall personally carry out all I promised him. I believe that when the Pope and the King are once again in unity we can pass over the opposition of Herr Windthorst and the Centre." Students of prophecy will see the significance of these words uttered by the Protestant Chancellor of a Protestant empire. As the Rev. M. Baxter has pointed out, prophecy clearly indicates that the Atheistic Antichrist will have the same conviction, and will use the influence of the Pope to assist him in attaining his ambition.

The Last Words Written for the Press by the late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher deserve the attention of all parents. At the present time there is a fatal laxity in parental discipline which is bearing terrible fruit. Mr. Beecher was deeply impressed with the fact when he wrote: "Keep your children at home at night. There is many a sod that lies over the child whose downfall began by vagrancy at night, and there is many a child whose heart-breaking parents would give the world if the sod did lie over it. What a state is that for children to come to in which the father and the mother dread their life unspeakably more than their death! What a horrible state of things that is where parents feel a sense of relief in the dying of their children! Then, I say, take care of your children at night."

Thirteen Days of Darkness, Starvation and foul air were passed by two boys who landed at Boston, Mass., on Friday last from the steamship Kansas. They came from Liverpool, England, where they were in great poverty. One of them possessed fourpence and the other was penniless, when they resolved to come to America. They had heard of stowaways and of their being found shortly after leaving port. They expected a like result, but in their ignorance, stowed themselves away in the lower hold of a three-deck ship. Of course, before the vessel left port the hatches were battened down, and the space above them was filled with cargo In blank darkness they lived through the thirteen days of the voyage, the hideous monotony being broken only by delirious struggles with each other in which in their crazed condition they engaged until starvation resulted in unconsciousness. How long they remained insensible no one can tell, but there remained but the feeblest glimmer of life when their emaciated forms were brought to light by the removal of the hatch. They are being carefully treated in hospital, and, if they recover, will be sent back to England. One cannot but feel regret, that after all their suffering, the boys are to be disappointed in attaining their hope of life in America. Perhaps when their story becomes known some benevolent person will help them to come back here. We may hope, too, that Christian people will take an interest in them and tell them of that "better land" in which there are many mansions and in which through Christ they may obtain an inheritance (Acts 26 : 18).

A Young Man was Arrested for Breaking his own picture in Georgia on March 16th. Two gay young men from the North had their photographs taken in a bar-room in the act of taking a drink. The photographer made some extra pictures and displayed them for sale. One of the young gentlemen saw them and went into the artist's shop, got hold of the negative, and broke it. The photographer had him arrested on a charge of malicious mischief and he was convicted. He is a member of a wealthy family in New York City, and now he is as much worried at having stood in a criminal dock as he was at having his picture exposed for sale. In both cases his concern shows a wrong principle. He evidently cares more for his reputation than he does for his character. He, and others like him, should remember that conduct which causes them shame when it is publicly known would have been just as shameful if it had been kept secret. They cannot keep it from the eyes of God who is their Judge (Prov. 5 : 21).

Two Families Pursued by the Raging Missouri narrowly escaped destruction on March 19th at Painted Woods, Dak. Ter. The river, swollen by the snows, rose very rapidly at that point, but the adults of the two families thought that they would have time to pack their household goods before the flood reached them. Their houses were situated on low land, and before they got ready to start the water was within six feet of their doors. They then started, but were compelled to go through low land for a quarter of a mile before they reached the buttes. While they were crossing it, the water reached the top of the ridge and swept over the low land in a torrent, and for over a quarter of a mile the terrified people were pursued by the rushing waters. Before they reached the high land they were overtaken, and for the last four rods were compelled to wade through three feet of water, one of the five children being carried a long distance before it could be rescued. Had their packing occupied them one hour longer their way of escape would have been cut off and property and life both might have been sacrificed. In that way many are losing eternal life. Instead of flying at once for safety to Christ they are concerned about their worldly possessions (Luke 12 : 20).

The Curious Hallucination of a Demented woman in Louisville, Ky., is described in the Courier Journal. It states that on March 18th the wife of a respectable citizen was committed to the Lunatic Asylum, a most peculiar delusion having obtained full possession of her rendering her irresponsible for her actions. She insists that her two children, aged respectively eight and six years, have been stolen from her, and others substituted. One night recently she took the little fellows to Central Station and demanded that they be locked up as impostors and her own children found. The astonished officer in charge had her conducted home, where she was detained until brought into court on Friday. She reiterated her statements there, saying that a man came to her bedside one night not long ago, and, after blindfolding her, took two of her children away and left two of his own. There is, of course, no foundation for her story, which is the product of her own disordered mind. Sometimes the children of pious parents are so undutiful that such a story in their case would not seem so unreasonable, but the parents, knowing what their own natures were before their conversion, are not perplexed, but pray that God will regenerate their children too (Eph. 2 : 11–13).

A Lady's Shrill Scream in the Gallery of a church disturbed a congregation in Birmingham, Conn., recently. A local journal says: "The soft strains of the organ in the Episcopal Church were floating on the air last night, when a piercing shriek rang through the building. All eyes were directed to the choir-gallery where they saw a young lady leap from her seat and struggle violently. She continued to contort her body, explaining to her associates that 'there's something on my back.' The organist, a young man of nerve, played through to the end of his music. No one saw anything unusual on her back, but finally, to satisfy her, the organist took off her plush cloak, and there, cosily perched upon her waist, sat a mouse, bright-eyed and paralyzed with terror. In spite of the solemnity of the occasion the organist laughed aloud, and the female members of the choir jumped up on the seats and drew their dresses tightly around them. The mouse escaped." It will be well for that young lady if she were never to have more cause for terror than she had then. But she must encounter more formidable assailants, and she will do well to remember that when he who is the one most to be dreaded—the enemy of souls—assails her, he also will decamp, as did that mouse, if she resists him in the strength promised to all who seek it (James 4 : 7).

BRIEF NOTES.

MRS. CLARA S. WHITNEY will conduct a series of revival meetings in Hoy's Tabernacle, Pennsylvania Avenue, Baltimore, Md., commencing on Sunday next, and continuing every night.

Governor Lounsbury, of Connecticut, has signed the bill prohibiting railroad traffic in that State on Sundays, between the hours of nine A.M. and three P.M.

The trial of the persons charged with the murder of the Rev. George Haddock, the martyred Prohibitionist, was commenced in the District Court of Sioux City, Iowa, on March 24th.

The Hartford Congregational Club has elected for its President Hon. Yung Wing, an accomplished and highly-educated Chinaman, for some time an honored resident of that city.

Mr. D. L. Moody's meetings in Chicago are now being held in the southern division of the city. In the afternoons at three o'clock he conducts Bible-readings at Bishop Cheney's church. In the evenings he holds meetings in the churches at the stock-yards. All the services have been attended by large numbers of the people.

The workingmen of Chicago are finding out that the desecration of the Lord's day is an injury to themselves. At a large meeting, which they held recently in Central Music Hall, resolutions were adopted demanding the prohibition of labor on the Sabbath, and the better enforcement of Sunday laws. A committee will present the resolutions to the Legislature

Miss Strachan's work among the fallen women in New York City has been much blessed during the past year. At the anniversary meeting on March 18th, it was stated that several hundred women have been led by its instrumentality to abandon a vicious life, and have been provided with employment, and quite as large a number have been restored to their parents. Services are held every night in the rooms of the mission, 105 West Twenty-Seventh Street.

Rev. George C. Needham has commenced a series of services in his brother's church, Rev. W. E. Needham, West Chester, Pa. Mr. Peter Bilhorn accompanies him as a singer. Very large congregations gathered three times to hear the evangelists on Sunday, March 20th. Many are seeking the Lord, and the outlook is very good. Thomas Needham (there are four brothers Needham all preachers) is evangelizing in Dover, Del. Scores have come out and decided for Christ already, and the whole town is stirred.

An extensive and destructive fire occurred at the grounds of the well-known Chautauqua Assembly, situated on Chautauqua Lake, in the northern part of New York State, on the evening of Sunday, March 20th, involving a loss of seventy-five thousand dollars. The south side of Asbury Avenue, Summerfield Avenue, and both sides of Simpson Avenue were swept clear of buildings; and as all were of wood only the chimneys and the half-burned trunks of trees remain of the quarter visited by the fire. Only one of the Assembly buildings was destroyed.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. Any one who sells five hundred copies may thus earn five dollars weekly. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. Address Manager of CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. FIVE PRIZES will be given on June 30th to the canvassers who have sold the largest number of copies each week between this date and that. The two at the head of the list will receive ten dollars each and the next three five dollars each.

THE PLEADING OF THE LAST MESSENGER.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son. But those husbandmen said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours. And they took him, and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard. What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do? he will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others."—Mark 12: 6-9.

The Israelites in their Vineyard—The Rent Kept Back—The Messengers Maltreated—Every Man has a Vineyard—The Same Messengers Still—The Last Messenger—I. The Amazing Mission—Disinterested—Conspicuously Glorious—Winning God's Ultimatum—II. The Astounding Crime—Accessories in this Day—Why the Husbandmen Killed Him—Deceived by a Long Immunity from Punishment—Slavery of Those who Live for Themselves—III. The Appropriate Punishment.

Brethren, you know the story of God's dealing with Israel, and Israel's dealing with God. The Lord chose their fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; He made them a race separated unto Himself, He brought them out of Egypt from under the iron yoke; He led them through the Red Sea; He fed them for forty years in the wilderness; He led them about and tutored them, even as a man teacheth his son. In due time He brought them into the land which floweth with milk and honey; and He put them under a dispensation eminently gentle and full of tenderness, where as a nation they might enjoy unbroken prosperity, "sitting every man under his vine and under his fig-tree, none making them afraid."

All that He Required of them was that He should be their God, that they should put no idols in His place, but should obey His statutes. Alas! from the first they copied the nations among whom they dwelt; they set up the gods of Egypt when they were in the wilderness, and in Canaan they went astray after the polluted deities of the nations. They worshipped defiled gods with rites obscene; they even passed their children through the fire to Moloch, and did horrible things which angered the Most High. In His longsuffering He sent to them prophets one after another—prophets who received unworthy treatment at their hands whenever they rebuked their sins. The prophets were derided, persecuted, and even slain with the sword. God in great patience sent them more of His messengers, some of them grandly eloquent, like Esaias and Ezekiel; others of them full of tears, like Jeremiah; or clothed with dignity, like Daniel. They warned the people, and ceased not to plead with them, whether they would hear or whether they would forbear. Cruel treatment awaited many of these servants of the Lord.

Israel rejected the servants that came from the great Householder

Asking for the Rent

of His vineyard. They repudiated the claims of God, and cast off allegiance to Him with contempt and disdain; until at last the nation was led into captivity, and in the end only lingered on the chosen soil as a mere remnant. The Roman yoke was heavy upon the people; their sins had brought them low. God, in His infinite compassion, gave them one more opportunity. He had one Son, His well-beloved Son, and He sent Him to His Israel. Those who had rejected the prophets also rejected the Lord; the fate of the servants was repeated in "the Heir." "Let us kill Him," said they; and they put Him to the death of the cross. You know the story; it is full of infinite mercy on God's part, and of immeasurable guilt on man's part.

What has this to do with us? I am not going to preach this morning merely to rehearse a piece of ancient history which has no bearing on to-day; I do not so regard the death of our Lord. My anxiety is to reach the consciences of living men, and, if possible, to win to the Blessed Heir of all things, who has risen from the dead, some of those who have had a share in His death.

The fact is, that unless changed by grace,

We have All Refused to Pay to our great God the service which is due to Him. He has put us here and given us this life like a vineyard, for us to cultivate; but many have cultivated that vineyard entirely for themselves—themselves or their families and friends, and not for their God, their Maker. "God is not in all their thoughts." Now, the Lord has sent to such many messengers. We have had no prophets in these days living among us; but we have the Word of God and the record of the testimonies of His inspired messengers, and these virtually speak to us. We have Moses and the prophets; they are speaking to us even now. Besides that, we have been surrounded by men of God, and encompassed by holy women who have appealed to us on God's behalf. They have been urged to speak by the love of their hearts, and they have tried to bring us to repent of past rebellion and to yield ourselves at once to God. Many are the voices around us and within us which persuade to render unto the great Householder His due; but in many cases none of these have been successful. Last of all God has sent to each one of us His Son, that He in His own person may lovingly repeat with greater emphasis the requirements of the Lord of love It is in the person of Jesus Christ that God makes His last and strongest appeal to the human conscience.

Three things I shall speak of this morning, and the first will be the amazing mission: "Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved, he sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son." Secondly, the astounding crime: "They took him and killed him, and cast him out of the vineyard." And, therefore, thirdly, the appropriate punishment, of which the text says, "What shall therefore the lord of the vineyard do?" What vengeance can be sufficient for so base a deed?

I. First, let us dwell for a few moments upon

The Amazing Mission:

"Having yet therefore one son, his well-beloved, he sent him also." Please remember concerning the Son of God, sent to us to reconcile us to the Father when He comes to us today, comes for no personal ends. When the messengers were sent by the householder, it was to claim the householder's rent; when the heir came, it was for the same purpose. So it is in the human emblem; but in the divine this becomes less conspicuous. When Jesus pleads with us, although He urges us to render unto God our love and our obedience, yet God does not stand in need of these as the householder stood in need of his rents. What is it to the infinite Jehovah whether thou serve Him or not? Thou alone wilt be the gainer or the loser; therefore when Jesus prays thee to repent, believe thou in the disinterestedness of His heart; believe that it can be nothing but the tenderest regard for thy well-being which makes Him warn thee. Hear how Jehovah puts it: "As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live." A messenger after many rejections, a messenger who comes solely out of love to us, ought to have our respectful attention. Let us see

Who this Messenger is.

He is one greatly beloved of His Father, and in Himself He is of surpassing excellence. So majestic and so compassionate, so great, and yet so good; will you refuse Him? If I plead with you, I am but as you are, flesh of your flesh; but if Jesus speaks to you, I beseech you by the glory of His Godhead, as well as by the love which God bears to His Son, to listen to this matchless Messenger of mercy, who would fain persuade thee to repent. He is so glorious that I cannot describe Him, and His graciousness is as conspicuous as His glory. There was never such a one as He. He hid not His face from shame and spitting, nor His body from the shedding of blood, nor His soul from deadly agony; but He loved the Church, and gave Himself for it. It is this lover of souls that becomes God's advocate with us, and pleads with us that we would cease from our rebellion.

Furthermore, His manner is most winning. When I have been pleading for men with God, and I have ceased my pleading, I have feared that something in my tone or in my manner would cause my pleading to fail. I am not, perhaps, so tender as I should be, nor is there sufficient pathos in my tones If I could do better, I would go to any school to learn. God has put me often to the school of suffering to instruct me in this respect; and yet I do confess my failings with deep regret. But when Jesus, my Lord, pleads with you, this charge cannot be laid against Him. His pleading is perfect. Therefore, my hearer, if you see anything about me of which you disapprove, censure me if you will; but be all the more attentive to my Lord, about whom there is nothing but what is wooing and melting. God has sent to you His well-beloved Son; I implore you, do not refuse Him.

Remember, once more, that if you do not hear the well-beloved Son of God, you have refused your last hope. He is God's Ultimatum.

Nothing remains when Christ is refused. No one else can be sent. If Christ be rejected, hope is rejected. Neither would you be converted though one rose from the dead; for Jesus has risen from the dead, and you have refused Him. I should like every person here that is unconverted to recollect that there is no other Gospel, and no more sacrifice for sin. I have heard talk of "a larger hope" than the Gospel sets before us; it is a fable, with nothing in Scripture to warrant it. Rejecting Christ, you have rejected all; you have shut against yourself the one door of hope. Thus this amazing mission is set forth before you, and I pray you, as you love yourselves, do not refuse Him that speaketh; for if they escaped not who refused Him that spake on earth, how shall they escape who despise Him that speaketh from heaven?

II. I beg your attention while I look to

The Astounding Crime.

It was nothing less than an astounding crime, that when this householder sent his well-beloved son, the husbandmen said one to another, "This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours. And they took him, and cast him out of the vineyard." "No," says one, "we never killed the Son of God." I will not charge you with having done so literally; that were to make myself chargeable with exaggeration. But a man may do virtually what he cannot do actually. If a murder be committed and I approve of it, if my own principles lead up to it, if I feel no indignation against it, but express myself very coolly about it, if there is reason to believe that if I had been there, I should have done the same, then I may be in the sight of God a partaker in the crime. There are many who are guilty of the body and blood of Christ.

All those who persistently deny the deity of Christ, virtually kill Him; for the Son of God is not alive if His Godhead be not in existence. It is essential to the idea of Christ, the heir of all things, that He be God, and to deny His Godhead is to stab at His heart. All those who deny His atonement also slay Him; for the blood of sacrifice is the life of the Christ of God. The very essence of His Christhood, the soul of His character as Jesus, lies in His having been appointed to be a propitiation for sin. No cross no Christ, no atonement no cross. "Well, we have not done that," cry some of you. "We have been no opposers of the deity or sacrifice of Jesus." But let me remind you that if you do not judge Him to be worthy of your most careful thoughts, if you are indifferent to His claims, and refuse to obey His Gospel, you have virtually put Him away. To you it is the same as if there were no Christ.

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?
Is it nothing to you that Jesus should die?"

You have virtually answered "It is nothing." You have set Christ down as nothing compared with the business of daily life, and thus you have virtually slain Him; you have put Him out of existence so far as you are concerned. In the little world of your mind there is No Living Saviour.

He is dead and buried to you, and the claims of God which He pleads you will not think upon. He who deserves all your thoughts gets none of them. I have still closer work with some of you, who are most assuredly guilty. You were once members of the Church; you came to the communion-table, where they gather who remember His precious body and blood; you used to glory in His name; but you have gone back, you have denied the faith, you have ceased to be followers of the Lamb. Now, these are no words of mine, but inspired words: You have "crucified the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame."

What was the reason why these husbandmen, these dressers of the vineyard, dared thus to treat the heir? The reason is one which presses upon those here present who have rejected Christ. They did it, first, because they had

Enjoyed a Long Immunity

from punishment. They had not been at once punished for their defiance of their lord. They had rejected his messengers without provoking him to war; they had gone on to stone and slay others of his servants, and the householder had not come upon them to overthrow them. The first time they mocked at the messenger they were somewhat afraid; they feared lest soon the sword of the prince whom they had defied would threaten their gates. But as there was no invasion they grew bold. The next messenger they slew, and washed their hands, in presumption, saying, "Nothing will come of it." They grew at last to be very hardened. I know not what they said, but I conceive that certain of them propagated the theory that their lord took no notice of what they did, or that he was too loving to punish them severely. "See!" said they, "he only sends fresh messengers if we kill the old ones; and even if we kill his son

He Will Bear It."

Ungrateful men abuse God's long-suffering to-day as they did of old. They say, "Well, I have refused the Gospel a long time; I have put aside many appeals; but I am not dead, nor struck with blindness, nor smitten down with a stroke. I can go on at least a little longer in safety. I may refuse Christ yet again, for God is merciful." "Certain teachers," say you, "tell us that God is so good, that if we even kill His Son He will take no account of it." You do not put your thoughts into those words; but you are saying as much by your actions. You dare not say it, and yet it lurks in your hearts, and works itself out in your deeds. To you this seems a little thing, but horror takes hold of me at the thought of it. Oh, sirs, I will be no partner in your crime. I will not cease to warn you that it must be of all risks the most tremendous. Gracious as He is—and God has proved His grace by sending His Son—yet God is not effeminate nor unjust. If you refuse the mercy which He proffers you, He will deal with you in His justice.

The great reason, however, why these husbandmen determined to kill the heir was this: they said, "Then the inheritance shall be ours." This is what the heart of man vainly desires. It says, "Let us be rid of this troublesome talk of religion, and then we can live for ourselves, and study our own of conscience. Are we not our own? Who shall be lord over us? If we are rid of this Jesus, we shall not have this claim being always made upon us, that we are God's creatures, and that we ought to live to Him. We do not intend to serve God. We will pay no rent to this Householder. We will be our own proprietors. God shall have nothing from us. This is what you hanker after. But your folly is exceeding great. I grieve as I look into your young face and read the idle dream of your heart. You little know what a tyrant he serves who lives as he lists. May God grant that I may never live as my sinful lusts would make me live! I had rather be a machine and be compelled to do always what is right, than have free will, and with that free will give myself up to do that which is wrong.

Pleasure Without Remorse

Self lies at the bottom of all rejection of Christ—"Let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours." Ah, my hearer! it will not be yours; and if it were yours for a little while, and you could do just as you pleased with it, yet remember that the inheritance which is so gained will soon pass away, and you yourself will soon have to stand before the judgment seat of Christ to give an account of the deeds done in the body, whether they be good, or whether they be bad. And what will you do who have slain your Saviour? What will you do in that day, who have lived and died unsaved?

III. I must close with that third head, which is so dreadful to me:

The Appropriate Punishment.

Here I must interject a terrible passage, which it burdens me to deliver. At this present moment I am afraid that this parable is being written out again in the history of the Church of God. God has put into His vineyard, or allowed to come into His vineyard, a number of religious teachers who are not rendering to Him the honor due. Those religious teachers to whom I refer are not teaching the Gospel as it is delivered in Holy Scripture, but they are adapting it to the age, and to the scientific knowledge of the period. The thoughts of their own minds are given instead of the revelation of God. Thus they set up another gospel, which is not another; but there be some that trouble you The spirit of the age is the spirit of proud self-sufficiency; be it ours to sit at Jesus' feet. My Lord will one day say to me, "I gave thee a message, didst thou deliver it? I bade thee speak in My name, didst thou speak My words or thine own? I gave thee a revelation, didst thou deliver that revelation as best thou couldst? or didst thou invent a new thing out of thine own brain?" I know how I shall answer. I fear that a terrible doom awaits those who go after the fashionable falsehoods of the day. The Lord have mercy upon all false prophets, and bring them humbly and tremblingly to His feet, lest they ensnare the people yet more, to the overthrow of this nation, and the taking away of the candlestick out of its place.

I return to you whom I have already addressed. You have crucified the Son of God by refusing to believe in Him. What shall the Lord do unto you when He comes? The sentence cannot be too severe, for the crime is beyond measure horrible. It must be known to the law. They slew the servants, and they slew the heir; no temporary punishment can meet the case. Those who plead for a light doom for such a crime must, in their own hearts, be rebels. Those who are evermore making light of hell are probably doing it in the hope of making it easy for themselves. He is the devil's advocate who would judge the punishment of the impenitent to be a light one; God's true servants say, "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men."

The Highest Form of Punishment

In the chapter which we read (Matthew 21), our Lord gives us a terrible word. Comparing Himself to the stone which should be the foundation, but which the builders reject, He says, "On whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder." It is put in another way in that expression—"The wrath of the Lamb." Is not that a marvellous combination, "The wrath of the Lamb?" Love when it turns to jealousy is the fiercest of all passions; and when the love of Christ in infinite justice shall be turned into holy indignation against unrighteousness, then it will be something terrible to think of, and to bear it will be the second death. Oh, my hearers, my dear hearers, do not refuse the Lord Jesus, who now pleads with you. I am not worthy to be His ambassador; I am not fit for the office; but yet I would plead with you as a loving brother. Will you lose your souls? Will you reject Christ? Oh, sirs, will you refuse the Son of God? Men and women, can you be so mad as to live and die without the Saviour? Are you so far gone as this? Turn, I beseech you, turn you this day. Lord, turn them, for Thy dear Son's sake! Amen.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

THE WAYS OF THE ANTS.*

In the study of nature we are brought face to face with the fact that the Creator knows no distinction between small and great.

> "He made the atom and He made the universe,
> And both are equal—both are infinite."

He employs one and the same means to rule the incalculable vastness of the universe, and to take care that nothing be wasted on this little orb of earth, not even a grain of honey in the cell of a bee.

Without brains, dull in color, and insignificant in size, the ants are not only the most wonderful of the insect race, but, next to man, perhaps the most gifted of the whole animal kingdom. Sir J. Lubbock, who has made a special study of these insects, goes so far as to say that although the anthropoid apes approach more nearly to man in bodily structure than any other animals, the ants have a fair claim to rank next to man in the scale of intelligence.

Yet though they have no brains, but only a series of nervous ganglia connected by threads, they possess reasoning powers, and are marvellously intelligent; can work in concert under leaders; can converse with each other; possess enduring memories, evince love, hatred, and compassion; can play as well as work; will fight with desperate courage in defence of their homes; will make war against neighboring states and carry off prisoners into servitude; will nurse and tend their young; will keep milch cattle in sheds built expressly for them; will lay up stores of honey and grain; will till the soil, weed the ground, plant seeds, and reap the harvest; and, lastly, when their brief life is over, even bury their honored dead with elaborate ceremony.

How the little creatures can perform these tasks, some of them being beyond the capacity of many a savage tribe, and yet possess no brains, is one of the many seeming paradoxes with which the study of animal life teems.

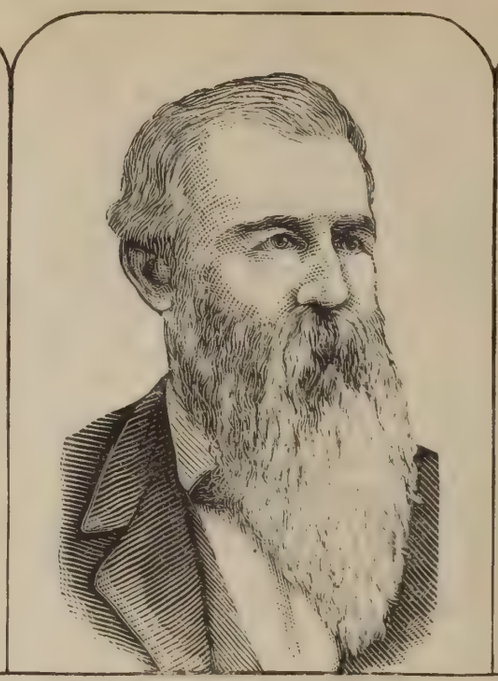
It may seem strange that the practice of slave-hunting, so much reprehended among human beings, should be instinctively followed by insects, but it is nevertheless the fact that many ants are actually obliged to make slaves in order to live. The species in question can certainly manage without slaves, although it is more comfortable with them. The late Mr. F. Smith found in its nests no less than four other species of ant, all of which were contentedly playing the part of domestic servants. There are some species of ants which are absolutely dependent on their slaves, and would die but for their help. These are called the Slave-makers. This insect carries out to the fullest extent the idea prevalent in the Middle Ages that labor of any kind is a degradation. Fighting was the only occupation worthy of a noble, and fighting is not simply the only occupation worthy of a Slave-maker Ant, but is the only one which it is able to follow. It can fight most fiercely, but it can do nothing else. On its slave-hunting expeditions it is fierce, active, and formidable. At home it is helpless. It can invade the dwellings of other ants and carry them off as slaves, but without the help of those slaves it would die.

When thirty of these Amazons were confined in a box, together with a supply of honey, the insects did not know how to feed themselves,

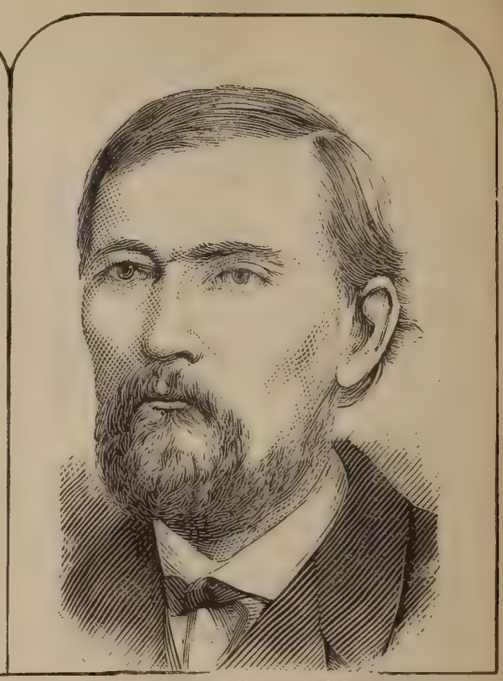
---

* From "Half-hours with a Naturalist." By the Rev. J. G. Wood, M.A., who is a valuable guide to those who obey the injunction of the wise king: "Go to the ant . . . consider her ways, and be wise" (Prov. 6: 6). Pp. 340. With numerous illustrations. Price, $1.50. Published by Thomas Whittaker, 2 and Bible House, New York.

U. S. Senator Paddock of Nebraska.



U. S. Senator Stewart of Nevada.



U. S. Senator Turpie of Indiana.

and fifteen died of starvation on the second day. A single slave was then introduced. This little creature at once assumed the management, fed the starving Amazons, scooped out a dwelling, and helped the newly-developed ants out of their pupa cases. Sir J. Lubbock repeated this experiment and kept a number of the Amazons in perfect health by lending them a slave for an hour or two daily, to feed and cleanse them.

In slavery among ants we see one of the many human attributes which belong to these wonderful insects. Moreover we have slavery presented to us in its best form. The ants are the kindest of masters to their servants, and the latter are evidently imbued with the warmest attachment to them. In the cases above mentioned the slave was not compelled to feed and "do for" its masters, but set about its task voluntarily.

ALGERNON S. PADDOCK,

Newly-Elected U. S. Senator from Nebraska.

In electing Mr. Paddock to the United States Senate, Nebraska has returned, if not to her first love, at least to one whom she has loved before. He represented her in the Senate from 1875 to 1881. Mr. Paddock has been identified with the young State for thirty years, and was one of the most earnest and energetic of the workers who labored to secure her promotion from the rank of a Territory.

Mr. Paddock is fifty-six years of age, having been born at Glenn's Falls, N. Y., in 1831. Like many other men who have attained eminence as lawyers and legislators, Mr. Paddock's earliest occupation was that of a school teacher. On the completion of his education in 1849 he went to Detroit, Mich., where he taught school, and afterward obtained a position in the same capacity in his native State. All his leisure time was given to the study of law, and eventually he succeeded in passing his examination and was admitted to the bar. Soon afterward, however, Horace Greeley's advice to "Go West, young man," commended itself to his mind, and Mr. Paddock took a farm in Nebraska, settling there in 1857, when he was twenty six-years old. Subsequently he removed to Omaha and engaged in journalistic work. This occupation drew him into politics, and he became an enthusiastic member of the Republican party, which he helped to organize in the Territory. In 1875 Mr. Paddock was, as we have said, elected United States Senator and served out his term. He was succeeded by Mr. Van Wyck, whom he now succeeds.

WILLIAM MORRIS STEWART,

Newly-Elected U. S. Senator from Nevada.

The Republican Party in the United States Senate gains a vote, which makes a difference of two in a division, by the election of Mr. Stewart, whose portrait appears on this page. He succeeds Mr. Fair, who voted with the Democrats. It is a curious fact that Mr. Stewart, though absent from the Senate for twelve years, was the first Senator elected by Nevada after she entered the family of States.

He was born in Wayne County, N. Y., in August, 1827, and is therefore in his sixtieth year. At the age of six he removed with his parents to Trumbull County, Ohio, where he received the very limited school education which his parents could afford to give him. Those were hard times, and at the age of thirteen the boy was taken from school and hired out to farm-service. In this situation young Stewart gave proof of his energy and self-reliance. He worked hard, saved money, and when he had enough to support himself went back to school to finish his course. Then he taught school long enough to provide himself with means for a university education and entered himself at Yale College.

After two years spent in that institution he succumbed to the gold fever and in 1850 went to California to dig for gold. In a few months he had gained about ten thousand dollars and with this he quitted the mines and set himself to the study of law. He was admitted to the bar of Nevada City in 1852 and was soon afterward made District Attorney. He subsequently removed to San Francisco, then back to Nevada City and then to Virginia City, Nev. In each place his law business was successful, and he became well known as the best mining lawyer of the West. In 1863, when Nevada became a State, Mr. Stewart was chosen United States Senator, and was re-elected in 1869. He has now again been elected and his return to Washington is heartily welcomed by his party.

DAVID TURPIE,

Newly-Elected U. S. Senator from Indiana.

After a long and fierce contest, diversified by some very exciting incidents, the Legislature of Indiana has decided on the man who shall fill her vacant seat in the United States Senate. The victory is with the Democrats and their candidate was Judge David Turpie, whose portrait appears on this page. The judge is a man well known throughout the State, his marked peculiarities and attainments having brought him considerable notoriety. It may be hoped that in the responsible and honorable position which he has now been called to fill he will become known to the whole nation as an able and high-minded statesman.

Judge Turpie is fifty-eight years of age, having been born in Hamilton County, Ohio, in 1829. He graduated at Kenyon College, the same State, in 1848, was admitted to the bar in 1849 and began practice at Logansport, Indiana. In 1852 he was a member of the Indiana House of Representatives. He was appointed a Common Pleas judge in 1854, and a judge of the Circuit Court in 1856, both of which positions he resigned. In 1858 he was again a member of the State House of Representatives. He also sat in the Senate for a brief period in 1863 to fill out Senator Bright's term. As a speaker he is remarkable for his ready and caustic epigrams and for his prodigious memory. His speeches show that he is familiar not only with Shakespeare and the poets of this and other countries, but with the Bible, which he has evidently read attentively. We trust that in his high position he will continue to study that sacred Book, not only to find passages that will give point to his speeches but to gain true wisdom for this life and the next.

THE BURNING OF THE RICHMOND HOTEL, BUFFALO, N. Y., ON MARCH 18.

(See Picture on page 205.)

The burning of the fine new hotel, which stood on the corner of Main and Eagle streets, in Buffalo, N. Y., last Friday week, will be long remembered by reason of its awful associations. The fire was discovered soon after three o'clock in the morning, by the night clerk, who pulled the electric fire-alarms connecting with the sleeping apartments in the hotel, and, a minute later, people began to fly down in their night clothes.

"In an incredibly short space of time the interior of the hotel was filled with smoke and flame. Then terrible scenes began. The second and third alarms brought the entire fire department to the scene, but it was impossible to save any portion of the structure. The fire had reached the roof in less than five minutes from the time it was discovered." Finding all escape by the stairway cut off, the frantic people rushed through the halls and to the windows. Several of them jumped to the ground, and were terribly injured. An eye-witness says that men, women, and children acted perfectly wild, and did not know which way to go. Women raved like maniacs, and rushed pell-mell in every direction. The smoke was almost suffocating. The shrieks and cries of the poor people in the upper stories of the burning structure were heartrending. One man, mad with terror, leaped from a third-story window, and was picked up from the stone sidewalk on Main Street a mangled corpse.

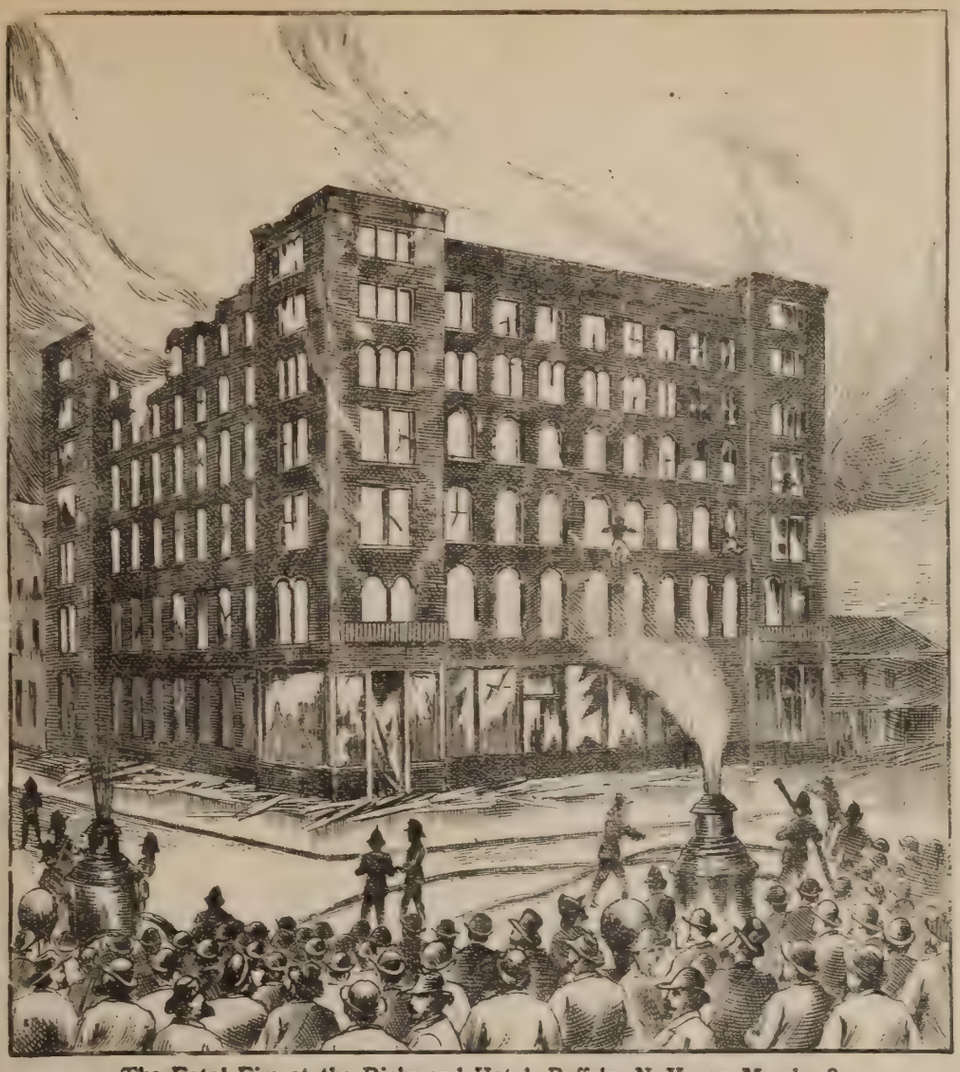
Hardly anybody kept cool, but the few who did were in the least danger. One commercial traveller from Brooklyn, for instance, stood, scantily clothed, at one of the windows of the fourth story, alternately surveying the flames darting up behind him, and then coolly watching the operations of the firemen, who were raising the Hayes extension ladder to save him. He uttered not a word, but was apparently busy calculating his chances. Up went the ladder slowly. It finally reached him just as the fire was bursting out of the window where he stood. He reached the top rung of the ladder in safety, and descended deliberately and without the slightest sign of fear.

The ladders were moved as quickly as possible, but not quickly enough to satisfy people standing at the windows, with the flames but a few feet behind them. It was a horrible sight to see the people jumping from every side. The cool-headed ones were rescued all right, but some wouldn't wait. Among the brave deeds of the firemen was one deserving of special mention. District Engineer Edward Murphy was on a ladder rescuing some of the people. At an upper-story window was one of the female servants. He shouted to her to remain where she was, and he would come up and save her. The poor creature, frantic with terror, instead of obeying, leaped from the window, and literally threw herself at Murphy. This caused him to lose his balance, but he hung to the ladder with one hand, and caught the girl around the neck with the other arm, holding her thus firmly until he could regain his equilibrium, when he slid down the ladder, bearing her safely to the ground.

Five girls were seen in a fifth-story window, who had tied the bed-clothing into a rope, which they hung out. None of them seemed to have the courage to start. At last one of them took hold and swung down to the window-ledge, from which she was assisted by two men. Three others came down in the same manner, and then the fifth girl started down. She had gone but a little distance when the rope parted, and down she went four stories. Strange to say, she was not killed. Her legs were terribly cut and bruised, and her back badly injured.

Twelve persons were killed outright, and thirty others were badly maimed or burned. The hotel, which was opened on Feburary 20th, only a month before the fire, was a magnificent building, but one in which a fire was surely destructive. Its prominent feature was a large rotunda, with wooden galleries, thus giving the fire communication with every part from the ground to the roof. Another effective aid to the fire was the net of wires surrounding the hotel, belonging to the electric light, telegraph and telephone companies.



The Fatal Fire at the Richmond Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., on March 18.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 191.)

The Miller's Recipe.

As Simon Holmes ceased speaking Sir Godwin bowed his gray head upon his hands and abandoned himself to an access of sobs and tears. Then as Simon thought of his many griefs, of his poor useless limbs, of his general excellence of character, all his soul went out to him in tender pity and desire, and his silent prayers went up to heaven that this tearful penitent might find the faith that casts out fear.

"In Lady Spofforth's life," said the baronet in subdued tones, as soon as he could command himself, "I thought little and cared less about these things, Simon. More shame on me. But Ethel's strange recovery, and all the influence of her piety and faith, have led me to think seriously, and to look into my own heart. I have often thought that if I had been other and better than I am, my son Harold would have been other and better, too. I've been wrong, Simon, but, alas, I can see no way to mend matters."

"That's just the beauty o' the grace an' goodness o' the Saviour, Sir Godwin. We can't mend ourselves, and it's a grand point gained when we find that oot. Then He undertak's to mend us. 'Blessed are they that mourn,' He says, 'for they shall be cumforted;' an' if you mourn for your sins an' tonn to Him, He'll save yo' an' bless yo', an' will in no wise cast yo' oot. Here's the point, Sir Godwin. If you're tired o' your sins, an' feel your need of a Saviour, then He bore your sins when He died on the cross, an' if you trust in the merit of His death, your sins which are many shall be all forgiven. Wi' you, as wi' ivery body else it is just this—

I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all,
But Jesus Christ is my All in All.

I tell you, Sir Godwin, there's anuff Gospel i' them two plain lines as 'll lift ony sinner oot o' condemnation into salvation, an' cause 'em to rejoice in God their Father an' their Friend. When t' poor publican went up at t' same taime wi' the Pharisee to the temple to pray, the Pharisee didn't want mendin'. He didn't feel the need on it. He just stood bolt upright, an' thanked God that he was all right; an' so he went back again not a whit better than he come. But t' publican knew he was wrang. He said just as you ha' said, 'I'm wrang, an' I can't mend myself.' He sighed an' wept just as you are sighin' an' weepin noo; an' he prayed, just as you'll pray, God be merciful to me a sinner!' an' he went away justified, pardoned, at peace wi' God an' his oan conscience, just as you'll be, Sir Godwin, I knoa you will; just as my lady was when she was ta'en up into heaven; just as Miss Ethel is, God bless her, riddy ony minute to go there!"

"Simon Holmes," said Sir Godwin, quickly, but with an intense earnestness not to be mistaken, "will you pray for me?"

The good carpenter did not need to be twice invited to do that. That was what he had been doing at almost every sentence he had spoken. The while he prayed, slowly and simply, so that the penitent seeker after God might follow him, the while he led him to plead for himself the atoning merit of Christ, the man for whom he prayed, the man who in his heart was praying too, found the light — the Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world revealed Himself to the weary soul that sought Him, and Sir Godwin Spofforth was able to say with Thomas in glad conviction, "My Lord and my God!"

It may well be questioned whether Simon Holmes himself had ever felt more fully the sweet rewards of doing good than he did when Ethel came into the library on some errand connected with her "mission." The baronet called her to his side, and taking her hand in his own, sat looking at her with a new light in his eye, and an unaccustomed peace on his face. "My darling," said he, "your father has found his Saviour. My Ethel and I will henceforth travel heavenward together. Your sainted mother is already there."

Ethel had no word to say in answer. She could only look her glad content. She kissed him on either cheek and tried to say, "dear father," and completely failed in the effort. Then taking Simon Holmes's honest hand in both her own, she gave him a grateful smile, and escaped from the room to "have it out," as she afterward confessed, with herself and with her God.

When Simon Holmes returned to his home, 'Becca greeted him with, "Why, Simon, you look as though somebody had left you a fortun'; whatever mak's you look so glad?"

"'Becca, my lass, Sir Godwin's gotten his fotten, an' I've left him rejoicin' 'at t' title-deeds are seeafe in his possession!"

"Whatever do ye mean, Simon?" said his wondering wife.

"I mean that he knoa's hisself to be 'a' heir o' God an' a joint-heir wi' Jesus Christ, an's that's an estate compared wi' which Aspen Chase is no better than a cabbage-garden!"

"God be thanked!" said 'Becca. "What does Miss Ethel say? She's fine and glad, I'll warrant."

"Ay, that she is. She was too glad a'most to speak," said Simon. "Many's the prayer she's put up for that blessing, I'll be bound, and now it's coom her heart's just full."

"Ah, an' reason, too!" said 'Becca. "The old man was in a parlous state wi' one foot in t' grave and no hope beyond. Ha' ye been at the Chase all the mornin'? You ha'n't forgot that job at t' mill? Peter told me to remind ye."

"Right, lass," said Simon, "I'd clean forgot it, and that's bad. A Christian man mun keep his promises or he gives occasion to the enemy to blaspheme. I'll go at once." And, seizing his bag of tools, Simon marched off to Peter Prout's mill.

As he approached, he saw that the miller was making use of the fresh north-west wind to turn the sails, the mill being constructed to admit of its being driven by wind or water. The rattle of the "hoppers," and the general rumble of the machinery, gave sufficient token that the grain was being turned to grist at a famous rate, and that white flour or the browner meal of barley was flowing in abundance down the wooden spouts and into the open bags placed to receive it as it fell.

Peter himself, whose rubicund cheeks were toned down by a plentiful powdering of the white dust that proclaimed his calling, was standing against one of the spouts with his hand in the warm current of descending meal. He slowly passed his broad thumb across it, as it fell on his fingers, to see that the upper and nether millstones were doing their work aright, and that the flour was sufficiently fine for the work for which it was intended.

Now Peter the miller was also Peter the musical, and seeing that matters in the mill were moving along so merrily, what could be more natural than that he should wax merry too? Loudly, cheerily, briskly, and heartily, as though he would keep match and measure with the sounds around him, he sang,

"Come let us be merry! come let us be cheery!
Come drive away sorrow and care;
Old Care is a foe, sir; then let's bid him go, sir,
And say, 'Come again if you dare.'
No good comes of sighing, or sobbing, or crying—
No ill can be mended by that;
And folks that go whining, and grumbling and pining,
Had better go laugh and grow fat."

"Very well sung, miller! very well sung!" said Simon Holmes, who had come in time to hear the song, and was standing in the doorway with a meaning smile upon his face.

"Very well sung, neighbor. But I ha' my doots aboot the moral on it or the science eather. If King Solomon is to be trusted, an' he's reckoned a bit of an authority on them questions, laughter is offen only another name for madness, an' growing fat's a thing that you may easily hev' ower mitch on. It may be a nat'ral ambition for a maggot, but as it can't sing, t' prescription dizn't fit. The Bible says 'at Jeshurun, who was only moderately manageable while he was thin, kicked as soon as he 'waxed fat,' an' as that sort o' kickin' is generally agin t' pricks, there's mair pain then pleasure to be gained by it."

"Hallo, Simon Holmes!" said the miller, in mock surprise. "Ah shouldn't ha' sung that stave if ah'd knoan 'at you were within earshot. That soort o' music isn't mitch i' your line, is it? Psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs, eh? Them's your favorites. Ah don't mitch matter 'em; ah like something jollier, myself. Hymns is rather milk-an'-wattery, ah allus thinks. A merry ditty noo an' then, when you're i' loa watter, or ha' gotten a fit o' the blues, gives yo' a fillip, an' helps yo' on."

"Deary me!" said Simon, dryly. "Dizz it really? Hoo often did yo' sing a merry ditty last winter, Peter, when you were twinged wi' rheumatics, an' had to keep your chair a month or mair? Ha, ha! I think I see yo' leeanin' back on t' cushion, rubbin' your swelled knuckles, an' sweeatin' wi' pain, an' singin' all t' tahme, 'Come let us be merry!'"

Peter Prout could not keep his powdered cheeks from reddening at this reminder; for if ever mortal man in this world groaned and whined the rheumatic miller did when the twinge was in his bones. To this fact Simon Holmes had often been an ear-witness, when he visited the miller in his sickness, for there were few homes in Aspendale in which he had not been a constant and welcome visitor in the days of sorrow and suffering.

Peter Prout's usually over-ready tongue had not an answer at command. He well remembered the old carpenter's thoughtful kindness and efficient aid, willingly rendered in those dark days. Simon quietly smiled to see the miller put to a non-plus. It was an unusual experience for him. Peter was especially apt at a smart reply, and the more it smarted the better he was pleased. The engineer was hoist with his own petard.

"It's easy anuff, miller, to sing songs o' that sooart, an' I ain't nowt to say ageean it, i' reeason, when there's plenty o' wind in the sails, an' plenty o' corn i' the mill. But that ditty would soond rayther doleful here, I fancy, if wind an' watter boath stopped comin', an' showed no signs o' changin' their mind."

"Hang it, man," said the miller, "there wad be something else to think aboot."

"That's true anuff," said Simon, "but all the thinkin' i' t' wo'ld wadn't mak' t' wind bloa or t' watter run. A good song, noo, o' the right sooart might seem to shorten the tahme a bit. I remember once goin' to see old Jenny Benson; that's t' keeper's mother yo' knoa', when she was bed-ridden wi' hurtin' her hip in a fall. It wore her oot at last, dear old soul. The poor woman was propped up i' bed wi' pillows an' was lyin' all by herself. I thowt I could hear some singin', an' I stood wi' my hand on t' door-sneck an' my thumb on t' latch an' listened. This is what I heeard her sing:

"'In hope of that immortal crown
I now the cross sustain,
And gladly wander up and down
And smile at toil and pain.
I suffer out my threescore years,
Till my Deliverer come,
And wipe away His servant's tears,
And take His exile home.'

Dear old woman! she wasn't mitch of a singer; but all things considered, it was aboot as sweet a 'ditty' as a man could listen to. Peter, old friend, which song's best, your's or Jenny's?"

It is difficult to say what the miller's answer would have been, for the question was a home-thrust. Just then, however, a third individual entered the mill.

"Mornin' miller," said Jacob Benson, for it was the stalwart gamekeeper that had joined them. "My word, but this is a grand wind to fill your sails! You're coinin' money to-day, I'll warrant. It's anuff to mak' yo' sing t' old song:

"'Merrily sings the miller's wife,
Merrily sings the miller;
Merrily doth the mill go round,
The mill that coins the siller.'"

"Right you are, Jacob," said the miller, briskly, for he felt that an ally had come to help him in his need, and was grateful.

"Simon Holmes came in," continued Peter, "just as ah was singin' an' just because it wasn't a hymn, he dropt doon o' ma' like a thoosand o' bricks. One can't allus be singin' t' 'Owd Hundred,' can we? Specially in a gallopin' wind like this, an' t' meal comin' doon t' spout like a mill-race."

"Oh, he's a kill-joy, Simon is," said Jacob, willing to indulge in a little banter, "it's allus the way wi' your religious fooaks. One would think that they were allus practisin' for a buryin'."

"Nay, nay," said Simon, with imperturbable good temper, "Peter hezn't put it fairly. I can do with a cheerful song as weel as onybody. Nowt's to be gained by checking a lively flight so long as it's kept within boonds. Peter was right anuff to sing at his work—I wish fre' my heart that he allus may. An' I don't want to be hearin' hymns an' psalms and nowt else. I heeard a poor Scotchman singin' 'Auld Lang Syne' i' Chilworth Street t' other day, an' I declare I was fairly foorced to tears. All I said was that o 'laugh an' grow fat' wasn't varry mitch wort aimin' at. In that case we sud ha' to stop laughin' altegither, or we should get as roond as a barrel, and ha' to waddle like a duck. Why there's yourself, Peter, you're stoot anuff i' all conscience. If your prescription's right you mustn't laugh ony mair, or you'll be as podgy as a sack o' floor." Hereupon all three of them went off into laughter, and peace was tacitly proclaimed among them.

Simon had come to work, not to talk, and this little matter being settled he asked the miller about the "job." Peter, too, wanted it done, and willingly conducted the carpenter across the yard to the spot at which his services were required. Simon saw at a glance what was needed and was soon hard at work. The miller went back, and finding Jacob Benson still there, proposed an adjournment to the Chequers, the village inn, to discuss "a pint o' yale" and hear the news. Jacob consenting the pair sauntered toward the hostelry.

As they passed Tim Crouch's cobbler's shop they heard his lapstone going, and peeping in bade him "good-morning." Tim surmised the goal of their walk, and, though he had received no invitation to join them, his inclinations strongly urged him in the same direction. The lapstone soon became too heavy for his knee; the sharp bright awl and wax-end were laid aside; the "clamps" with a new upper-leather held firm within their grip were set up in the customary corner when Tim's "hand was not in," and the round-faced hammer was kicked under the bench. Then the yielding Tim doffed his leather apron by withdrawing his bullet head from its noose, donned his fustian jacket over his sleeve waistcoat, set his low chimney-pot hat jauntily on one side of his cropped head, lit up his short black pipe, and marched out of the shop door, leaving Sallie in sole charge of the establishment.

Thrifty Sallie did not half like the look of things. She had a notion that Tim had the intention of making a day of it. Alas, it was not at all an unusual thing with him, and sadly often resulted in his making a night of it, too. Then in the small hours of the morning he would inform any wakeful villager within hearing, in tones confused and tipsily melancholy, that he would not go home till morning, until daylight did appear; a ditty which generally came to an ignominious end, when Sallie opened the door, gave tongue, and discharged her artillery on her beery and misbehaving spouse. So Sallie was not at all disposed to let him go without first giving him a bit of her mind.

"Ah spooase, ah mun expect yo' back ageean when yo' cum, an' ah sall knoa' you've cum when ah clap 'ees o' yo'."

"Hoo thee gammon," replied Tim, in terms more expressive than polite. "Ah sall be back direc'ly. Ah nobbut want to gan an' stritch me legs a bit. A mornin' like this wad mak' an auld craw sing 'Bonnits o' blue.'"

"Thoo'll leeak blue aneeaf i' t' mornin' ah'll bet a ho'p'ny. Stritch thee legs! Ah'll warrant thoo'll stritch 'em all t' way te t' 'Chequers;' an' then thoo'll stritch thee legs under t' lang-tecable, afoore a pot o' beer ; and there thoo'll stop till thee munny's deean ; an' then Lan'lord Middledick 'll tell thee to stritch 'em yam ageean. Hoo thoo'll manage that, ah deean't knoa."

Sallie Crouch had a tongue with a keen edge on it, and Tim felt it cut deep. However, seeing that he was already beyond the threshold, Tim thought discretion the better part of valor, so he strode off at full speed.

Sallie could not refrain from giving her intractable spouse a parting shot. She shouted after him : "Sall ah send a wheel-barra' fo' tha', or mun t' cunstubble get Chivey Ste'enson to help him to carry tha' yam te t' tune o' t' frog's march ?" Then she set to work to adjust the shop-shutter, table fashion, hoping to make a few coppers' profit from her varied stock-in-trade, though she well knew that all she could do in that way would be a poor set-off against the serious per contra that was likely to go down Tim's thirsty throat before he returned.

The mischief was not ended there either, for Tim, seeing Sam Vause, the blacksmith, at his forge stopped to "pass the time o' day" with him, and saying where he was going, Sam must needs leave his forge and a half-finished job to accompany him. It seemed as if the thirst had become infectious, for Sam could no more have kept on at his work after seeing Tim on his way to the Chequers, than Tim could hammer on his lapstone after Peter and the gamekeeper had set the example of idleness and beer-drinking.

(To be continued.)

JOSEPH EXALTED.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for April 10, Gen. 41 : 38-49. Golden Text, Ps. 37 : 5.

A Common Error—The Descendants of Job's Friends—David's Problem Solved in the Sanctuary—This World a School—Joseph's Isolated Spiritual Life—Blessed and a Blessing—His Independence of Man—God his First Thought in Temptation—The Test of Slander—A Favored Prisoner—Wanted at Court—Advising a King.

"COMMIT thy way unto the Lord, trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass." This is a necessary lesson in the lives of all God's children. There is in human nature an innate belief that, not only in the consummation, but also in the present hour, the good are to be rewarded, the evil punished. When, therefore, a good man like Job is put into the furnace, his friends begin to suspect there is some hitherto unknown sin in him, or, they say, he would not be thus afflicted, and they accuse him accordingly, thereby adding untold torture to his sufferings. David could not understand and the trials which befell the true servants of God, until he went into the sanctuary of God and found God's own explanation (Ps. 73 : 3-19). He saw there the end, the purpose for which all this was. Earth is but the school for heaven ; we are being prepared on earth for a life in which things that perish, our earthly wealth and beauty, standing and reputation, will be no more, when the eternal will take the place of the temporal, and man apart from God will have no place.

"The Prosperity of the Wicked"

The history of Joseph is a beautiful example of God's education. Spiritually and morally, perhaps, also, intellectually, superior to his brethren, he got no credit for it in his own home, but, instead, suffered contempt. Full of love to his brethren, he met with hatred at their hands. Shown by God that he was to rule, it seemed like cruel mockery that he should be sold into bondage by the very brethren who did not believe in his dreams. It seemed as though God were on the side of wickedness, injustice, and cruelty. And so it often seems with us until God opens our eyes and teaches us the precious secret that the trial of our faith "being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at [Gr. in] the appearing of Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 1 ; 7). Misunderstood by man, we look away to God, and learn lessons which, without the trial, we could not have learned ; we learn an independence of man and a confidence in God which no amount of theory would teach us. Joseph was God's only witness in all the land of Egypt, and, isolated as he was from all other children of God in the world, he was yet loyal to God. His communion with God did not depend upon services, meetings, Bible-readings, or anything external ; it was constant and face to face. And it was this which separated him from other men. Even as a lad, Joseph was a marked person, so manifestly that those who knew not God discovered it. In Egypt "his master saw that the Lord was with him, and that the Lord made all that he did to prosper in his hand." Without knowing it, the very suffering through which he had gone, and the constant, close relationship between him and God, imparted a power to his life and work which made everything succeed which he undertook. The very house in which he served came under the blessing of the Lord. A praying man, who deals with God about everything, cannot but be a blessing wherever he is, for the presence of God in him shines out and brings light and warmth with it. Common justice as well as personal interest made Potiphar place Joseph over all that he had, and thus, even as a youth he began to rule. Rising, as he did, above the injustice of his brothers, above self-pity in the trial of his circumstances, above the contamination of the heathen among whom he lived, it was no wonder that he was counted the fittest to rule the house of Potiphar.

The Lord was with Him

The tide seemed to have turned, the promises of God appeared to be near their fulfilment, when Joseph was called to go through a deeper trial than ever before. The wife of Potiphar, a wicked, unprincipled, infamous woman made such advances to Joseph that he was obliged to take his stand, and he took it for God. In answer to her abominable temptation, he said, "How can I do this great wickedness

And Sin Against God?"

It was not man he feared ; Joseph, like Elijah after him, stood before God, and the presence of God was more to him than that of any human being. In the madness of her rage in finding that this slave could resist her, the wicked woman was determined to work Joseph's ruin, and by false accusation she succeeded in having him imprisoned under a charge of the vilest nature. This was the bitterest part of his trial. To lose his home and his liberty when he had been so true to God, was a fearful blow ; but to lose his reputation, he who was God's only witness in Egypt! How could he endure it? He had had such joy in seeing that his master had begun to acknowledge the God who was with him. Was not God now fighting against His own cause, as well as against Joseph's, in letting everybody believe that he was more sinful than the heathen themselves? How could he continue to believe that God was with him? But he did ;

He Stood the Test.

He was loyal to God even now. Yes, and God vindicated him in His own way. In the prison, as elsewhere, "the Lord was with Joseph," and he rose into favor with the keeper of the prison, so that there, also, he became the ruler. Even under these almost impossible circumstances Joseph proved true to God, and found that through all God proved true to him. He always considered God before himself, and he found that the Lord never left him. He could not prove his innocence to man, but he knew that God knew it, and he was satisfied. Thus he stood the test to the full.

When Joseph had been eleven years in Egypt, there were in the prison two of Pharaoh's servants to whom God spoke one night in a dream. Surely Joseph prayed for all the prisoners, and this was the answer to his prayer—God was working in the prison. These two men were sad with all the burden of suspense, not knowing the import of their dreams, so Joseph said to them, "Do not interpretations belong to God? tell me them, I pray you." And then God gave him a message of life to the one and of death to the other Time went on, and Joseph still remained a falsely accused prisoner, known as a public criminal. But God had not forgotten him ; He was at work, bringing out His own purposes. Joseph had, no doubt, prayed for the king, and now Pharaoh, also, began to dream, and none of his wise men could interpret the message which God had sent him. Then it was that the chief butler remembered Joseph, and told Pharaoh of his interpreting his dream, and that of the chief baker in the prison. What a message for the prisoner! he was wanted at court! The king addressed him, and said how he had heard of his power to interpret dreams. But Joseph, who had borne witness of his God to Potiphar and to his wife, to the keeper of the prison, and to the prisoners, was bold now to speak of Him before the king,

"It is Not in Me:

God shall give Pharaoh an answer of peace." Yes, God was true to him. Only once in the course of his many trials had Joseph sought the help of man—when he besought the chief butler to remember him and speak for him to Pharaoh, and this effort had failed. But God was true all along, and every test to which Joseph was subjected was permitted, that he might gain experience of suffering and of the injustice of man, while, at the same time, he learned how reliable was his God. And now when Pharaoh told his dream of the kine and of the ears of corn, Joseph said, without hesitation, for God had put it in his heart, "The dream of Pharaoh is one : God hath showed Pharaoh what He is about to do." And then he foretold how seven years of great abundance should come upon Egypt, followed by seven years of terrible famine, and, forgetting that he was a slave and a condemned criminal, conscious only that he was speaking as God's interpreter to the greatest king of the then known world, he counselled Pharaoh during the seven plenteous years to lay up in store against the time of famine that should follow.

But would so great a man as Pharaoh listen to one like Joseph? Yes,

If God so Ordered It, for "The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water : He turneth it whithersoever He will" (Prov. 21 : 1). Not only did he listen, but he called a Cabinet Council to decide whether Joseph was not the fittest man to superintend the work, "Can we find such a one as this is, a man in whom the Spirit of God is?" Could it be? But how about the foul slander which had been brought against him? How about his being a Hebrew? The will of the king was sufficient, and Joseph was made ruler of all the land of Egypt. Had he attempted to imagine the fulfilment of his boyish dreams, he might have thought of being the head of the family, in some way richer and more influential than his brethren, but his wildest dreams would never have pictured such an honor as God had given him now, and such a place of influence. Thus, not one trial of Joseph's was for nothing ; there was no lost time or lost suffering—all was for a purpose, for "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." It remains for us yet to know for what our loving God is educating us.

An Illustrated Work on the Unfulfilled Prophecies of the Bible, by the Rev. M. Baxter, entitled : "Forty Coming Wonders," may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York, by remitting 75 cents. It is a book of 528 pages, is handsomely bound in cloth and contains fifty full-page pictures and diagrams representing the scenes described in the prophecies of Daniel and in the book of the Revelation. It also contains a a résumé of the opinions of other expositors, and extracts carefully collated from the works of all the most eminent writers on prophecy from the earliest ages of the Christian era down to those of recent date. It thus forms the most useful and complete guide the student can have on entering the study of that portion of the Word of God. The book may now be obtained for seventy-five cents from any bookseller, who can procure it from the American News Company. This reduction in price is made to encourage the study of this important subject.

THE EVERLASTING ARMS.

What, tho' the way be rough and steep?
What tho' we stumble as the blind?
There's joy reserved for those who weep—
The Everlasting Arms are kind.

What matters it if sorrows come?
We [illegible] though the night be dark and long?
[illegible] but hides the sun
[illegible] Everlasting Arms are strong.

What, though life's ocean surges high?
Tho' adverse winds high toss each wave?
"Be not afraid; 'tis only I"
The Everlasting Arms can save.

What, tho' besieged by sin and strife,
The heart and flesh but sink and quail?
"I am the Way, the Truth, the Life"
The Everlasting Arms ne'er fail

Remember, [illegible]
To gain [illegible]
"Neath the [illegible] banner of the cross,"
Behold the Everlasting Arms.

In life's [illegible] faithful be;
'Tis only they who win the crown.
When Death disrobes mortality,
The Everlasting Arms reach down.

—Selected.

J. F. Jewett, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poems in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1871 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business besides making great Inducements to Club Orders every day. Send for Price List and Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. Large Premiums with $20 orders. Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

NEW AND DESIRABLE.

THE GLAD REFRAIN.

By LOWRY & DOANE.

One of the [illegible] Song Books. [illegible] Duets, Solos and Choruses. Choirs and Conventions should send for specimen pages. Price, $25 per 100. Copies in Board Covers. Specimen pages free.

BIGLOW & MAIN,
76 East Ninth Street, New York.
CHICAGO HOUSE, 81 Randolph St.

DO YOU INTEND TO BUILD

a suburban or country house? Valuable information free. Address, CO-OP. BUILDING PLAN ASSN., Box 2702, New York.

The MOON Flower.

The engraving shows this most beautiful of all climbing plants. It grows anywhere where there are old trees, walls or strings to cling to—growing 50 ft. in one season, blooming continuously from June to November, its MOON-LIKE flowers being of the purest white, 15 inches in circumference. The Moon flower blooms only at night or on dull days; it gives out a delicious odor, similar to the English Hawthorn, or Jessamine. A summer garden at Washington, D. C., attracted thousands on moonlight nights, its arbors being covered by the Moon flower. Although the Moon flower should not be set out until about the time tomatoes can be set out, or corn planted, yet it is of the simplest culture and can be grown easily in flower-pots or boxes in an ordinary sitting-room until the time of setting out. We sold nearly fifty thousand plants of this beautiful flower last year, and had hundreds of letters attesting the pleasure it gave to the purchasers. Price, extra strong plants, 40c. each; 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, or 12 for $3.00, free, by Mail; or $12.00 per 100 by Express, buyer to pay charges. All purchasers of the Moon flower are entitled to our Catalogue of "EVERYTHING FOR THE GARDEN," No. 63 (the largest and most beautiful ever issued) FREE. To those who are not purchasers it will be mailed on receipt of 10c. (in stamps).

PETER HENDERSON & CO.
35 & 37 Cortlandt St., New York.

BLUEBERRY. A valuable fruit to grow for pleasure and profit. Price list free to all. Agents wanted to sell plants. Outfit free. Address WILLOW RIDGE FRUIT FARM, Portland, Mich.

LADIES' MUSLIN UNDERWEAR.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.

Invite attention to their stock of Ladies' Muslin Underwear, and Infants' Goods: novelties in those goods are being constantly added.

Catalogue, with latest prices affixed, will be sent by mail on request

A complete assortment of French Hand-made Underwear at the lowest possible prices.

We still continue to sell our old favorite French Corset at prices lower than ever before offered.

James McCreery & Co
Broadway, cor. Eleventh St.,
NEW YORK.

FOR GAS.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

FOR OIL.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.

It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.

In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.

WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

For sale by W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & Co., 170 and 172 William St., N. Y., and the wholesale drug trade.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES—(avoid Agents and Dealers whose profits and expenses double the cost on every Piano they sell) and send this First-Class UPRIGHT Cabinet GEM 7⅓ Octave Rosewood Piano, Warranted 6 years, for $193! We send it—with Beautiful Cover and Stool—for Trial in your own Home before you buy. Send for circulars to Marchal & Smith, 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

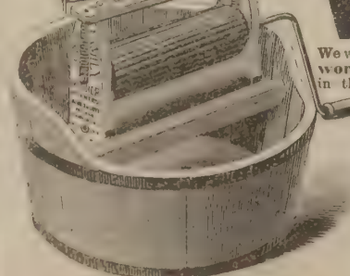
AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF HENRY WARD BEECHER

by THOS. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

THE BEST



WASHER

We will guarantee the "LOVELL WASHER" to do better work and do it easier and in less time than any other machine in the world. Warranted five years, and if it don't wash the clothes clean without rubbing, we will refund the money.

AGENTS WANTED in every county. We CAN SHOW PROOF that Agents are making from $75 to $150 per month. Farmers make $200 to $500 during the winter. Ladies have great success selling this Washer. Retail price only $5. Sample to those desiring an agency $2. Also the Celebrated KEYSTONE WRINGERS at manufacturers' lowest price. Invite the strictest investigation. Send your address on a postal card for further particulars.

LOVELL WASHER CO., ERIE, PA.

COMFORT OF THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM.

SOMETHING NEW.

We have [illegible] colored picture, with illuminated text. The central thought is a shepherd leading [illegible] still waters; the halo around his head, representing all of the Great Shepherd [illegible] when [illegible] he sang this psalm. The verses which tell of the comfort are printed in [illegible] upon a delicately tinted background. It is a gem of art, and will bring bright sunshine [illegible] every home and comfort to every sick room. This card, 8x10, has just been published, and is obtainable only through our house. It has the advantage of needing no frame, being printed with a gold border upon heavy card plate. Safely packed, we send it postage paid on receipt of twenty-five cents; three copies, fifty cents. Lower prices for larger orders.

WM. P. BRECK & CO., 12 Cortlandt Street, New York.
To Dealers, Agents, and Sunday-School Teachers, Special Rates.

Bridal Trousseaux.

Ladies who are unable to examin our stock of these goods personally would find it to their advantage t correspond with us. The most com plete information furnished, and care ful attention given to special orders

Lord & Taylor
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y.

WARNER BRO'S

9 Millio worn duri the past years.

This mary ous success due—

1st.—To t superiority Coraline ov all other m terials, as stiffener Corsets.

2d.—To t superior qu ity, shape a workmansh of our Corse combined wi their l prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kin of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.

WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York Cit

For Evening Dress and Summer Wear.

COPYRIGHT MAR. 87. A. G. JENNINGS & BONS.

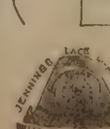
THE FASHIONABLE

SILK LACE & JERSEY MITTS

"THE RETROGRADE"
TRADE MARK
ELASTIC LOCK STITCH
WARRANTED NOT TO RIP.

Buy Only those Labelled as herewith.

PATENTED
FULL FASHIONED
SEAMS



PERFECT FINISH!
PERFECT STYLE!
PERFECT FIT!

For Sale by all Leading Houses

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 17. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAIT AND LIFE OF DR. WILLIAM CAREY, AND PICTURES OF THE JUBILEE CELEBRATIONS IN INDIA.

BEHIND THE COUNTER. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning.

THE COMING OF THE DAYS OF NOAH.

The Indian Medicine-Man's Pharmacopœia—A Consecrated Skin—Praying to a Tortoise—Teaching for German Soldiers—A Wife's Petition—Preaching in a Zulu Kraal—A Nonagenarian's Premonition—Chambers of Living Death, etc.

ON THE CROSS AFTER DEATH. A New Sermon by C. H. Spurgeon.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Difficulty in the Inter-State Commerce Law—The Secretary and the Claim Agents—A New Astronomical Discovery—An Heir Dying in Prison, etc.

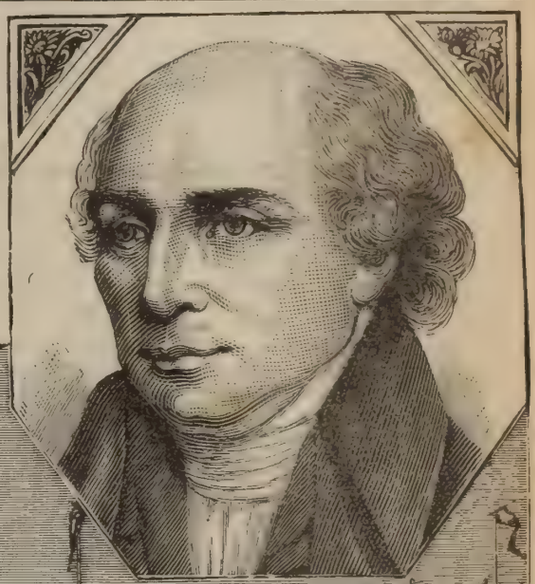
PORTRAIT OF THE LATE BISHOP ALFRED LEE, D.D., OF DELAWARE.

PICTURE OF A LADY'S WALK AT PAKHOI.

THE ARTIST AND THE LOST CHILD. (Illust'd.)

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. (Continued.)

THE CHILD MOSES. By Mrs. M. Baxter.



GENERAL VIEW OF THE JUBILEE NATIVE FAIR AT BOMBAY, INDIA.

ENTRANCE TO THE FAIR AT THE NORTH GATE.

Rev. WM. CAREY, D.D., Pioneer of Missions in India—Celebration in India of Queen Victoria's Jubilee.

WILLIAM CAREY, D.D.,
The Pioneer Missionary in India.

Born in 1761—His Father—His Boyhood—Studies—Apprenticed to a Shoemaker—Conversion—Begins to Preach—Call to the Ministry—His Pastorate at Moulton—"Hard Times"—A Momentous Meeting in a Widow's House—Sets Sail for India in 1793—Arrival at Calcutta—Headquarters Fixed at Serampore—Important Appointment—Valuable Work.

William Carey, the distinguished pioneer missionary in India, whose portrait is given on our front page, was born at Paulersbury, England, on August 17th, 1761, and died June 9th, 1834, at the age of seventy-three. His father was a weaver, but was appointed to the united offices of village schoolmaster and parish clerk when his son William was about six years old. He lived to complete his eightieth year in "honest repute" among his neighbors for "the strictest integrity and uprightness, a lover of good men, and a great reader." The memorials of though meagre, enable us to picture him with some degree of clearness. Attached to the schoolmaster's house was a considerable-sized orchard-garden, and this the boy cultivated almost entirely by himself. If there was an unproductive spot there he planted a tree or shrub in it; and he found room besides for a variety of choice flowers, collected with pains, and carefully tended. He was small for his age and slightly built. Dress and manners were rustic; but he had a prepossessing face and a bright, indomitable spirit. He took all a healthy boy's delight in frolic and adventure. If, for example, there was a tree more than ordinarily difficult to climb, he was sure to try, often succeeding where others failed. In one such attempt, for which a bird's-nest was the prize, he came heavily to the ground, bruised and half stunned, but, as soon as he was able to walk, the first thing he did was to "go and climb that tree."

Carey's Boyhood,

Along with his high spirits he had a keen desire for knowledge, great perseverance in the pursuit of it, and a splendid memory. After he became famous, the villagers remembered that whatever he began he finished, and that he did not know how to yield. In later life, when some one made reference to what he had accomplished, he replied, "There's nothing remarkable in it; it has only required perseverance." Another time he said to his nephew, Eustace, "If, after my removal, any one should think it worth his while to write my life, I will give you a criterion how you may judge of it. If he gives me credit for being a plodder he will do me justice.

I Can Plod,

I can persevere in any definite pursuit. To this I owe everything." He learned from both nature and books. He never walked out without keeping his eye inquisitively on hedge and bush; and if he took up a specimen of any sort, he always observed it with care. His little room at home was crowded with living plants, birds, and insects, which he had himself collected, and whose habits he carefully watched. This love of nature never died out in him, and had much to do with the good health and flow of spirits which made him known many a year afterward as the cheerful old man.

From his seventh year he was troubled with a disorder, chiefly affecting his face and hands, which made the sun's rays disagreeable to him, and rendered him unfit for any outdoor employment; so, when fourteen years of age, he was at Hackleton, nine or ten miles distant from his native village. This engagement seemed at the time decisive of the boy's future career, and in an ordinary case it would have been so. But though as yet he had no ulterior aims, his thirst for knowledge for its own sake continued unabated. As an indication of this, it is related that among his master's books there was a commentary on the New Testament, the pages sprinkled with Greek words. These words were as great a puzzle to him as Egyptian hieroglyphics would have been; but he was fascinated by them, and determined to get at the meaning; so he copied them as accurately as he could, and on his visits home took the copy with him to be deciphered and translated by Tom Jones, a weaver in the village, who had received but misused a classical education.

Apprenticed to a Shoemaker,

When Carey was about eighteen years old a radical change occurred in his life. Up to this time he was a stranger to the love of Christ. Notwithstanding his father's solicitude to guard him from harm, he had associated with companions whose influence could only be debasing; his lips were very often polluted with profane language; and he appeared likely to sink into the coarse and sensual way of life common in the village. At the crisis of his career came; William Carey was converted, and he, with a companion in the same workshop, made a profession of faith, and was received into the Baptist Church at Hackleton, in 1781, and very soon devoted much of his spare time to village preaching. On the 10th of June in the same year he married the sister-in-law of Mr. Old, his employer, and on Mr. Old's death, soon after, he succeeded him in business. The sign-board which was placed over his shop is still carefully and reverently preserved as a treasured relic by the Baptist denomination. For about three years and a half he preached regularly at Earl's Barton to a congregation of villagers. In June, 1785, he became a member of the church at Olney, and a year later he was solemnly "called" by the Church to preach the Gospel.

The Great Change

His First Regular Pastorate was at Moulton, which he assumed on February 1st, 1787. He also exchanged shoemaking for teaching; but though he opened school, it soon became clear that in becoming a schoolmaster he had mistaken his calling. His income was "ten pounds per annum" from the Church, five pounds from a fund in London, and latterly, seven shillings and sixpence a week from his school—in all, less than one hundred and eighty dollars—a sum altogether inadequate to enable him to do his church work and maintain his family. The consequence was that he turned his shoemaking skill to account to eke out his income. A shoemaker at Northampton who had a government contract gave him employment. Once a fortnight Carey, with a far-away look on his face, might be seen trudging along the eight miles which lay between Moulton and Northampton, with a wallet full of shoes at his back, which he was taking to the contractor, and then returning home with a burden of leather for the next two weeks' work. All this time, in poverty that would have crushed the spirit out of any ordinary man in three months—borrowing and occasionally buying a book—he went on eagerly with his studies, perfecting himself in the Hebrew and Greek original of Scripture, as well as the Latin translation.

It was at Moulton—the Nazareth out of which the modern missionary enterprise was to come forth—that Carey's great thought took definite shape in his mind. He had been reading "Cook's Voyages Round the World," and as he taught his geography class at school, from a globe of leather of his own construction, it flashed painfully upon him how small a portion of the human race possessed any knowledge of Jesus Christ and His salvation. Painfully meditating, he arrived at the conclusion that the Gospel must be sent to the heathen. The idea grew into a life passion with him, and he could scarcely talk or preach, and he could never pray, without reverting to the subject. His enthusiasm kindled that of others. At of the Northamptonshire Association of Baptist Churches supplications were offered, among other subjects, for "The Spread of the Gospel to the most Distant Parts of the Habitable Globe." Nevertheless, to many of his ministerial brethren Carey's project seemed wildly visionary, if not in direct conflict with the doctrine of God's sovereignty. It is related—probably with some embellishment—that at a meeting of ministers the elder Ryland called on the younger men round him to propose a subject for discussion at their next gathering, when Carey rose, and suggested, "The Duty of Christians to Attempt the Spread of the Gospel among Heathen Nations." Springing to his feet, astonished and shocked, the good man bade him sit down, with the reproof, "When God pleases to convert the heathen, He will do it without your aid or mine." Even Fuller's feelings resembled those of the unbelieving noble who said, "If the Lord would open the windows of heaven, might this thing be." In truth, while the conversion of the heathen was earnestly prayed for, to attempt it seemed like a presumptuous outstretching of the hand to help the ark of God.

A Prayer-Meeting in 1784

In 1789 Mr. Carey removed to Leicester, to become pastor of the little church at Harvey Lane. In May, 1792, he had become so well known in the denomination that he was invited to preach a sermon to his ministerial brethren at their annual assembly, which was considered among them. That sermon led to the organization of the Baptist Missionary Society. The text was Isaiah 54: 2, 3, "Enlarge the place of thy tent," etc. From this text the preacher deduced two great principles: First, Expect great things from God; second, Attempt great things for God. The next ministers' meeting was held at Kettering, on October 2d, in the same year, and when the public services were concluded, twelve men met in the evening in the back parlor of Mrs. Beeby Wallis, widow of a deacon of Kettering Church. Before separating they solemnly pledged themselves to God and to each other, to do their part in an endeavor to send the Gospel to some part of the heathen world;

A Mark of Honor

The Society Was Constituted, a committee of five was appointed, and, lastly, a subscription was then and there made, amounting to sixty-five dollars. No sooner was the subscription list filled up than Carey—whose name does not appear in that list—offered his contribution. This was himself, declaring his readiness to embark for any part of the world that the Society might decide.

On January 9th, 1793, the committee concluded that an open door was set before them in India, and on March 20th a farewell meeting was held in Leicester to commend Carey and his companion, a Mr. Thomas, to the Divine protection. All preliminary difficulties having been surmounted, the missionaries set sail on June 13th, and on November 11th safely reached Calcutta. Carey was then thirty-two years old.

Finding the way to open and public preaching closed by the restrictions of the East India Company, then the ruling power in Hindostan, and being uncertain as to what amount of support, if any, they would receive for themselves, and their families from the church at home, they went up the country, and took situations which were offered them in connection with establishments engaged in the indigo trade, until the restrictions were removed.

The Pioneer.

The years which followed were years of arduous toil. Besides teaching and preaching Carey, with rare sagacity, set himself to prepare the way for the army of missionaries yet to come, by improving the facilities for the acquisition of the language and dialects of India. Above all, with that faith in the power of God's own Word to win its own way, which was a cardinal principle in his mind, he set himself to the task of giving the Bible to the people in their own tongue. When additional laborers were sent out to his assistance, the headquarters of the mission were fixed at the Danish and the work of preaching, teaching, and translating was carried on with unflagging vigor and success. As early as 1814 Carey could write home to his sister, and say, "I look round on the nations on all sides, and see translations of the Bible either begun or finished in twenty-five languages at our house, and I trust soon to secure the other languages spoken around us, when I hope all will hear in their own tongues the wonderful works of God." Carey was too modest to add that this prodigious work was due to his energy, and a vast quantity of it had been done by his own hand. That was the fact, and the missionaries who have succeeded him have wisely availed themselves of the fruits of his labors.

Settlement at Serampore,

Carey's literary fame at length became so conspicuous that he was appointed teacher and in the college at Fort William, Calcutta, and the Brown University, in 1807, conferred upon him the distinction of D.D., which he well deserved. At last, after he had toiled for forty years, his health and strength began to fail, and he was obliged to moderate his labor and application. This he did not do, however, till he had seen two hundred and thirteen thousand volumes of the Divine Word, in whole or in part, in forty different languages, issued from the mission-press at Serampore. He died in peace at Serampore on June 9th, 1834, leaving a noble example of disinterested zeal and devotedness to the service of Christ among the heathen.

Professor of Languages

THE JUBILEE IN INDIA.

The Queen of England being also Empress of India the jubilee year of her reign is being celebrated there as in Great Britain. The festivities commenced in Bombay on February 16th. The day was ushered in by the firing of a Royal salute on the hoisting of the Royal Standard over the public buildings, and by the joyful pealing of bells from the University and the Clock Tower. A parade of the troops in garrison and of the volunteers was held, and the National Anthem was played by the massed bands; but the chief State event of the day was the Governor's procession in state from Malabar Point to the Town Hall, where there were loyal speeches and general jubilation. After this the company divided, going to their respective places of worship—Protestant, Roman Catholic, Hindoo, Jewish, etc.—to pray for her Majesty.

After the official, ceremonial, and religious services Bombay devoted itself to enthusiastic enjoyment. All ranks, creeds, castes, and classes decorated their "outer walls," and turned out into the streets to see the show.

The People's Fair on the Esplanade, illustrated by two pictures on our frontispiece, was the most popular resort. "Seen from the distance," remarks the Bombay Gazette, "it appeared as though some fairy city had suddenly sprung up, the pretty stalls, the multitude of flags waving in the breeze, and above all the myriads of tiny multi-colored lanterns, gave a charming air of unreality to the scene.

Close by, over the Queen's statue, two immense pyramids of lights (twenty thousand lamps being employed) had been raised, joined by an archway, which was inscribed, "Victoria, Kaiser-i-Hind;" while the main streets were admirably decorated throughout. Arches abounded. Numerous processions paraded the city, and the utmost order and good temper prevailed everywhere, the various creeds and communities sinking their rivalries and differences in honor of the occasion. The ships in the harbor were gaily decorated, and at night there was a general illumination.

"The most questionable act of Government in connection with jubilee festivities," says the Indian Witness, "was the somewhat indiscriminate amnesty granted to criminals. The number of offenders liberated on that day has been declared to be twenty-three thousand three hundred and five. The daily papers furnish the materials for deciding that this number was excessively large, since the moral character of some of them was so exceedingly frail." If the men had been political prisoners, their release would have been a graceful act of magnanimity on the part of the Queen, but as they were not, the mere fact of one sovereign having sat on the English throne for fifty years seemed an insufficient reason for turning a lot of criminals loose on society. However, the police were wary and active, and soon had a large number safely behind the bars again.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

The Sceptic and the Shepherd Lad.—A Devoted Christian worker remarked: "In the county of Dumfries, in the south of Scotland, there is a tower called the 'Tower of Repentance.' How it got its name I can't say, but there it stands to this day, and is still known by that name. One day, a few years ago, an English baronet who was living in the neighborhood, happening to be strolling past the tower, saw lying on the grass, reading his Bible, a poor farmer's boy. The gentleman, who was a sceptic, went up to the lad, and said, 'So you're reading the Bible; I suppose it does you a deal of good. Now, from your study of that book, could you tell me the way to heaven?' The boy looked up from his reading, and in spite of the jeering tone and supercilious expression of the question, replied, pointing to the 'Tower of Repentance,' 'You must pass that tower, and turning to the right, keep straight on.' The sceptic was silenced. The shepherd lad had shown he understood what he read; and events proved that words so fitly spoken and so full of truth were not in vain."

A Mocker and his Sister.—Mr. Alexander said: "One day, while visiting among some poor people in a district assigned me, I spoke to a woman about her soul, and what Christ had done to save it. She seemed to think seriously about the matter, and was on the eve of committing her soul to the Saviour, when her brother came in. He, hearing what we were saying, laughed at his sister, and asked her if she were so silly as to believe all that nonsense. 'What's the good,' he said, 'of giving up all the fun just now, when you're young? Wait till you are a little older. There's time enough yet; besides, I believe the half of it is all fudge.' The sister allowed herself to be jeered out of her intention of accepting Christ, and sorrowfully I had to take my departure. About three or four months after that this woman had a letter from her brother, who had left home, saying that he was converted, had given himself to Christ, and while asking her forgiveness for having been a stumbling-block in her way, recommended her at once to seek the Saviour. This letter surprised and troubled her much, that he who at home laughed at all such things should now accept and profess them himself. She thought, If it is worth while for him to be a Christian, then it is worth while for me; and she anxiously sought to come to Christ. But this time she did not find it so easy, and for months she was most miserable, and she began to think she must have sinned away her day of grace, and that now there was no hope for her; but at length God graciously brought peace to her soul through faith in Christ, and now she is rejoicing in Him."

The Lost Sheep on the Hill-side.—"Not Many years ago a number of gentlemen and myself were on board the Oban steamer, and as we were steaming along the Argyleshire coast and admiring the beautiful scenery, some one beside me inquired, 'Do you see that little speck on the hill-side? What do you think it is?' 'A white stone, or perhaps a monument to commemorate some important event,' I replied. 'No,' he answered, 'it is neither; it is a lost sheep—a sheep that has wandered away from the flock; and if you look a little further down you will see the shepherd slowly making his way upward in search of the missing sheep.' 'But,' I said, for I saw distinctly the little gray mark which he said was the shepherd, 'how is it possible for either man or animal to ascend such a hill? Why, the face of it looks almost perpendicular.' 'Oh, the shepherds know all the district perfectly, and often traverse it on such errands in the darkest nights of winter, and there are never any accidents.' The shepherd gradually crept forward until he was within reach of the sheep, and stretching out his stick, tried to catch it, but it jumped over the stick and refused to be caught. Again and again he tried to gently draw it toward him, but in vain, and at last he was obliged to somewhat roughly pull it down; then lifting it he put it upon his shoulders and commenced the descent, and presently he placed it safely among the other sheep. Is not that straying sheep just a picture of the sinner who has wandered away from God, and of Jesus the good Shepherd who is looking for him, and will not rest until He has found the wanderer? And though he may repulse and refuse the first gentle pleadings, yet He will continue His gracious work until He has overpowered him, casting him upon His shoulder and carrying him to His fold. 'Rejoice with me, for I have found the sheep which I had lost.'"

What Came of a Bad Debt.—Mr. John Gilbert Forbes said: "About fifty years ago there resided in the North of Scotland two brothers named Turner. They were in partnership as coopers, and both were God-fearing men, and used to have Gospel meetings in the cooperage at night; but one of them, John, seemed never to be happy except he was declaring God's message to sinners, and often he prayed that God would open up the way that he might have more time to devote to the preaching of the Gospel. For some time, however, it seemed as if the Lord did not answer his prayer. At last the answer came, and in a most peculiar way. The firm of Turner Bros. made a bad debt to a considerable amount, and the loss of this money meant to them ruin. It was resolved they should stop business, and then John found he was possessed of just enough money to defray the expenses of a pedestrian missionary tour. Starting off in the evening, he walked over the hills until he came to a village, and going up to a house there (he did not know any one in the place), asked if he might come in and hold a meeting. 'Yes,' was the answer, 'and most welcome.' What was the result? In that village, by means of that and other meetings, over three hundred people were led to Christ and were saved. Nor did the wave of blessing remain in that place. It spread all over the Highlands and Islands; wherever that man or one of his converts put their foot, there the Holy Spirit seemed to be, and souls sought the Lord. God will fill us with power for His service, if we are willing that He should do so, and that wherewith we are filled would find no hindrance, but flow through to others."

A Scotch Farmer's Testimony.—Mr. Hamilton observed: "I was passing along the streets of Glasgow one Sabbath day, when, at the corner near the river Clyde, I came upon a crowd, in the centre of which was an atheist, haranguing the people, and maintaining that all we had to do was to live a good moral life, to give up drink and open sin, and behave honestly man to man; and he laughingly told the story of a friend of his who, when questioned about his religion, replied that what he got on Sunday just lasted him until Tuesday or Wednesday, and that during the latter part of the week he was one of the most miserable of men; and then he jeeringly asked what kind of religion it was that could only keep a man for half a week. Just then there was a commotion in the crowd, and a big, broad, burly farmer came to the front; going up to the man, he said, 'You know nothing about it; you are only speaking from hearsay; but I know that Christ can keep me during the whole week, from Sunday to Sunday. You say that all the conversion a man needs is to turn from his sins; that all a drunkard has to do is to live a sober, decent life; but when did you see a man sunk under the power of drink able, in his own strength, to give it up? I was sunk as low as it was possible for a man to be, but, coming unto Jesus and casting myself on Him, my craving for drink left me, and in His grace He has set me free from the chains which for years had bound me.' The atheist was dumb; all his thin, flimsy arguments were brushed away, ruthlessly broken through, by this straightforward testimony; and his listeners felt that they would rather have the all-powerful arm of a loving Saviour upon which to lean than trust to their own puny efforts to work out a salvation for themselves."

BEHIND THE COUNTER.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, April 24, 1887.

"A certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple," etc.—Acts 16 : 14.

"Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings."—Proverbs 22 : 29.

Encouragement for Business People—Counsel for Clerks—I. Clerkship a School—The Merchants of the Future—Be Patient—No Need for Envy—The Future of the Business Woman—II. Obey Lawful Regulations—Punctuality and Cheerfulness—III. Resist Unlawful Demands—Do Not Give Up Character—Guides for Country Merchants—IV. Overcome Special Trials—Inconsiderate Customers—Parsimonious Customers — Unreasonable Employers — Insufficient Wages—Arthur Tappen's Failure—The Value of a Handshake—A Delirious Captain.

The first passage introduces to you Lydia, a Christian merchantess. Her business is to deal in purple cloths or silks. She is not a giggling nonentity, but a practical woman, not ashamed to work for her living. All the other women of Philippi and Thyatira have been forgotten, but God has made immortal in our text Lydia, the Christian saleswoman.

The other text shows you a man with head, and hand, and heart, and foot all busy toiling on up until he gains a princely success. "Seest thou a man diligent in his business? he shall stand before kings." In these two passages there is great

Encouragement for Men and Women who will be busy, but no solace for those who are waiting for good luck to show them, at the foot of the rainbow, a casket of buried gold. It is folly for anybody in this world to wait for something to turn up. It will turn down. The law of thrift is as inexorable as the law of the tides. I would like to fire the ambition of young people. I have no sympathy with those who would prepare young folks for life by whittling down their expectations. That man or woman will be worth nothing to Church or State who begins life cowed down. The business of Christianity is not to quench, but to direct human ambition. Therefore it is that I come out this morning and utter words of encouragement to those who are occupied as

Clerks in the Stores

and shops and banking-houses of the country. You say, "Why select one class, and talk to one specially this morning?" For the same reason that a surgeon does not open the door of a hospital and throw in a bushel of prescriptions, saying, "Come, now, and get your medicine." He first feels the pulse, watches the symptoms, and then prescribes for that particular case. So to-day I must be specific.

I. In the first place, I counsel clerks to remember that for the most part their from which they are to be graduated. It takes about eight years to get one of the learned professions. It takes about eight years to get to be a merchant. Some of you will be clerks all your lives, but the vast majority of you are only in a transient position. After awhile, some December day, the head men of the firm will call you into the back office, and they will say to you, "Now, you have done well by us; we are going to do well by you. We invite you to have an interest in our concern." You will bow to that edict very gracefully.

Clerkship is Only a School

Either in the store or bank where you are now, or in some other store or bank, you will take a higher position than that which you now occupy. So I feel to-day that I am standing before people who will yet have their hand on the helm of the world's commerce, and you will turn it this way or that; now clerks, but to be bankers, importers, insurance company directors, shippers, contractors, superintendents of railroads—your voice mighty "on 'Change"—standing foremost in the great financial and religious enterprises of the day. For, though we who are in the professions may, on the platform, plead for the philanthropies, after all, the merchants must come forth with their millions to sustain the movement. Therefore, in this transient position. You are now where you can learn things you can never learn in any other place. What you consider your disadvantages are your grand opportunity. You see an affluent father some day come down on a prominent street with his son, who has just graduated from the university, and establishing him in business, putting one hundred thousand dollars of capital in the store. Well, you are envious. You say, "Oh, if I only had a chance like that young man—if I only had a father to put one hundred thousand dollars in a business for me, then I would have some chance!"

Be Patient and Diligent

Be Not Envious.

You have advantages over that young man which he has not over you. As well might I come down to the docks when a vessel is about to sail for Valparaiso, and say, "Let me pilot this ship out of the Narrows." Why, I would sink crew and cargo before I got out of the harbor, simply because I know nothing about pilotage. Wealthy sea captains put their sons before the mast for the reason that they know that it is the only place where they can learn to be successful sailors. It is only under drill that people get to understand pilotage and navigation, and I want you to understand that it takes no more skill to conduct a vessel out of the harbor and across the sea than to steer a commercial establishment clear of the rocks.

You see every day the folly of people going into a business they know nothing about. A man makes a fortune in one business; thinks there is another occupation more comfortable; goes into it and sinks all. Many of the commercial establishments of our cities are giving to their clerks a mercantile education as thorough as Yale, or Harvard, or Princeton are giving scientific attainment to the students matriculated. The reason there are so many men foundering in business from year to year is because their early mercantile education was neglected. Ask these men high in commercial circles, and they will tell you they thank God for this severe discipline of their early clerkship. You can afford to endure the wilderness march, if it is going to end in the vineyards and orchards of the promised land. But you say, "Will the in our stores have promotion?" Yes. Time is coming when women will be as well paid for their toil in mercantile circles as men are now paid for their toil. Time is coming when a woman will be allowed to do anything she can do well. It is only a little while ago when women knew nothing of telegraphy, and they were kept out of a great many commercial circles where they are now welcome; and the time will go on until the woman who at one counter in a store sells ten thousand dollars' worth of goods in a year will get as high a salary as the man who at the other counter of the same store sells ten thousand dollars' worth of goods. All honor to Lydia, the Christian saleswoman.

Womanly Clerks

And in passing, I may as well say that you merchants who have female clerks in your stores ought to treat them with great courtesy and kindness. When they are not positively engaged, let them sit down. In England and the United States physicians have protested against the habit of compelling the womanly clerks in the stores to stand when it was not necessary for them to stand. Therefore I add to the protest of physicians the protest of the Christian Church, and in the name of good health, and that God who has made her constitution more delicate than man's, I demand that you let her sit down.

II. The second counsel I have to give to the clerks is that you seek out what are the

Lawful Regulations

of your establishment, and then submit to them. Every well-ordered house has its usages. In military life, on ship's deck, in commercial life, there must be order and discipline. Those people who do not learn how to obey will never know how to command. I will tell you what young man will reach ruin, financial and moral: it is the young man who thrusts his thumb into his vest and says, "Nobody shall dictate to me, I am my own master; I will not submit to the regulations of this house." Between an establishment in which all the employés are under thorough discipline and the establishment in which the employés do about as they choose, is the difference between success and failure—between rapid accumulation and utter bankruptcy. Do not come to the store ten minutes after the time. Be there within two seconds after. Do not think anything too insignificant to do well. Do not say, "It's only just once." From the most important transaction in commerce down to the particular style in which you tie a string around a bundle, obey orders.

Do Not Get Easily Disgusted.

While others in the store may lounge, or fret, or complain, you go with ready hands and cheerful face and contented spirit to your work. When the bugle sounds, the good soldier asks no questions, but shoulders his knapsack, fills his canteen, and listens for the command of "March!" Do not get the idea that your interests and those of your employer are antagonistic. His success will be your honor. His embarrassment will be your dismay. Expose none of the frailties of the firm. Tell no store secrets. Do not blab. Rebuff those persons who come to find out from clerks what ought never be known outside the store. Do not be among those young men who take on a mysterious air when something is said against the firm that employs them, as much as to say, "I could tell you some things if I would, but I won't." Do not be among those who imagine they can build themselves up by pulling somebody else down. Be not ashamed to be a subaltern.

III. Again, I counsel clerks in this house to search out what are the

Unlawful and Dishonest Demands

of an establishment, and resist them. In the six thousand years that have passed, there has never been an occasion when it was one's duty to sin against God. It is never right to do wrong. If the head men of the firm expect of you dishonesty, disappoint them. "Oh," you say, "I should lose my place then." Better lose your place than lose your soul. But you will not lose your place. Christian heroism is always honored. You go to the head man of your store and say, "Sir, I want to serve you; I want to oblige you; it is from no lack of industry on my part, but this thing seems to me to be wrong, and it is a sin against my conscience, it is a sin against God, and I beg you, sir, to excuse me." He may flush up and swear, but he will cool down, and he will have more admiration for you than for those who submit to his evil dictation; and while they sink, you will rise.

Do Not Give Up Your Character,

young man, because of seeming temporary advantage. Under God, that is the only thing you have to build on. Give up that, you give up everything. That employer asks a young man to hurt himself for time and for eternity who expects him to make a wrong entry, or change an invoice, or say goods cost so much when they cost less, or impose upon the verdancy of a customer, or misrepresent a style of fabric. How dare he demand of you anything so insolent!

There is one style of temptation that comes on a great many of our clerks, and that is upon those who are engaged in what is called "Drumming."

Now, that occupation is just as honorable as any other, if it be conducted in accord with one's conscience. In this day, when there are so many rivalries in business, all our commercial establishments ought to have men abroad who are seeking out for opportunities of merchandise. There can be no objection to that. But there are professed Christian merchants in the week-night prayer-meeting who have clerks abroad in New York conducting merchants of Cincinnati and Chicago and St. Louis through the debaucheries of the great town, in order to ecure their custom for the store. There are in ores in New York and Brooklyn drawers in hich there are kept moneys which the clerks e to go to and get whatever they want to con- uct these people through the dissipations of ie city. The head men of the firm know it, id in some places actually demand it—professed hristian merchants. One would think that the rayer would freeze on their lips, and they would ll back dead at the sound of their own song. Vhat chance is there for young men when ommercial establishments expect such things? h, young men, disappoint the expectation of at firm—disappoint those customers, if these ings are expected of you! You may sell an xtra case of goods; you may sell an extra roll f silk; but the trouble is, you may have to row your soul to boot in the bargain.

IV. Again, I counsel all clerks to conquer the ials of their particular position. One great ial for clerks is the Inconsideration of Customers.

here are people who are entirely polite every- here else, but gruff and dictatorial and con- emptible when they come into a store to buy ything. There are thousands of men and omen who go from store to store to price ings, without any idea of purchase. They are ot satisfied until every roll of goods is brought own and they have pointed out all the real or aginary defects. They try on all kinds of kid loves, and stretch them out of shape, and they ut on all styles of cloak and walk to the mirror see how it would look, and then they sail out f the store, saying, "I will not take it to-day," hich means, "I don't want it at all," leaving ie clerk amid a wreck of ribbons, and laces, nd cloths, to smooth out five hundred dollars' orth of goods—not one cent of which did that an or woman buy or expect to buy. Now I ll that dishonest on the part of the customer.

Then a great trial comes to clerks in the fact at they see f human nature. You talk about lies behind ie counter—there are just as many lies before ie counter. Augustine speaks of a man who dvertised that he would, on a certain occasion, ell the people what was in their hearts. A great rowd assembled, and he stepped to the front nd said, "I will tell you what is in your hearts: buy cheap and sell dear!" Oh, people of rooklyn, lay not aside your urbanity when you ome into a store. Treat the clerks like gen- emen and ladies, proving yourself to be a gen- eman or a lady. Remember that if the prices re high and your purse is lean, that is no fault f the clerks. And if you have a son or a aughter amid those perplexities of commercial fe, and such a one comes home all worn out, e lenient, and know that the martyr at the take no more certainly needs the grace of God han our young people amid the seven-times eated exasperations of a clerk's life.

The Parsimonious Side

Then there are all the trials which come to lerks from the treatment of Inconsiderate Employers.

here are professed Christian men in this city ho have no more regard for their clerks than hey have for the scales on which the sugars are eighed. A clerk is no more than so much tore furniture. No consideration for their ights or their interests. Not one word of en- ouragement from sunrise to sunset, nor from anuary to December. But when anything goes rong—a streak of dust on the counter or a box ith the cover off—thunder showers of scold- ng. Men imperious, capricious, cranky toward heir clerks—their whole manner as much as to ay, "All the interest I have in you is to see hat I can get out of you."

Then there are all the trials of ome of you remember when the war broke out nd all merchandise went up, and merchants ere made millionaires in six months by the imple rise in the value of goods. Did the lerk get advantage of that rise? Sometimes, ot always. I saw estates gathered in those times over which the curse of God has hung ever since. The cry of unpaid men and women in those stores reached the Lord of Sabaoth, and the indignation of God has been around those establishments ever since; rumbling in the carriage wheels, flashing in the chandeliers, glowing from the crimson upholstery, thundering in the long roll of the ten-pin alley. Such men may build up palaces of merchandise heaven high, but after awhile a disaster will come along, and will put one hand on this pillar, and another hand on that pillar, and throw itself forward until down will come the whole structure, crushing the worshippers like grapes in a wine-press.

Incompetent Wages.

Then there are boys in establishments who are ruined—in prosperous establishments—ruined by their lack of compensation. In how many prosperous stores it has been for the last twenty years that boys were given just enough money to teach them how to steal! Some were seized upon by the police. The vast majority of instances were not known. The head of the firm asked, "Where is George now?" "Oh, he isn't here any more." A lad might on a blasted heath than take one cent from his employer. Woe be to that employer who unnecessarily puts a temptation in a boy's way! There have been great establishments in these cities building marble palaces, their owners dying worth millions and millions and millions, who made a vast amount of their estate out of the blood and muscle and nerve of half-paid clerks. Such men as—well, I will not mention any name; but I mean men who have gathered up vast estates at the expense of the people who were ground under their heel. "Oh," say such merchants, "if you don't like it here, then go and get a better place." As much as to say, "I've got you in my grip, and I mean to hold you; you can't get any other place."

Better Starve to Death

Oh, what a contrast we see between such men and those Christian merchants of Brooklyn and New York who to-day are sympathetic with their clerks—when they pay the salary, acting in this way, "This salary that I give you is not all my interest in you. You are an immortal man; you are an immortal woman; I am interested in your present and your everlasting welfare; I want you to understand that, if I am a little higher up in this store, I am beside you in Christian sympathy." Go back forty years to in New York—a man whose worst enemies never questioned his honesty. Every morning he brought all the clerks and the accountants and the weighers into a room for devotion. They sang. They prayed. They exhorted. On Monday morning the clerks were asked where they had attended church on the previous day, and what the sermons were about. It must have sounded strangely, that voice of praise along the streets where the devotees of mammon were counting their golden beads. You say, Arthur Tappen failed. Yes; he was unfortunate, like a great many good men; but I understand he met all his obligations before he left this world, and I know that he died in the peace of the Gospel, and that he is before the throne of God to-day. If that be failing, I wish that you might all fail.

Arthur Tappen's Store

There are a great many young men in this city—yea, in this house—who want a word of encouragement, Christian encouragement.

One Smile of Good Cheer

would be worth more to them to-morrow morning in their places of business than a present of fifty thousand dollars ten years hence. Oh, I remember the apprehension and the tremor of entering a profession! I remember very well the man who greeted me in the ecclesiastical court with the tip ends of the long fingers of the left hand; and I remember the other man who took my hand in both of his and said, "God bless you, my brother; you have entered a glorious profession; be faithful to God and He will see you through." Why, I feel this minute the thrill of that hand-shaking, though the man who gave me the Christian grip has been in heaven twenty-five years. There are old men to-day who can look back to forty years ago, when some one said a kind word to them. Now, old men, pay back what you got then.

It is a great art for old men to be able to encourage the young. There are many young people in our cities who have come from inland counties of our own State—from the granite hills of the North, from the savannas of the South, rom the prairies of the West. They are here to get their fortune. They are in boarding-houses where everybody seems to be thinking of himself. They want companionship and they want Christian encouragement. Give it to them.

My word is to all clerks in this house,

Be Mightier Than Your Temptations.

A Sandwich Islander used to think when he slew an enemy all the strength of that enemy came into his own right arm. And I have to tell you that every misfortune you conquer is so much added to your moral power. With omnipotence for a lever and the throne of God for a fulcrum, you can move earth and heaven. While there are other young men putting the cup of sin to their lips, stoop down and drink out of the fountains of God, and you will rise up strong to thresh the mountains. The ancients used to think that pearls were fallen raindrops, which, touching the surface of the sea, hardened into gems, then dropped to the bottom. I have to tell you to-day that storms of trial have showered imperishable pearl into many a young man's lap. Oh! while you have goods to sell, remember you have a soul to save.

In a hospital a Christian captain, wounded a few days before, got delirious, and in the midnight hour he sprang out on the floor of the hospital, thinking he was in the battle, crying, "Come on, boys! Forward! Charge!" Ah! he was only battling the spectres of his own brain. But it is no imaginary conflict into which I call you, young man, to-day. There are ten thousand spiritual foes that would capture you. In the name of God, up and at them. After the last store has been closed, after the last bank has gone down, after the shuffle of the quick feet on the Custom House steps has stopped, after the long line of merchantmen on the sea have taken sail of flame, after Brooklyn, and New York, and London, and Vienna have gone down into the grave where Thebes and Babylon and Tyre lie buried, after the great fire-bells of the Judgment Day have tolled at the burning of a world—on that day all the affairs of banking houses and stores will come Up for Inspection.

Oh, what an opening of account books! Side by side, the clerks and the men who employed them—the people who owned thread-and-needle stores on the same footing with the Stewarts, and the Delanos, and the Abbotts, and the Barings. Every invoice made out—all the labels of goods—all certificates of stock—all lists of prices—all private marks of the firm now explained so everybody can understand them. All the maps of cities that were never built, but in which lots were sold. All bargains. All gougings. All snap judgments. All false entries. All embezzlements of trust funds. All swindles in coal, and iron, and oil, and silver, and stocks. All Swartouts, and Huntingtons, and Ketchums. On that day, when the cities of this world are smoking in the last conflagration, will go on; and down in an avalanche of destruction will go those who wronged man or woman, insulted God and defied the judgment. Oh, that will be a great day for you, honest Christian clerk! No getting up early; no retiring late; no walking around with weary limbs; but a mansion in which to live, and a realm of light, and love, and joy over which to hold everlasting dominion. Hoist him up from glory to glory, and from song to song, and from throne to throne; for while others go down into the sea with their gold like a millstone hanging to their neck, this one shall come up the heights of amethyst and alabaster, holding in his right hand the pearl of great price in a sparkling, glittering, flaming casket.

The Trial

THE INDIAN MEDICINE MAN'S PHARMACOPŒIA.

In a letter from the Rev. George W. Wood, Jr., of Montana, Presbyterian missionary among the Assinaboines, published in the Church, is the following description of the treatment favored by the medicine men :

"The Indians have made up their minds to live without the sun-dance ; and some of the other heathen dances are going out of use. But they still cling to the grass-dance and the night-dance, or marriage-dance. They still put faith in their medicine men for the cure of sickness. Every case of illness is a contest with evil spirits ; and though often defeated, they still look upon the medicine men as their champions. Most of the time they have no other treatment. The agency physician visits the sick faithfully when he is here ; but owing to the distance from Poplar Creek, and the difficulty of travel in this country, he rarely comes. The medicine men are an obstacle in the way of visiting the sick and conversing with them. They will sit by the patient for hours at a time day after day, drumming and otherwise 'making medicine' to drive away the evil spirits, till any patient but one with Indian nerves would be driven mad. The amount of time thus spent is a matter of definite contract determined by the amount of the fee. A horse is considered equal to about a week's service. A blanket will ordinarily pay for two or three days. A medicine man must never be interrupted. No one must presume to visit the sufferer during his incantations."

A CONSECRATED SKIN.

The offerings of converts as reported by missionaries are a valuable evidence of the sincerity of their profession, showing that the change of heart has extended to the pocket, which it does not invariably do in Christian lands. The Missionary Outlook records two instances in point : "Archdeacon Kirkby, among the Indians in Manitoba, reports that a man brought a silver-fox skin as his gift. This was literally giving to God the best, as that is the most valuable fur in the country, and the skin thus presented sold for twelve dollars and a half, probably about one-fourth of the poor man's winter's hunt. It also states that the contributions of the Japanese churches would have been equivalent here to twenty dollars per member. Twelve of the sixteen, though of very recent formation, received no help from the treasury of the American Board last year. The pastors have led their people in the practice of self-denial, some of them receiving as salaries only a fifth, or even a tenth, of what they can have if they will enter the Government service.

PRAYING TO A TORTOISE.

The Rev. James Gilmour, M.A., of Peking, China, thus writes in a communication to friends in England : "It rained a day and a night, and every one said, 'What a good rain—just at the right time, too!' It rained another day and night, and people said, 'It is too much.' It rained a third day and night, and walls and houses began to fall down, and people said, 'Why does heaven send us so much rain?' It rained four days and four nights, and it was dismal in the night to hear the clatter and rumble of falling walls. There was hardly a house that did not leak. Many houses fell down bodily ; and, worse than all, the rivers rose and roared down, overflowing both banks of a bed a mile and a half broad. But this was not all. It began to eat away the fenced fields of kitchen gardens so rapidly that it was at their doors almost before people could move their things. It was alarming. I went to see it ; and there was the yellow flood raging along, carrying with it great trees, grain, and the timbers and furniture of houses. The water kept rising too, and things looked desperate ; and in their distress the Chinese had recourse to a god, who they supposed could manage the river. So they got a pig and cut its throat, and took it up to a little temple, and threw it into the river there as an offering to this god. And who was this god? Neither more nor less than a tortoise! Next morning, when they went out to see how the river was, they found that the flood had carried away the temple before which they offered the pig. After offering the pig, the next thing they did was to make a vow to the tortoise, and the vow was a promise that if the water did not rise higher they would put up a stage, hire a company of players, and have a six days' theatrical exhibition in honor of the tortoise. The river did not rise higher, so the exhibition is to come off." Strange worship of a strange god!

TEACHING FOR GERMAN SOLDIERS.

The startling ignorance of soldiers is causing some concern to the German Government. It has issued a decree stating that of the recruits drafted into one of the divisions of the Third Army Corps last year "only an insignificant part knew the names of our famous generals in modern times, a large number knew nothing at all about the events of the last three campaigns, and the most lamentable ignorance as to the members of the royal house was also found to exist." In order to remedy this state of affairs, it has been ordered that national history shall be given a prominent place in the elementary schools of the Potsdam governmental district, and attempts are being made to have the decree extended to a wider area. Doubtless the German soldiers would fight bravely, and prove themselves efficient, though they may show "the most lamentable ignorance as to the members of the royal house," which is not such valuable knowledge as royal personages think it. In the Christian army, however, that knowledge is indispensable. Christ's cause would be better served in our day if some of those who are enlisted under His banner knew a little more about Him before they began to work and teach (Philippians 3 : 8, 18).

A WIFE'S PETITION.

At a recent meeting at Bethshan, England, a lady related the following experience, which is published in Thy Healer : "My husband has been suffering with a very bad cough for some years. It was very distressing to him, for it was so bad. I think it is a month ago since I was at Bethshan, and asked for prayer for him that the Lord might heal him. That night I was in bed when he came home, but I heard no cough as usual. In the morning after getting up, again he had no cough. At breakfast-time I asked him, 'Where is your cough?' 'I don't know,' he said. 'What is it that has made all this difference?' 'I cannot tell,' he answered. 'Well,' I said, 'I am afraid even now you won't believe ; but I was in a place yesterday afternoon, where I asked for prayer for you, that you might be relieved of your cough.' He did not make any answer to that. Praise God, the cough is quite gone away. I have asked him since then, 'Do you believe that the Lord has taken your cough away?' 'I don't know,' he said, 'but I know it is gone.' I believe the Lord will yet have mercy on his soul, and bring him to Jesus in answer to prayer."

PREACHING IN A ZULU KRAAL.

The Rev. W. J. Underwood, Mahamba, Swaziland, lately visited a kraal where preaching was going on, and this is a portion of the story which he tells : "Elijah Nxumalo, the local preacher, a man more than forty years of age, rather tall and well built, goes from kraal to kraal preaching the glad tidings of salvation. I accompanied him on one of his tours. On arriving at the distant kraal we found about fifty persons waiting. The Nimzan and his chief wife seemed very glad to see me. It was a strange temple in which we worshipped. It was one of the largest of some twenty huts of bee-hive shape. We entered one at a time on our knees, and it was like creeping into a black hole with a very close atmosphere, and the instinct of self-preservation led me to settle down near the door. The only seat that could be found for me was a long narrow piece of wood such as would make a table leg. After I entered the Nimzan followed, and about thirty others, and by this time we were uncomfortably full. Gradually the interior became more visible ; and, as I sat near the door, the atmosphere was more tolerable. Thirty Zulu men and women, all nearly naked, all in spiritual darkness, all possessed of immortal souls, gathered around to hear of Him who is the 'Light of the world.' Elijah got all settled, ready to begin ; he untied his bundle and put on his antique spectacles, and explained that we were about to engage in the solemn worship of Almighty God. The heathens joined in the singing, and Elijah told them of the means God had devised that lost and unhappy sinners might be saved. Most earnestly did he urge them to begin to pray. He told them God did not ask for their cattle or their goats, but their hearts. In conclusion, he told them about the 'joy among the angels when one sinner repenteth,' and also how the wicked would be everlastingly punished in hell. Elijah was listened to with the deepest interest, and wonder and agreement were pictured on their faces. We sang another hymn, and then all knelt in prayer, at the close of which all the people said 'Amen.'"

A NONAGENARIAN'S PREMONITION.

A mysterious warning of approaching death was received recently by an aged lady residing in Hartford, Conn. A few months ago a widow lady who had attained the venerable age of ninety-four astonished her daughter, with whom she resided, and her friends by saying that she was strongly impressed with the belief that she would die on April 1st. Although then in good health, so convinced was she that she would not survive that day that she put her affairs in order, and arranged for the payment of certain interest money which fell due in the middle of April. She was also anxious to communicate with some friends in other cities from whom she had not heard for a long time ; but they seem to have received a similar premonition, for they wrote her before her letters reached them. Her health continued good until three weeks before, when in going about the house one night she had a fall and broke her hip. Owing to her advanced age, it was impossible to set the bone, and she gradually sank until April 1st, when she died, on the very day she had named months before. No rational explanation of this mysterious premonition can be given. To very few persons is it given to know beforehand the time of their death. It is, therefore, excusable when a man dies leaving his worldly affairs unsettled ; but the very uncertainty ought to inculcate the duty of spiritual preparation, because that preparation avails for life as well as for death (1 Tim. 4 : 8).

CHAMBERS OF LIVING DEATH.

The Mission to the Lepers of India is doing a valuable work among the poor, heretofore neglected creatures. The secretary of the mission, Mr. Wellesley C. Bailey, is now visiting the asylums aided by the society, inquiring how best Christian teaching can be introduced into other asylums, and endeavoring to awaken among Christians in India a more earnest care for the lepers. Referring to the Dharmsala, in Bombay, he says : I have been once more through all its chambers of living death ; they are beyond description ; worse than even I had any idea of. I also paid a visit to the Lohardugga Asylum. At the entrance there was an arch of mango leaves, with a white flag at either side, and "Welcome" in the centre. The poor lepers' houses were decorated with evergreens. These houses are whitewashed, and have red-tiled roofs. The whole place had an air of comfort, being clean and bright. I was particularly struck with the comparatively healthy appearance of the inmates. After I had said "Isa sahai"—"May Jesus be your helper"—which is the usual salutation here, a woman, the wife of one of the lepers, but who had not herself contracted the disease, came forward with a little vessel of oil, with which she anointed my feet. After the ordinary service came the baptism of two lepers—Sukkhu and Patrus—a most interesting ceremony to me. Sukkhu is about sixty; his toes and fingers are all gone; but his poor old face, which is not marred by the disease, had a bright, intelligent smile. He answered well and clearly. At one time he seemed much distressed, having dropped his pice (small coins), which he had brought as an offering, his poor fingerless hands being unable to pick them up. Sukkhu was formerly a devil worshipper, and acted as priest. When he became a leper he used all his own charms and incantations to cure himself, but to no purpose. At one time he made a horse and an elephant (we are not told of what material); he put saddles on them, and offered them to the devil, saying, "See now, I have given you these nice things. Please leave me, and go somewhere else." To-day he was very emphatic about Jesus having shed His blood for him.

A CHINESE TOWN BECOME CHRISTIAN.

On the coast of China near Foochow is a small village of five hundred inhabitants which has recently formally taken Christianity as its religion. The Chinese Recorder gives the following explanation of it: "Last summer the people became so angry with all foreigners, on account of the troubles between France and China, that the missionaries were obliged to discontinue their visits; but the native preacher kept on his work earnestly and faithfully. In midsummer cholera came to the village in a virulent form, and death followed death in quick succession. The terror-stricken people fled to their gods; but the one Christian besought them to come to the true God, who could hear their prayers and save them. Because of their despair they listened and joined with him in asking God to stay the plague; and God honored their faith, imperfect though it was, and the plague was stayed that day. The people then held a conference, and as a town they resolved to accept the new religion, and worship the God who helped them."

It will need now the earnest efforts of the missionaries to disseminate sound teaching to give the people clearer ideas of Christian duty. If that is neglected they may abjure their new faith in the event of their praying to God for something He does not see fit in His wisdom to grant.

NEW TREATMENT FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

A REMEDY for consumption was described to a hospital committee in Philadelphia, at a recent session, by Dr. T. N. McLaughlin, the chief physician at the city hospital, who has tried it with invariable success in thirty cases. The doctor, did not claim to be the discoverer of the remedy, but stated that he had obtained the idea from a paper recently read in Paris by a French physician who strongly recommended it. The remedy consists in abandoning all medicines and injecting carbonic acid, which is specially prepared by a process invented by a professor in a French medical college. The thirty patients on whom Dr. McLaughlin tried it were all in the last stages of the disease, and recovery in each case was considered impossible. After the treatment they at once began to show signs of improvement. The night sweats ceased, the almost constant pains from which they suffered vanished, and the appetite returned. The sick grew brighter and stronger each day, and since the beginning of the treatment one of the number has gained twelve pounds in weight, while others have gained from three to five pounds in the same time. The intelligence of the discovery of a remedy for this disease, which has generally been considered incurable, will be received with different emotions by different people. Some will hear the news with comparative indifference, but those who believe themselves to be suffering from the disease will be anxious to learn if it is really true that there is hope for them, and will lose no time in applying the remedy. That is the case with the offer of salvation for the soul: those who know themselves to be lost eagerly seek the Saviour (Mark 2:17).

THE COMING OF THE DAYS OF NOAH.

THE PRESENT ACTIVITY OF THE SEVEN CAUSES OF ANTEDILUVIAN CORRUPTION.

By G. H. Pember, M.A.

(Continued from page 247.)

To reproduce the fourth cause, the Prince of this World has long been striving, and certainly now seems near to his victory. It is the natural result of the first error, the denial of our position as sinners before God, as doomed to destruction unless a ransom be found. Let the Church surrender that truth, and what hinders her from living in perfect Accord with the World?

If the practical teaching of religion be that God is fairly satisfied with our conduct, troubles but little about our sins, highly appreciates our works of virtue, even though pride be their mainspring, and looks with pleasure upon bold deeds and intellectual displays, why should such a theology clash with the cravings of men? How could they hate a deity so like themselves?

And have we not been describing the creed of vast numbers in the professing Church? Are not the walls of the city of God thus continually broken down before our eyes, so that the stranger may enter at will? Men do indeed frequent their churches in crowds; they excite a feeling, which they term religious, by grand buildings, by painted windows, by splendid vestments, by gorgeous ceremonies, by beautiful music, by sentimental or intellectual discourses, and by strong sectarian or political convictions. But if they clothe themselves with the semblance of devotion in their worship, they altogether lose this outward distinction in the world, and bewilder those who are honestly asking what they shall do to be saved, by plunging into all the gaieties, frivolities, pursuits, and business of this life, as if they were to remain among them forever. The powers of the World to Come have lost their hold upon them, they are even as other men: so many points have been yielded, amusements permitted, and vices condoned, that it is almost them from non-professors unless they recite their creed. Nay, some would appear to be holding a doctrine of the ancient Gnostics who, denying the resurrection, affirmed that, their spirits being saved, they were at liberty to do what they would with the body, inasmuch as after death they would have no further concern either with it or its deeds. And although many are ready to confess that the Christian must take up his cross, yet being thoroughly satisfied that in these modern times the unwearied zeal of Christ and His apostles would be quite out of place, they can by no means find a cross to bear. If, however, God in His anger smite them with sickness, bereavement, disappointment, or loss, they talk of their trials, and comfort themselves with the thought that they are imitating the Lord by enduring troubles which they cannot in any way avoid.

Impossible to Distinguish

The Swarming Peoples.

Upon the fifth factor there is no need to enlarge, for without quoting census papers, every one can perceive the rapid growth of numbers in every land. So dense is the population of Europe, that in unprecedented numbers emigrants are going out and filling the solitary places of the earth. And statistics show that the population of almost every part of the world is also increasing.

But, in addition to this, there is a phenomenon of gloomy portent. For, while they multiply, men are also beginning to exhibit impatience of restraint: and, since they are learning to act together, and seem to be growing inflated with reliance on their fancied power, they will probably soon go on to deeds of impious daring. Large organizations, which are no longer confined to the frontiers of one people, forbode a second rebellion of Babel. The time of the shaking of all nations is approaching, and the hearts of many are already failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth. Let believers consider their ways; for the Lord will shortly descend to see what the children of men are doing.

VI. Increased Callousness.

Whenever the Word of God is faithfully preached it cannot return unto Him void; it will accomplish that which He pleases, and prosper in the things whereto He sent it (Isa. 55:11); some effect it must produce upon all who hear. It separates the wheat from the chaff; it either draws men nearer to God, or renders them more callous than before, and prepares them for speedy judgment. And so the powerful appeals of Enoch, his loud calls to repentance and threatenings of judgment to come, since they were slighted by the world, must have mightily hardened the hearts of men, and caused the Spirit of God to cease striving with them. Very probably many were at first impressed and alarmed; but after a while, when they saw day following day without any sign of the predicted vengeance, they lost their fear; they went back to their favorite sins, they began to be scoffers, and mocked at solemn warnings.

In this case also history appears to be repeating itself. For some fifty years God has supplied an unbroken stream of evangelical testimony which has been gradually increasing in power; and there is now sounding forth such a proclamation of the Gospel as the world has never, perhaps, heard since the days of the apostles. Amid the calls to repentance and offers of grace, amid the mutual exhortations to walk as children of the light, there peals forth, waxing ever louder and louder, the solemn cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet Him" (Matt. 25:6); while the testimony of the faithful to the world is assuming its last form — "Fear God, and give glory to Him, for the hour of His judgment is come" (Rev. 14:7).

Indications of this New Epoch

have been growing more and more apparent for some years, and many papers and periodicals have been devoted to the resuscitation of the long neglected truth so prominently set forth by our Lord and His apostles. Hundreds of books and pamphlets have been written on the same subject; while the majority of the later revival preachers, and a daily increasing number of other witnesses, have promulgated it.

But the masses of the world are again rejecting God's more urgent appeals, and, as a natural consequence, His Spirit is ceasing to strive with them; infidelity and superstition are beginning to overshadow the countries of Christendom.

Sorcery.

The seventh and most fearful characteristic of the days of Noah was the unlawful appearance among men of beings from another sphere. This, many would quickly reply, is certainly an event which has not yet startled our age, strange as our experiences may be; we have still something at least to wait for before the completion of that fatal circle of influences which ruined the old world. But a diligent comparison of Scripture with the things that are now taking place among us will give a very different impression, and induce a strong conviction that the advanced posts of this last terrible foe have already crossed our borders. For it is no longer possible to deny the supernatural character of the apostasy called Spiritualism, which is spreading through the world with unexampled rapidity, and which attracts its votaries, and retains them within its grasp, solely by continual exhibitions of the miraculous. It is vain to speak of that power as mere jugglery which has convinced some of the élite of the literary world, which has caught in its meshes many scientific men, who at first only troubled to investigate for the purpose of refutation. Nor, indeed, can anything be more dangerous than utter incredulity; for the wholly incredulous, if suddenly brought face to face with the supernatural, is of all men the most likely to yield entire submission to the priests of the new wonder. Better far is it to prayerfully inquire whether these things are possible, and if so, in what light the Bible teaches us to regard them. We shall thus be armed against all the wiles of the Devil.

Price, Five Cents, Post Free—160th Thousand Enlarged Edition—64 Pages—

COMING WARS AND GREAT EVENTS,

and Ten Signs of the Approaching Final Crisis, by Rev. M. Baxter—Dissolution of the Turkish Empire into the Five Ancient Kingdoms of Greece, Egypt, Syria, Thracian Turkey and Bulgaria, which with Britain (separated from Ireland), France, Spain, Italy and Austria, will be formed into an Allied Confederacy of Ten Kingdoms—Subsequent Rise of Napoleon as King of Syria—His Seven Years' Covenant with the Jews—Resurrection and Translation of Saints—3½ Years' Great Tribulation and world-wide Persecution of Christians—Descent of Christ at Armageddon—Ensuing Millennium of 1000 Years after the Year 1900. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

Renewed Rumors of an Extra Session of Congress were in circulation last week. They arose from a report that an officer of the House, when waiting on President Cleveland, to take leave before setting out on a European excursion, informed the President that he intended to return at the end of October. The statement published is that the President advised him to arrange his plans so that he could be back in Washington on October 1st. This advice was interpreted as an indication that the President had yielded to the representations of certain statesmen who are known to strongly advocate a special session.

The Secretary of the Treasury has Made an important innovation in the payment of a claimant, which will be a warning to those claim agents who are not satisfied with moderate fees. There has frequently been reasonable ground for suspicion that when Congress has voted a sum of money it did not benefit so much the person entitled to it as the lawyer who managed his case, and who generally drew the money from the Treasury. On April 19th, Mr. Fairchild's suspicion in a case of the kind having been aroused, he ordered the cancellation of a cheque issued in payment of the back pay and bounty of a soldier which was held by an attorney who had charged an exorbitant and illegal fee. The Secretary then directed that a duplicate cheque be issued and sent direct to the claimant. He says that this course will be adopted in all cases where the attorney asks more than fair compensation for his legal services.

The State Department is Reported to have received a despatch from the British Foreign Office suggesting a new basis for the settlement of the Canadian fishery difficulty. It is welcome because of the disposition it shows to make concessions, though the particular concession offered does not meet the case as understood by Secretary Bayard. The Marquis of Salisbury offers to revert to the old arrangements without the payment of the five million dollars awarded by the Halifax settlement to England. That proposal shows the magnanimity of the British Government, but it shows, too, that there is a misunderstanding in England of the real cause of trouble. The United States could afford to pay the award, but they object to giving privileges which, as they contend, are not reciprocated. If Canada would allow American fishery ships "to touch and trade" at Canadian ports, as Canadian fishery vessels can do at American ports, there would be an end of the dispute.

The Destructive Cyclone Which Passed over parts of Kansas and Missouri on Thursday last, has left an appalling record of its power. Despatches from St. Louis say that the storm ravaged a strip of territory about five hundred miles long and from half a mile to a mile wide. This path was marked with the blood of dead and dying, and covered with the débris of thousands of homes. Scores of isolated hamlets, scattered off direct lines of communication, are known to have been visited by the scourge of the prairie, with most disastrous results. The cyclone was first heard early in the afternoon at Colony, Anderson County, Kan., about forty miles north-west of Fort Scott. It was preceded by a rumbling sound such as usually accompanies an earthquake. The color of the cloud was a combination of green and yellow, and without any warning, except the noise referred to, it swept down on Colony and tore the little town to fragments. Ten thousand dollars' worth of property was destroyed, and one person was killed. Thence the storm passed over the southern portion of Anderson and Linn counties, travelling due east, and accompanied by mammoth hailstones. The cloud had by this time assumed the terrible funnel-shape that indicates its most destructive mood. In its progress through Prescott, it razed two hundred buildings, killed twelve persons, and maimed twice as many more. Houses were caught up from their foundations, carried from one hundred yards to a quarter of a mile, and then dashed violently to the ground. The dwellings in nearly every case were shattered to fragments, and the loss of life was caused as much by flying timbers as the violence of the storm.

The Disgraceful Condition of Brooklyn Politics is being exposed by the Investigating Committee appointed by the Legislature. At a meeting of the Committee recently one witness testified that he had purchased a piece of land for $3500, but when the deed was made out it appeared that he had paid only $2500. Who had received the other thousand he did not know. A disreputable place was upon the land, and he was anxious to have it removed, but he was informed by an official that he could not have the land unless he consented to allow the disreputable place to remain, and it still stands there. Apart from the disclosures made in this investigation, it is evident to any unbiassed person that immorality in the Brooklyn streets has in three years made prodigious progress.

Rumors of a Revival of the Project of a Central American Union are published by the New York Times. It states that representatives of the five Central American republics, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, and San Salvador, have made another attempt at mutual alliance. Some of the points of agreement arrived at are freedom of trade and navigation between the States, joint defence against foreign powers, assimilation of laws, and the admission of the citizens of each State to citizenship in every other, with the ultimate purpose of a closer union. Secretary Bayard gave the project a qualified approval some time ago, by saying that the United States have an undoubted interest in the assimilation of the aims of the Central American States, so that they may act voluntarily and harmoniously together under republican forms toward the realization of national and continental ends, although he opposes forcible usurpation. Probably a union would have been formed before this, but for the mutual jealousies of the Central American Presidents.

The Arrest of a French Commissary by German police caused last week intense excitement in France and throughout Europe. People were and still are unable to decide whether it is a trivial personal incident, or a deliberate attempt on the part of Bismarck to affront France. The circumstances, so far as they can be ascertained, are that M. Schnaebeles, a special police commissary employed by the French Government in the demarcation of the boundary-line between France and Germany, was requested by the Germans to set up one or two posts to mark the frontier line. The commissary crossed the boundary and advanced a few yards on German soil, when he was seized by German police agents, who were disguised in gray blouses. He knocked the agents down and escaped back to French territory, but he was again seized, handcuffed, and sent to Novéant, and thence to Metz, where he was placed in the prison in which accused persons are confined before trial. The warrant for the arrest emanated from the public prosecutor at Metz, who acted under instructions from Strasburg. The French Government appear to have maintained their equanimity, but to have insisted on the affair being explained. From German sources it is learned that M. Schnaebeles was suspected of fomenting disloyalty in Alsace, and that the Germans are glad to have possession of him, though they deny that he was arrested on French territory. In the strained condition of the relations between the two countries the incident is dangerous; but if Bismarck does not really wish for war he will allay the resentment the affair naturally produces.

The Publication of a Letter Purporting to be signed by Mr. Parnell in the London Times made a genuine sensation in England last week. For some time past the Times has been publishing articles to prove that Mr. Parnell and the Irish Parliamentary party are allied with the dynamiters and assassins of Ireland, and not only approve of their proceedings, but associate with them, and aid them indirectly in their criminal acts. This letter is on a line with those articles. It purports to be written by Mr. Parnell to Patrick Egan under date of May 15th, 1882. The object of the letter is to convince Irishmen in America who approved of the murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke in the Phœnix Park, on May 6th, 1882, that Mr. Parnell was not sincere in denouncing the crime, and that, while regretting the murder of Cavendish, he thought "Burke got no more than his deserts." The letter states that the writer is not surprised at Irishmen being angry at the denunciation of the crime, but excusing himself on the ground that it was good policy. Mr. Parnell indignantly denies that he ever wrote or signed such a letter, and Mr. Egan denies that he ever received it. In England, while there is reluctance to believe that the letter is genuine, the high character of the Times, and the risk that journal incurs under the law of libel if it has published false statements, lead many to believe that the proprietors of the journal must have satisfied themselves before publishing it that the letter was written by Mr. Parnell.

The New Mahdi Appears Ambitious to Tread in the footsteps of his predecessor. He has sent delegates to the Khédive of Egypt, who were admitted to an audience on April 18th. They presented letters from the Mahdi to the Khédive, the Queen of England, and the Sultan of Turkey. In the letter to the Khédive the Mahdi says: "If you will recognize me as the true Mahdi you will be saved, and we will be friends. Otherwise I will march forward and the same fate will befall you as overtook your generals." The Mahdi addresses Queen Victoria as "the favorite of her people," which is quite a new title, which her Majesty may now add to that of Defender of the Faith, which was conferred by the Pope.

The British Treasury Statement for the Year was made in the House of Commons on April 21st. It is interesting by its parallel with our own financial position. It appears that during last year the revenues of the Government amounted to $450,000,000, and the expenses reached nearly the same sum. There has been a saving of about a million in the army estimates, and about a million and a half in the estimates for the civil service. The revenue obtained by taxes on alcoholic liquors had decreased $950,000, while that derived from the beer tax had increased $225,000. The receipts from the wine taxes had fallen off half a million, and those from the tax on tea had largely increased. The Secretary of the Treasury proposes to reduce the tax on tobacco, and to rearrange the payments on account of the national debt. Lord Randolph Churchill, who recently resigned charge of the national finances, condemns the policy of the Government, and charges it with disregard for economy.

The Rev. M. Baxter Delivered Three Discourses on Sunday last in the Academy of Music, Norfolk, Va., on the Great Coming Events of Prophecy. He had large and attentive audiences. Norfolk is a thriving city of 25,000 inhabitants, pleasantly situated by the sea, with a large and growing seaport trade.

Clergymen and Evangelists who will Allow Copies of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to be placed in the seats of churches, or will have them distributed at the doors, will be supplied with assorted parcels of back numbers if they will write to the Manager, 63 Bible House, New York.

A New Bishop of Jerusalem has been Apointed by the Queen of England. The clergyman selected is the Rev. G. F. Blyth, at present Archdeacon of Rangoon. This is the beginning f a new order. Since the bishopric was constituted in 1842 the presentations have been made lternately by the Emperor of Germany and the Queen. Prussia furnished one half of the necesary funds, while the English Government furished the other. The salary of the Bishop of erusalem was $6000. The Prussian Government, owever, lately withdrew its grant and the Archishops of Canterbury and York, together with he Bishop of London, have succeeded in establishing an entirely English Bishopric of Jerualem, and Archdeacon Blyth is the new Bishop.

An Emperor Washing the Feet of Poor Men s a spectacle annually witnessed in Austria. On Maundy Thursday the Emperor Francis Joseph, n accordance with ancient custom and in remembrance of the Last Supper, went through the orm of washing the feet of twelve deserving old en in one of the halls of the imperial palace. The united ages of the veterans on this occaon aggregated ten hundred and seventy-four ears. Four were nonogenarians. The old men, lothed in the traditional costume and bareooted, were seated on a line of benches. The mperor passed before them, escorted by a suite f his household dignitaries, and poured a little ater from a silver pitcher on each outstretched oot. He dried it afterward with a towel. Every eteran was then presented with a small bag of oney and some food.

An Opportunity to Christian People Desiring o help the workingwomen of New York and the oor children of the tenement-house districts, uring the summer, is afforded by the Seaside anitarium at Rockaway (Hammel's Station). everal well-known philanthropists are supportng this institution with the object of affording omfortable rooms, good board, and free bathng to the poor. Any person wishing to send a arty of children for a day can have four hunred tickets for $100. Children under twelve ears of age can be accommodated from Monday ll Saturday at $2 each, adults, $3 each. The anitarium will be open on May 1st. Charitable ersons who may wish to send some convalesent woman or child there for sea air and good od may procure a ticket of admission from Ir. Henry King, 185 Fifth Avenue, New York.

An Imprisoned Heir Died Recently in the enitentiary at Pittsburg, Pa. A little over a ear ago a young man was convicted in Cambria ounty on a charge of forgery, and was senenced to a term of imprisonment which would ave expired in June next. A few months later relative died and left him $20,000. A guardian as appointed for him, and the prisoner looked orward eagerly to his release. He had declared is intention to turn over a new leaf and use his ortune to good purpose. Typhoid fever, howver, brought his life to a close on April 3d. It believed that the fever was due to his imrisonment. Repentance and good resolutions ould not atone for his sin nor avert its conseuences, even in this life. If men realized that his truth also applies to the life beyond the ave they would see why the atonement of hrist was necessary, and that by it alone they an hope for the remission of sin (Prov. 11 : 19).

A Bridge-Jumper was Sent to Prison in New ork, for three months, on April 18th. The man as Lawrence M. Donovan, who has already mped once from the Brooklyn Bridge, the iagara Falls Suspension Bridge, and other ell-known dangerous eminences. The police ceived notice that Donovan would attempt to mp again from the Brooklyn Bridge, on Monay, April 18th, and they immediately took measres to prevent his doing so. They stopped the ack in which he was, when it arrived at the ridge entrance, and promptly arrested him. When taken before Judge Duffy, the man prosted that he "hadn't done nothing." But the dge was too impatient to listen to him. "You are a fool," he said, sternly, "and you ill go to the Island for three months." It must not be supposed from this, that the judge sentenced him for being a fool, though his words implied that. It was for attempting to risk his life, which was a crime, that also proved his folly. The jails of New York are large enough to accommodate all who in that way prove themselves fools, but no building on earth would contain those who more conclusively prove their folly by risking their souls (Jer. 17 : 11).

The Discovery of Stars by Photography has given a new channel to astronomical study. The New York Sun publishes an interesting account of the results recently achieved by celestial photography. It says that not only have excellent photographs of the heavenly bodies been obtained, and an absolutely accurate picture of the skies secured for permanent examination and study, but it has been found that the camera reveals stars invisible even with the aid of the most powerful telescope in existence. This is due to the fact that the camera can accumulate impressions—that is to say, it is able by continued exposure to obtain an image of an object which may be so faint that a shorter exposure would give no image. This, of course, is a power that the eye does not possess. It is equivalent to being able to see plainly by long gazing what cannot be seen at all by a brief inspection. A notable instance of this power is seen in photographs of the Pleiades, the group of stars mentioned in Job (36 : 31). Here a nebula is shown in the photograph which the eye cannot perceive in the sky, but which undoubtedly exists. These discoveries will prove valuable, for astronomers believe in the revelations of the camera though they are not confirmed by actual observation. Their example may be commended to men who reject the revelation of the Bible and refuse to exercise faith when they are asked to accept spiritual truth not perceptible to the senses (1 Cor. 2 : 14).

A Baby's Marvellous Escape in a Railroad accident is described in a despatch from Lancaster, Pa. On April 19th, a wagon, containing a man and his wife and their daughter-in-law, with her fifteen-months'-old infant, was crossing the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad at the point where the road crosses the Petersburg turnpike, when the limited express came dashing past. The engine struck the side of the wagon and dashed it to pieces. The man and his wife were killed instantly, but their daughter-in-law and her babe were caught on the cowcatcher and carried forward with the train. The mother was so severely shaken and so nervous that she lost her presence of mind, and, relaxing her hold, rolled off the cowcatcher, sustaining serious injuries as she fell. The baby, however, clung tightly, and when the train was brought to a standstill, after going about three hundred yards, was found still on the cowcatcher, and was taken off unhurt. It is a most remarkable fact that the only one of the four to escape death or injury was the most frail and helpless of them all. It is so in spiritual matters; many of the wise and prudent perish, while the simple cling to Christ and are saved (1 Cor. 1 : 26–29).

Eight Female Immigrants were Detained in Boston, Mass., on April 16th, while the Collector of the Port decided whether they should be sent back again. They were manufacturers of velveteen, and a Rhode Island firm had engaged them in England and had paid their passage over here. Under a law, passed two years ago, it was made illegal for any firm to import laborers under contract, and the penalty prescribed for violation of the law was that the company importing should pay a fine of a thousand dollars for each passenger, and the steamship company should take them back to the port from which they came. In this case, which was the first of the kind that has occurred, the contract was admitted, but the company claimed exemption on the ground that there are no persons in the country able to do the work, and therefore there was no violation of the spirit of the law in what they had done—the law being passed for the protection of working people in this country against foreign competition. The Collector decided that under the circumstances the company had not broken the law, and ordered the women to be set at liberty. Employers will doubtless take warning by this escape of the Rhode Island company, and be careful, before inviting foreign artisans here, to ascertain that there are none of the same trade in the country. It is well that no such restrictions hamper those who are inviting outsiders to come into Christ's kingdom. They have the King's authority to invite all and assure them of a welcome (Matt. 28 : 18–20).

BRIEF NOTES.

The Birthday Fund for the endowment of Mr. Moody's schools has reached the sum of $40,000. It is expected to realize $100,000 in a few weeks.

Rev. Jacob Freshman, pastor of the Hebrew Christian Church, 17 St. Mark's Place, near Third Avenue, New York, baptized on Easter Sunday three Jewish converts who have recently been brought to the Christian faith at his meetings.

Mr. George Jacoby, the young evangelist whose work is spoken of in terms of high commendation in places where he has labored, is now devoting himself entirely to evangelistic work. His former pastor, Rev. Henry Beals, of Philadelphia, warmly recommends him to the churches. His address is 1122 Savery Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The fifth International Sunday-School Convention will meet in Chicago on June 1st. Delegates will be present from each State, Territory, and Canadian province, and from across the water, the apportionment in this country being one delegate to every 40,000 population. All departments of Sunday-school work will be represented.

A Conference on the Plenary Inspiration of the Bible will be held in November next in some Eastern city, probably Philadelphia. A committee of ministers has been appointed to arrange the details. Bishop W. R. Nicholson, of the Reformed Episcopal Church, is chairman, and Rev. George C. Needham is secretary. Persons having suggestions to offer should write to Mr. Needham at Manchester, Mass.

Dr. McCosh, the President of Princeton College, states that two students of that institution recently made an inquiry as to the number of graduates now in colleges in the United States who desire to go out as foreign missionaries to foreign lands. They find that in ninety-two institutions there are 1525 persons who have volunteered. Dr. McCosh expresses his readiness to combine with others in raising the necessary funds to send them out.

The New York Medical Missionary Society, of which the devoted and indefatigable Dr. Dowkontt is superintendent, has grown from one dispensary, opened in June, 1881, to six dispensaries and one institute, with twelve students. Its expenditure last year was $5700, and it gave medical attention among the poor to nearly four thousand cases. It is proposed to extend the accommodation of the society so as to receive fifty male and twelve female students this fall. Twelve thousand dollars are needed.

Rev. W. F. Re Qua and Mrs. Re Qua, who are laboring among the Indians at McAllister, are encouraged with many tokens of God's blessing. Their privations and hardships, about which they are silent, are, as we learn from others, very severe, but are borne with faith and patience. Any of our readers who can spare a small sum, though it is only a quarter, may be sure that they will help in a good work, and encourage two servants of Christ, by mailing it to Rev. W. F. Re Qua, McAllister, Indian Territory.

The Rev. George C. Needham and Mrs. Needham have commenced special services in Grace Baptist Church, Philadelphia. During their services at Beverley, Mass., which closed on April 18th, there was a great work of grace. Mr. Needham's sermons to men only, in the Town Hall, were attended by immense numbers, and Mrs. Needham's addresses to women only, in the church, attracted large audiences. Mr. Needham says that he hears everywhere he goes of the good work being done by The Christian Herald, and that its influence is growing rapidly.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, The Christian Herald. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of Christian Herald, 63 Bible House, New York. FIVE PRIZES will be given on June 30th to the canvassers who have sold the largest number of copies each week between May 1st and that date. The two at the head of the list will receive ten dollars each and the next three five dollars each.

ON THE CROSS AFTER DEATH.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the Sabbath day (for that Sabbath day was an high day), besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with Him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that He was dead already, they brake not His legs, etc."—John 19 : 31–37.

The Jewish and Roman Customs in Executions—Ceremonial Pollution Dreaded More than Murder—The Strange Physical Phenomenon—I. The Scripture Fulfilled—The Prediction Negative and Positive—Specially Improbable—Altogether Indispensable—Fulfilment Natural—Marvellously Complete—II. The Identification of the Messiah—III. The Instruction Conveyed—Christ the Paschal Lamb—Man's Treatment of Him—What He Did for Men.

CRIMINALS who were crucified by the Romans were allowed to rot upon the Cross. That cruel nation can hardly be so severely condemned as our own people, who up to a late period allowed the bodies of those condemned to die to hang in chains upon gibbets in conspicuous places. The horrible practice is now abandoned, but it was retained to a time almost, if not quite, within living memory. I wonder whether any aged person here remembers such a spectacle. Among the Romans it was usual, for there are showing that the bodies of persons crucified were usually left to be devoured by ravenous birds. Probably out of deference to the customs of the Jews, the authorities in Palestine would sooner or later allow of the interment of the crucified ; but they would by no means hasten it, since they would not feel such a disgust at the sight as an Israelite would.

Classical Allusions to this Horror,

The Mosaic law, which you will find in the Book of Deuteronomy, runs as follows : "If thou hang him on a tree, his body shall not remain all night upon the tree, but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day" (Deut. 21 : 22, 23). This alone would lead the Jews to desire the burial of the executed ; but there was a further reason. Lest the land should be defiled upon the holy Sabbath of the Passover, the chief priests were importunate that the bodies of the crucified should be buried, and therefore that their deaths should be hastened by the breaking of their legs. Their consciences were not wounded by the murder of Jesus, but they were greatly moved by the fear of ceremonial pollution. Religious scruples may live in a dead conscience. Alas ! this is not the only proof of that fact ; we could find many in our own day.

The Jews hurried to Pilate, and sought as a boon the merciless act of having the legs of the crucified dashed to pieces with an iron bar. That act was sometimes performed upon the condemned as an additional punishment ; but in this instance it was meant to be a finishing stroke, hastening death by the terrible pain which it would cause, and the shock to the system which it would occasion. Pilate had no hesitation in granting the desire of the Jews ; what would he care about the dead body, since he had already delivered up the living man ?

Soldiers go at once to perform the hideous operation, and they commence with the two malefactors. It is that the penitent thief, although he was to be in Paradise with his Lord that day, was not, therefore, delivered from the excruciating agony occasioned by the breaking of his legs. We are saved from eternal misery, not from temporary pain. Our Saviour, by our salvation, gives no pledge to us that we shall be screened from suffering in this life. You must not expect because you are pardoned, even if you have the assurance of it from Christ's own lips, that, therefore, you shall escape tribulation ; nay, but from His gracious mouth you have the forewarning assurance that trial shall befall you ; for Jesus said, "These things I have spoken unto you, that in Me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation." Suffering is not averted, but it is turned into a blessing. How much we may any of us receive by the way of suffering it were hard to guess ; mayhap, the promise that we shall be with our Lord in Paradise will be fulfilled that way.

A Striking Fact

At this point it seemed more than probable that our blessed Lord must undergo the breaking of His bones ; but "He was dead already." It had pleased Him, in the infinite willinghood with which He went to His sacrifice, to yield up His life, and His spirit had therefore departed. Yet one might have feared that the coarse soldiers would have performed their orders to the letter. See, they do not so ! Had they conceived a dread of one around whom such prodigies had gathered ? Were they, like their centurion, impressed with awe of this remarkable personage ? At any rate, perceiving that He was dead already, they did not use their hammer. Happy are we to see them cease from such brutality ! But we may not be too glad ; for will take its place : to make sure that He was dead, one of the four soldiers with a spear pierced His side, probably thrusting His lance quite through the heart. Here we see how our gracious God ordained in His providence that there should be sure evidence that Jesus was dead, and that therefore the sacrifice was slain. Strange to say, there have been heretics who have ventured to assert that Jesus did not actually die. They stand refuted by this spear-thrust. Our Lord assuredly died, and was buried ; the Roman soldiers were keen judges in such matters, and they saw that "He was dead already," and, moreover, their spears were not used in vain when they meant to make death a certainty.

Another Outrage

When the side of Christ was pierced, there flowed there out blood and water, upon which a great deal has been said by those who think it proper to dilate upon such tender themes. It was supposed by some that by death the blood was divided, the clots parting from the water in which they float, and that in a perfectly natural way. But it is not true that blood would flow from a dead body if it were pierced. Only under certain very special conditions would blood gush forth. The flowing of this blood from the side of our Lord cannot be considered as a common occurrence : it was a fact entirely by itself.* I could enter into many details, but I prefer to cast a veil over this tender mystery. It is scarcely reverent to be discoursing of anatomy when the body of our adorable Lord is before us. Let us close our eyes in worship rather than open them with irreverent curiosity.

I. I ask you to notice

The Fulfilment of Scripture.

Two things are predicted : not a bone of Him must be broken, and He must be pierced. These were the Scriptures which now remained to be accomplished. I want you to notice concerning this case, that it was singularly complicated. It was negative and positive ; the Saviour's bones must not be broken, and He must be pierced. That was a complicated case ; for if reverence to the Saviour would spare His bones, would it not also spare His flesh ? If a coarse brutality pierced His side, why did it not break His legs ? How can men be kept from one act of violence, and that an act authorized by authority, and yet how shall they perpetrate another violence which had not been suggested to them ? But, let the case be as complicated as it was possible for it to have been, infinite wisdom knew how to work it out in all points ; and it did so. The Christ is the substance of the foreshadowings of the Messianic prophecies.

Next, we may say of the fulfilment of these two prophecies, that it was Specially Improbable.

It did not seem at all likely that when the order was given to break the legs of the crucified, Roman soldiers would abstain from the deed. How could the body of Christ be preserved after such an order had been issued ? Those four soldiers are evidently determined to carry out the governor's orders ; they have commenced their dreadful task, and they have broken the legs of two of the executed three. The crosses were arranged so that Jesus was hanging in the midst ; He is the Second of the Three.

We naturally suppose that they would proceed in order from the first cross to the second ; but they seem to pass by the second cross, and proceed from the first to the third. What was the reason of this singular procedure ? The supposition is, and I think a very likely one, that the centre cross stood somewhat back, and that thus the two thieves formed a sort of first rank. Jesus would thus be all the more emphatically "in the midst." In any case, such was the order which they followed. The marvel is that they did not in due course proceed to deal the horrible blow in the case of our Lord. Roman soldiers are apt to fulfil their commissions very literally; and they are not often moved with much desire to avoid barbarities. Yet behold and wonder ! The order is given to break their legs ; two out of the three have suffered, and yet no soldier may crush a bone of that sacred body. They see that He is dead already, and they break not His legs.

As yet you have only seen one of the prophecies fulfilled. He must be pierced as well. And what was that which came into that Roman soldier's mind when, in a hasty moment, he resolved to make sure that the apparent death of Jesus was a real one ? Why did he open that sacred side with his lance ? He knew nothing of the prophecy. Why, then, does he fulfil the prediction of the prophet ? There was no accident or chance here. Where are there such things ? That our Lord's bones should remain unbroken, and yet that He should be pierced, seemed a very unlikely thing ; but it was carried out. When next you meet with an unlikely promise, believe it firmly. When next you see things working contrary to the truth of God, believe God, and believe nothing else.

Note again, dear friends, concerning this fulfilment of Scripture, that it was Altogether Indispensable.

But why need I say that this fulfilment was indispensable ? Beloved, the keeping of every Word of God is indispensable. It is indispensable to the truth of God that He should be true always ; for if one word of His can fall to the ground, then all may fall, and His veracity is gone. If I am to take the Bible, and say, "Some of this is true, and some of it is questionable," I am no better off than if I had no Bible. A man who is at sea with a chart which is only accurate in certain places, is not much better off than if He had no chart at all. Beloved, it is indispensable to the honor of God and to our confidence in His Word, that every line of Holy Scripture should be true. It was indispensable evidently in the case now before us, and this is only one instance of a rule which is without exception.

But now let me remind you that although the problem was complicated, and its working out was improbable, yet it was fulfilled in the most natural manner. Nothing can be less constrained than the action of the soldiers ; they have broken the legs of two, but the other is dead, and they do not break His legs ; yet, to make sure that they will be safe in omitting the blow, they pierce His side. There was no compulsion put upon them ; they did this of their own proper thought. They acted of their own free will, and yet at the same time they fulfilled the eternal counsel of God. Shall we never be able to drive into men's minds the truth that predestination and free agency are both facts ? Men sin as freely as birds fly in the air, and they are altogether responsible for their sin ; and yet everything is ordained and foreseen of God. The fore-ordination of God in no degree interferes with the responsibility of man.

* [An eminent physician has suggested that the Saviour died of a broken heart. If so, the rupture of the organ would cause blood to collect in that region, which would flow when the side was pierced.]

Dear friends, suffer one more observation upon this fulfilment of Scripture: it was marvellously complete. I see the seal of God set upon unfulfilled prophecy; for the passage in Zechariah runs thus: "They shall look upon Me whom they have pierced." Jehovah is the speaker, and He speaks of "the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem." They are to look on Jehovah whom they have pierced, and to mourn for Him. Although this prophecy is not yet fulfilled on the largest scale, yet it is so far certified; for Jesus is pierced; the rest of it, therefore, stands good, and Israel shall one day mourn because of her insulted King. The prophecy was fulfilled in part when Peter stood up and preached to the eleven, when a great company of the priests believed, and when multitudes of the seed of Abraham became preachers of Christ crucified. Still it awaits a larger fulfilment, and we may rest quite sure that the day shall come when all Israel shall be saved. As the piercing of their Lord is true, so shall the piercing of their hearts be true, and they shall mourn and inwardly bleed with bitter sorrow for Him whom they despised and abhorred.

II. But now, secondly, and briefly,

The Identification of our Lord

as the Messiah was greatly strengthened by that which befell His body after death. It was needful that He should conclusively be proved to be the Christ spoken of in the Old Testament. Certain marks and tokens are given, and those marks and tokens must be found in Him; they were so found.

The first mark was this: God's Lamb must have a measure of preservation. If Christ be what He professes to be, He is the Lamb of God. Now, God's lamb could only be dealt with in God's way. Yes, there is the lamb; kill it, sprinkle its blood, roast it with fire, but break not its bones. It is God's lamb, and not yours, therefore hitherto shalt thou come, but no further. Not a bone of it shall be broken. Roast it, divide it among yourselves, and eat it, but break no bone of it. The Lord claims it as His own, and this is His reserve. So, in effect, the Lord says concerning the Lord Jesus: "There is My Son; bind Him, scourge Him, spit on Him, crucify Him; but He is the Lamb of My Passover, and you must not break a bone of Him." The Lord's right to Him is declared by the reservation which is made concerning His bones. Do you not see here how He is identified as being "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world"?

But I have not finished this identification; for observe, that when that side was pierced, "forthwith came there out blood and water." You that have your Bibles will have opened them already at Zechariah 12. Will you kindly read on till you come to the first verse of the thirteenth chapter, which ought not to have been divided from the twelfth chapter? What do you find there? "In that day there shall be to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness." They pierced Him, and in that day they began to mourn for Him; but more, in that day there was a fountain opened. And what was that fountain but this gush of water and of blood from the riven side of our redeeming Lord? The prophecies follow quickly upon one another; they relate to the same person, and to the same day; and we are pleased to see that the facts also follow quickly upon one another; for when the soldier with the spear pierced the side of Jesus, "forthwith came there out blood and water." Jehovah was pierced, and men repented, and beheld the cleansing fountain within a brief space.

A Fountain Opened

In Jesus we see one who has come to atone and to sanctify. He is that High Priest who cleanses the leprosy of sin by blood and water. This is one part of the sure identification of the great Purifier of God's people, that He came both by water and by blood, and poured out both from His pierced side. I leave these identifications to you. They are striking to my own mind, but they are only part of the wonderful system of marks and tokens by which it is seen that God attests the man Christ Jesus as being in very deed the true Messiah.

III. I must close by noticing, thirdly, the instruction intended for us in all these things. The first instruction intended for us must be only hinted at. See what Christ is to us.

He is the Paschal Lamb, not a bone of which was broken. You believe it. Come, then, and act upon your belief by feeding upon Christ; keep the feast in your own souls this day. That sprinkled blood of His has brought you safety; the Destroying Angel cannot touch you or your house. The Lamb Himself has become your food; feed on Him; remove your spiritual hunger by receiving Jesus into your heart. This is the food whereof if a man eat he shall live forever.

What next do we learn from this lesson but this? See man's treatment of Christ. They have spit upon Him, they have cried, "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" they have nailed Him to the cross, they have mocked His agonies, and He is dead; but man's malice is not glutted yet. The last act of man to Christ must be to pierce Him through. That cruel wound was the concentration of man's ill-treatment of Jesus. His experience at the hands of our race is summed up in the fact that they pierced Him to the heart. That is what men have done to Christ; they have so despised and rejected Him that He dies, pierced to the heart. Oh, the depravity of our nature! Some doubt whether it is total depravity. It deserves a worse adjective than that. Now, learn, in the next place,

What Jesus Did for Men.

Beloved, that was a sweet expression in our hymn just now—

> "Even after death His heart
> For us its tribute poured."

In His life He had bled for us; drop by drop the bloody sweat had fallen to the ground. Then the cruel scourges drew from Him purple streams; but as a little store of life-blood was left near His heart, He poured it all out before He went His way. It is a materialistic expression, but there is something more in it than mere sentiment—that there remains among the substance of this globe a sacred relic of the Lord Jesus in the form of that blood and water. As no atom of matter ever perishes, that matter remains on earth even now. His body has gone into glory, but the blood and water are left behind. I see much more in this fact than I will now attempt to tell.

But I must hurry on. I can see in this passage also the safety of the saints. It is marvellous how full of eyes the things of Jesus are; for His unbroken bones look backward to the Paschal lamb, but they also look forward throughout all the history of the church to that day when He shall gather all His saints in one body, and none shall be missing. Not a bone of His mystical body shall be broken. There is a text in the Psalms which saith of the righteous man—and all righteous men are conformed unto the image of Christ—"He keepeth all his bones; not one of them is broken." I do rejoice in the safety of Christ's elect; He shall not permit a bone of His redeemed body to be broken. A perfect Christ there shall be in the day of His appearing, when all the members of His body shall be joined to their glorious Head, who shall be crowned forever. Not one living member of Christ shall be absent; "Not a bone of Him shall be broken." There shall be no lame, maimed Christ, no half-wrought redemption; but the purpose that He came to accomplish shall be perfectly achieved to the glory of His name.

I have not quite done, for I must add another lesson. We see here the salvation of sinners. Jesus Christ's side is pierced to give to sinners the double cure of sin, the taking away of its guilt and power; but, better than this, sinners are to have their hearts broken by a sight of the Crucified. By this means also they are to obtain faith. Oh, blessed lesson! Put it into practice this morning. Oh, that in this great house many may now have done with self and look to the crucified Saviour, and find life eternal in Him! For this is the main end of John's writing this record, and this is the chief design of our preaching upon it; we long that you may believe. Come, ye guilty, come and trust the Son of God who died for you. Come, ye foul and polluted, come and wash in this sacred stream poured out for you. There is life in a look at the Crucified One. There is life at this moment for every one of you who will look to Him. God grant you may look and live, for Jesus Christ's sake! Amen.

[The prayers of the readers of this Journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its Editors, and those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of many sinners and the quickening of God's people. Dr. Talmage and Mr. Spurgeon especially request prayer every Sunday morning on behalf of their labors.]

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

A BEREAVED NOBLEMAN'S QUEST.*

Some years ago I had a call at my house in Ireland by a young nobleman with whom I was at that time intimate, and who has since risen to eminence as a statesman (I mean Lord Dufferin), who introduced me to his friend, Lord Ashburton. The nobleman introduced took me aside and said, "You know that I have lately lost my dear wife, who was a great friend of Mr. Carlyle's, and I have applied to Mr. Carlyle to tell me what I should do to have peace and make me what I should be. On my making this request he simply bade me read Goethe's 'Wilhelm Meister.' I did so, and did not find anything there fitted to improve me. I went back to Mr. Carlyle, asking him what precise lesson he meant me to gather from the book, and he said, 'Read "Wilhelm Meister" a second time.' I have done so earnestly, but I confess I am utterly unable to find anything there to meet my anxiety, and I wish you, if you can, to explain what Mr. Carlyle could mean." I told him that I was not the man to explain Carlyle's meaning, if indeed he had any definite meaning. I told him plainly that neither Goethe nor Carlyle, though men of eminent literary genius, could supply the balm which his spirit needed; and I remarked that Goethe's work contained not a little that was sensual. I did my best to point to a better way and to the deliverance promised and secured in the Gospel. I do not know the issue, but I had an eager listener. Carlyle wished to persuade his mother, a woman of simple but devoted piety, that his advanced faith was the same as that which she held firmly, and so much to her comfort, only in a somewhat different form. But in fact the mother's faith was crushed in the form in which the son put it, when it became a skeleton, as different from the life which sustained her as the bones in our museums are from the living animal.

I am afraid that there is a growing number of people who, while they believe in the existence and goodness of God, do not see Him as they ought in the arrangements which He has made for the good of His creatures. This is one of the ways in which religion is losing its hold on the minds of thinking young men who have been trained by science to discover causation and law in every part of nature. I fear there is not the same belief in Providence as our forefathers held and cherished. In the theosophies of the East a divine power was seen and acknowledged in all the activity perceived in the universe; I have to add, however, without God being separated from His works. There is a temptation fostered by the scientific spirit of the age, which believes in law and believes in development. Those who

---

* From Realistic Philosophy: Expository, Historical, and Critical, by James McCosh, D.D., LL.D., etc., President of Princeton College. This is by far the best book produced in our time to antidote the prevalent scepticism and infidelity which are poisoning the minds of our young men. It is impossible to read a dozen pages without rejoicing in the thought that one of the most profound thinkers of modern times is meeting the sceptical philosophers and vanquishing them with their own weapons. Every honest doubter ought to read this book. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 745 Broadway, New York.

The Late Bishop Alfred Lee of Delaware.
(Copyright, 1887, by Harper & Brothers.)

A Morning Walk at Pakhoi, China.

yield to this prevalent feeling lose many of the valuable lessons which God is teaching, if men would but observe His ways. After science has done its utmost there will remain a vast and immeasurable domain in which, as God's will is not intimated, we may humbly make known our will, adding always, "Notwithstanding, not my will but Thine be done." Dr. Tyndall treats us to a long account of religious men who have opposed science and been defeated. But I could give a far longer list of men who have set themselves to oppose Providence and prayer, only to find that, as Beza said, "God's Word is an anvil that has worn out many a hammer."

MARSHAL B. BOOTH, IN NEW YORK.

Last Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth having arrived during the week from England were present for the first time at a crowded public meeting in New York, at the Salvation Army headquarters. Mr. B. Booth has taken out naturalization papers to become an American citizen, and expects, we understand, to reside permanently as head of the Army, in the United States. He gave a good evangelical address at the meeting, as did also Mrs. B. Booth, who is an excellent speaker. Their position as future leaders of an organization, which already numbers three hundred mission stations in the United States, and will probably have two thousand before long, is a very responsible one.

The first time we met Mr. Booth was eleven years ago, when at Bristol, England, where he was finishing his academical studies, and his father, the General, had then only about a dozen mission stations in England, called the Christian Mission. Its name was changed to Salvation Army in 1878, and since then it has increased, so that now it numbers somewhere about fifteen hundred stations in Britain, America, and Australia, and the value of its property in buildings and land is estimated to be between half a million and a million dollars, while the profits from the enormous circulation of its weekly publications and hymn-books, etc., cannot be less in Britain and America and Australia—altogether, than two thousand dollars every week. At its present rapid rate of progress, all this may be doubled or trebled in four or five years' time.

Success, however unparalleled, does not exempt public persons, who are public property, from having their actions or writings criticised from time to time, and Mr. Booth will find in this country that opinions are freely expressed, and it is wisdom not to be needlessly offended at them.

It is earnestly to be hoped that those who have been blessed with such marvellous prosperity will regard with toleration and as much freedom from sectarian exclusiveness as practicable, smaller organizations that are engaged in the same line of Christian enterprise. In America all persons are supposed to have equal rights, and if a hundred religious armies choose to carry on evangelistic operations, they will have equal liberty to do so. The multiplying of such operations on every side is one of the signs which the prophecies lead us to expect during the next ten years before the final anti-Christian persecution and tribulation of 3½ years commences in 1897.

BISHOP LEE, OF DELAWARE.

(See Portrait.)

The venerable bishop whose portrait appears on this page, who died at Wilmington, Del., on April 12th, was born at Cambridge, Mass., on September 9th, 1807, and was, therefore, in his eightieth year when he died. His father was John Lee, a sea captain in the British navy, who, when a midshipman had Lord Nelson for a messmate. His mother was the daughter of Mary Pitt, a cousin of William Pitt, the famous statesman. Alfred Lee graduated at Harvard College at the age of twenty, studied law, and for several years practised with brilliant success at the bar at Norwich, Conn. In 1833 having been converted he relinquished his prospects of legal honor and emolument to enter the service of Christ. He studied at the General Theological Seminary in this city, and, graduating, was ordained a deacon in 1837, and a priest in the following year. For three years he was rector of the parish of Rockdale, Delaware County, Penn., and at the end of that time, at the age of thirty-four years, was unanimously elected first bishop of Delaware—an office which he continued to hold during life. He also voluntarily took charge of the parish of St. Andrews, Wilmington, Del.

Bishop Lee's literary works are: "The Life of St. Peter," published in New York in 1852 and in London in 1853; "The Life of St. John" was published in 1854, and "Treatise on Baptism" in the same year. In 1856 he had published a "Memoir of Susan Allibone." In the following year he sent to the press the "Harbinger of Christ." Last year Messrs. Harper & Brothers brought out his most recent work, "Eventful Nights in Bible History."

A MORNING WALK AT PAKHOI.

(See Illustration.)

Probably few who say farewell to missionaries going out to labor for Christ in distant lands, realize how thorough is the change which takes place in their lives. All the conveniences of life to which they are accustomed must be relinquished, and strange customs and modes of life must be adopted. Mr. Hudson Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, urges all who go out under its auspices to conform even in dress to the Chinese fashions and to identify themselves with the people. The accompanying illustration shows one custom, which must be very novel to a mother who has been accustomed to give her child an airing in a baby-carriage.

A missionary's wife recently related that it caused her some trepidation when she first intrusted her child to a palanquin borne by natives. The little one, also, was nervous, and not until the mother encouraged her by holding her hand was she satisfied to make the journey by so novel a method. Nor was the walk altogether an agreeable one to the mother. She chose the way by the sea-shore, being unaware of a horrible spectacle that she would have to pass. The Chinese authorities had succeeded but a short time before in capturing some pirates who were the terror of the waters around Pakhoi. The prisoners had been decapitated and their heads suspended on the beach as a warning to other evil-doers. The ghastly sight horrified the gentle lady, and made that beach a place to be avoided for the future.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Two hundred persons are believed to have been converted at one station recently. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE LOST CHILD.

(See Illustration on page 269.)

A long morning's sketching was the programme Charles Meredith had settled for himself when he set out from the quiet boarding-house where he was spending his brief holiday. It was many a year since he had taken pencil in hand—not since he was a boy at school, when his drawings were the admiration of his school-fellows and won the praise of the master. Then it had been his highest hope to become a great artist, but his father put him in a business house, and, somehow, Charles had come to regard drawing as an amusement unsuited to a business man. But sickness had come, and a holiday in some quiet, healthy country-place was pronounced a necessity; and so Charles found himself away from his regular haunts with nothing to do but to rest and get well. Doing nothing was a very wearisome way of spending the time to a young fellow who had led so busy a life as he; and so, seeing in the course of one of his walks a pretty bit of scenery, where rock and water and foliage were combined in picturesque shape, he procured some crayons and drawing paper, and determined to ascertain whether his hand retained its cunning.

The Artist Interrupted by a Lost Child.

A survey of the spot was made and Charles settled himself on a big rock in the placid stream at the foot of which a large stone formed a convenient footstool. The day was warm, so, taking off his coat he used it as a cushion, and then he settled himself to work. It might have been but yesterday that he took his last drawing lesson, and no such thing as a ledger existed, if one might judge by the interest he took in his task. The weariness of the past few days vanished as the drawing proceeded, and his spirits rose. So absorbed was he in his sketch, and so intense was the stillness, that he was quite startled when a long-drawn sob fell upon his ear. He could see no one, but he was sure he was not mistaken in thinking it was a sob that he heard. He looked all around but no living creature was in sight. In a few moments, however, some bushes opposite to him parted, and a little child's face, full of trouble, peered out at him.

"Ha! who are you?" he called out, as the little creature halted, looking inquiringly at him. "Look out, or you'll fall in the water. What's the matter?"

"Please, I'se lost," said the baby voice, simply.

"I should think so, and a pretty bad place to be lost in, wonder you have not been drowned. Where do you live, little one?"

"Over there," said the child, pointing vaguely upward. "I wants my mamma."

"Yes, and I expect your mamma wants you. Well, I suppose I must come and help you. Stay where you are till I come," he said, as the little creature came to the water's edge, and wiped her tearful eyes with her sleeve. Meredith rose, resumed his coat, and stepping over the stones to the child's side, took the little hand in his and began the ascent out of the hollow.

There was but one village within the child's walking distance of the spot, so the young man felt pretty sure of the direction in which she must have come. No information could be gained from her, save that her name was "baby," and her mother's name was "mamma," which certainly was not definite. But the village being small, and the mother of a lost child being sure to make her loss known, it would not be difficult, Meredith thought, to find the little one's home.

There was no need, however, to make a search. As he approached the village he saw a little group of people to whom he decided to take the child, to see if any one knew her. Before he reached them, one woman sprang from among the others, and with a cry of joy ran toward him, and snatching up the child covered it with kisses. The little wanderer nestled to the woman's shoulder, and Meredith had no need to be told that she had found her mother.

"She's a naughty little girl to have gone off like that after I'd bid her stay in the garden," said the mother, when she had heard where the child had been found. "I suppose I ought to whip her to make her remember it."

"Yes, that you had," said a neighbor, "she'll be doing it again if you don't."

"I haven't the heart to do it," said the mother. "You ain't got no child, or you'd know."

Meredith remembered the mother's look of tender affection some months afterward when, under the Holy Spirit's influence, he was brought to see that, like the child he was a wanderer who had gone astray. "I will arise and go to my father," he said, in the words of the prodigal, and as he uttered them that village scene recurred to his memory, and his heart was thrilled by the thought that God for Christ's sake would receive him with gladness and forgive all his waywardness.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 255.)

A Treacherous Guide.

When Jacob Benson, the gamekeeper, quitted the Chequers on the night that Tim Crouch had the unexpected meeting with Alfred Atheling, he left all his acquaintances still sitting over their mugs of ale. He knew his duty too well to be anywhere but in the woods after sunset, and he meant to make a round of the best game covers between sunset and dark. Accordingly he bade his friends good-night, and sallied forth in a much more sober condition than was Tim Crouch when Alfred saw him some hours later. Chivey Stevenson, the poacher, being at the Chequers was a fact which the gamekeeper recognized as an intimation to him that he would do well to be on the alert. As he well knew, Chivey would have been delighted to have him drink enough to make him sleepy, so that there would be less risk in making a raid on SirGodwin's covers. The gamekeeper, therefore, drank but little, and was quite ready for work when he left the inn.

He went to his cottage in the wood to get his gun before making his round, and there he received a message from Sir Godwin requesting him to go to the Hall. Jacob was surprised and a little annoyed, but he obeyed with the promptitude which his long service in the army had made a habit with him. From Sir Godwin he learned for the first time of Miss Ethel's intended expedition to Spain, to ransom her brother and bring him home.

"I wish I could go myself," said the baronet, sadly, "but that is impossible now. She must not go alone, and that is why I have sent for you, Jacob. There is no one with whom I should feel so safe in trusting my daughter as with you. You are a brave man, and I believe you are much attached to her. It is a great trust, Jacob, and I shall reward your fidelity. I want you to go with her and bring her back safely. Promise me, Jacob, that you will take care of her. It would kill me if any evil befell her."

"Sir Godwin," said Benson, solemnly, "I am proud to hear what you say. I have served you faithfully for nigh upon twenty year, and you know me. I'll be true to you and to her, and no harm shall come to her if Jacob Benson can prevent it. I'll lay down my life to save hers if need be. I've took it in my hand many a time when I've gone into battle under the great duke first and under Don Carlos since then, and I won't grudge it now. No man molests Miss Ethel while Jacob Benson's got the use of his limbs. There ain't no need o' oaths, but you've knowed me afore to-day, Sir Godwin, and what I say I means to stick to. Put your mind at rest. Miss Ethel'll be as safe as if you was with her yourself," and he added, mentally, "a precious deal safer, for you're a poor critter now. Ain't able to look after yourself, much more your daughter."

"Thank you, Jacob; I can trust you, and I will. Now come here to-morrow morning early and see Miss Ethel, and she will tell you all about her plans."

Jacob went away exultant, proud of the trust reposed in him, and burning to distinguish himself in his young mistress' service. Sir Godwin had acted wisely in taking Simon Holmes's advice in this matter, for, besides being wary and courageous, Jacob Benson had some knowledge of the country, the people, and the language, picked up during his service under Don Carlos.

Little time was needed for preparation, and Ethel, having arranged with her father's bankers for the financial part of the business, and received introduction to their agents in Paris and Madrid, who would supply her with funds as she might need, set out on her perilous expedition, with Jacob in attendance.

Her first destination was Paris, where Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft, relatives of her dear dead mother, resided, and with whom she proposed to take counsel. She found them at the Hotel Bruxelles, where they were staying during the renovation of their permanent residence. They heard with amazement the object of Ethel's journey, and begged her to allow them to find a messenger and not to adventure herself among the perils which had proved so disastrous to her brother. Ethel, however, was not to be moved. Believing that she was called of God to this mission, and that it would result, if she proceeded with it, in Harold's restoration spiritual as well as physical, she gently but firmly refused to abandon her journey.

Finding that Ethel was not to be deterred by argument or warning, Mr. Bancroft bestirred himself energetically to facilitate her. He was acquainted, he said, with a Spanish gentleman then visiting Paris from whom he could doubtless obtain information about the locality Ethel intended to visit, about the routes, hotels, and other matters.

The next day Mr. Bancroft brought his Spanish friend to the hotel and introduced him to Ethel as Don Antonio de Diaz. Unhappily Harold had omitted in his letters home to explain how he had fallen into the hands of the brigands, and consequently had said nothing about the fascinating Antonio de Diaz, whom he now knew as the dreaded Pedro. Ethel, therefore, had no reason to suspect that he was other than the honest, high-bred, courteous Spanish gentleman that he seemed. She accordingly entered fully into the business which had brought her from England, and said that she should be grateful for any information which would help her to carry it to a successful issue. The Don listened attentively and with courteous deference to her story, and at its conclusion he said: "I feel that this is an occasion when a knight of Spain, whose name and the fame of whose family has been connected with all that is noblest and best in Spanish chivalry, may offer his services and feel that his sword is drawn against cruel wrong—for right and justice, and in defence of virtue and beauty."

Ethel did not particularly admire the taste which prompted the latter part of the "chivalrous proclamation," but she thought it might be excused on the ground that perhaps it was the grandiose way the countrymen of Don Quixote adopted in talking to ladies.

"Red Pedro," continued the Spaniard, "I have heard of before; he is a cruel and most determined bandit; but, like his master, he is doubtless not so black as he's painted. It is more than possible—I should say it is highly probable, that he will take a much less ransom for your brother, if you can only succeed in getting an interview with himself. That, of course, you cannot do if you go alone."

"That is what I have urged on Miss Spofforth," Mr. Bancroft said. "She ought not to go alone. It is not an enterprise for a lady to undertake. Her father is sick, however, and my official duties will not admit of my accompanying her, and she has no other relative save Harold, who is already in the trap. So as she is minded to go on, there is no alternative but for her to go alone, though in my opinion it is maniacal, and will end in disaster. Ethel, do give up the absurd project. You see Don Antonio thinks that some one else, who can interview this cut-throat desperado, ought to go."

"But there is no one else to go," said Ethel, piteously; "I must go. I could not let Harold die without making the effort."

Don Antonio seemed to cogitate for a few minutes, and then, with the chivalrous air that sat so well upon him, he said, "It is not in my nature to see a lady so charming as Miss Spofforth in a difficulty without rendering her any assistance that may be in my power. I have nothing to do here but kill time as pleasantly as possible, and if Miss Spofforth will accept my escort, I shall feel proud to place myself at her disposal. It will be no sacrifice," he said, as he saw that Ethel was about to protest; "I ought to go to that very neighborhood. The estates of my family are there, and I have neglected my duty in not visiting them for a long time. I do not like the locality, and have therefore put off going; but now, with such charming company and with the additional gratification of rendering a service to a lady, the duty will become a pleasure."

It seemed churlish and ungrateful to reject an offer which certainly appeared to solve a very serious difficulty, and Ethel's reluctance to accept it was overcome by Mr. Bancroft's persuasion. It was, therefore, settled to the satisfaction of all that Don Antonio de Diaz should escort Ethel to the neighborhood of Harold's captivity.

One person alone had misgivings, and that was Jacob Benson. The gamekeeper from the first took a dislike to the handsome Spaniard, whose diamond rings flashed so brightly, whose perfect teeth gleamed so whitely, and whose mustache was twisted so daintily by the hand that wore the rings.

Blunt, straightforward, shrewd, and observant Jacob distrusted the Don, and watching him keenly, had noticed sinister expressions of feature which confirmed his dislike and suspicion. De Diaz on his part disliked the gamekeeper, and felt uncomfortable under the penetrating gaze Jacob fixed upon him. He suggested that Jacob might well be left in Paris. His brusque and unpolished manners, and the peculiar difficulty of dealing with the sensitive peasantry of the district, especially such as might be in league with Red Pedro, made it very undesirable that he should hamper his mistress by his possible imprudence. Nothing, however, could induce the prudent Ethel to leave the gamekeeper behind; and by a happy accident, as some would term it, the Don was not aware that Jacob had any personal knowedge either of Spanish or of Spain. Little did Ethel know at this moment how God was protecting her from terrible peril, though she made that protection a subject of her daily and nightly prayers.

It cannot be questioned that Don Antonio was of service to Ethel in keeping her from travelling in wrong directions, in furnishing means of conveyance, and in performing the thousand little acts which saved her journey from being a time of harassment and annoyance, and from all loss of time and mistake of place.

One beautifully mild, clear evening, when the exquisite tints of foliage in the forest were rendered richer by the rays of the setting sun, our little party arrived at the romantic mountain village which had been named by Harold as the nearest one to the scene of his captivity. Very tired and very weary, Ethel yielded to the Don's entreaty, in which he was seconded by Jacob Benson, that she should rest a few days to recruit her strength for the final ordeal that awaited her. She would gladly have been content to abide by the letter of the brigand's conditions, and have paid the money at the place agreed upon; but Don Antonio most strenuously advised her to see the chief himself, and so possibly save the greater portion of her fortune, as he felt convinced that he could not withstand her personal appeal. He submitted to her a plan of action, and announced his intention of seeing the robber chief himself as Ethel's plenipotentiary, and bringing word again as to whether the terrible brigand leader would grant her a hearing.

"I shall be back in the course of three days," said he. "But if," he continued, in soft and tender tones, "I should happen to fall into the hands of these freebooters, I shall have the consolation of knowing that I have imperilled myself in the effort to bring happiness to the fairest and most charming of her sex."

Then with a low bow and a courtly handshake that had in them the very essence of devotion, he bade her a brief farewell. Ethel was a good deal disconcerted by this speech. His reference to his own possible peril distressed her, and his flattery was repugnant to her, as flattery always is to the well-regulated mind. Still he had hitherto behaved with courtesy, and the services he had rendered her were very great. Had the fair girl only known that this smooth-tongued Mephistopheles was craftily arranging a plot for placing her at the cruel mercy of his cupidity and lust, she would have bidden the stalwart Jacob carry her back that moment into the beaten paths of civilization, and save her from the fatal storm that was impending. God, however, in whom this frail child of His confidently trusted, would not overlook either her peril or her need.

The village of Montana is now assuming the dimensions of a town. It is situated close upon the borders of the "forest primeval," and being surrounded by picturesque mountain scenery, with a charming admixture of lake and waterfall, and being favored with certain medicinal springs of growing repute, it is becoming a popular resort. At the time of Ethel's visit, however, it was only a small scattered hamlet with a small handful of rude peasantry, most of whom were more or less the secret allies of Red Pedro and his gang, who combined the profession of smugglers with their other nefarious trade.

Now, it so happened that Jacob Benson found himself in a district with which he had become familiar in former times, when his lot was cast there by the fortunes of war. When he served under the Carlist flag, he had encamped within a mile or so of this very spot. He remembered an imposing waterfall, which he and two English comrades had gone to see. Descending from the brink of an elevated ledge of rock, it dashed down to a tremendous depth, sheer down in a broad sheet, into a boiling caldron, that forever hissed and seethed and tumbled in the deep gorge below. The scene had made a lasting impression on his mind, and in conversation with his young mistress concerning his Spanish experiences and his knowledge of that locality, Jacob referred to what was called in local parlance, "The Devil's Caldron." As it was less than an hour's easy walk from the village inn, and Ethel felt a desire to walk, she suggested that he should take her to see the sight. The keeper of the auberge courteously offered his mule for the lady to ride upon, but Ethel felt that the clear mountain air would brace her, and she preferred to take the short journey on foot.

The sight was full repayment for her journey. Ethel stood rapt and spellbound, gazing on the silver breast of the cataract as it plunged roaring and foaming into the pool below, the waters of which, from brink to brink, were churned into a self-lashed lake of creamy white. They had just turned away from the spot after taking one lingering, admiring look, when they were suddenly confronted with a solitary bandit, of fierce demeanor and well armed. His pistol was in his hand, and the usual dagger gleamed in the girdle round his waist.

Surely nothing was less to be expected by a couple of innocent sightseers in that secluded place than an armed brigand, but so it was, and it is needless to say that for a moment or two both Ethel and her henchman Jacob stood bewildered. In terms that were far more vigorous than polite the robber demanded their purses, and no doubt he expected that "Señor and Señora Inglese" would obey the call in trepidation. That, however, was not Jacob Benson's way of meeting the demand. The old soldier would have been ashamed for the remainder of his life if he had yielded to the impudent demand without a struggle.

In one moment the pistol so suddenly presented was as suddenly sent flying into mid-air by an upward stroke of the gamekeeper's staff. In another second the astonished and over-bold robber was laid flat on his back, with Jacob Benson kneeling on his breast. Quick as thought the hand of the bravo sought his familiar dagger, and had he succeeded in getting it into his grasp, it might have gone hard with the gamekeeper. But it was not by any means the first time that Jacob had needed to beware of a Spaniard's knife. He had already seized it himself, and now held it aloft in striking attitude just above the eyes of the foiled and defeated robber. Jacob's weight was heavy, and his knee was so deftly placed that under its pressure the man was compelled to cry for mercy. The gamekeeper lightened the pressure of his knee, but did not relax his grip upon the scoundrel By his directions Ethel unwound the colored scarf that had held the dagger, and then wound it around the Spaniard's feet, tightly tying it, so that he could barely move. She was sorely frightened, and with an added strength born of a sense of desperation and of excited nerves, she pulled and twisted the silken manacle, so that Jacob himself could scarecly have bound him in stronger bonds. The gamekeeper then proceeded to fasten a stout cord—what prudent gamekeeper at home or abroad was ever without a supply of that essential article in the pockets of his velveteens?—around the wrist of his captive, and the man was a prisoner.

(To be continued.)

THE CHILD MOSES.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for May 8, Ex. 2 : 1-10. Golden Text, Ps. 121 : 5.

A Political and Social Problem—The Attitude of the World Toward the Church—How Treasure Cities May be Built—The Persecution Commenced—Prospering Under It—Signs of Approaching Deliverance—Faith Eliminating Fear—The Deliverance—The Mother's Training—Not Neutralized at Court—His Choice Made.

AFTER the death of Joseph the children of Israel continued to be fruitful, "and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them." It now became a serious question in Egyptian politics what should be done with this large foreign population. "A new king"—really a new dynasty or race of kings—arose, "which knew not Joseph." And now began a persecution of God's people. This new king, Pharaoh, called his people together and took counsel with them thus: "Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we: come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land." Very prudent policy, looking at it after the manner of men; but

God was Left Out of the Question,

and the children of Israel were His people, whom He had pledged Himself to bless. The Egyptians saw well that it was to their interest to keep the children of Israel, but they wanted to make use of them, to keep them in a servile position, in which they might serve their purpose, further their interest, and not prove dangerous to the safety of the country. The world has no objection to a few Christian people so long as they do not show their colors, so long as they are too weak to manifest themselves, and while they do not render other people uneasy. Christians—i.e., real ones, can be depended upon to keep their word, to be faithful to all trust reposed in them, and, besides, it is respectable to have to do with them. But they must not be too strong, they must be kept under restrictions, they must never be allowed to be a power in the house, in the city, in the nation, or even in the church! So feel those who know not God.

"Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses." Oh, how often believers strengthen worldlings in their worldliness by countenancing the life they are living and ministering to its vanity and frivolity! While we are taught not to condemn the world, yet let us not be found building it treasure cities by spending our time in vanity, by idle words, frivolous conversation, by feeling it necessary to read the literature of the day lest we should appear ignorant, by yielding to the worldly atmosphere of those who know not God. Let us, without condemning, quietly withdraw from all which we cannot do in the name of the Lord Jesus.

The persecution of the children of Israel did not effect its purpose; instead of diminishing, the people continually grew more numerous. The Egyptians did not know the constant and blessed connection of God with His people. "The Lord shall judge His people" (Deut. 32 : 36), "The Lord hath loved His people" (II Chron. 2 : 11), "He will speak peace to His people" (Ps. 85 : 8), He "will not cast off His people" (Ps. 94 : 14), He "pleadeth the cause of His people" (Isa. 51 : 22).

Persecution has Never Been Really a Curse to the people of God. It is in times of persecution that faith, love, and joy most prosper, and that God is most known. "The Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigor: and they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigor." When we are conscious of the bondage of a service which is not of God, the time of our deliverance may be at hand. Is it some secret sin, some unsuspected evil which clings to us? Is it some bondage to the opinion of men which enslaves us and holds us in its grip, so that we cannot or dare not know our own mind? Is it some weight of circumstances which oppresses? As soon as the weight of the enemy's hand is felt, deliverance is near for those who turn to God.

Pharaoh carried his oppression of the people to such a length that he actually attempted to enforce infanticide on the part of the midwives, that they should destroy the life of every male child whom the Israelitish women bore! This was the moment for God to arise to the rescue, and by the hand of one of those very children, impiously doomed to die by the hand of the oppressor, God determined to work deliverance. In the priestly tribe of Levi a child was born who was not the first-born of the family, but by some means or other his mother, Jochebed, as well as his father, Amram, perceived that he was a goodly child ("fair to God," Acts 7 : 20, margin); and "by faith"—i.e., counting on God's care in preserving him, they hid him three months, and "were not afraid of the king's commandment" (Heb. 11 : 23). Real faith cannot coexist with fear;

Where Faith Begins, Fear Ends.

But the time came when the voice of the young Moses too plainly declared his whereabouts for his mother to be able to hide him longer. Had God, then, really failed her? No; He was about to manifest His truth. Directed, without doubt, by God, she made a little water-tight vessel—half boat, half cradle—and laid the infant within, and placed it, with its precious burden, just where the papyrus rushes grew at the river's brink. A rise in the river might float the little ark away, but Miriam, the future prophetess, Moses' sister, was set to watch.

God had prepared a wonderful deliverance. He had made use of a former king of Egypt to raise Joseph to his place of eminence and to provide for all the descendants of Abraham in the time of famine; now He would make the daughter of that very Pharaoh who persecuted the children of Israel to be His instrument in saving and cherishing the child whom He destined to be their future deliverer.

Pharaoh's Daughter

did not inherit her father's cruelty; she was a kind-hearted woman, and when she heard the cry of the infant Moses by the river side, whither she had come with her maidens to bathe, all the instinctive motherhood which is natural to almost every woman's heart awoke within her, and she sent her maid to fetch the ark of bulrushes. It was opened, and the babe wept. This was enough for this royal woman; she said, "This is one of the Hebrews' children." Miriam was at hand, and stepped forward. She had wit enough to refrain from disclosing her relationship to the child, and offered to find a wet nurse for him. What an opportunity! Surely when Miriam came to her mother with the wondrous tidings that she was called by the king's daughter—i.e., by royal authority, to nurse the child who had been condemned by royal writ to die, her heart must have overflowed with praise and gratitude to God, and she must have seen how fully justified she had been in "not fearing the king's commandment"! No longer with trembling steps, but strong in the God who had heard and answered prayer, Jochebed took her child and nursed him, not, although ostensibly so, for Pharaoh's daughter, but for the God who had preserved him. Thus the mother gained the opportunity to train her boy in his early years in the knowledge and fear of God, before he was in a position to become contaminated by constant intercourse with worldly heathen.

But how give him up to Pharaoh's daughter, after all her faithful care and training? God had undertaken the charge of Moses, and the same faith in his mother which prevented her "fearing the king's commandment" counted on God to preserve him from the king's influence and to keep him true to God. In his education in the Egyptian court the most erroneous ideas and the most hurtful principles would naturally be instilled into his mind, but to be a shield to him. What a lesson to anxious mothers who, instead of joyously trusting their boys to God when they go to school and out into the world, are filled with anxiety, which irritates the boys and worries them, and at the same time hinders God from doing the very thing He has promised to do for them that believe! His promises regarding our children are not made to prayer, to effort, to worry, to anxiety, but always to faith.

She Would Trust God

The education of Moses was carried on in the most approved fashion of the day; his position as the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter demanded it, the natural talents of the lad justified it, and therefore "Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds" (Acts 7 : 22). He gave promise to be as great a power in his day as the patriarch Joseph had been in his. But the early lessons of his childhood could not be forgotten, fostered, as no doubt they were, by repeated remindings from his parents, whom he would probably frequently visit, and it was not to be wondered at that "it came into his heart to visit his brethren, the children of Israel." Already he was conscious of an inward call to be their deliverer; "he went out and looked on their burdens," and indignation, with a burning consciousness that God willed their deliverance, stirred within him.

He Made His Choice;

he well knew that to take up the cause of Israel was to forfeit his position and prospects in Egypt; he counted the cost, "and refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." From henceforth he was devoted to the cause of Israel, and very soon an opportunity occurred in which he showed his colors and precipitated his apparent downfall.

The Prophetic News and Israel's Watchman (London), edited by the Rev. M. Baxter, may be had from the office of this journal, 63 Bible House, New York, price, six cents, including postage. Annual subscription, seventy cents. The following articles among others are contained in the number for April:

The Rev. M. Baxter's Prophetic Tour—Prophesying War. The Second Advent: Fourteen Years Until the End of the Age.

Prophetic Notes: The Number 666 in General Boulanger's Name.

Gathering Clouds in Sight.

The Apostolic Church was Pre-Millenarian. By Professor T. Duffield.

The Coming Antichrist. By Rev. W. Haslam, M.A.

The Delay of the Second Advent: Its Causes and Practical Lessons. By Rev. W. Dalton, M.A.

Causes of Antediluvian Corruption now in Operation. By Mr. Pember, M.A.

Passing Events Viewed from a Prophetic Standpoint.

[Bound volumes containing the monthly numbers for 1884 or 1883 may be had, price, $1.]

LIVING FOR JESUS.

Living for Jesus day by day,
Following just as He leads the way,
Never a choice in great or small,
Doing His will, and that is all.

Living for Jesus! All the while Hiding the tear with song and smile;
The world could not feel if it knew the smart,
And Jesus will comfort the sorrowing heart.

Living for Jesus everywhere!
Dropping a seed both here and there;
No care for the fruit that will surely come,
For the Master will gather the harvest home.

Living for Jesus in pleasure or pain,
Joy or sorrow, sunshine or rain!
Culling rare flowers from the bitter and sweet,
Learning great lessons the while at His feet.

Living for Jesus! Just little things
In our daily life may take the wings
Of messengers, swift and strong and brave,
And —God only knows— a soul may save.

Living for Jesus! Living, not dead,
Drawing rich life from the Fountain-head!
Quietly watering, though unseen,
Many a life from the Living Stream.

Living in Jesus! Abiding in Him,
His life, peace and rest, atonement for sin—
All mine in their fullness and richness, replete
With the joys of the Spirit—the Comforter sweet.

Such may life be, Oh glorious Son!
Mystical union here below—
One with the Father, the Spirit and Thee, Living through time and eternity.

—Selected.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

As the subscription department of the CHRISTIAN HERALD is entirely separate from the advertising department, all persons remitting for their subscriptions or ordering the address of their papers changed are requested to direct such letters to The Manager, 63 Bible House, New York, and all orders for advertising or books, or inquiries about books, should be addressed to J. E. Jewett, 77 Bible House, New York. If you want any books, it makes no difference where you see them advertised, or by whom or where they are published or sold, send your orders to me and I will attend to them promptly. In sending money for books, please send post-office orders (costing only five cents) or register your letters, by which you will insure their safe delivery to me, and I guarantee all books to reach you safely. In that way any one can send for books without any fear of loss.

J. E. JEWETT, Advertising Department,
77 Bible House, New York

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

FOR

Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Dyspepsia.

Now when the leads begin to sweat,
'Tis time for young and old to know
That Fevers, Lassitude and all
The Great Instigator's call,
With every trouble, ache or pain,
That follows in the Intense train,
Will scatter, like the thieves of night,
Before a draught of SELTZER bright.

UNIVERSITY ORGANS.

They Lead the World. $35 to $500. Sold Direct to Families. No Middlemen. Solid Walnut 5 Octaves Double Reed Organ Guaranteed for Six Years and sent, with Stool and Book, for TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. Established 1859. $35

MARCHAL & SMITH,
285 East 21st Street, New York.

WARNER BRO'S

9 Million worn during the past six years.

This marvelous success is due—

1st.—To the superiority of Coraline over all other materials, as a stiffener for Corsets.

2d.—To the superior quality, shape and workmanship of our Corsets, combined with their low prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kinds of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.

WARNER BROTHERS,

359 Broadway, New York City.

SILK AND ASSORTED RIBBONS.

We have purchased at recent wholesale auction sales several large lots of Remnants of Ribbons at prices which will enable us to offer splendid bargains. These remnants are all from two to three yards and upwards in length, and many of them are the finest quality of Ribbons in the market, of different widths, in a variety of fashionable shades, in fact, nearly all colors are represented; also different kinds of Ribbons adapted for bonnet strings, neckwear, trimming for hats and dresses, bows, scarfs, etc., etc. No lady can purchase such fine ribbons as these at any store in the land for four times the money. If you will agree to show the goods to friends, and aid us to make sales, we will send a sample box of these elegant ribbons for 33 cts. in stamps. Two Boxes 60 cts. Four Boxes $1. Ten Boxes, $2.

Empire Agency,
37 College Place,
NEW YORK, N. Y.

ZYLONITE COMBS.

Zylonite is a unique invention of a strange combination of materials into an almost unbreakable substance, which has now come into general use for numerous toilet articles, such as Combs, Brushes of all Kinds, Napkin Rings, Umbrella Handles, &c., &c.

It takes any color, and is so beautiful in its originality, as to be used as plaques and for decoration in great variety. These goods can now be obtained in most stores in the country as well as large cities. The dressing combs can be purchased at retail from 7 cents each to 50 cents. Zylonite combs are the most durable, they shed dirt rather than catch and hold it like rubber combs; they are cheap, handsome, pleasant to the touch, and surpassed by no comb anything near their price.

DRESSING COMBS.

COLORS—White, Coral, Amber and Shell.

Found at all First-class Wholesale and Retail Dealrss.

THE GLAD REFRAIN.

By LOWRY & DOANE.

The cheapest as well as the strongest and most useful Sunday School Song Books ever issued. Try it.

Price, $25 per 100 Copies in Board Covers.

SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York & Chicago.

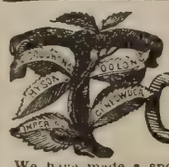
HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE

A new book containing plans and specifications for 25 houses, all sizes, from 2 rooms up. Sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents, by J. S. OGILVIE & CO., 31 Rose Street, New York.

Ladies' Underwear.

Ladies who are unable to examine our stock of these goods personally, would find it to their advantage to correspond with us. The most complete information furnished, and careful attention given to special orders.

Lord & Taylor,
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y.



CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
733 Washington St., Boston Mass

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

GOLD WATCHES FREE

To bring our house prominently before the Ladies and to impress upon them the fact that we are Headquarters for many articles indispensable for their personal use and home adornment, we make the following liberal offer: To the person telling us the longest verse in the Bible, before June 10th, we will present a Lady's Gold Watch worth $60.00, Solid Gold, Hunting Case, Stem Winding. If there be more than one correct answer the second will receive a Lady's Solid Gold Chatelain Watch worth $40. The third a pair of Gold Bracelets worth $20. The fourth an elegant Gold Bar Pin worth $10. Each of the next 25 (if there be so many correct answers) will receive a Dozen of our Ladies' Silk Pocket Handkerchiefs worth $3. Enclose 20c. (stamps, silver or postal note) with your answer, for which we will send you our New Elegantly Illustrated Catalogue, containing the latest Fancy Stitches and Designs for Crazy Patchwork, &c., and a finely illustrated Book of Instructions in the fascinating and profitable employment of making Artificial Flowers, &c. from Tissue Paper. Address

YALE SILK WORKS, 870 CHAPEL ST, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

FOR GAS.

BAILEY'S REFLECTORS!

COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS

A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.

FOR OIL.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.

It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.

In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.

WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LANE, N. Y.

For sale by W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & CO., 170 and 172 William St., N. Y., and the wholesale drug trade.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF

HENRY WARD BEECHER

by THOS. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

DO YOU INTEND TO BUILD

a suburban or country house? Valuable information free. Address, CO-O. BUILDING PLAN ASS'N, Box 2702, New York.

SILK DEPARTM

MESSRS.

JAMES McCREERY &

Have selected several la of Rich Silk and Velvet ties, in Figured, Stripe Plaid effects, which they fer during this month fr to $2 per yard; they ha originally sold at from $

ORDERS BY MAIL receive and prompt attention.

James McCreery & Broadway, and 11th NEW YORK.

THINK FOR YOU

IF YOU ARE

A SENSIBLE W

AND BELIEVE T

Health, Comfort, and

ARE DESIRABLE TH

BUY

GOOD SE

CORDED CORSET

Beautifully made MATERIALS THOUSANDS NOW

Be sure you stamped "Good FIT ALL AGES to Adults.

LEADING RET everywhere. Send f

FERRIS BROS., 341 Broadway, NEW

THE AMERIC MAGAZIN

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATE

This Magazine portrays A can thought and life from oc ocean, is filled with pure high literature, and can be safely comed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY M

Sample Copy of current number mailed ceipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15

Premium List with either.

Address:

R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers
130 & 132 Pearl St.,

GET UP CLUB

"Demonology or Spiritu

Ancient and Modern."—"An effective weal sword of fire."—"Only unanswerable w subject."—Startling disclosures.—History data.—Scores saved already. Whole co rescued. Every family, preacher and christi needs one. 310 pp. 12mo, cloth. Price re Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price

J. E. JEWETT, 77 Bible House, N

CURIOSI OF THE BIBL

S.S. Superintend't. In

By J. H. VINCE

10,000 Prize Ques Answers pertaining t Places and Things. Bi and Readings, Praye Talks and Outlines, C ercises, Blackboard Ou ject Lessons and Ch Seed Thoughts, Religiou and Allegories illustra Reference Tables, Maps dorsed by D. D.'s, Tea Press. Agt's sell 150 to 2 month to saints and sinn "An ingenious help and pleasant quaintance with the Bible."—Talma 606 Pages $2. AGENTS

E. B. TREAT Pub lisher, NEW

GOSPEL BOOK AND TRACT REPOS

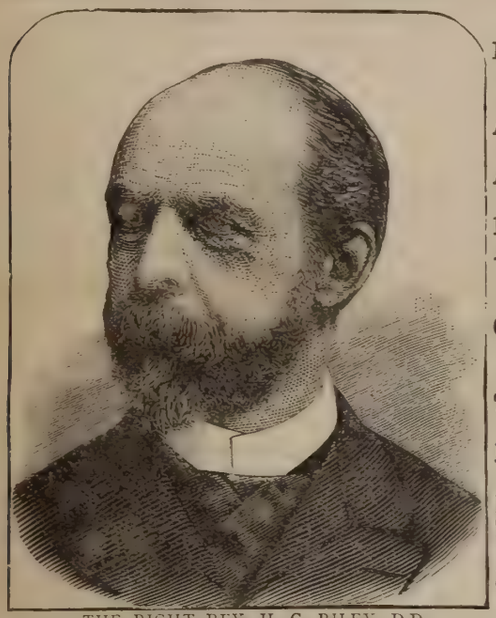
ORILLIA, CANADA.

Will send Catalogues of Gospel Tracts, Book Handbills, Slips and Books to Evangelists, Loc ers, Y. M. C. A. and other Christian Work Sample Packet sent to INTENDING PURCHAS ceipt of a one-cent stamp to pay postage.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 14. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.



THE RIGHT REV. H. C. RILEY, D.D.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAITS OF THE RT. REV. H. C. RILEY, BISHOP OF THE CHURCH IN MEXICO, AND MANUEL AGUAS, THE CONVERTED MONK.

A LIVE CHURCH. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

NOTES ON PROPHECY. By Mr. G. H. Pember.

Alone in a Dark Land—Conversion of a Royal Page—A Collection for a Sleeping Girl—Missionaries in a Flood—Mind-Reading a Sign of the Last Times, etc.

CURRENT EVENTS: The New Secretary of the Treasury—The High-License Bill in New York—The Haddock Murder Trial—Coercion for Ireland, etc.

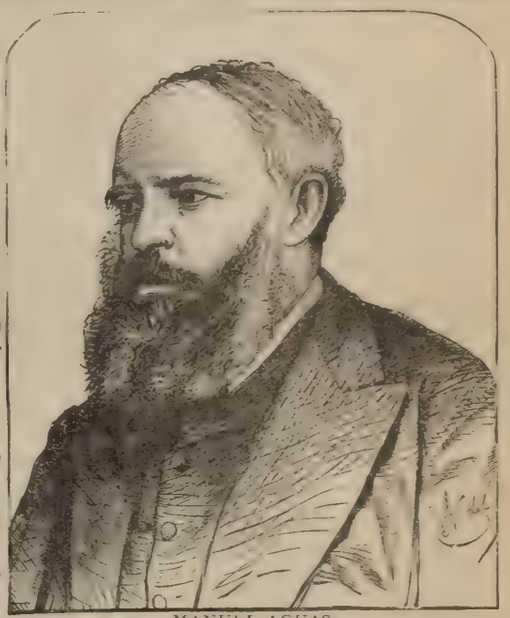
THE NEED OF THE AGE. A New Sermon by C. H. Spurgeon.—The Fall of the Commune.

PORTRAITS OF THE LATE DR. RAY PALMER, MR. A. J. BALFOUR, M.P., AND ERIC FOLKE.

MINNIE'S HEART SUBDUED BY PRAYER.

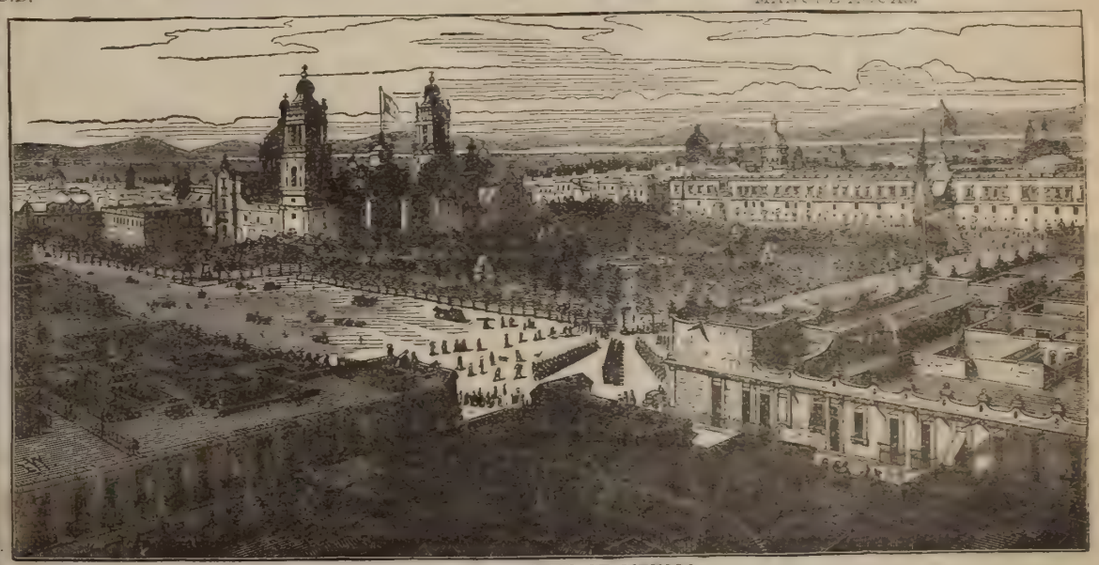
THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. A Serial Story. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

JOSEPH MAKES HIMSELF KNOWN. S. S. Lesson by Mrs. M. Baxter.

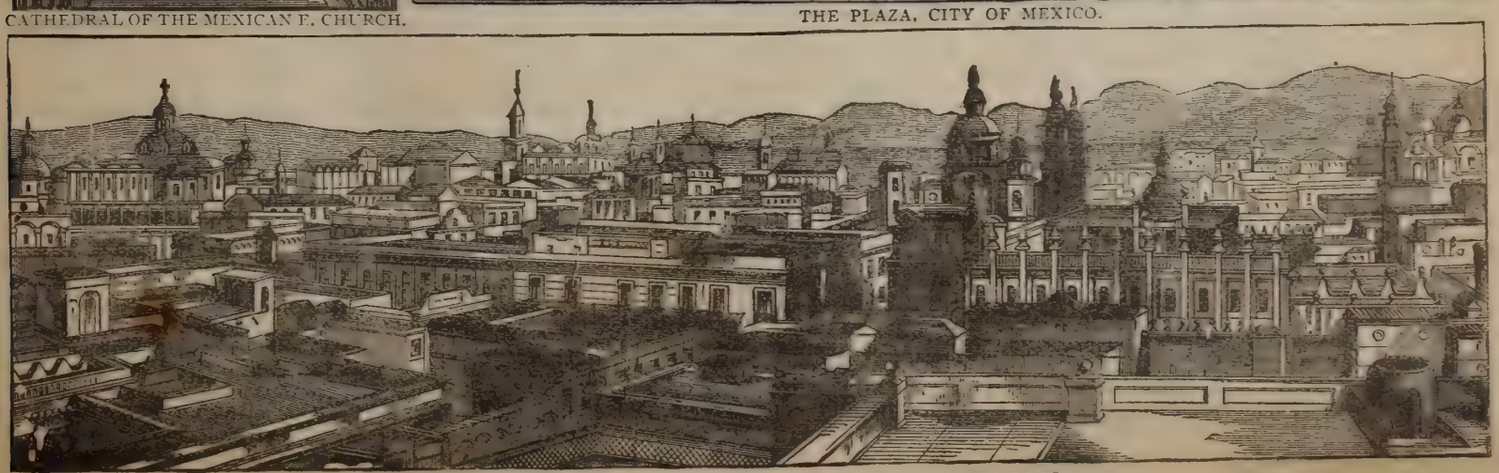


MANUEL AGUAS.

CATHEDRAL OF THE MEXICAN P. CHURCH.



THE PLAZA, CITY OF MEXICO.



THE CITY OF MEXICO, WITH THE CATHEDRAL ON THE LEFT.

The Right Rev. Bishop RILEY of Mexico—MANUEL AGUAS, the Converted Mexican Monk.

BISHOP RILEY OF MEXICO.

Commencement of Protestant Work in Mexico in 1827—The Bible Fulfilling its Own Mission—A Church Organized in 1854—Dr. Riley's Early Life—Work in New York—Arrival in Mexico in 1869—Publication of His Pamphlets—Manuel Aguas Appointed Champion of the Romish Church—Aguas Converted—Becomes Bishop-Elect—His Mysterious Death—Dr. Riley Consecrated Bishop in 1879—The Cathedral Purchased—Thirty-Seven Congregations Organized—Schools and Orphanages—The Needs of the Work—General Grant on Mexico.

No American Christian who realizes his responsibilities to his Master, and who is at the same time aware of the spiritual condition of the people of Mexico, who are living on our borders, yet almost entirely without the light of the Gospel, can be indifferent to any effort that is made in sincerity to evangelize that country. In the face of the enemy all contentions should cease; all minor differences between men who in diverse ways are serving the same Master, fighting against the same enemy, ought to be disregarded. The great object is to save the souls of those who are sitting in darkness and to bring them to Christ. The apostle of the Gentiles set an example to all in every age who work in such a field. "I am made," he said, "all things to all men, that I might by all means save some" (1 Cor. 9:20–22). It is therefore with confidence that denominational differences will not restrain the sympathies of Christian people of various sects that we this week publish portraits of Dr. Riley and Manuel Aguas, with some account of Protestantism in Mexico.

For the latter we are indebted to a near friend of Bishop Riley, who has had opportunities of satisfying himself as to the nature of the work.

During the year 1827 the British and Foreign Bible Society shipped a number of copies of the Holy Bible, translated into the Spanish tongue, to the City of Mexico. They were sold there at such a price as the poorer classes of the community could afford to pay. They were eagerly read by many persons to whom the Holy Word had been hitherto an unknown revelation, except so much and so far as it was interpreted by Romish ecclesiastics to accord with their own doctrines.

For a period of some fifty years the same society continued to supply the Divine Word to the Mexican people. Our Lord's hand manifestly guided the work, and His Holy Spirit applied the Truth, as revealed by the means employed. The seed thus sown "took root downward," and in the course of time, when events were ripened by the action of the State in giving to the people religious freedom, it "bore fruit upward" to God's glory, in the establishment of a reformed Church, with outspreading congregations throughout the Valley of Mexico.

Thus the minds of many of the people were prepared by a knowledge of the Word for the movement initiated by Manuel Aguilar, the Mexican Presbyter, in the organization of

A National Church,

to be identified with the Primitive Church, which existed in its purity and integrity for several centuries prior to the introduction in Spain of the Romish schism. This was about the year 1864. Five years later the Rt. Rev. Henry Chauncey Riley, D.D., Bishop of the Valley of Mexico, whose portrait appears in this number of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, went to Mexico.

The Bishop.

Dr. Riley was born in 1835, of American parents, in Chili, South America, where he lived until about fifteen years of age. He then came to New York, and was educated in this city, graduating at Columbia College, in the class of 1859. For many years he was devoted to Spanish missionary work in New York, and his labors were greatly blessed among that portion of our adopted citizens. On his arrival in Mexico, in 1869, at a time when, owing to the unsettled condition of political affairs and the bitter antagonism aroused by the National Church movement, it was most dangerous to take an active part in the work of reformation, Dr. Riley commenced a vigorous campaign against ignorance and susperstition. At the risk of his life he preached, and taught, and issued telling and in favor of the purified Church. The hostility thus created was naturally most bitter. It aroused an earnest determination on the part of the Romanists to crush, if possible, the young church so rapidly developing into a formidable and invincible champion of the truth. The Romanists called upon one of their most faithful and powerful adherents, a Dominican friar, whose portrait accompanies that of Dr. Riley on the first page, to answer one of Dr. Riley s tracts, which had been compiled from the powerful arguments in the writings of Dr. Ryle, now the eminent Lord Bishop of Liverpool, England. The learned friar took the tract, studied it carefully and prayerfully, and instead of attempting to controvert was converted by it.

Pamphlets Against Romanism,

Manuel Aguas,

At once he became an ardent supporter of the reformed movement. For three years, from 1869 until 1872, he labored indefatigably to extend the work, and established a number of congregations, during which time he was made bishop-elect of the diocese, and then, from some mysteriously unexplained cause, suddenly fell asleep, with the words, "Yes, the precious blood of Jesus" on his dying lips. The vacancy made by the death of Bishop-elect Aguas was filled by Dr. Riley, and in 1879 he was by Bishop Alfred Lee and six other bishops of the Protestant-Episcopal Church.

Consecrated

Fitted by his early Spanish education and associations, with a mind strong and vigorous, natural eloquence in speech, and, above all else, filled with the Spirit of the Lord, with its consequent love for souls and their salvation, Dr. Riley found a great sphere of action in Mexico admirably suited to his tastes, intellect, and disposition. He had already purchased, largely with the means inherited from his father, of San Francisco, in the City of Mexico (a picture of the interior of this edifice appears under his portrait on the first page), a venerable church building next in size to the famous Romish Cathedral in the same city—the largest on the American Continent—and most beautiful in architectural adornment. It is capable of holding three thousand persons, and is situated on the principal avenue and thoroughfare of the capital. Morning and evening services are now held there daily. Another church of smaller size was presented by the Mexican Government.

The Grand Cathedral

With these rallying points Bishop Riley continued and by the blessing of the Lord largely increased the work which had fallen to his hands. He established some outside of the City of Mexico; founded and successfully carried on orphanges and schools, in which about five hundred children were materially and spiritually cared for; and inaugurated a seminary for divinity students, for the purpose of educating young men to go forth and preach and teach among their own people.

Thirty-Seven Congregations

Latterly the work has languished for means to carry it on. But little pecuniary aid has been recently obtained from the United States toward the support of the faithful and earnest laborers in that church, and but a small sum is received from abroad for the same purpose. A steady income is needed for so great and important an undertaking. The contributions of all who are anxious that the Gospel Truth shall be disseminated are earnestly invited. A grand opportunity is afforded to assist in the development of the work so successfully inaugurated in Mexico, as well as to sustain that which is now, unhappily in danger of being lost for the lack of funds for its support. We are informed that monthly, quarterly, or annual subscriptions for the Mexican branch of the Church will be gratefully received in its behalf by J. P. Heath, Esq., Treasurer of the Spanish-American Society, No. 43 Bible House, New York.

MEXICAN PROSPECTS.

In addition to the foregoing narrative, which presents in a forcible manner the religious situation and the aim of Bishop Riley's life, some facts about the country and people of Mexico will be appropriate. On these matters there is no authority whose words will command greater confidence than and it must be remembered that he visited the country with the object of making personal investigation, hoping to draw the two nations into closer bonds of union for their mutual benefit. He said in the course of a speech on the subject:

General Ulysses S. Grant,

"There has been in this country a feeling that the Mexican people were not a class of people to develop their country, and that they have gone through a long series of years without making many advances. The assertion is made without any particular examination of the subject. From my observation, and looking at the history of the country, I think that they have done remarkably well. I think that Mexico is entitled to a great deal of credit for the position which she occupies now among the civilized nations of the earth, when you consider her trials, her difficulties—which it was impossible for her to avoid. Up to 1810 Mexico was a province of old Spain. She was governed a great deal as Spain governs her provinces now—for the purpose of getting from them all she could possibly collect, and keeping her subjects entirely ignorant of how to legislate and how to govern, simply making them producers, hewers of wood and drawers of water. Mexico, up to 1810, was governed entirely from old Spain. She was prohibited from producing anything from her soil which Spain could produce and ship to her, and all of those products had to pay a large duty when they went into Mexico. The Spaniards prevented the Mexican people from having any part in their government, sending their own sons there to rule and to enrich themselves by large salaries and public plunder. . . .

Trials and Difficulties

"It at last became so unbearable that in 1810 Mexico revolted, and the war continued until 1821 before

She Gained her Freedom.

Then she was a people without legislative experience, without experience in governing, but free, and with a country to rule and to make laws for. The first thing she did was to adopt a Constitution something like ours, establishing a United States where there was but one State. She had to go to work and carve up her territory and make States, so as to conform to its Constitution. And having no people to make laws for them, she adopted the laws which were in force—the laws of old Spain.

The Ecclesiastics

were the most educated men in the country, and had a greater experience in governing than any other class of the people, and as any sect or any party or any kind of people would do under like circumstances, they availed themselves of the advantages which they had, and took entire control of the government, political as well as spiritual, and so managed as to absorb all the revenues of the State and pretty much all the valuable property of the country into their own hands. And when that was becoming intolerable, so that the people were about ready to rise up in their might to overthrow the Roman Catholic Church party—not the religion, but the claims of the clergy to the right of governing—our war with Mexico set in, which threw them back for a long period of time.

"Finally, after getting over that and the effects of it, in 1855 they made war upon the Roman Catholic Church to free themselves from her domination in civil matters. Then there was an intervention on the part of European powers—particularly France—which gave them another war; so that really all the time that Mexico has had for advancement in republican institutions and republican government, to count really well, is since 1867. Considering that they have been impoverished by wars, I think they have done remarkably well."

The Struggle with Romanism

in Mexico was one of the most marvellous on record. Its success entails a grave responsibility on the Christian world. It would be a grievous thing if, after emancipation from the papal yoke, Mexico followed the too probable course of becoming atheistic. There is need of earnest prayer and self-denying labor to counteract such a tendency. That the danger exists there can be no doubt. A well-informed writer in Countries of the World says: "The higher class Mexican gentlemen—though nominally Roman Catholics—if they hold any opinions, these seem to be those of the French school of Free-thinkers, and, indeed, in some respects, as far as the influence of the priests and the Church goes, Mexico is not unlike France."

A Joker in Church is the subject of a story which the same writer tells to show how the spirit of levity is directed against the Roman Catholics, and the same spirit hardens the soul against all religion. "On one occasion a practical joker managed to get into a church where some extremely ascetic people were scourging each other. The church was perfectly dark, and as the whip descended on the penitential backs of scourgers and scourged, whining cries, intended apparently for agony, resounded through the building. The new comer watched the operations for some time, and then set to work and laid about him lustily. He instantly noticed that the cries which proceeded from those who experienced the strength of his arm and the weight of his whip were of quite a different character from the previous lamentations, and altogether more natural. The sequel to the tale is, that there were serious objections raised against the continued admission of this new scourger to the meetings—he was much too pious!"

The Ecclesiastical Burden borne by Mexico before her emancipation may be realized from the following figures cited by Emily Pierce in an article on Mexico in the Sunday Magazine. She says: "The value of Church property in 1850 was $300,000,000, one third of the entire property of the nation. In the City of Mexico there were 5000 houses, valued at $80,000,000, of which the Church owned more than one half. Domes rose in every direction. The annual income of the Church was $20,000,000, while that of the Republic was only $18,000,000."

Bishop Ryle, of Liverpool,

England, in the course of a fraternal address at a reception of Bishop Riley in that country, quaintly but forcibly illustrated the attitude he recommended the Church to take toward the Mexican mission. He said: "I thank God for what has been done in the Lambeth Conference, by the Irish Church, and by the American Episcopal Church, in holding out the hand to our young sister in Mexico, smoothing the way and giving her every help in starting herself as a Protestant Episcopal Church in that part of the continent of America. There is a great deal in cheering people in helping them to do a great deal more than they would otherwise do. I remember hearing a story of what took place at

A London Fire.

At a window was a poor woman calling out for assistance. Unless she could be got down by the ladder there was every chance of her being burned alive. A hardy fireman went up to the top of the ladder, and tried and tried again, but seemed unable to reach the woman. He was just about to descend the ladder, giving up the attempt in despair; but just at that time somebody in the crowd said, 'Let us give him a cheer to help him.' The crowd cried, 'Hurrah! hurrah!' The fireman stretched himself out a little more and brought the woman to the ground in safety. When he reached the ground he said, 'It was that cheer that made me do it. If you had not cheered, I should never have brought the woman down.'"

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

Pouring Water on Burning Oil.—Mr. John Gilbert Forbes said: "During a great fire in London about thirty years ago when there were a great many oil works burned, a fireman climbed up to the top of one of the tanks, the contents of which were just ignited, and instead of covering the top of the tank that the fire inside might be smothered for want of air, he turned the water hose upon it and played into the tank. And though he saw the burning oil rise and rise, he still continued foolishly to pour in the water until the oil overflowed the tank, and spread over the whole place. In the same way persecution raises the Church to a higher degree of zeal and purity until it overflows and communicates its fire to the world."

A Game at Cards Spoiled.—Mr. Marsh Remarked: "When we witness for Christ we should do so naturally, not as if it were a most unpleasant and unusual thing, but as an everyday occurrence, and which you do rather as a pleasure than a duty. I have a friend now in China who was one day dining with a friend. After dinner a game at cards was proposed, and they asked him to take a hand. When asked, he answered in the most natural way possible, 'No, thank you; I don't play cards now, I am a Christian,' and went on talking as if nothing had happened. But somehow nobody seemed to care for cards that night, and they were quietly slipped out of the way, and simply through this Christian gentleman's modest but unflinching witnessing for his Divine Master. 'Let your light so shine.'"

A Vain Revivalist Humbled.—Mr. W. A. Campbell said: "I heard recently of a man who once had the power of the Holy Spirit, and whom God had used to the conversion of many souls, both in this and in other countries. When he saw the wonders wrought through his ministry, he forgot that he was only the instrument, and God the power. He took the glory to himself, and said, 'I' instead of 'The Lord;' and it is said that he once remarked among a company of friends, 'The whole of Europe is at my feet, I can move the spirits of men hither and thither as I please.' From that moment the power of God departed from him. God gave him up to the direction of his own power—that in which he gloried. What was the result? He sunk into oblivion. His name was forgotten, even by those who had formerly been his friends; all, except a few among whom he had lived, and who, as they saw him sink deeper and deeper into degradation, looked upon him pityingly, remembering what he had once been, and what he might still have been, had he curbed his vanity and been content to sit at the feet of Jesus, knowing that the honor belongs not to the instrument but to the weilder of the instrument, the Lord of Glory."

A Drink-Seller's Demented Sons.—An Evangelistic worker remarked: "The Bible says, 'The wages of sin is death,' and although the ghastly form may for a time be hidden under a mask of gold or worldly pleasure, yet there is always present the stern reality of death, social and eternal. In my place of business, as I stand there day by day, I see right opposite me a striking illustration of this, in the shape of a large and busy drinking saloon. Well I remember when the proprietor came to the town, a youth fresh from the country. He started a grocery, and that succeeding, he thought to extend his business by taking out a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Finding that the whiskey paid best, he, in his haste to get rich, gave up the grocery business and went wholly into the liquor traffic. He obtained his wish; he is now rich; but at what cost? His two sons, promising lads, were both apprenticed to that perilous business, and early began to taste; and the temptation being ever present with them, they quickly traversed the different stages in the drunkard's downward course, and to-day the eldest fills a drunkard's grave, having died in delirium; and the other has been repeatedly attacked by the same terrible mania, and is now utterly bereft of reason, and is under the charge of a keeper. Truly God seems to visit the iniquities of the fathers upon the children. Rarely, indeed, does the wealth got in an evil way go beyond the second generation, but the scope and effect of the evil influences and tendencies which we may call forth and strengthen, who can tell?"

An Arrow Divinely Directed.—Mr. Campbell remarked: "I well remember the case of a young Christian worker who was filled with the Spirit. On one occasion he called upon a member of his Sunday-school class who was ill. After speaking to the child for a few moments he turned to the mother and made a slight remark, but the incident soon passed from his mind. Some time afterward he heard that that woman had given her heart to the Lord. Much pleased, he called upon her, and inquired how it came about. 'Well, sir, it was just yourself that was the means. Do you remember when you called upon Mary when she was ill? I said something, and turning to me you asked, "Is there not a good deal of self-righteousness there?" And, sir, that question was the means of turning me to the Lord.' These few words, which were long forgotten, were used by God for the conversion of a soul."

Holding a Lamp for Whitefield.—Mr. Calder related that "When the great Whitefield was visiting America, he was enthusiastically followed wherever he went. On one occasion, when preaching at night to a large crowd, a little boy held a lantern that he might see to read his Bible. As the address went on, and the audience hung upon the eloquent appeal of his lips, the little boy who held the lamp became so absorbed in the preaching, that he forgot everything else, until crash went the lantern on to the pavement, leaving the crowd in utter darkness. The people were much annoyed, but it mattered not to the preacher, who finished his address without the light, and went his way. Some years afterward Mr. Whitefield was again in America and found himself travelling in the same coach as a clergyman to whom he had just been introduced as the Rev. Mr. Rogers. When they had proceeded some distance the clergyman said, 'Excuse me, Mr. Whitefield, but do you remember preaching some years ago at the town of X——, and a little boy who was holding your lantern letting it fall?' 'Yes,' replied Whitefield. 'Well, I am that boy, and from that time I chose Christ as my Saviour, and resolved to enter His service.' Whitefield grasped him by the hand, and said, 'I am so glad to meet you; I have often thought of that little incident.'"

A Young Convert's Courage.—Mr. James Forbes observed: "When Mr. Moody was here last, at one of his meetings in the circus, after a most affecting address, I spoke to a man in the audience about his soul. He confessed that he now saw his need of a Saviour, and that he was ready to cast his all upon Christ, and left the hall rejoicing. A day or two afterward, at a similar meeting in the same place, I came across him again, and about the first thing he told me when I asked after his spiritual welfare was that he had been obliged to leave his employment. He collected the tickets at the door of a theatre at a salary of eighteen shillings a week; it was not much, and many would have framed the excuse that he had nothing to do with the theatre, but only collecting tickets; but he felt that he could not have any connection with a theatre, and be a Christian. 'But,' I said, when he had told me this, 'what are you going to do? you have a wife and family, and they must be fed. Do you think that in the face of that responsibility you were justified in resigning your situation?' and his answer was, 'Can I not trust the Lord to pay eighteen shillings a week?' He felt he could trust Him to pay his wages, and to feed his wife and family; nor was his faith in vain; the very next day he got a situation at a better salary, where he could serve God and his employer at the same time. Depend upon it the kind God who feeds His birds will not allow His children to starve."

A LIVE CHURCH.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, April 3, 1887.

"Unto the angel of the church in Smyrna write; These things saith the first and the last, which was dead and is alive; I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, but thou art rich."—Rev. 2: 8, 9.

A Church that Passed through Fire and Earthquake—Its Active Principle—Elements of Vigor—I. Punctual Payments—Members who Pray but not Pay—II. Punctual Attendance—The Right Hymn for a Family—III. General Participation in the Service—The Wandering of a Lonely Tune—IV. A Flourishing Sabbath-School—Neglected Children to be Brought In—Seventy Thousand in New York—A Maniac Engineer on a Steamboat—V. Appropriate Architecture—VI. A Soul-Saving Church—An Englishman Converted at the Tabernacle—A Charleston Family—A Tragic Scene—An Express Train and a Misplaced Switch.

Smyrna was a great city of the ancients, bounded on three sides by mountains. It was the central emporium of the Levantine trade. In that prosperous and brilliant city there was a Christian Church established. After it had existed for awhile, it was rocked down by an earthquake. It was rebuilt. Then it was consumed by a conflagration that swept over the entire city. That church went and disaster, but kept on to great spiritual prosperity. The fact was, that church had the grace of God, an ever-active principle. Had it been otherwise, all the grandeur of architecture and all the pomp of surroundings would only have been the ornament of death—the garlands of a coffin, the plumes of a hearse.

Through Fire and Trouble,

It may be profitable to consider what are

The Elements of a Live Church.

I remark in the first place, that one characteristic of such a church is punctuality in meeting its engagements. All ecclesiastical institutions have financial relations, and they ought to meet their obligations just as certainly as men meet their obligations at the bank. When a Church of God is not as faithful in its promises as the Bank of England, it ceases to be a Church of God. It ought to be understood that prayers cannot paint a church, and prayers cannot pay the winter's coal bill, and prayers cannot meet the insurance; and that, while prayers can do a thousand things, there are a thousand things that prayers cannot do. Prayer for any particular church will never reach heaven high unless it goes down pocket deep.

In my church at the West, there was a man of comfortable means who used to pray for his pastor in such elongated style that he became a nuisance to the prayer-meeting; asking God, in a prayer that was almost without ceasing, that the pastor might be blessed in his basket and in his store, while the fact was he never paid anything. If we pray for the advancement of the church, and do not out of our means contribute for its advancement, our prayer is only mockery. Let the Church of God then meet its obligations on the outside, and let the members of the congregation meet the obligations on the inside, and the church will be financially prosperous.

Let me say, also, that there must be on the house of the Lord. If the service begins at half-past ten in the morning, the regular congregation of a live church will not come at a quarter to eleven. If the service is to begin at half-past seven in the evening, the regular congregation of a live church will not come at a quarter to eight. In some churches I have noticed the people are always tardy. There are some people who are always late. They were born too late, and the probability is they will die too late. The rustling of dresses up the aisle, and the slamming of doors, and the treading of heavy feet, is poor inspiration for a minister. It requires great abstraction in a pastor's mind to proceed with the preliminary exercises of the church when one half of the audience seated are looking around to see the other half come in. Such a difference of attendance upon the house of God may be a difference of time-pieces; but the live church of which I am speaking ought to go by railroad time, and that is pretty well understood in all our communities. There is one hymn that ought to be sung in many Christian families on Sabbath morning:

Punctuality in Attendance

"Early, my God, without delay,
I haste to seek Thy face."

Another characteristic of a live church is that

All the People Participate in the exercises. A stranger can tell by the way the first tune starts whether there is any life there. A church that does not sing is a dead church. It is awful to find a cold drizzle of music coming down from the organ-loft, while all the people beneath sit in silence. When a tune wanders around, lonely and unbefriended, and is finally lost amid the arches because the people do not join in it, there is not much melody made unto the Lord. In heaven they all sing, though some there cannot sing half as well as others.

The Methodist Church has sung all around the world, and gone from conquest to conquest, among other things, because it is a singing Church; and any Christian church organization that with enthusiasm performs this part of its duty, will go on from triumph to triumph. A church of God that can sing that ought to be done. We go forth into this holy war with the Bible in one hand and a hymn-book in the other. Oh ye who used to sing the praises of the Lord, and have got out of the habit, take your harps down from the willows. I am glad to know that, as a church, we are making advancement in this respect. When I came to be your pastor we had an excellent choir in the little chapel, and they sang very sweetly to us Sabbath by Sabbath; but ever and anon there was trouble, for you know that the choirs in the United States are the Waterloos where the great battles go on. One Sunday they will sing like angels, and the next Sunday they will be mad, and will not sing at all. We resolved to settle all the difficulties, and have one skilful man at the organ, and one man to do the work of a precentor; and now, from Sabbath to Sabbath, the song comes up like the voice of mighty thunderings.

Can Do Anything

"Let those refuse to sing
Who never knew our God;
But children of the Heavenly King
Should speak their joys abroad."

On the way to triumph that never ends, and pleasures that never die—sing!

Another characteristic of a live church is

A Flourishing Sabbath-school.

It is too late in the history of the Christian Church to argue the benefit of such an institution. The Sabbath-school is not a supplement to the church; it is its right arm. But, you say, there are dead churches that have Sabbath-schools. Yes, but the Sabbath-schools are dead, too. It is a dead mother holding in her arms a dead child. But when superintendent and teachers and scholars come on Sabbath afternoons together, their faces glowing with interest and enthusiasm, and their songs are heard all through the exercises, and at the close they go away feeling they have been on the Mount of Transfiguration—that is a live school, and it is characteristic of a live church.

There is only one thing I have against the Sabbath-schools of this country, and that is, they are too respectable. We gather into our schools the children of the refined, and the cultured, and the educated; but, alas, for the great multitude of the children of the abandoned and the lost! A few of them are gathered into our Sabbath-schools; but what about of New York, and the score of thousands of destitute children of Brooklyn, around whom are thrown no benign and heavenly and Christian influences? It is a tremendous question, what is to become of the destitute children of these cities? We must either act on them, or they will act on us. We will either Christianize them, or they will heathenize us. It is a question not more for the Christian than for the philanthropist and the statesman. Oh, if we could have all these suffering little ones gathered together, what a scene of hunger and wretchedness and rags and sin and trouble and darkness! If we could see those little feet on the broad road to death, which through Christian charity ought to be pressing the narrow path of life; if we could hear those voices in blasphemy, which ought to be singing the praises of God; if we could see those little hearts, which at that age ought not to be soiled with one unclean thought, becoming the sewers for every abomination; if we could see those sacrificed on the altar of every iniquitous passion, and baptized with fire from the lava of the pit, we would recoil, crying out, "Avaunt, thou dream of hell!"

The 70,000 Destitute Children

Suffering Little Ones

They are not always going to be children. They are coming up to be the men and women of this country. That spark of iniquity that might now be put out with one drop of the water of life, will become the conflagration of every green thing that God ever planted in the soul. That which ought to have been a temple of the Holy Ghost will become a scarred and blistered ruin—every light quenched and every altar in the dust. That petty thief, who slips into your store and takes a yard of cloth from your counter, will become the highwayman of the forest, or the burglar at midnight, picking the lock of your safe and blowing up your store to hide the villainy.

A Great Army,

with staggering step and bloodshot eye and drunken hoot, they are coming on—gathering recruits from every grog-shop and den of infamy in the land, to take the ballot-box and hurrah at the elections. The hard-knuckled fist of ruffianism will have more power than the gentle hand of intelligence and sobriety. Men, bloated, and with the signature of sin burned in from the top of the forehead to the bottom of the chin, will look honest men out of countenance Moral corpses, which ought to be buried a hundred feet deep to keep them from poisoning the air, will rot in the face of the sun at noonday. Industry in her plain frock, will be unappreciated, while thousands of men will wander around in idleness, with their hands on their hips, saying, "The world owes us a living."

Oh what a tremendous power there is in iniquity when, uneducated and unrestrained and unblanched it goes on concentrating and deepening and widening and gathering momentum until it swings ahead with a very triumph of desolation, drowning like surges, scorching like flames, crushing like rocks! What are you going to do with this abandoned population of the streets? Will you gather them in your churches? It is not the will of your heavenly Father that one of these little ones should perish. If you have ten respectable children in your class, gather in ten that are not respectable. If in your Bible-class there be twenty young men who have come from Christian homes and elegant surroundings, let those twenty young men go out and gather in twenty more of the young men of the city who are lost to God and lost to society. This outside population, unless educated and restrained, will work terror in ages that are to come.

A Maniac Engineer.

Years ago, at New Orleans, when the cholera was raging fearfully, a steamboat put out just before nightfall, crowded with passengers who were trying to escape from the pestilence. After the boat had been out a little while, the engineer fell with the cholera. The captain, in consternation, went down among the passengers and asked, "Is there any one here who knows anything about engineering?" A swarthy man replied, "I am an engineer." "Well," said the captain, "I would be very glad if you would take charge of this boat." The man went to the engine. The steamer moved more rapidly, until, after awhile, the captain and some passengers were alarmed, and they went to see what was the matter, and they found that this was a maniac engineer, and that he was seated on the safety-valve; and, as they came to him, he said, "I am commissioned of Satan to drive this steamer to hell!" and he flourished his pistol, and would not come down. But after awhile, through some stratagem, he was brought from his position, and the lives of the passengers were saved. Oh, my friends, that steamer had no such peril as our institutions are threatened with, if the ignorant and unrestrained children of this land shall come up in their ignorance and their crime to engineer our civil and religious institutions, and drive them on the rocks!

Educate this abandoned population, or they will overthrow the institutions of this land. Gather them into your Sabbath-schools. I congratulate you that many have been gathered. Go forth, teachers, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and on the coming Sabbaths may there be found gathered scores and hundreds of these wanderers, and instead of eighteen hundred in the Sabbath-school, we shall see three thousand or four thousand, and the grace of God will come down upon them, and the Holy Spirit will bring them all into the truth.

Another characteristic of a live church is Appropriate Architecture.

In the far West and amid destitute population, a log church is very appropriate—the people living in log houses. But in communities where people live in comfortable abodes, a church uncommodious or lacking in beauty is a moral nuisance. Because Christ was born in a manger is no reason why we should worship Him in a barn. Let the churches of Jesus Christ be not only comfortable, but ornate. Years ago, we resolved to have a comfortable church. We resolved that it should be amphitheatrical in shape. The prominent architects of the country, after figuring on the matter a good while, said that such a church would not be churchly, and they would have nothing to do with the enterprise. But after awhile we found an architect willing to risk his reputation. He put up for us the first tabernacle, in amphitheatrical style. We liked it. All who came liked it. This building followed in the same style. We believe it is appropriate and adapted. An angular church will have an angular theology. The church of Jesus Christ ought to be the pulpit only the fireplace, around which they are gathered in sweet and domestic communion. But when our first tabernacle went up, oh, the caricature and the scoffing! They said, "It's a hippodrome! It's a holy circus! It's Talmage's theatre!" But the Lord came down with power upon that old building, and made it the gate of heaven to a great many. And this building followed. That we were right in persisting in the style of architecture is proved by the fact that now there are sixty or seventy churches in the United States in the same style. Indeed, our tabernacle has revolutionized church architecture in this country. A live church must have a commodious, a comfortable, an adapted building. "How amiable are Thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

A Great Family Circle,

Again, the characteristic of a live church must be that it is

A Soul-saving Church.

It must be the old Gospel of Christ. "Oh," say some people, "the Gospel of Christ allows but a small swing for a man's faculties, and some men have left the ministry with that idea." One such said to Rowland Hill, "I have left the ministry, because I don't want to hide my talents any longer." "Well," replied Hill, "I think the more you hide your talents the better."

Why, there is no field on earth so grand as that which is open before the Gospel ministry. Have you powers of analysis? exhaust them here. Have you unconquerable logic? let it grapple with Paul's Epistle to the Romans. Have you strong imagination? let it discourse on the Psalms of David, or John's Apocalyptic Vision. Have you great powers of pathos? exhaust it in telling the story of a Saviour's love. Have you a bold style of thinking? then follow Ezekiel's wheel, full of eyes, and hear through his chapters the rush of the wings of the seraphim. All ye who want a grand field in which to work for God, come into the Gospel ministry. At any rate, come into Christian circles, and somewhere and somehow, declare the grace of God. Pardon for all sin. Comfort for all trouble. Eternal life for all the dead. Oh, my soul! preach it forever. It has been and I believe it has been yours, my dear people, in these years of my ministry, to have this a soul-saving church, and we never yet threw out the Gospel net but we drew in a great multitude. They have come, a hundred at a time; and two hundred at a time; and three hundred and fifty at a time; and I expect the day will appear when, in some service, there will be three thousand souls accepting the offers of eternal life.

My Ambition,

I wish I could tell you some circumstances that have come under my observation, proving the fact that God has blessed the prayers of these people in behalf of souls immortal. I could tell you of one night, when I stood at the end of the platform, and a gentleman passed me, his cheek bronzed with the sea, and as he went into the inquiry-room he said to me, "I am an Englishman." I said, "I am very glad to see you; walk in." That night he gave his heart to the Lord. It was a clear case of quick but thorough conversion. Passing out at the close of the inquiry-meeting, I said, "How long have you been in this country?" He said, "I arrived by steamer this morning at eleven o'clock." I said, "How long will you be in the city?" He said, "I leave to-morrow for Canada, and thence I go to Halifax, and thence to Europe, and I'll never be here again." I said, "I think you must have come to this country to have your soul saved." He said, "That certainly was the reason."

A Charleston Family.

In that other room, one night, at the close of the service, there sat among other persons, three persons looking so cheerful that I said to myself, "These are not anxious inquirers." I said to the man, "Are you a Christian?" He said, "I am." I said, "When did you become a Christian?" He said, "To-night." His wife sat next to him. I said to her, "Are you a Christian?" She said, "I am." I said, "When did you become a Christian?" She said, "To-night." I remarked, "Is this young lady your daughter?" They said, "Yes." I said to her, "Are you a Christian?" She said, "Yes." I said, "When did you become a Christian?" She said, "To-night." I said to them, "From whence came you?" They said, "We are from Charleston, S. C." I said, "When did you come?" They said, "We came yesterday." "How long are you going to remain?" "We go to-morrow. We have never been here before, and shall never be here again." I have heard from them since. They are members of the Church of Jesus Christ, in good and regular standing, eminent for consistency and piety. And so God has made it a soul-saving church.

But I could tell you of

A Tragic Scene,

when once at the close of the service I found a man in one of these front seats, wrought upon most mightily. I said to him, "What is the matter?" He replied, "I am a captive of strong drink; I came from the West; I thought, perhaps, you could do me some good; I find you can't do me any good; I find there is no hope for me." I said, "Come into this side room and we will talk together." "Oh, no," he said, "there's no need of my going in; I am a lost man: I have a beautiful wife; I have four beautiful children; I had a fine profession; I have had a thorough education; I had every opportunity a man ever had, but I am a captive of strong drink; God only knows what I suffer."

I said, "Be encouraged; come in here, and we'll talk together about it." "No," he said, "I can't come; you can't do me any good. I was on the Hudson River Railroad yesterday, and coming down, I resolved never again to touch a drop of strong drink. While I sat there a man came in—a low creature—and sat by me; he had a whiskey flask, and he said to me, 'Will you take a drink?' I said 'no;' but oh, how I wanted it! and as I said no, it seemed that the liquor curled up around the mouth of the flask and begged, 'Take me! take me! take me!' I felt I couldn't resist it, and yet I was determined not to drink, and I rushed out on the platform of the car, and I thought I would jump off; we were going at the rate of forty miles an hour, and I didn't dare to jump; the paroxysm went off, and I am here to-night."

I said, "Come in, I'll pray for you, and commend you to God." He came in trembling. Some of you remember. After the service, we walked up the street. I said, "You have

An Awful Struggle;

I'll take you into a drug-store; perhaps the doctor can give you some medicine that will help you in your struggle, though, after all, you will have to depend upon the grace of God." I said to the doctor, "Can you give this man something to help him in his battle against strong drink?" "I can," replied the doctor, and he prepared a bottle of medicine. I said, "There is no alcohol in this—no strong drink?" "None at all," said the doctor. "How long will this last?" I inquired. "It will last him a week." "Oh," I said, "give us another bottle."

We passed out into the street and stood under the gaslight. It was getting late, and I said to the man, "I must part with you. Put your trust in the Lord, and He will see you through. You will make use of this medicine when the paroxysm of thirst comes on." A few weeks passed away, and I got a letter from Boston saying, "Dear friend, I enclose the money you paid for that medicine. I have never used any of it.

The Thirst has Entirely Gone away from me. I send you two or three newspapers to show you what I have been doing since I came to Boston." I opened the newspapers and saw accounts of meetings of two or three thousand people to whom this man had been preaching righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come. I have heard from him again and again since. He is faithful now, and will be, I know, faithful to the last. Oh, this work of soul-saving! Would God that out of this audience to-day five hundred men might hear the voice of the Son of God bidding them come to a glorious resurrection!

All the offers of the Gospel are extended to you, "without money and without price," and you are conscious of the fact that these opportunities will soon be gone forever. The conductor of a rail-train was telling me of the fact that he was one night standing by his train on a side track, his train having been switched so that might dart past unhindered. He said while he stood there in the darkness, beside his train on the side-track, he heard the thunder of the express in the distance. Then he saw the flash of the headlight. The train came with fearful velocity, nearer and nearer, until, after a while, when it came very near, by the flash of the headlight, he saw that the switchman had not attended to his duty—either through intoxication or indifference, had not attended to his duty—and that train, unless something were done immediately, would rush on the side-track, and dash the other train to atoms. He shouted to the switchman, "Set up that switch!" and with one stroke the switch went back, and the express thundered on. Oh men and women, going on toward the eternal world, swift as the years, swift as the months, swift as the days, swift as the hours, swift as the minutes, swift as the seconds—on what track are you running? Toward light or darkness? Toward victory or defeat? Toward heaven or hell? Set up that switch. Cry aloud to God. "Now is the day of salvation."

An Express Train

ALONE IN A DARK LAND.

From the Grengange country, about one hundred miles west of Lake Bangweolo, where Livingstone died, Mr. F. S. Arnot, the gallant young missionary, who is personally well known to some of our readers, and whose long African journeys and faithful labors have won admiration and esteem from all, writes to his mother:

I have had difficulties here — some peculiar and trying. The custom of giving presents to bands of drummers in camp I have opposed, and have had trouble in clearing my camp of them. In the first place, I cannot give lawfully the Lord's money to the support of such folly, and to the annoyance of all the seekers of the Lord who come after me. The custom of giving presents to head men, minor chiefs, etc., who have no lawful claim to receive tribute, I have also opposed, raising up no little amount of dissatisfaction. [The martyred Bishop Hannington had much trouble from the same cause, and it was one of the difficulties which led to his death.]

At the Barotse I gave, with little discrimination, all I had; my chief thought was to be acceptable to them, and to be liked. I succeeded in this. I fear, however, that it was not a godly success, or one to His glory. I have but little with me, and with that little I am bound to see to the needs of the men who have patiently come this long way with me, and to speed them well on their return to their homes. "My judgment is with the Lord, and my work with my God." "My eyes are toward Thee; my ears are open unto Thee; my hands are stretched out to Thee, and Thee only," is more and more the language of my soul. And I know that He will fill my hands with many things for these people. I rejoice to think that they do not understand me, for they did not understand my Master.

CONVERSION OF A ROYAL PAGE.

The Rev. Mr. Ashe, who was one of the trusted colleagues of the late Bishop Hannington in his African labors, relates the following incident:

The first time I was presented at Court to his Majesty of Uganda, I offered to teach any of the young men about the palace to read. My offer was accepted by a lad, one of the King's pages, whose named translated, is "Asked from the Spirit;" he was afterward baptized "Samuel, Asked from God." Samuel came to my house regularly every day for his lesson, generally bringing with him, as a love gift, a wild bird, which was very good for food. He progressed so rapidly that soon I gave him a little book. This pleased him much, but shortly afterward my fellow-missionary met him on the road, seemingly in great trouble. "What is the matter?" my friend asked, and with many tears the royal page answered that he had lost his book; and when I told him I would give him another book, he thought it too good news to be true. Soon he showed by his life that he was a sincere and intelligent Christian, and was drawing nearer and nearer to Christ, when one day, of his own free will, he asked to be baptized, and as he plainly showed his faith in a crucified and risen Christ he was received into the visible Church under the name of Samuel.

This same convert had been promoted to a place of trust by the King, and by him was despatched to a vassal chief to collect the tribute, consisting of so many thousands of court shells, and it was while he was on this errand that the great and fatal persecution of Christians broke out. Immediately on returning to the city, Samuel heard that his name was down on the martyrs' list, and at once he came to me for advice. "What have I to do?" he asked; "I have in my possession this tribute of the King; how have I to dispose of it?" "You must not go back to the King," I answered; "he has the heart of a wild beast rather than that of a man; it is certain death for you to appear in his presence." The Samuel took a piece of paper, and began to write, but I could see he was not satisfied. Looking up, he said, "If I were to throw away the King's tribute and run, he would think I had stolen it." "Then," I said, "could you not take it early in the morning, and deliver it to the chief, whose duty it is to receive it, and then make your escape?" This he determined to do, though going there meant that he might be seized, and dragged off to death. He took the tribute, and delivered it, and quietly mixing with the crowd, walked away. When he visited me a night or two afterward I asked him, "Did you not run as soon as you could?" "No," he replied, "had I run I should have been at once caught; I calmly walked away trusting in the Lord to deliver me."

A COLLECTION FOR A SLEEPING GIRL.

A girl's dream in a grocery-store had a practical fulfilment, as related by a San Francisco journal. In a poor quarter of that city is a general store where provisions and liquors are dispensed. One evening, recently, a poorly clad little girl entered, and presenting a nickel, asked for some bread. The youth who went to wait upon her, asked her how her mother was. "Awful sick," said the child, "and ain't had anything to eat all day." The boy was just then called to wait upon some men who entered the saloon, and the girl sat down. Wearied out she fell asleep, holding her nickel in her hand. One of the men saw her as he came to the bar, and after asking who she was, said, "Say, you drunkards, see here. Here we've been pouring down whiskey when this poor child and her mother want bread. Here's a two-dollar bill that says I've got some feeling left." "And I can add a dollar," observed one. "And I'll give another." They made up a purse of an even five dollars, and the spokesman carefully put the bill between two of the sleeper's fingers, drew the nickel away, and whispered to his comrades: "Jist look a there—the child's dreaming!" So she was. A big tear had rolled out from her closed eyelid, but the face was covered with a smile. The men tiptoed out, and the clerk walked over and touched the sleeping child. She awoke with a laugh, and cried out, "What a beautiful dream! Ma wasn't sick any more, and we had lots to eat and to wear, and my hand burns yet where an angel touched it!" When she discovered that her nickel had been replaced by a bill, a dollar of which loaded her down with all she could carry, she innocently said, "Well, now, but ma won't hardly believe me that you sent up to heaven and got an angel to come down and give me all this." Though the bill did not come from an angel the child was right in regarding it as a gift from heaven. God does not bless men through angels alone. He has other messengers, and it would be well for them and for the poor, if wealthy Christians were ready to act in that capacity (1 John 3 : 17).

MISSIONARIES IN A FLOOD.

In an interesting letter from Miss Lily Webb, who, under the auspices of the China Inland Mission, is laboring is China, is the following account of a recent deliverance from peril by an inundation:

Last Saturday morning, before we arrived at Ho-k'eo, it began to rain very heavily. It continued to pour all day on Sunday, and on Monday morning we came to our home and found the river had risen so much that there was only about two feet to our front door instead of the usual high bank. After praying that if it were God's will the rain might stop, we went to bed. However, we had not been long asleep when we heard the evangelist and family bringing their things upstairs; we found the water had reached the second story, and the floors were getting wet. As soon as everything was safely up we heard Ah-ho, with the evangelist and family, pleading with God to stop the rain, and we joined them in our room. I did not sleep again, but spent most of the time at the window watching for the morning, when we hoped it would clear.

But our Father's time had not come yet, and at nine o'clock some of the houses around us were in great danger, and several others, with their contents, were being carried rapidly down the river, which was rising steadily each moment, the mountain torrents on the opposite bank dashing violently into it. This continued till about 11.30, when, to our joy and thankfulness, the sky cleared and the rain ceased. I began at once to look for the water to decrease, for it was three feet deep in the second story already, but it continued to rise hour after hour until it was over the roofs of the houses on both sides of us. When everything was ready for us to leave if it became necessary, we quietly waited and prayed.

It was delightful to see the peace and faith of the native Christians. Ah-ho was so bright, saying all along that he felt sure God would stay the water. He said, "When God wanted you to come quickly to Ho-k'eo, He gave you a wind which brought you in one day; we have asked Him now to help, and of course He will hear us." So we felt, too, only we thought He might want to try us to see how far we would trust Him. We were perfectly happy, for knowing that our Father had all the water in "the hollow of His hand," we were very sure He would not let one drop too much come.

About six o'clock, when the water was within three feet of the roof of our house at the back, they told us the water had stopped rising. How we all thanked our Father! We went to bed that night very thankful. It began to rain again, but in the middle of the night when we awoke it was beautifully clear and bright, and the water had decreased considerably. Altogether more than seventy houses have been washed away, and there has been great loss of life. All along the banks of the river is one scene of desolation and ruin. Oh, that God would use this to arouse the people of Ho-k'eo!

MIND READING A SIGN OF THE LAST TIMES.

Among the signs which Christ said would precede His coming was the appearance of wonder-workers, who will "show signs and wonders to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect." And He emphasized the prediction with the words: "But take ye heed: Behold I have foretold you all things" (Mark 13 : 22, 23). Mr. G. B. Taylor, in a recent publication, points out that the exhibitions now taking place in the New and Old World, with other cognate facts, fulfil this prediction. He says:

It is remarkable if we look abroad what obvious preparations we behold that are simply anterior necessaries for the revelation of that pre-eminent man of sin and son of perdition—the Antichrist. We distinctly descry the line of Satan's latter-day policy in this direction. That policy is to disparage the genuine ere he produces his spurious Christ. To this end Christ's fast of forty days is being outdone by astute demoniacs, to gratify a spiritualistic world that denies the divinity of our Lord. We also behold an age of miracle-workers before us—the Scriptures speaking of their miracles in precisely the same terms as those applied to the miracles of Christ Himself, and therefore performed on the bodies of men.

So, too, we have what is known as "thought-reading" and "thought-transmission" in our midst, which go to the very root of the proper divinity of Christ as proved by His knowing the thoughts of men. Then again we read of far-off fanatical men being voluntarily buried alive, and after days and weeks of inhumation exhumed again unhurt, which plainly impugns the death and resurrection of Christ—so that we have before our living vision the fast, the miracles, the miraculous insight into human nature, and the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, all travestied, counterfeited, and burlesqued!—and we ask, what can possibly occur next but the apocalypse of the great Antichrist himself, to fill the void the lapse of true faith in Christ induces? Soon the words of Christ will be fulfilled: "I am come in My Father's name, and ye receive Me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive." Let us, therefore, not trifle with the present spirit of Antichrist in the world, lest we judicially receive him in person when he comes! but let us rather watch and pray always, according to the specifically latter-day injunction of Christ, who knew the paramount necessity of so doing, and has submitted that knowledge for our good.

A BLASPHEMER SILENCED.

Rev. T. J. Lee Mayer, of Bannu, on the Afghan frontier, gives an interesting account of bazaar preaching in the midst of fierce Mohammedan fanatics. We had our usual stormy meeting in the bazaar—a glorious listening crowd, again broken up by the bitter hostility of the mullahs (Moslem priests) and the violence of their disciples. There were three or four thousand people in the bazaar, and they rather lost their heads, as they generally do when excited by fanatics. To-day I had rather a quieter day, thanks to two policemen, who kindly prevented my books and person from being seized—which is all one wants. I don't at all mind a row, because I can generally get them quiet for a few moments, and put in the whole Gospel plan when once I get their attention; but when five or six fellows are tugging at one's clothes, and shoving one about like the crush at a football goal, it becomes rather difficult to keep one's footing, to say nothing of the thread of one's discourse. A few Sundays back I was preaching on Paul's conversion, when a mullah, a very old and bitter opponent, again came up and began cursing me. I took hold of him by the sleeve and showed him to the people, and said, "Paul was once such an one as our friend here, ever speaking against the Way, the Truth, and the Life, but when God revealed Jesus Christ to him, he became a changed man, and went about preaching the truths he once destroyed, which God grant you may do, old man." I then took off my hat before the crowd, and simply asked God to change his heart and reveal Jesus to him. He seemed completely dumbfounded, and at once withdrew.

A CHINESE PARALYTIC'S TESTIMONY.

The conversion and subsequent work of a Chinese convert are described in The Church by the Rev. Hunter Corbett, D.D., of Chefoo, China, who had when he wrote just received word that the man was dead. He says:

He lived in a home of poverty. The only light in the house came through the lattice windows, covered with paper. There was no floor except the earth beaten hard, and no ceiling under the thatched roof. About seven years ago an aged widow, who earned a livelihood by selling goods, entered this home. She noticed this man lying on a couch, so emaciated that he seemed more dead than alive. She learned that for twenty-seven years he had been a paralytic, and unable to move hand or foot. She told him of Jesus, and of His power and willingness to save all who trust in him. When she ceased speaking for a moment, the poor man would quickly say, "Tell me more!" He could not hear enough of this wonderful story.

The following day this woman met one of the native preachers, and urged him to hasten and teach the palsied man more fully the way of salvation. The preacher spent much time in reading and explaining the Bible to him. A few months later this man made a public profession of faith in Christ, and was enrolled as a member of the church. During the examination with reference to baptism, the usual question was asked—what he thought he could do to help bring men to a saving knowledge of the truth. His reply was, "I cannot go about from village to village and plead with men as I could wish, but I can plead day and night with God to have mercy upon others as He has had upon me. When my friends and neighbors call to see me I will tell them of the precious Saviour I have found, and entreat them to trust in Him."

To the end of life he proved a faithful witness for the truth. His aged and widowed mother, older brother and wife, an aged aunt, and, in all, upward of fifty of his kindred and neighbors, have united with the church. Many of them stated that their first interest in Christianity was awakened by seeing what the Gospel had done for this afflicted believer. One man of seventy-five years, when applying for baptism, was asked what led him to study the evidences of Christianity. He replied, "It was when I saw the change that faith in the Gospel made in my son. My life was made miserable by his gambling, his profligate and ungrateful life. After he began to visit the home of the palsied man and study the new religion, a wonderful change came over him. Now his life is without blemish, and I am sure that such a religion must be from heaven."

PROPHETIC NOTES.

The fourth edition of Mr. G. H. Pember's work on "Earth's Earliest Ages," which has recently been published in England, contains the following remarks on prophecy, among other interesting matter:

The Translation of Enoch.

In the translation of Enoch before the terrible times of Noah we have a type of the manner in which the waiting Church will be presently summoned to meet Christ in the air, and so to be ever with Him, before the corruption of the world comes to its worst, before the judgments of the day of the Lord commence. For the world heard no sound of a trumpet, saw no lightning flash, when Enoch was suddenly removed; he merely disappeared, and his companions, perhaps, knew not at first whither he had gone. Nay, it may be that they vainly sought him, even as the sons of the prophets sought Elijah for three days amid the mountains and valleys of Jericho. And so, probably, will it be at the translation of the Church; the Saviour will come unexpectedly, as a thief in the night, and steal away His own from the unsuspecting world. Their beds will be found vacant in the morning, or they will vanish from their customary places in the day; there will be no farewells to those whom they love, but have been unable to entice into their own paths; all that may be recorded of their end will be as the record of Enoch's departure. They were not; for God took them.

Satan Cast Down to the Earth.

In the twelfth chapter of the Apocalypse it is plainly announced that, before the development of Antichrist and the unparalleled woes of the end, Satan and his angels will be driven out of heaven, swept down from their aërial abodes, and confined to the narrow bounds of earth. Then will all the Nephilim, who are yet at liberty, be among men, and will quickly make them feel the meaning of that awful utterance, "Woe to the inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! for the Devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." Then, not merely the demons, but the great Angels of Darkness, the Principalities, the Powers, and the World-rulers, maddened by the thought that they have lost their fair realms forever, and that the Lord is at hand to complete their destruction, will in their rage break through every restraint, and recklessly gratify their own evil desires. And so, in the most appalling sense, the earth will again become corrupt and filled with violence.

The Mission of Spiritualism.

For this terrible inroad Spiritualism appears to be preparing the way. The army of demons has been sent forth in advance to bring about a universal apostasy from God and denial of Christ, and to establish a general communication between the Powers of Darkness and the children of disobedience. Years ago these demons predicted the future appearance upon earth of spiritual beings in material bodies; what has been their aim but to open men's hearts for the reception of the banished angels? Manifestations are continually increasing in power; appearances of tangible forms from the unseen world are matters of common occurrence; women are being taught that they are the wives of angels; the world is becoming accustomed to supernatural visitants! Surely the Prince of the Air must have heard that the legions of Michael are marching, and is hastily preparing his place of retreat.

Demoniacal Communications.

The chief features of the days of Noah are reappearing, and, above all, a free communication has been established between the spirits of the air and the human race, with a view, apparently, to a sojourn once more of Nephilim upon earth. Unlawful secrets, known in past times only to those few who seem to have acted as Satan's agents in directing the course of this world, are now recklessly offered to all men. The remembrance of that appalling scene, when their brethren were hurled by omnipotent lightnings into pits of darkness, would seem to be fading from the minds of the fallen angels; and the usual course of sin, most frightful of insanities, is urging them on to the brink of the precipice from the abysmal depths of which the groans of their miserable companions ascend. Meanwhile, numbers of the puny inhabitants of earth are ready, at their bidding, to essay any deeds of madness. For not a few even of the learned and wise, unable by reason of vanity to maintain the bare conception of a God, unless His awful majesty be displayed before their eyes, have resolved, either avowedly or virtually, that there is none greater than themselves, or, at least, than their possibility.

Satan's Forces Organizing.

All things seem to be prepared for the fulfilment of the solemn prediction in the twelfth chapter of the Apocalypse, when Michael, leading the van of the host which will come with Christ to take the kingdom, shall drive the rebel High Ones down to earth. And in the following chapter we see the consequences of that marvellous event; the peoples of Satan's last refuge, of the only remaining portion of his once vast dominions, must be organized for the final struggle. And so, out of the troubled sea of anarchy and perplexity of nations there arises, in greater majesty and power than it ever before possessed, the resuscitated empire of Rome under the immediate direction and government of the Wicked One.

A JAPANESE SUPERSTITION.

In a letter from Yokohama, Japan, to the Missionary Link, Miss Crosby says: "This is the Japan National Thanksgiving Day, and answers, in one sense, to the 'Feast of Ingathering' among the Jews, for it is observed in acknowledgment of the abundant harvests and rich fruitage which have rewarded the labor of the husbandman. But, alas! this tribute of a nation's gratitude is not rendered to Him who is the source of all their blessings, but to their own heathen deities, especially to Jimmu, the first Emperor of the present dynasty, who reigned more than twenty-five centuries ago, and is now worshipped by a large portion of the people—those professing the Shintoo faith. All the emperors who succeeded him have been considered divine, even down to the time when the present sovereign began to reign, and they were always kept in the utmost seclusion. It was commonly believed that if any one should see the Emperor he would become blind. Now, however, we have reason to thank God that this ancient superstition, and all the other forms of idolatry which have so long prevailed, are dying out before the light of the Gospel!

"To-day the Christians all over Japan are raising their hearts and voices in praise of the 'only living and true God,' not only for abundant harvests, but for the blessed 'ingathering of souls' which has crowned the year now drawing to a close. All over the country the feeling of hatred to Christianity has given place to a spirit of inquiry into the truth, and the many restrictions that formerly existed on account of the opposition of the government to the Gospel, have been withdrawn. The great danger from which the Church should now pray to be preserved is the adoption of a mere form of Christianity, as a part of western civilization."

CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

OFFICE, 63 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-Class Matter.

EVERY NUMBER CONTAINS:

The Portrait and Biography of some eminent person.
The Sermon Dr. Talmage preached the previous Sunday morning.
An Exposition of Unfulfilled Prophecy.
A Summary of the Events of the Week, Notes of Religious and Temperance Movements, etc.
A Sermon by Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, of London, from advance sheets sent by special arrangement.
Pictures of Missionary Life, etc., and Descriptive Articles.
An instalment of a Serial Story.
An Exposition of the International Sunday-School Lesson, by Mrs. M. Baxter.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50.

Remittances by mail should be by bank cheques, Post-office orders, or Express money-orders whenever possible. If currency is sent it should be in a registered letter. Cheques and money-orders should be made payable to The Christian Herald. Making them payable to individuals often causes delay.

New subscriptions may commence at any time. When subscribers do not indicate their wish, they commence with the first number of the month in which the subscription is received.

The paper will be sent to any address for two months for twenty-five cents.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The New Secretary of the Treasury is, as was expected, Mr. Charles S. Fairchild. The appointment was made on Thursday last. It gives general satisfaction in banking and business circles, because it implies that there will be no change in the policy of the department. Mr. Fairchild has been Assistant-Secretary since the commencement of the administration, and during Mr. Manning's illness he was Acting-Secretary. It is understood that Mr. Manning strongly recommended him as his successor, and that the recommendation was indorsed by financiers who have business with the Treasury. Like Mr. Manning, he belongs to the Tilden wing of the party, and was one of the men who strenuously supported Mr. Tilden in reforming the politics of New York State. The office of Assistant-Secretary, which Mr. Fairchild vacates, is to be filled by Mr. Isaac Maynard, who has hitherto held the office of Controller.

An Important Result from the Interstate Commerce law was announced on March 30th. At a meeting of representatives of the various railroads included in the Central Traffic Association with the Trunk Line Executive Committee, it was resolved to "abolish absolutely and forever" the payment of commissions to agents, brokers, or scalpers for the sale of passenger tickets. Commissioner Fink describes this change as "one of the greatest reforms ever inaugurated in the railway passenger service of this country." Attempts have been repeatedly made to effect this change, but they have always failed. Now however, the railroads are confident of success as they will have the support of the new law. It is estimated that at present the commissions cost the railroads fully $5,000,000 a year.

The Report of the National Civil Service Reform League, which was published on March 30th, gives qualified praise to the administration. In the State Department the spirit and letter of the law have been loyally observed, but in the Post-Office, the Interior Department, and in the Internal Revenue Districts the League finds occasion for blame. The number of offices to which the law applies is 13,913 of which 5650 are in Washington. The League charges that Mr. Vilas has disregarded the principles of Civil Service Reform in dealing with those post-office positions which do not come under the Pendleton act. It says that in sixteen months the changes were fifty per cent, and in most cases offensive partisans of one party were discharged to make room for offensive partisans of the other party. Of 92 Presidential offices in Indiana the former incumbents of 83 were removed, and the employés have been almost entirely changed. Of 1800 fourth-class offices 1200 have been changed, and of the remaining 600 the emoluments are so small that the offices are not desirable. In the Interior Department the changes have been seventy-one per cent, and the League says that they have been generally for the worse. It is significant that although the leading organs of both parties are clamoring for a return to the spoils system, the people at the polls showed by their votes that they are opposed to retrogression. The League states that wherever the principles of civil service reform had been conspicuously violated the administration candidates were defeated. That is a hopeful fact. Where the people lead the politicians will surely follow.

The High License Bill Passed the New York Senate on Thursday by a vote of eighteen to fourteen, and was sent to the Governor. It applies only to the cities of New York and Brooklyn, an effort to extend its provisions to the whole State having failed in the Senate. The effect is to increase the cost of a beer license from $30 to $100, and of a spirit license from $250 to $1000. The Prohibitionists have opposed the bill as a half-hearted measure, that will disappoint the hopes of its advocates who expect it to diminish the sale of liquor. It is, however, a significant fact that the liquor trade as a whole is against the bill, which appears to indicate that they consider it injurious to their business. It is predicted that Governor Hill will veto the bill on the ground that it is "special legislation."

The Hospital Saturday and Sunday Collections in New York were tabulated and published by the committee last week. They deserve the attention of cities which have not yet adopted the system, and they also incidentally furnish in their details matter for reflection among the denominations. The total amount collected was $53,051.98, which is an increase on the collections of 1885 and 1884. In 1885 the total was $46,085, and in 1884 $36,542.75. The collections in churches amounted to $32,784.66. Of this total the Episcopal churches contributed $16,578; the Presbyterian, $6458; the Congregational $3520; Jewish, $1602; Methodist, $1402; Reformed Dutch, $1262, and Roman Catholic, $108.

At the Trial of the Men Charged with the murder of the Rev. George C. Haddock, the murdered Prohibitionist of Sioux City, Ia., startling evidence was given on March 28th. Leavitt, who has turned State's evidence, testified that he was present at a meeting of saloon-keepers when it was decided to hire two bullies to assault Mr. Haddock, and was present again later when $200 was offered to one man to do the work. He also swore that he saw Arensdorf fire the fatal shot, and saw Mr. Haddock fall. At the saloon-keepers' meeting Leavitt said the project of blowing up the houses in which Mr. Haddock and other Prohibitionists lived, was advocated. Another witness, who also swore that Arensdorf was the actual murderer, testified that he had been offered $500 to "do up Haddock," and that after the murder he received from Arensdorf and another saloon-keeper over $200 to go to San Francisco to avoid giving evidence. He was arrested there and brought to Sioux City as one of the conspirators. It is a strong point that his confession agreed in all material points with that of Leavitt, which unknown to him had been made three days previously. The trial causes intense excitement.

The Coercion Bill, the Technical Title of which is the Act for the Amendment of the Criminal Law in Ireland, was read a first time in the British House of Commons on April 1st. Its provisions are of a very stringent character, and if passed in its present form will place power in the hands of the executive which will render him almost absolute. In introducing the bill Mr. Balfour said that it gave magistrates power to examine witnesses on oath, even when no persons are charged with crime. To meet the difficulty of getting verdicts the jury system would be abolished altogether for certain classes of crime, giving the magistrate jurisdiction, with power to impose a maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment in cases of criminal conspiracy, boycotting, rioting, offences under the Whiteboy acts, assault on officers of the law, forcible and unlawful possession, and in cases of incitement of the foregoing offences. The bill also gave the Government power to change the venue of trial for murder, attempt to murder, aggravated crimes of violence and arson. This last provision, however, was afterward withdrawn. In explaining to the House the considerations which had induced the Government to propose legislation of so stringent a character, Mr. Balfour said that at the present moment there were 498 persons in Munster, 175 in Connaught, and 251 in Leinster under police protection. The paralysis of the courts of law was an evil necessary to be specially checked. It arose from the difficulty of inducing intimidated witnesses to speak out. In 755 cases 422 injured parties were so terrified that they refused to appear. When evidence was obtained juries declined, even in the clearest cases, to convict. The debate on the bill was continued until Friday night, when the Government put an end to it by the new system of cloture, which gives the Speaker power, when directed by a majority of the members present, to close the debate by putting the question to the vote. In this instance the Government had a majority of 108.

A Measure to Protect Irish Tenant Farmers from summary eviction and assist them to purchase their holdings was introduced in the British House of Lords on March 31st. It is a bill which would have done much to tranquillize Ireland had it been passed ten or fifteen years ago. Now it will not satisfy those classes of the Irish who are working for Home Rule and nothing else. The bill enlarges the class who may take advantage of Mr. Gladstone's bill of 1881, puts an end to summary evictions, and gives insolvent tenants increased facilities for compounding with their creditors. This last provision will probably encounter opposition in the Commons. It protects landowners from loss to a considerable extent while leaving the tradesman to whom the tenant may be indebted to bear the full brunt of the debtor's insolvency. Another landlord's clause is that which remits the rates due from the landlord when, owing to intimidation, he does not receive the rents of his property. This is fair, but it will very heavily increase the burdens of other classes. The really valuable part of the bill is that which gives a judge the power, while giving the landlord judgment, to stay execution for a specified time, leaving the tenant in possession.

"General Boulanger Continues the Man of the moment," says the New York Evening Post. "His reception on a recent Monday evening was attended by more than five thousand persons, and was a most brilliant affair. The comic papers, which are capital indicators of the political sentiment in Paris, all treat Boulanger with great respect, and all point to him as the central figure around which everything else revolves. A war between France and Germany will have its natural beginning in the summer of 1887." The same journal says: "It is certain now that the gravity and widespread nature of the earthquake in the Riviera was in no sense exaggerated in the first accounts. A tourist who has just visited Italy, and been through most of the towns that had suffered by the earthquake, says that no less than three thousand persons perished during the first day, and that probably one thousand more bodies will be found under the ruins of the various towns, judging from the number of persons who have disappeared who cannot be elsewhere than in the ruins. The only town which appears to have escaped anything like a serious disaster is Cannes, where the social gayeties were not even interrupted; and there is a slight return of confidence at Nice."

The Rev. M. Baxter Preached Three Times again last Sunday in the principal theatre of Richmond, Va. He had good audiences. Next Sunday he hopes to preach at Charleston, S. C.

A Remarkable Phenomenon, Analogous to that described by Josephus as preceding the capture of Jerusalem, is reported by an Austrian press correspondent. He says: "In Vidovec, a Hungarian village near Warasdin, the belief of an approaching war has seized hold of the entire population. A splendid Fata Morgana was observed during three consecutive days on the wide plains around the village. Enormous divisions of infantry, with scarlet caps, could be distinctly seen moving in the plains and performing exercises to the words of command of a colossal chief, whose sword was seen flashing in the air. The phenomena lasted several hours, and finally the soldiers disappeared in mid-air. The people stood awestruck in great crowds, and observed every movement of the phantom soldiers with breathless attention. Two gendarmes afterward went in the direction of the scene of action to see if any traces could be found, but of course in vain. The phenomenon is believed to have been a reflection of some infantry divisions manœuvring at a distance."

The Scheme of Mr. Hewitt, the Mayor of New York, for promoting temperance by opening a few saloons on Sundays is not appreciated by the temperance societies of the city. The first to express an opinion on the subject is the Manhattan, which passed resolutions containing the following unequivocal words: "Whereas Abram S. Hewitt, Mayor, and the Board of Excise, of this city, have united in a recommendation that the Legislature legalize the sale of intoxicating drinks on Sunday, Resolved, That this meeting solemnly protests against such legislation; that the Mayor and Excise Board deserve a most emphatic rebuke at the hands of every Christian and temperance man and woman; that the reasons for such action, as given by the Mayor, are neither satisfactory nor pertinent; that if foreign born citizens do not like the enforcement of our laws they are respectfully invited to seek the license they wish elsewhere."

Dr. Talmage's Tour in the West, from which he returned on Friday last, has impressed him very hopefully. In speaking of it in his weekly talk he said he had been, since he last saw his people, over most of the Western States, and had been in fifteen of their greatest cities. He had come back with three reports. The first report was prosperity. "I have never," said the doctor, "seen such signs of life in business—I would call it a boom if I did not dislike the word. The men who took Horace Greeley's advice were right. I would give the same advice to-day; nay, I would go myself, if any necessity was laid upon me, as I told some of the Western people." Dr. Talmage's second report was that prohibition prohibits. "No man in Kansas or Iowa can buy rum unless he is sick without perjuring himself. One clergyman told me he had seen but two drunken persons in fifteen months, and both of them had tins which they had brought from the East." Prohibition prohibited, and it was yet to cover the land. The doctor's third report was a wonderful religious awakening. There had not been such an awakening in many generations. All over the land an unusual interest was being taken in religion.

Two Little Children Wearing Tags have crossed the continent alone from San Francisco to New York, arriving here on March 29th. They are the sons of an engineer, and are respectively ten and three years of age. When their father was in California about a year ago he was obliged to leave them behind him, as he had two children besides and was unable to pay the fare East of the whole family. These two were placed in a public institution for safety. The father obtained work in New York and saved sufficient money to pay their expenses across the continent, but could not afford to leave his work to fetch them. A tag was therefore fastened to their clothes, and they were checked through. On the way they met with much kindness from officials and passengers, and were taken care of and directed to their destination. It is said that this is the first time that passengers so young have ever made that journey. That they did so safely is mainly due to the tags on their clothes, which, though they caused some amusement, plainly indicated their destination. It may be hoped that in their more perilous journey through life they may be directed to their heavenly Father and reach their eternal home in safety. In making that journey, as in this across the continent, they are less likely to stray if all who see them perceive whither they are bound (Heb. 11 : 14–16).

A Hunt for Buried Treasure Commenced at Nyack, N. Y., on April 1st. A local journal says that many residents of that village are almost frantic with the expectation of finding a fortune beneath the sand or under the huge rocks near the water. It is believed that many years ago a small boat-load of money was brought there and buried out of sight. At different times within the past few months stray foreign coins have been picked up in the neighborhood, and one is exhibited which was found in the crevice of one of the large rocks on Friday by a gentleman, who saw the edge of it glisten as he was walking along the beach. Without much difficulty he extracted the object which had aroused his curiosity and found it to be an old coin, the size of an American dollar, bearing the date of 1769. The inscription showed that it was coined in Spain, and is what is known as a Carolus dollar. The search now going on for the treasure, of which the dollar is supposed to have been a part, is quite likely to be unsuccessful, but that fact will not deter persons from engaging in it. If they would search with the same eagerness for that blessing which the Saviour compared to treasure hid in a field success would be certain, and the prize infinite in value (Matt. 13 : 44).

The Public Denunciation of a Fickle Lady was made recently in New Hampshire. A young man residing at New Castle became engaged to a Portsmouth lady, and was evidently sincerely in love with her. The love-making went on smoothly for some time, but recently, without any valid reason, the young lady dismissed her lover. His chagrin was excessive, and he determined to punish her. He has inserted a card in the local papers, and has had a number of circulars printed, setting forth the facts of the case, the wrongs he has endured, and concluding with a warning to "all strange young men who come to Portsmouth against keeping company with her." If his object was to annoy the young lady, he has probably succeeded; but if it was to save the "strange young men" from falling victims to her charms, he will surely fail. Warnings are proverbially powerless in such cases. Each young man will believe that he, at least, will escape the fate of the others. Unhappily, the same disposition operates with respect to the warnings of the Bible, which are really disinterested. Among the young men who are caught in the traps set for their ruin are many who are familiar with warnings backed by the wisdom of Solomon and confirmed by the testimony of men of all generations (Prov. 12 : 15).

The Trials of Governors are Graphically Described by the Albany Times in an article discussing the question of the pardoning power. It states that the public has no idea of the painful position in which governors are often placed in reference to criminals. Standing as the governor does in many of the important cases of application for pardon or commutation between the promptings of pity on one hand and the sense of duty on the other, the power is one that no man can envy. Some emotional scenes have ensued in the Executive Chamber when near ones have sought to save a loved one's life, and knew that the one man's word could grant the wish. The wife of Governor John A. Dix, of New York, bore testimony to the nights of pain and torture during which he traversed his room, rent with the conflicting emotions of pity and justice. The mother of young Walworth brought her passionate grief, in all her noble beauty, to bear upon Samuel J. Tilden in a plea for the pardon of her son, and he could only take arms against the plea by flight. The aged father of the murderer Hovey fell on his knees before Governor Cleveland and pleaded as only a heart-broken father could for his son's life. Every one can understand this difficulty, and can see why a governor may be constrained to refuse a pardon though he may be the most merciful of men. It is strange, therefore, that it is so difficult to get men to perceive that Christ's atonement was necessary, and how it has made pardon possible for those who appropriate it by faith (Rom. 3 : 24–26).

The Owl-Like Visual Powers of a Young Man in California are described in a journal of that State. It says that, residing in Lincoln, Placer County, is a youth whose eyes possess the peculiarities of those of an owl. He can see but little in daylight, scarcely at all in the sunlight, but at night his vision is perfect; he can penetrate the darkness with his peculiarly-shaped and nocturnally constructed eyes and distinguish objects at long distances when the ordinary individual cannot see his hand before him. His wonderful sight has been tested by many, and, as a guide at night he has no equal. It would appear, however, that his advantages as a whole are not greater than those of ordinary people, as he is as liable to walk into danger in the daylight as they are in the dark. In his spiritual walk he is in the same condition as other people; like them he will be safe only if he walks by faith, not by sight (II Cor. 5 : 7).

BRIEF NOTES.

Mr. H. H. Hunnewell has given to the town of Wellesley, Mass., a hall, park site, and library, the value of the gift being $250,000.

Sam Jones will hold a six weeks' series of evangelistic meetings in the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, beginning his labors there next week.

More than fifty of the pupils of a Chinese mission school at Portland, Oregon, under the care of the Woman's Board of the United Brethren, have professed faith in Christ and united with the church.

Messrs. Whittle and M'Granahan are holding meetings at Mercer, Pa. Their meetings at New Wilmington, Pa., were attended by large audiences from the town and country, and much good resulted.

Mr. Charles Herald, the well-known Gospel singer, has been conducting musical evangelistic services at York, Pa., and Wilmington, Del. The pastors in both cities speak very gratefully of the blessing which has followed his labors.

Rev. Thomas Harrison, having completed his labors in Charlestown, Mass., is about to begin a revival campaign at Lynn, Mass. He has recently suffered a bereavement. His venerable and beloved father has been called to his reward.

The Canadian evangelists, Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, are conducting revival meetings in Grace Episcopal Church, Chicago. Unusual religious interest prevails in that congregation, where Mr. Sankey has assisted in the special services.

The Rev. Edward Judson, D.D., whose work in connection with the Berean Church in New York is well known, has paid a visit to Mobile, Ala. His earnest exhortation to increased efforts for city evangelization has stirred up Christians of that city to organized work.

The revival at the Ohio Wesleyan University has attained large proportions. Over one hundred persons have been converted, and a still greater number who were becoming careless have been quickened. Seventy-five young men in the institution are now preparing for the ministry.

A Congregational church and Sunday-school will shortly be opened at Coney Island. This is much needed, as in the summer the persons staying at the hotels there have been tempted by the lack of church accommodation to spend the day in idleness and frivolity. Mr. and Mrs. A. Alford, of Brooklyn, have exerted themselves to secure possession of the Brighton Chapel for the purpose.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, The Christian Herald. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of Christian Herald, 63 Bible House, New York. FIVE PRIZES will be given on June 30th to the canvassers who have sold the largest number of copies each week between May 1st and that date. The two at the head of the list will receive ten dollars each and the next three five dollars each.

THE NEED OF THE AGE.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"O thou that art named the house of Jacob, is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? are these His doings? do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?" Micah 2 : 7.

Men Unworthy of their Name—The Remedy for Degeneracy—A Message About the Holy Spirit—I. To Those who would Control Him—By Silence—By Choosing His Messengers—By Opposition—II. To Those who Censure Him—For the State of the Church—For the Condition of the World—For the Lack of Power—III. To Those who Trust Him—For Power—For Leaders—For the World's Conversion—IV. To Seekers—A Testimony from a Lighthouse.

Brethren, what a stern rebuke to the people of Israel is contained in the title with which the prophet addressed them, "O thou that art named the house of Jacob!" The words of Micah imply that the descendants of Jacob in his day were proud of the name of "house of Jacob," but that they were not worthy of it. Nothing is more mischievous than to cling to a name when the thing for which it stands has disappeared. May we never come to such a stage of declension, that even the Spirit of God will be compelled, in speaking to us, to say, "O thou that art called the Church of God!"

When the Lord found His chosen people to be in such a state that they had rather the name than the character of His people, He spoke to them of the Spirit of the Lord. Was not this because their restoration must come from that direction? If we ourselves feel that we are backsliding, let us turn to the Spirit of God, crying, "Quicken Thou me in Thy way." If we sorrowfully perceive that any Church is growing lukewarm, be it our prayer that the Holy Spirit may work graciously for its revival. Let us direct the attention of our fellow-Christians under declension to the Spirit of God. They are not straitened in Him, but in themselves; let them turn to Him for enlargement.

Unpopular Prophets.

I. I think we may consider these words to have been spoken to denounce those who would control the Spirit of God. "Is the Spirit of the Lord straitened?" Can you hold Him a captive, and make Him speak at your dictation? On turning to the connection, you will find that there were certain prophets sent of God to Israel who were unpopular. The message which they brought was not acceptable; the people could not endure it; and so we read in the sixth verse: "Prophesy ye not, say they to them that prophesy: they shall not prophesy to them, that they shall not take shame." The words of these prophets came so home to their consciences and made them so ashamed of themselves, that they said, "Do not prophesy: we wish not to hear you." To these Micah replies, "Is the Spirit of the Lord to be straitened by you?"

There were some in those days who would altogether have silenced the Spirit. They would banish all spiritual teaching from the earth, that the voice of human wisdom might be uncontradicted. But can they silence the Spirit of God? Has He not continually spoken according to His own will, and will He not continue to do so? While the Scriptures remain, the Holy Spirit will never be without a voice to the sons of men; and while He remains, those Scriptures will not be left without honest hearts and tongues to expound and enforce them.

The apostate Israelites also tried to straiten the Spirit of God by allowing only certain persons to speak in His name.

They Would Have a Choice of their prophets, and a bad choice, too. See in the eleventh verse: "If a man walking in the spirit and falsehood do lie, saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and of strong drink; he shall even be the prophet of this people." They had a liking for preachers who would indulge their lusts, pander to their passions, and swell their pride with windy flatteries. This age also inclines greatly to those who have cast off the restraints of God's revelation, and utter the flattering inventions of their own boasted "thought." Your liberal spirits, your large-hearted men, your despisers of the old and hunters after the new—these are

The Idols of Many.

Brethren, let me ask you, do you imagine that the Gospel is a nose of wax which can be shaped to suit the face of each succeeding age? Is the revelation once given by the Spirit of God to be interpreted according to the fashion of the period? Is "advanced thought" to be the cord with which the Spirit of the Lord is to be straitened? Is the old truth that saved men hundreds of years ago to be banished because something fresh has been hatched in the nests of the wise? My very soul boils within me when I think of the impudent arrogance of certain wilful spirits from whom all reverence for revelation has departed. Certain scriptural doctrines are, forsooth, discarded as dogmas of the mediæval period; others are denounced as gloomy because they cannot be called untrue. We are told that the teaching of God's ministers must be conformed to the spirit of the age. We shall have nothing to do with such treason to truth.

Certain of these backsliding Israelites went so far as to oppose the testimony of God. Note in the eighth verse—"Even of late My people is risen up as an enemy." It is sad when God's own people become the enemies of God's own Spirit; yet those who professed to be of the house of Jacob, instead of listening to the voice of the living God, began to sit in judgment upon His Word, and even to contradict the same.

The Worst Foes of the Truth

are not infidels, but false professors. These men called themselves God's people, and yet fought against His Spirit. "What, then," saith Micah, "is the Spirit of the Lord straitened?" Will the Spirit of God fail? Shall the Gospel be driven out of the world? Will there be none to believe it? none to proclaim it? none to live for it? none to die for it? We ask, with scorn, "Is the Spirit of the Lord straitened?" It is to be greatly lamented that so many have turned aside unto vanities, and are now the enemies of the Cross; but fear ye not, for the victory is in sure hands. O ye that would control the Spirit of God, remember who He is, and bite your lips in despair; what can ye do against Him? Thus much upon the first use of our text.

Censurers of the Spirit

II. The second use of it is this, to silence those who would censure the Spirit. Some even dare to bring accusations against the Holy Spirit of God. Read the text again: "O thou that art named the house of Jacob, is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? are these His doings?" If aught be amiss, is He to be blamed for it? The low estate of the Church, is that to be laid at God's door? It is true that the Church is not so full of life, and energy, and power, and spirituality, and holiness as she was in her first days, and therefore some insinuate that the Gospel is an antique and an effete thing; in other words, that the Spirit of God is not so mighty as in past ages. Instead of blaming the Holy Ghost, would it not be better for us to smite upon our breasts and chasten our hearts? What if the Church is not "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners," as once she was; is not this because the Gospel has not been fully and faithfully preached, and because those who believe it have not lived up to it with the earnestness and holiness which they ought to have exhibited? Is not that the reason? In any case, are these His doings? God forbid! we cannot blame the Holy One of Israel. Then it is said "Look at

The Condition of the World.

After the Gospel has been in it nearly two thousand years, see how small a part of it is enlightened, how many cling to their idols, how much of vice, and error, and poverty, and misery are to be found in the world!" We know all these sad facts; but are these His doings? Tell me, when has the Holy Spirit created darkness or sin? What if the world be still an Augean stable, greatly needing cleansing; has the Spirit of God in any degree or sense rendered it so? Where the Gospel has been fully preached, have not the words of the Lord done good to them that walk uprightly? Have not cannibals, even during the last few years, been reclaimed and civilized? How, then, can the Spirit of Christ, the Spirit of the Gospel, be blamed? Will you attribute the darkness to the sun? It were quite as just and quite as sensible. No, we admit the darkness, and the sin, and the misery of men. But these are not the work of the Spirit of God. These come of the spirit from beneath. He that is from above would heal them. These are not His doings.

But some have said, "Yes, but then see how few the conversions are nowadays! We have many places of worship badly attended, we have others where there are from the beginning of the year to the end of it." This is all granted, and granted with great regret; but "is the Spirit of the Lord straitened; are these His doings?" Cannot we find some other reason far more near the truth? Has Christ been preached? Has faith been exercised? The preacher must take his share of blame; the Church with which he is connected must also inquire whether there has been that measure of prayer for a blessing on the Word that there ought to have been. Christians must begin to look into their own hearts to find the reason for defeat. Have ye never read, "He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief"? But it is also said that there is largely manifested by individual saints Where are now the men who can go up to the top of Carmel and cover the heavens with clouds? Where are the apostolic men who convert nations? Where are the heroes and martyr spirits of the better days? Our degeneracy is not His doing. We have destroyed ourselves, and only in Him is our help found. Instead of crying to-day, "Awake, awake, O arm of the Lord," we ought to listen to the cry from heaven which saith, "Awake, awake, O Zion; Shake thyself from the dust, and put on thy beautiful garments." Many of us might have done great exploits if we had but given our hearts thereto. We are straitened in ourselves; we have not reached out to the possibilities of strength which lie within grasp. Let us not wickedly insinuate a charge against the good Spirit of our God; but let us in truthful humility blame ourselves.

Scarcely Any Conversions

A Want of Power

III. In the third place, our subject enters a more pleasing phase, while I use it to encourage

Those who Trust in the Spirit of the Lord. My brethren, let us this morning with joy remember that the Spirit of the Lord is not straitened. Let this meet our trouble about our own straitness. What narrow and shallow vessels we are! How soon we are empty! We wake up on the Sabbath morning and wonder where we shall find strength for the day. Do you not sigh, "Alas! I cannot take my Sunday-school class to-day with any hope of teaching with power; I am so dreadfully dull and heavy; I feel stupid and devoid of thought and feeling"? In such a case say to yourself, "Is the Spirit of the Lord straitened?" He will help you. As a minister of Christ I have constantly to feel my own straitness. Perhaps more than any other man I am faced by my own inefficiency and inability to address such an audience so often, and to print all that is spoken. Who is sufficient for these things? I do not feel half as capable of addressing you now as I did twenty years ago. I sink as to conscious personal power, though I have a firmer faith than ever in the all-sufficiency of God. No, the Spirit of the Lord is not straitened. Come, you that seem to plough the rock and till the sand, come and lay hold of this fact, that the Spirit of the Lord is omnipotent. No rock will remain unbroken when He wields the hammer, no metal will be unmelted when He is the fire. Still will our Lord put His Spirit within us and gird us with His power, according to His promise, "As thy days, so shall thy strength be."

This also meets another matter—namely, the lack of honored leaders. We cry at this time, "Where are the eminent teachers of years gone by?" The Lord has made a man more precious than the gold of Ophir. Good and great men were the pillars of the Church in former times, but where are they now? Renowned ministers have died, and where are their successors? I am not among those who despair for the good old cause; but certainly I would be glad to see the Elishas who are to succeed the Elijahs who have gone up. Oh, for another Calvin or Luther! He who found a Moses to face Pharaoh, and Elijah to face Jezebel, can find a man to confront the adversaries to-day.

Brethren, the great truth now before us may prevent our being dismayed by

The Peculiar Character of the Age

in which we live. It is full of a terrible unrest. The earthquake in the Riviera is only typical of a far greater disturbance which is going on everywhere. The foundations of society are quivering; the corner-stones are starting. No man can foretell what the close of this century may see. The age is growing more and more irreverent, unbelieving, indifferent. The men of this generation are even more greedy of gain, more in haste after their ambitions, than those that preceded them. They are fickle, exacting, hungering after excitement and sensation. Here comes in the truth—"The Spirit of the Lord is not straitened." Was not the Gospel intended for every age, and for every condition of human society? Will it not meet the case of London and Ireland as well as the case of the old Roman Empire, in the midst of which it first began its course? It is even so, O Lord!

But, then, sometimes we are troubled because of the hardness of men's hearts. You that work for the Lord know most about this. If anybody thinks that he can change a heart by his own power, let him try with any one he pleases, and he will soon be at a nonplus. Did I hear you cry, "Alas! I have tried to reclaim a drunkard, and he has gone back to his degradation"? Yes, he has beaten you, but is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? Do you cry, "But he signed the pledge, and yet he broke it"? Very likely your bonds are broken; but is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? Cannot He renew the heart, and cast out the love of sin? When the Spirit of God works with your persuasions, your convert will keep His pledge. "Alas!" cries another, "I hoped I had rescued a fallen woman, but she has returned to her iniquity."

No Unusual Thing

this with those who exercise themselves in that form of service; but is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? Cannot He save the woman that was a sinner? Cannot He create a surpassing love to Jesus in her forgiven spirit? We are baffled, but the Spirit is not. "But it is my own boy," cries a mother. "Alas! I brought him up tenderly from his youth, but he has gone astray. I cannot persuade him to hear the Word; I cannot do anything with him." Dear mother, register that confession of inability, and then by faith write at the bottom of it, "But the Spirit of the Lord is not straitened."

Ah well! says one, but I am oppressed with the great problem which lies before the Church. London is to be rescued, the world is to be enlightened. Think of India, China, and the vast multitudes of Africa. Is the Gospel to be preached to all these? Are the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdoms of our Lord? How can these things be! Judge after the sight of the eyes and the hearing of the ears, and the thing is quite beyond all hope. But is the Spirit of the Lord straitened? Surely the good Lord means to convince the Church of her own powerlessness, that she may cast herself upon the divine might. Looking around she can see no help for her in her enterprise; let her look up and who will bring her deliverance. Amid apparent helplessness the Church is rich in secret succors. When the time cometh for the Lord to make bare His arm, we shall see greater things than these, and then we shall wrap our faces in a veil of blushing confusion to think that we ever doubted the Most High. Behold, the Son of Man cometh; shall He find faith among us? Shall He find it anywhere on the earth? The Lord help us to feel in our darkest hour that His arm is not shortened!

Watch for His Coming

IV. I must close by remarking that this text may be used to direct after better things. I hope that in this audience there are many who are desiring to be at peace with God through Jesus Christ. You are already convinced of sin, but you are by that conviction driven to despondency and almost to despair. Now notice this: whatever grace you need in order to salvation the Holy Spirit can work it in you. You want a more tender sense of sin. You want to be able to perceive the way of salvation; can he not instruct you? You want to be able to take the first step to Christ; Do you cry, "I would believe, but I cannot tell how"?

Those who are Seeking

The Spirit will help you to believe. He can shed such light into your mind, that faith in Christ shall become an easy and a simple thing with you. The Spirit of God is not straitened: he can bring you out of darkness into his marvellous light. If you are quite driven from all reliance on your own natural power, then cry unto him, "Lord, help me!" The Holy Spirit has come on purpose to work all our works in us. It is His office to take of the things of Christ and to show them unto us. Yield yourself to His direction. Be willing and obedient, and He will lead you into all truth.

May I invite you to remember how many persons have already found joy, peace, and salvation by believing the teaching of the Spirit of God? In the text the question is asked, "Do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?" Many of us can bear testimony to-day that the word of the Lord is not word only, but power. It has done good to us.

Life In a Lighthouse.

I am like the good man and his wife who had kept a lighthouse for years. A visitor who came to see the lighthouse, looking out from the window over the waste of waters, asked the good woman, "Are you not afraid of a night when the storm is out and the big waves dash right over the lantern? Do you not fear that the lighthouse and all that is in it will be carried away?" The woman remarked that the idea never occurred to her now. She had lived there so long that she felt as safe on the lone rock as ever she did when she lived on the mainland. As for her husband, when asked if he did not feel anxious when the wind blew a hurricane, he answered, "Yes, I feel anxious to keep the lamps well trimmed, and the light burning, lest any vessel should be wrecked." As to anxiety about the safety of the lighthouse, or his own personal security in it, he had outlived all that. Even so it is with me; "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed to Him against that day." From henceforth let no man trouble me with doubts and questionings; I bear in my soul the proofs of the Spirit's truth and power, and I will have none of your artful reasonings. My one concern is to keep the lamps burning, that I may thereby enlighten others. Only let the Lord give me oil enough to feed my lamp, so that I may cast a ray across the dark and treacherous sea of life, and I am well content. Now, troubled seeker, if it be so, that your minister and many others in whom you confide have found perfect peace and rest in the Gospel, why should not you?

In conclusion, just a hint to you. The words of God do good to those who walk uprightly. If they do no good to you, may it not be that you are walking crookedly? Have you given up all secret sin? How can you hope to get peace with God if you live according to your own lusts? Give up the hopeless hope. You must come right out from the love of sin if you would be delivered from the guilt of sin. You cannot have your sin and go to heaven; you must either give up sin or give up hope. "Repent" is a constant exhortation of the Word of God. Quit the sin which you confess. Is the Spirit of God straitened? No, His words "do good to them that walk uprightly," and if you in sincerity of heart will quit your sin, and believe in Christ, you also shall find peace, and hope, and rest. Try it, and see if it be not so. Amen.

[The prayers of the readers of this Journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its Editors, and those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of many sinners and the quickening of God's people. Dr. Talmage and Mr. Spurgeon especially request prayer every Sunday morning on behalf of their labors.]

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

A FOUR DAYS' COMBAT IN A PRISON.

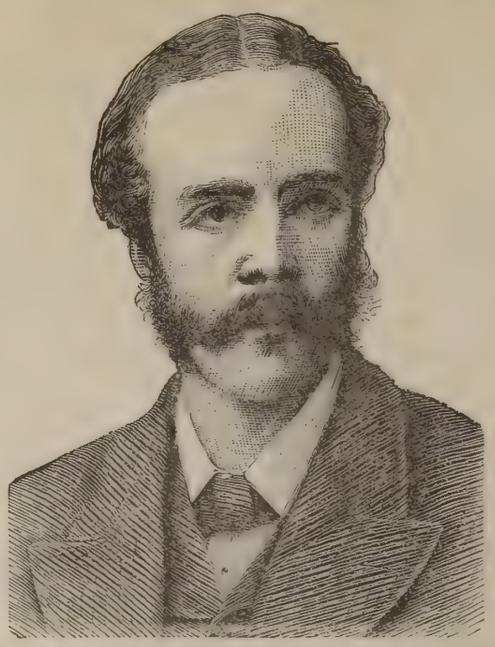
After the execution of the archbishop and his five companions, one of whom was Chief Justice Bonjeau, the prison was the scene of one of the most extraordinary incidents connected with the Commune; and when I visited the prison afterward, the guardian said he wanted to show me that portion of the prison in which it occurred. It was a struggle between the national guard and some prisoners, whom it had been determined by the Commune authorities to murder. On Friday, May 26th, thirty-eight gendarmes and sixteen priests were conducted from La Roquette prison to Père la Chaise, and there shot. The next day, May 27th, as the Versailles troops approached nearer and nearer the Commune, the Committee of Public Safety, which had sought La Roquette as a place of refuge, issued an order to shoot in cold blood all the priests, soldiers, and Sergents de Ville who were still in the prison. These fiends installed themselves in the office of the register of the prison for the purpose of seeing their orders carried out. On the afternoon of the 25th of May everything was got ready for this promiscuous assassination. One of the jailers, M. Pinet, who had observed all that was going on, and had been advised of what was to take place, determined, if possible, to save the prisoners, even at the sacrifice of his own life. Just before the order was to be given for them to be taken down into the court, he rushed in and opened all their cells and told the prisoners that it had been determined to murder them, and charged each one to arm himself with whatever he could get into his hands for the purpose of defence.

The guardian took me into the room where a fearful contest had then taken place. The prisoners had fastened the doors, and built barricades inside, behind which they could defend themselves when attacked. Mattresses had been put up, but these were set on fire for the purpose of suffocating the men behind them. The whole place presented to me the most extraordinary appearance. Every possible effort was made by the Communards to capture the prisoners, who defended themselves with the energy of despair; and this desperate attack continued for four days. Finding that they could not capture them by force, they then resorted to seduction, assuring them that they were there simply for the purpose of restoring the prisoners to liberty. Unfortunately, some priests and soldiers who were prisoners allowed themselves to be deceived by these wretches, and were persuaded to leave their defences, expecting to be placed at liberty. No sooner, however, were they outside than they were all seized and shot.

The night of Saturday, the 27th, in the prison was one of the most extraordinary and horrible that could be conceived of. The prison was surrounded by howling crowds uttering menac-

* From "The Downfall of the Commune," by the Hon. E. Washburne, formerly United States minister to France. He was the only foreign minister who remained in Paris during the terrible time in 1870, when the city was in the possession of the anarchists. He visited the archbishop of Paris, who was afterward murdered, and vainly endeavored to secure his release. Mr. Washburne's narrative is therefore the narrative of an eye witness. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

The Late Dr. Ray Palmer.



Mr. A. J. Balfour, M. P., the New Irish Secretary.

Eric Folke, the Swedish Missionary.

ing cries, and as the prisoners began to see some chance of escape, they grew more determined in their defence. At last, at daybreak, on Sunday, May 28th, there came to the besieged victims the sound of the musketry-firing of the Versailles troops, and at half-past five in the morning the barricade opposite the prison was carried by a vigorous attack of the infantry of marine which then took possession of the building. The assassins, who for some time had been on the look-out for the advance of the Versailles troops, prepared themselves for their escape. Unfortunately, too many of them got away. There were ten ecclesiastics, forty Sergents de Ville, and eighty-two soldiers of the line who were restored to liberty after four days of combat and of cruel agony which it is impossible to describe.

THE LATE REV. RAY PALMER, D.D.

(See Portrait on this page.)

On Tuesday of last week, March 29th, Dr. Palmer, the Christian poet, whose hymns are sung in Christian homes and churches all over the world, breathed his last at his home in Newark, N. J. Early in March he was seized with paralysis for the third time. Fears of immediate dissolution were aroused, but he rallied a little, and his family hoped that he might recover. On March 27th, however, he had a relapse, became unconscious, and two days later he died. His son, the Rev. Charles Ray Palmer, of Bridgeport, and his two daughters, with Mrs. Lansing, a cousin of his deceased wife, were with him at the last. His remains were borne to the grave on Thursday after a brief service in the Belleville Avenue Congregational Church, in which his intimate friends, Dr. William Hayes Ward, Dr. A. J. F. Behrends, Dr. William M. Taylor, and Dr. G. H. Hepworth, took part.

Dr. Palmer's portrait and life having appeared in this journal on April 15th, 1886, a brief summary of the leading features of his career and work is all that is required here. He was born at Little Compton, R. I., on November 12th, 1808, and was therefore nearly seventy-nine years old when he died. He was intended for a commercial life, but while occupying a position in a large business house in Boston, Mass., he showed so strong a predilection for the ministry that he was sent to Phillips' Academy, Andover, and subsequently to Yale College. He graduated in 1830, and after two years spent in teaching he accepted a call to the Central Congregational Church, at Bath, Me., where he preached from 1835 to 1850. Then he moved to Albany, where he preached in the First Congregational Church until 1866, when he retired from regular preaching to become secretary of the American Congregational Union. While at Albany he received from Union College, in 1852, the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He contributed voluminously to periodicals, and wrote many books. His first important work was "The Spirit's Life," a poem published in 1837. Among his other works were "Spiritual Improvement," 1839; "Reminiscences," 1865; "Hymns for my Holy Hours," 1867; "Home; or, the Unlost Paradise," a poem in four parts, 1872; "Earnest Words on True Success in Life," 1873. His hymns are sung by all denominations, and true Christians, whatever their church connection, find in them expression of their highest and best feelings. His best-known hymn, commencing, "My faith looks up to Thee," has been translated into more than a dozen languages.

MR. A. J. BALFOUR, M.P.

(See Portrait on this page.)

In accepting a seat in the British Cabinet as Secretary for Ireland, Mr. Balfour has proved his courage if not his fitness for office. The position is a thankless and uncomfortable one, for the man who holds it is the target for the attacks of the whole company of Irish members of Parliament. He cannot satisfy them, and they take a delight in rendering his life a burden by incessant questioning. The British Parliamentary practice is for any member who conceives that he, or the people he represents in the House, has a grievance against the Government to give notice that on a certain night he will ask a question of the member of the Cabinet at the head of the department which has committed the alleged sin of omission or commission. In putting the question he can not only test the accuracy of information possessed by the official, but he can express his opinion of the course the official has pursued. It is easy to see how the ingenuity, wit, and pertinacity of the Irish brigade may try the patience of an Englishman whose duty it is to attend to Irish affairs.

Mr. A. J. Balfour is the ninth man who has held this office in less than seven years, and it may be doubted whether any of the nine, Mr. John Morley, perhaps, alone excepted, has any desire to return to it. Mr. Balfour is likely to have a worse time there than his predecessors, as it has become his duty to introduce and defend a line of policy with respect to Ireland peculiarly odious to Mr. Parnell and his colleagues. He is a younger man than usually occupies the post, having been born in 1848, and being, therefore, under forty years of age. Probably he owes the appointment to the fact that he is the son of Lady Cecil, the sister of the Marquis of Salisbury. He was formerly private secretary to his uncle, the Premier.

MR. ERIC FOLKE.

(See Portrait on this page.)

The young Swedish evangelist whose portrait appears on this page is one of the most recent additions to the number of Christ's heralds in China. Early last summer he went to England from Sweden, knowing very few words of English, and was one of the first students to enter the Missionary Training Home, believing that God had called him to preach the Gospel among the millions of China. He is a graduate of Upsala University, and has been a most successful evangelist. He stated in an address which he gave recently in explanation of his principles and motives, that he was going out in entire dependence on God for support, and that he had already received abundant proofs that God would supply all his needs. When he first entertained the hope that he might be privileged to go out to China to preach the Gospel he told no one of his desire, but prayed to God about it. Without asking any one for money the funds to pay for his voyage to England came to him, and his education and training had been completed in the same way. Only a few days before making the address the sum of $190 had been sent to him from Sweden in answer to prayer.

MINNIE'S HEART OVERCOME BY PRAYER.

(See Illustration on page 221.)

There were whisperings and shakings of the head and heavy sighs in the nursery at the Beeches when the news came that Mr. Enderwood was about to be married. Mrs. Osborn, the nurse, and Miss Wilmot, the governess, and Rachel, the children's maid, discussed the intelligence together and cast pitying looks on the four young children of whom they had taken charge since Mr. Enderwood became a widower.

"Poor little things!" said Mrs. Osborn, "I knows what stepmothers are; it'll go hard with the little dears."

"Ah, they'll be neglected now, I'll be bound!" said Rachel. "Of course we'll all be cleared out. New mistresses like their own folks about 'em. I shouldn't like to stay anyhow. I remember the first Mrs. Enderwood, and I shouldn't like to see any one in her place."

"What is it you are whispering about, nurse?" asked Minnie, the eldest of the four children, who had caught a word or two.

"Ah, my dear, it's bad news for you! You'd better tell her now, Miss Wilmot, she'll have to know soon."

Minnie was told, and the news was accompanied by gloomy forebodings of what her new mamma would do.

"I shall not have to call her mamma, shall I? She will not be my real mamma, you know."

"Your papa will insist on your doing that, I expect. Men always do what their second wives tell them."

Minnie looked solemn, but was silent, as her manner was when agitated. Herbert, her brother, however, who was a year younger and more impulsive, learning what was looming on the nursery horizon, spoke out. "I never will call her that, and I won't do what I am told, and I don't care if I'm spanked for it. I won't;" and the sturdy little fellow clenched his fists and already fired up with the martyr spirit.

"Ah, you ain't forgot your mamma, you ain't!" said Mrs. Osborn, approvingly, and with an invidious emphasis for Minnie's benefit. "But you'll be made to mind, I guess. Poor boy! it's a shame, that's what it is!"

Minnie's Capitulation.

The new Mrs. Enderwood's prospects of a peaceful, useful life at the Beeches certainly were not bright. Resistance and rebellion were being organized by the silly servants, who objected to a new mistress on their own account, and wished the children to fight their battle for them. It was a pity, for her heart was yearning with love for the bereaved little ones, and she had prayed earnestly that wisdom might be given to her to train them up for the Lord. She never doubted that she would win their love and confidence, and she hoped that she would receive help to do her duty well.

Her reception by the children astonished her. Herbert would not be kissed, and Minnie extended her hand in greeting with the most chilling politeness. The two younger ones were shy, and shrank from her into Rachel's arms. She was wounded, and for a moment tears gathered in her eyes. Mr. Enderwood saw them, understood their cause, and a frown settled on his brow.

"I am sorry about this, Marion," he said. "I ought to have told the children myself, instead of allowing them to be told by the servants. I will see to it that this sullenness does not annoy you again. I will speak to Minnie and Herbert about it."

"Leave it to me, dear," Mrs. Enderwood said. "I would prefer your not reproving them. It will all come right in a few days."

Mrs. Enderwood's prediction was fulfilled so far as Herbert and the younger ones were concerned, but with Minnie there seemed an insurmountable barrier of cold aversion. Herbert tried to thaw it in vain. Yes, Minnie admitted, the new Mrs. Enderwood was very beautiful; but that made no difference, she could never love her. Herbert might do as he chose; as for her, she should be faithful to her real mamma. The stepmother overheard one of these declarations, and was astonished at the quiet resolution and determination which the tone indicated. It grieved her, but it did not diminish her yearning for the child's love.

It was many weeks before the fortress of Minnie's heart capitulated. They were weeks of unfaltering kindness on the lady's part, and of sullen, impassive coldness on the child's. Mrs. Enderwood would have despaired but for her faith in God's power and His readiness to hear prayer. Constantly she prayed that this child's hard heart might be touched, and at last the answer came.

One evening after a trying scene, in which Minnie had been almost rude in her manner, and the stepmother had shed tears over the child's prejudice, Mrs. Enderwood threw a loose scarf around her shoulders and went to walk and meditate and offer silent prayer in the garden. It was very quiet there in the evening, and the sound of a stifled sob at a distance was distinctly heard. She listened, and soon heard a fierce, passionate burst of weeping, which lasted some minutes and was succeeded by a faint murmur which sounded like a prayer. A few minutes later Minnie came running out of a dense growth of shrubbery as if going to the house. But she saw her stepmother, and turning round ran to her, flung her arms around her waist, and then holding up a bunch of hastily gathered flowers as a peace offering, she sobbed, "Forgive me, mamma."

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 207.)

In the Village Inn.

THE party at the Chequers, sitting over their pipes and mugs of ale, discussed local and national affairs with plenty of spirit, if not with marked intelligence. If they were not well informed, they were possessed of abundant confidence in their own penetration, which in other circles besides that of a village alehouse often serves to make men respected by their audiences. A man who is sure that he is right and will assert his opinions with sufficient emphasis, will always have listeners who will think him a Solon, if he is careful not to be too severe on their prejudices, and save his acrimony for absent men and men in high position. This was a marked feature of the council at the Chequers, and it was no uncommon thing to hear the leading statesmen, authors, and preachers of the day brought up for judgment and sentenced by the self-constituted jury of miller, gamekeeper, cobbler, and blacksmith; Middledick, the landlord, listening sententiously and occasionally interposing a few words in the interest of peace and good-fellowship.

On this particular morning a literary question was introduced by the miller. In his weekly visit to the market town on the previous Saturday a gaily-painted picture in a news-vender's window had attracted his eye. He had gone into the store to purchase it, and finding that it formed the supplement to a magazine, he had bought that, too, and having hung the picture up over a soiled place on the wall of his sitting-room, had spent an idle hour in reading the magazine. One article interested him particularly and excited his curiosity. He decided to submit it to the opinion of the council at the Chequers at a convenient opportunity. Here was the opportunity, and though there was an interloper present in the person of Chivey Stevenson, the poacher who, it will be remembered, hurt Alfred Atheling's self-respect on one occasion by claiming fraternity with him—he did not count, being, as the miller said, "like a chip in milk, doing neither good nor harm." Producing the magazine from the pocket of his meal-besprinkled coat, he said: "Diz ony o' ye knoa a chap called Ralph Ravensworth? Ah've niver heard on him mysen, but he knoas all aboot Thorpe Aspen, ah reckon, or he niver could ha written this here." Straightway the miller read aloud a short story called "A Last Peep at the Old Home." It was the story of a young man who had broken the laws of his country, and who in his desperate love for his old home had ventured to visit it by stealth after nightfall. It told of his stolen peep through the window; of his heart-sickness and sorrow as he gazed on his mother's mournful face and silver hair; of his high resolves to lead a better life in a foreign land; of his discovery by a gamekeeper, so that he had to run for fear of discovery; and of his imaginary peril from a poacher as he was fleeing through the night. The story gave a life-like picture of the scenery of Aspendale, and especially of Aspen Garth. Before Peter had finished, Chivey Stevenson exclaimed with enthusiasm:

"That farm's Aspen Garth, an' that gamekeeper's Jake Benson. It's 'is varry pictur'."

Then suddenly recollecting his own sudden meeting with Alfred Atheling, and his kindly meant though stinging remark to that young outlaw, he said no more, unwilling to do other than keep the young man's secret.

It was needless, however, for shrewd Peter Prout was ready to announce his own conclusions. "Ah was sure on't," said he. "That's why ah browt it wi' ma. Them 'at can put this an' that togither, can mak' it as sartan as dayleet, 'at Ralph Ravensworth is only another neeam for Alf. Atheling, an' 'at young shaver's been doon te Thorpe Aspen as sure as eggs is eggs."

It will be remembered that Jacob Benson had taken Tim Crouch into his confidence as to that night's adventure, and so the cobbler, too, had no difficulty in making up his mind as to the fact that the miller was right in his surmise. Tim scratched his head in silence. Ordinarily he would have expressed his opinion in dogmatic terms and with the confidence that such men always have in the truth and justice of their opinions. But he remembered that it was by his own advice that Jacob Benson had kept the matter in the dark, and that they had both agreed that out of sympathy with Alfred and respect for the Widow Atheling they should say no word upon the subject. Jacob and he exchanged looks, but said nothing, and as Tim felt himself in a measure the custodian of Alfred's interests, he regarded it as his imperative duty to throw the miller off the scent.

The last they had heard of Alfred at Thorpe Aspen was that a reward had been offered for his apprehension, and Tim was resolved that so far as he was concerned the money—"blood money" he called it—should never be earned by anybody in Aspendale. So he replied to the miller in a supercilious tone—"Nut a bit on it. Alfred Atheling wad ha' niver been sich a noodle as te give 'em sich a clue as that. It isn't likely. Ah say, Chivey, did thoo iver knoa a hare stand up on its hinnd legs an' show its heead aboon its form an' squeal, when thoo was prowlin' roond wi' thee gun?"

"Why, naw, that ah niver did," replied Chivey, willing enough to back the cobbler. "They've ower mitch respect for their oan fur for that. It wad be like me sayin', 'Dilly-dilly, come an' be killed,' an' t' hare sayin', 'Ah's here, yo' can cum an' sattle ma withoot ony trubble.'"

"Ezactly," responded Tim, "an' you canna beleeave that young Alf. Atheling wad be softer than a silly hare. Nut a bit on it. There's other pairts o' t' country 'at's like Thorpe Aspen, an' as for farm-steeads an' gamekeepers, they're as like van another as two peas."

This was fairly good reasoning, or passed as such at the Chequers, but Peter was not the man to give in, and so the dispute waxed hot.

Landlord Middledick took sides with the miller, the poacher warmly supporting the cobbler. Sam Vause, the blacksmith, reserved his opinion, because so long as it was in suspense he occupied the position of a judge, and was appealed to by both sides. He ordered another pitcher of beer to keep up the dignity of the office. Jacob Benson, like the poacher, sat silent, his conviction being one which he did not wish to betray, and his honest tongue being unaccustomed to argue against his belief.

While the dispute was at its height Edgar Atheling happened to be riding past on his way to Chilworth. Resolved to test his own opinion on the matter by an application to Alfred's brother, the miller jumped from his seat and ran to the door of the inn, apologizing to the council for his abrupt movement by saying, "There's his brother; I'll ask him." Beckoning to Edgar, he said, presenting the magazine, "Mornin', Mr. Edgar. Just cast your eye ower this, will yo'. It weean't tak' yo' two minutes."

Edgar took it in silence. He had no great love for Peter, whose gossipy tongue was difficult to silence; but as he read his face paled, then reddened; the hand that held the paper trembled; and the miller felt sure that a tear-drop was checked by the rapid movements of the lashes of his eye.

"Lend me this for to-day, miller. I'm late," said Edgar, and rode off without another word.

"There! didn't ah tell yo'?" said Peter to his comrades, speaking through the window. "I'm off now. That settles it. I'm wanted at the mill."

Tim Crouch had been a keen observer. He was very wroth with the miller, and as the meddlesome knight of the meal-sack strode back homeward, the cobbler shook his fist after him, and said with a knowing sort of nod—"All right, Maister Meeally-feace, ah'll hev' it oot wi tha' for that."

Whatever was the general verdict at the Chequers Edgar Atheling had no doubt as to the identity of the author of the little sketch. His brother Alfred's hand was clearly revealed in it. He hurried through his business that he might get home and show the sketch to his widowed mother. But the Athelings were too well known around Chilworth, and Edgar himself was too much liked to make his journey a speedy one. One and another old friend of the family stopped him to inquire after his mother, and the state of his crops, and to give him advice about the farm. Young people recognized him, and had to receive a shake of the hand and a pleasant word, and more than one bright face smiled at him so sweetly from under a bonnet, that he could not for very shame ride on with only a nod. So it was not till after sunset that Edgar rode into the old farmyard with the magazine which the miller had lent him in his pocket.

One glance at the window told him that his coming was eagerly expected. His mother was standing there with Clara by her side. Clara must have received leave from Sir Godwin or Ethel to spend the evening at home. That, of course, would make it so much the more pleasant, and then she could be set to read the "Last Look at the Old Home." It would have a better effect read in her clear, bell-like tones. But what was that his mother held up as he went around to the stable? It must be a letter, and her smile told him that it contained good news.

"What's the news, mother dear?" said Edgar, as he came in and took his mother's comely face between his hands and gave it a resounding Yorkshire kiss.

"Read that," said Mrs. Atheling, putting the letter in his hands. "God is very good to us; no one can call Alfred a thief now."

Edgar sat down and read his brother Robert's letter describing the meeting with the Quaker merchant, and the strange discovery he had made, which vindicated Alfred's character of the heaviest charge against him.

"You see," said Clara, too eager to wait while Edgar finished the letter, "Alfred never stole that money. I was sure he never did, and this proves it. That good old man, Ephraim Hartgold, actually found it. Alfred had just lost it—left it behind him in the coach—and Mr. Harvey knew the bag, and the money was all right. What a good thing it was that Robert met him!"

"Give God the glory, my dear," said the widow. "It was in answer to prayer that Robert was directed to the good Quaker. I remember him well, but I never expected he could do anything for us in this trial."

"Well, now there is nothing to prevent Alfred coming home, and showing his face openly," said Edgar. "There's no accusation against him now. I wish we could find him. Oh, why was I not around that night!"

"What night?" asked Clara. "What are you talking about, Edgar?"

"Why, I believe he has been here, and not so very long ago. But now, Clara, you just bottle up the curiosity you inherited from your first ancestress, and let me have some supper, and after that you shall enlighten us."

"I enlighten you! It is you that have the light, and it is mean of you to get all our news and then keep yours while you gormandize."

"Oh, Clara, don't say that," said Mrs. Atheling. "The poor boy has been out all day, and I dare say has never had the thought to get bit nor drop. Let us give him his supper."

Edgar, with the air of a Sultan, which the boy entering on manhood generally assumes when there is no father at the head of the household, sat down to the repast which the loving hands of mother and sister set before him. Having enjoyed it with a deliberation tantalizing to Clara, he turned his chair from the table and produced the magazine. Just at that moment a knock was heard at the outer door, and Simon Holmes entered.

"Come in and hear our good news, Simon," said Clara. "It is really good, and we don't know it all yet."

"The Lord be thanked for any good news that comes to this house," said Simon, reverently. "Them that trust in Him are sure to be delivered sooner or later."

He was briefly informed of Robert's discovery, and then all turned to listen to the "Last Look at the Old Home," which Clara in obedience to her brother's request read to them. She had not read a dozen paragraphs before her vision was made clear. "O Alfred, Alfred!" she exclaimed. "My brother Alfred!" And the tears, whose fount is in the heart more than the eyes, told how the tender, plaintive story had gone home.

"Where is he now?" That question of deepest import was asked by his mother, who yearned with unmeasured desire to have the erring but evidently penitent lad by her side. "And why does he not write a line to say at any rate that he repents?" she continued, more inclined to rebel just now than at any time before. She wanted so much to lay her hand upon his head and bless her son. How could she know that he had sailed with the intention of writing from the other side of the Atlantic! How should she know that he was then but just rescued from the fate of a castaway at sea! Then worthy, wise, and ever helpful Simon Holmes came to the rescue.

"Wheriver he is," said the carpenter, "we knoa noo, wheer his heart is. That's cum home alriddy; an', efter all, it's t' main pairt on him; an' wheer his heart is, the lad hissen is sure te follow. What strikes me mooast is hoo clearly the Providence o' God is managing matters, bit by bit. Fost, He mak's Joss go to Lundon i' spite of his maister, sae that he may rickollect my owd jonnamun when he sees him. Then He puts Robert in t' varry hoose 'at Alfred lived in. Then He manages that your varry oan corn marchant should finnd t' missin' money. Then He sends you a few special drops o' balsam i' t' form o' this magazine, an' mak's Peter Prout, 'at isn't mitch gi'en that way, to drop 'em in. Ivery thing's goin' on all right an' reg'lar, an' sum o' theease days, it'll be a case o' 'lang leeaked for, come at last.'"

"God grant it," said Mrs. Atheling, solemnly.

"Amen to that," said Simon, "and I can't help thinkin' o' this point, Mrs. Atheling, that as you sit there this minnit, there's one tremendous difference between t' state o' things noo, an' what they've iver been befoore, since t' trubble aboot Maister Alfred com' te yo'. He's proved by Mr. Robert te be innocent o' brekkin' t' law, an' he's proved by his oan-writin's that whativer he hez been, his heart's warm te his mother an' his home, an' gives indications 'at it's warmin' te his God. It seeams te me that this mornin' afoore t' posst com' in you were all drinkin' the watters o' Marah, bitter an' brackish beyond degree. Noo the good Lord's tossed a wonderful healin' tree into it, an' you've gotten a sweeter teeaste i' your mouths then you've had for monny and monny a dark an' cloody day. Surely you may ha' fayth te beleeave that God 'll go on te be gracious, an' that by an' by you'll sit amang the palm trees an' the wells of Elim, here in your oan ingle-nook wi' Mr. Robert an' Mr. Alfred at your side. The Wonderworker that did this for yo, can do t'other."

"So He can, Simon, and under the influence of your cheering words, I feel as though I cannot help believing that He will," said Mrs. Atheling.

"The Lord hez a good monny healin' trees at His disposal," continued Simon, "an' He hez a way o' puttin' Elim patches o' green i' all sorts o' unexpected spots as we go travellin' on. I couldn't help thinkin' o' this all the while Clara was readin' and yo' hev got into a big patch o' green now. It's a sign as yo're gettin' near more of it. You'll be in the land flowin' wi' milk and honey soon."

At the widow's request Simon led their evening devotions, and poured his soul in gratitude for that day's glad discoveries; and for the still undiscovered wanderer, that he might soon return to receive the loving welcome that was waiting for him there, and every kneeling soul gave heart-sanction to his strong petitions by their low "Amen!"

To be continued.)

JOSEPH MAKES HIMSELF KNOWN.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for April 17, Gen. 45 : 1-15. Golden Text, Rom. 12 : 21.

A Divine Principle—Evil Overcome by Good—The Principle of Joseph's Life Practised in Prison—In Official Life—Filling the Granaries—The Humiliating Obeisance of his Brothers—Joseph's Opportunity—His Discipline of his Brothers—Their Conscience Pricked—The Motive of Joseph's Austerity—The Entertainment—The Accusation—Judah's Plea—Joseph as a Type of Christ—The Recognition of God's Overruling Hand.

"BE not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." This is the principle which underlies the whole teaching of the Word of God. This is God's constant occupation, this is the meaning of redemption—to "overcome evil with good." God cannot be overcome of evil, and He provides for His children means whereby they may be overcomers and their eternal lifework dovetail into His—the work of overcoming evil with good. To oppose evil with evil, anger with anger, contempt with contempt, fraud with fraud, overreaching with overreaching, is the impulse of man's heart when left to itself and to the enemy of souls. But none can do this continuously but by the indwelling of Christ, for it is not in man to do it.

To Overcome Evil with Good is Divine;

The history of Joseph is a lovely illustration of this principle. In his own home, in Potiphar's house, and in the prison he received evil, but always overcame it with good; and this by no inherent goodness of his own, but because the Lord (whose nature it is) was with him. Joseph bore no ill-will to his brethren, in spite of all their hatred of him. He knew that as surely as he was now lord over all the land of Egypt, so surely would God bring about that those very brethren who had so despised and ill-treated him would, some time or other, bow down to him. Meanwhile he was occupied in overcoming evil with good in the land of his suffering and humiliation. Seeing, as he did, the mind of God, Joseph knew what to do for the good of the land; and he who had been true as a son, a brother, and a servant, became equally and always by the same power, "the Lord was with him." During the seven years of plenty Joseph opened and stored granaries in all the cities of Egypt, and the abundance of provision was so great that stock-taking became impossible; yet Joseph did not cease storing. Seven years of famine must be provided for, then seed for the following year, and food for all the people that same eighth year until the time of harvest. No doubt, many politicians in Egypt would look on the zeal of the young political economist with some measure of distrust; they would think that some bounds should be set to his enterprising spirit; but Joseph went forward, and the event proved that he was right.

True as a Politician;

The famine came, and prevailed not only in Egypt, but in all lands, so that people of all nations, hearing of the grain-store in Egypt, came thither to buy corn, and among the rest came the brethren of Joseph, who little suspected that the lord of the country to whom was the very brother whom they had sold for a slave. Here, then, was Joseph's opportunity, in regard to his brethren, to overcome evil with good. Under such circumstances, what would be the best thing to do? To make himself known at once, and to let out all the love and forgiveness of his heart? That might never have brought them nearer to God; they might have been thereby attracted to Joseph, but not to God. When we fully belong to God, we have not to deal with those who have wronged us or others according to the dictates of our feelings or their feelings, but to wait before God and search His Word to see how He would have us deal with them. We may

They Bowed Down

Spare their Feelings to the Hurt of their Souls, and this is no true love, and may hinder God's purposes for them. Joseph saw that, for the honor of God and for their own souls' sake, his brethren must see their sin; and yet he was not the one to show it them directly, for had he attempted it, personal feeling might have crept in. Only in one particular did he make himself known to them; it was

As a Fellow-Believer.

"I fear God." He made things difficult for them, asked of their kindred, and then insisted that they should not see his face again except their youngest brother came with them. Then began the first conviction of their sin against Joseph, and they said, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." This was too much for the tender heart of Joseph, and he went away and wept, for Joseph was faithful, but not hard. But the work was, as yet, only begun, so, for their sakes, he exacted that one of them should remain as hostage, and that Benjamin should come down to Egypt.

Nothing could be more trying to them than this proposal, which seemed so impossible, since Jacob lavished on Benjamin the love he had formerly bestowed on Joseph. When he heard the terms on which alone bread could be obtained, he said to his sons, in the bitterness of his heart, being nearer the truth than he knew, of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me." The whole family was brought into trouble, but all was tending to work out the end which God had in view; and when the prospect of sheer starvation drove Jacob at last to let Benjamin go up to Egypt for a second journey to buy food, the wills of the whole family were brought down as Joseph's had been before.

"Me Have ye Bereaved

On their first journey the money they had brought for corn was returned and placed in each sack of corn, and now, in the time of their trouble, they showed themselves honest men, and brought double money with them. The manner of their reception on this occasion was a great astonishment to them; they were to dine with the ruler of the land, and were treated with the greatest consideration, and Benjamin was singled out to receive special marks of honor. All seemed at first to be prosperous—Simeon was brought out to them and Benjamin had permission to go home—but when they had already started on their return journey, a messenger rode hastily after them, and they who had acted with such honesty were Accused of Theft!

It was the last drop of bitterness in their cup, the last humiliation. When Joseph's missing cup had been found in Benjamin's sack, and the messenger sought to apprehend him for trial, all the eleven brethren returned to Joseph. In their brokenness of heart, they attempted no denial of the apparent theft, although they knew that they were innocent; but Judah told the touching story of his old father's sorrow, and how he had become surety to him for Benjamin, and now he offered to give himself up in place of his youngest brother. In all this Joseph had been acting in the truest love to his brethren and to his father. It was enough; the end was reached, the hearts were humbled, the brethren were where God could have His way with them; so now Joseph commanded all his servants to go out from him, that he might tell his brethren the astounding tidings that he, the greatest man in the then known world, Pharaoh's prime-minister, was none other than their brother whom they sold to be a slave.

At first—and no wonder—"they were troubled at his presence;" but he said, unto me." Oh, what a type of Jesus! How His heart yearns that every soul among the sinners who have slain Him should yet come near to Him, touch Him, and so be saved, and comforted, and healed, and kept! Now could Joseph let out all the tenderness of heart, which would not have been understood or appreciated by his brethren but for their trials. He said, "I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt. Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life. . . . God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance.

"Come Near

So Now it was Not You that Sent me Hither, but God: and He hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt." Joseph might serve God's purpose in permitting his brethren to come into the most trying circumstances, but he could not reproach them, and he overcame evil with good in showing them how he traced the hand of God and not their hand in all which had befallen him. It is this which makes a man or a woman powerful at home and powerful abroad—this recognition of the hand of God, this dealing with Him rather than with persons and things. Oh, how blind and foolish we are to be oppressed and agitated by the things which occur day by day, when nothing can happen but what God permits, and He makes "all things work together for good to them that love God" (Rom. 8 : 28). Unless we ourselves are steady in our own relations to God, we are powerless to help others. We cannot overcome evil by a theory of good, but only by good itself, good manifested in us, the life of Christ manifested in our mortal bodies.

In one of the English prisons there was a man condemned for murder. Before sentence was executed a Christian woman, yearning with love to his soul, visited him. He was hard, desperate, insolent, and utterly regardless of the state of his soul. Hitherto no one had been able to make any impression on him. But through the double grating he saw in that woman's face the likeness of Jesus, and he listened to her message of the love of Jesus for him. His soul was saved, and before his execution he became a sincere Christian. God had used her to overcome evil with good.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD BINDER.

NUMEROUS applications have been received from readers of this journal for a case in which the copies of the paper, as they are received, may be placed and kept clean for binding, at the end of the year. To meet this demand, a stock of such covers has been prepared, and they are now on sale at this office. Each cover is made of strong cloth, with the name of the journal stamped in gilt letters on the outside. It is large enough to hold fifty-two copies, and is fitted with the new patent apparatus for holding the papers securely. A cover will be sent, postage paid, to any address in the United States on the receipt of one dollar. Applications should be made to THE MANAGER, 63 Bible House, N. Y.

OUR FATHER KNOWETH.

"Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him. MATT. vi. 8.

THEREFORE, our Heavenly Father,
We will not fear to pray
For the little needs and longings
That fill our our every day;
And when we dare not whisper
A want that lieth dim,
We say "Our Father knoweth,"
And leave it all to Him.

For His great love has compassed
Our nature, and our need
We know not; but He knoweth,
And He will bless indeed.
Therefore, O Heavenly Father,
Give what is best to me;
And take the wants unanswered,
As offerings made to Thee.

—Selected.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

NEW PERPETUAL STORM KING FLOWERING FUCHSIA.

EXCELSIOR PEARL TUBEROS

The above cut is a true photograph of a plant of CHILDS' NEW DOUBLE PERPETUAL FLOWERING WEEPING FUCHSIA, "STORM KING," introduced by us and is the finest novelty and grandest flowering plant of the age. It is always in bloom, often as many as 200 buds and blossoms on a plant at once. The branches droop most gracefully, and the blossoms are frequently as large as teacups. The buds for two weeks before they expand are balls of glowing scarlet crimson. When expanded, the enormous double flowers are almost pure white, capped by a calyx of glowing scarlet; and when a plant is loaded with buds and blossoms it presents a sight which for true grandeur and beauty no flower can surpass. They are of the easiest culture and will grow and bloom freely with ordinary care in any window or garden. Price of strong plants which will soon bloom, by mail, post-paid 50 cts. each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00. We pack secure from frost and warrant them to arrive in good order. Form Clubs for this grand Fuchsia and get them at dozen rates. Remember, we are the introducers and the only ones in the world who can supply the true Storm King in quantity. Beware of others who are selling inferior varieties as Storm King.

CHILDS' NEW GIANT EXCELSIOR PANSIES are the largest and finest in the world. (See large chromo in Catalogue.) They produce their gigantic flowers from May to December, in great profusion. Mixed seed of 50 colors, which are of marvelous beauty, 25 cts. per paper. We will also mail 6 large flowering bulbs of CHILDS' EXCELSIOR DWARF PEARL TUBEROSES for 50 cts. (They are grand for pots.) 7 fine hardy LILIES, including Auratum, $1 00. 12 choice mixed GLADIOLUS, 50 cts. 4 TEA ROSES, red, white, pink and yellow, 50 cts. 5 grand CHRYSANTHEMUMS 50 cts. Any of the above articles will be sent by mail, post-paid, and guaranteed to arrive in good condition. They are exactly as represented, and will more than please those who plant them. Many years of liberal and honest dealings have secured to us our enormous mail business in Seeds, Bulbs and Plants, which is the largest in the world. Orders can be sent at once. Preserve this as it may not appear again in this paper.

SEEDS, BULBS AND PLANTS.

We have a large and choice stock and grand variety of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs and Plants. We have the best and are headquarters for Pansies, Balsams, Verbenas, Gladiolus, Tuberoses, Amaryllis, Lilies, Roses, Geraniums, Fuchsias, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Moonflowers, Passionflowers, Shrubs, Vines and small fruits. Canadian and English buyers supplied free of duty and postage, as we have a branch office in both countries.

Our CATALOGUE for 1887, is probably the most elegant ever issued. It contains two large chromos and 8 colored plates of new flowers, and hundreds of beautiful engravings. It will be mailed free to any who order Storm King, Pansy, or anything here offered. We are also willing to mail it free to all who will send us an order after receiving it. Otherwise those who apply for it should send at least 10 or 12 cents in stamps, which is only a part of its cost to us.

Remittance can be made by money order or postal note (on Queens), bills, drafts or stamps. For every dollar's worth ordered from this advertisement, the buyer will receive an elegant seed or bulb novelty free.

Address, JOHN LEWIS CHILDS,
(FLORAL PARK,) Queens, N. Y.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold Only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plate Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $3. Gold-Band or Rose Tea Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
733 Washington St., Boston Mass.

THE DINGEE & CONARD CO'S BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING

ROSES

For 18 Years our Great Specialty has been growing and distributing ROSES. We have all the Latest Novelties and finest standard sorts in different sizes and prices to suit all. We send STRONG, VIGOROUS PLANTS safely by mail or express to all points.

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1, $8 to $25 per Hundred.

Our New Guide, 88 pp. describes nearly 500 finest varieties of Roses, the best Hardy Shrubs, & Climbing Vines, and New and Rare Flower Seeds, and tells how to grow them—FREE Address THE DINGEE & CONARD CO., Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co. Pa.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

BLUEBERRY. A valuable fruit to grow for pleasure and profit. Price list free to all. Agents wanted to sell plants. Outfit free. Address WILLOW RIDGE FRUIT FARM, Portland, Mich.

BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL FOR 1887

Will be sent FREE to all who write for it. It is a Handsome Book of 128 pages, with hundreds of illustrations, Three Colored Plates, and tells all about THE BEST Garden, Farm and Flower SEEDS, Bulbs, Plants, Thoroughbred Stock and Fancy Poultry. It describes RARE NOVELTIES in VEGETABLES and FLOWERS, of real value, which cannot be obtained elsewhere. Send postal for the most complete Catalogue published, to address on a

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

SCOTT'S FLOWERS

38 Years' Experience in ROSES. Grand Specialties in PLANTS, BULBS & FLOWER SEEDS of extra choice quality.

Rare Novelties of great beauty. Handsomely illustrated Catalogue for 1887 with a lovely Colored Plate of Scott's Mammoth Pansies sent FREE to any address. Send for it now. ROBERT SCOTT & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

SEDGWICK WOVEN STEEL WIRE FENCE AND GATES.

The best Farm, Garden, Poultry Yard, Lawn, School Lot, Park and Cemetery Fences and Gates. Perfect Automatic Gate. Cheapest and Neatest Iron Fences. Iron and Wire Summer Houses, Lawn Furniture, and other wire work. Best Wire Stretcher and Pliers. Ask dealers in hardware, or address

SEDGWICK BROS., Richmond, Ind.

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.

It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.

In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.

WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LANE, N. Y.

For sale by W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & Co., 170 and 172 William St., N. Y., and the wholesale drug trade.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF HENRY WARD BEECHER

By THEO. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, is cup-shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED (Samples Free) for DR. SCOTT'S beautiful Electric Corsets, Brushes, Belts, Etc. No risk, quick sales Territory given. Satisfaction guaranteed.
DR. SCOTT, 843 Broadway, New York.

SPRING DRESS GOOD

JAMES McCREERY & CO

Offer among their large assortment Spring Dress Goods, two lines Checks and Mixed Cheviots—

44 inches at 75c.
54 inches at 85c.
Worth $1 and $1.50

ORDERS BY MAIL } From any part of the country receive careful and prompt attention.

James McCreery & C

Broadway, cor. Eleventh St.,
NEW YORK.

NEW AND DESIRABLE.

THE GLAD REFRAI

By LOWRY & DOANE.

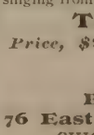
One of the strongest and most useful Sunday S Song Books ever issued. Hymns evangelical; dies pleasing; carefully edited; clearly printed; attractive; price cheap. THE GLAD REFRAIN better the more it is used: Try it. You will singing from

The Glad Refrain.

Price, $25 per 100 Copies in Bo Covers.

SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

BIGLOW & MAIN,
76 East Ninth Street, New Yo
CHICAGO HOUSE, 81 Randolph St.



UNIVERSITY ORGAN They Lead the World. $35 to $ Sold Direct to Families. No Middle Solid Walnut 5 Octaves-Double Cou Guaranteed for Six Years and sent, with Stool and Book, for TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. Estab 1859. MARCHAL & SMITH 235 East 21st Street, New Y

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 63 House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 15. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, APRIL 14, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAITS AND LIVES OF BISHOP MOULE, OF MID-CHINA, AND OF REV. J. HUDSON TAYLOR.

THE OVERTHROW OF THE MONSTER. Dr. Talmage's new Sermon.

FAREWELL MEETING TO MISSIONARIES FOR AFRICA.

Japanese Lady Converts—Two Victims of Narcotics—The Coming Revolution—Reformation of a Turkish Drunkard—A Man Tied Hand and Foot—A Friend at Court—Carrying a Wife to School—A Life-Giving Kiss, etc.

THE RETURN OF CHRIST. By the Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D.D.

CURRENT EVENTS: The President's Warning to Land Corporations—The Republican Revolt in Rhode Island, etc.

THE BREAKER AND THE FLOCK. A New Sermon by C. H. Spurgeon.

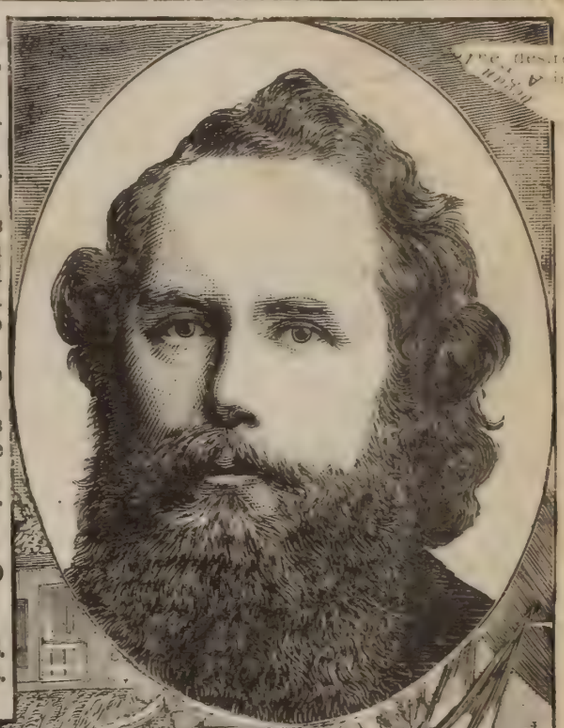
PORTRAIT OF L. WINDTHORST.

PICTURE OF THE ENTRANCE TO A CHINESE TEMPLE.

Lawyer Slocombe's Advice. (Illust'd.)

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

JOSEPH HONORING HIS FATHER. By Mrs. M. Baxter.



Bishop MOULE, of Mid-China—Rev. J. HUDSON TAYLOR—Opening of the First Railroad in China.

REV. GEORGE E. MOULE, D.D.,

Missionary Bishop in Mid-China.

THE eminent missionary whose portrait appears on the left of the illustration on the first page is one of two brothers who have consecrated their lives to the grand work of the evangelization of China. They are the sons of the late Rev. Henry Moule, an Episcopal clergyman in England. George Evans Moule, the elder, has been engaged in the work through thirty years, and his brother, Arthur Evans Moule, for twenty-six years. Both are still in the original field, Mid-China. Both of them labored for many years at Ningpo, and both subsequently moved to Hang-chow. The bishop [illegible] he mission in the latter city in 1865; [illegible]. E. Moule, the Archdeacon, took up the work there when his brother left for a visit to England in 1876. The bishop is now paying another visit to his native country, with the object of quickening the interest of the Christian public in the cause of missions in China. He realizes that the recent edict of toleration and the present disposition of the Chinese toward missionaries presents an opportunity which the Church of Christ cannot neglect without being recreant to its principles. He recently delivered a stirring missionary address to the students of Oxford University, in which he forcibly presented this view, and which it is believed will be followed up by some exceedingly gratifying results—a strong desire having been created in the minds of many of the young men to devote themselves to the self-denying but glorious work of preaching the Gospel in China.

The Sphere of his Labors

is appropriately named Mid-China, which contains, in the northern half, the missions at Chefoo and Peking; and the southern half those at Shanghai, Ningpo, Hang-chow, and Shaou-hing, the three latter being in the one province of Che-kiang, which is the smallest of the eighteen provinces of China, being about as large as Ohio and Pennsylvania together; but it is one of the most populous, containing about 26,000,000 of people. We are glad to know that though there is pressing need for a multitude of devoted laborers in the immense field which China presents to consecrated enterprise, Bishop Moule has secured an earnest and devoted band of consecrated pastors, evangelists, and helpers, and much spiritual blessing is being realized in the various districts within his episcopal jurisdiction.

At Grace Church, Ningpo,

there is daily evangelistic preaching. Many instances have been given of blessed results attending this daily service. A typical one may be given. One day a retired military Mandarin was passing by the door, and, attracted by the crowd, entered in to see what was going on. He was much struck by what he heard. He felt it was just what he wanted; for since he had left the army he had given himself up to a religious life, according to Buddhist notions. He became a vegetarian, and a frequent worshipper at the temples. But now he felt that there was something better in the religion of Jesus. From this day he was scarcely ever absent from the preaching. At length he accepted Christ as his Saviour. He was baptized last summer. The value of such a conversion is easily understood by persons conversant with Chinese ideas and prejudices. The conservative people have a dread of innovation, but when they see their Mandarins accepting Christianity, they cease to regard it as the terrible and pestilential heresy of the foreigner.

THE REV. J. HUDSON TAYLOR,

Founder of the China Inland Mission.

Birth in 1832—Conversion—Early Interest in China—Dangers Encountered on His Travels—Returns to England—Founds China Inland Mission—Serious Illness and Manifold Labors.

JOHN HUDSON TAYLOR, whose portrait accompanies that of Bishop Moule on the first page, is the founder of the China Inland Mission, which has done more than any other agency for the evangelization of China. He was born at Barnsley, England, in the year 1832, and is now fifty-five years old. He was consecrated to God from his birth, and at a very early age it was evident that a wo : of grace was begun in his heart. When but a boy the spiritual needs and claims of China took hold of his mind, and appear never to have left him.

Having attained the age of fifteen, the need of that vast empire powerfully affected him, and from that time he began to direct his attention and studies to the subjects which would best fit him for missionary work in that land. So decided was he upon going to China, that he said he would go if he had to work his passage out as a common sailor. He gained some knowledge of medicine in the shop of his father, who was a chemist and druggist, and afterward successfully prosecuted medical studies in Hull and London, during which time he also availed himself of many opportunities for Christian work. In September, 1853, as a missionary in connection with the Chinese Evangelization Society. After three or four years' residence in China, he was led by a combination of circumstances to resign his connection with this society, and to pursue that life of unreserved faith in God for temporal supplies which he has since continued.

He Sailed for China

In 1858 he was married, at Ningpo, to a lady of remarkable devotedness to mission work, and of uncommon mental ability, Maria Jane, second daughter of the late devoted Rev. Samuel Dyer, of the London Missionary Society. Then followed

A Perilous Journey in China.

Most interesting details of his mission work during these early years in China are given in his pamphlet on "China: Its Spiritual Needs and Claims."

In April, 1855, in company with the Rev. J. S. Burdon, of the Church Missionary Society, now Bishop Burdon, he visited the Island of Tsung-ming, and the north bank of the Yang-tse-Kiang, for the purpose of preaching the Gospel and distributing copies of the New Testament. As narrated in that pamphlet, they both narrowly escaped with their lives, being arrested by the Chinese police and followed by a howling mob, and at last only released through the friendliness of a Mandarin. But this was only one of the many perils encountered by Mr. Taylor.

In 1860, broken down in health by incessant labors, he returned to England. Oppressed by the spiritual destitution of China, which at that time had not of its people, he was anxious for more laborers to go out, and the following extract from a letter written in January, 1860, when read in the light of subsequent experiences, has a special interest. He wrote to a friend thus: "Do you know of any earnest, devoted young men, desirous of serving the Lord in China, who, not wishing for more than their expenses, would be willing to come out and labor here? Oh, for four or five such helpers! They would probably preach in Chinese in six months. In answer to prayer the means would be found."

One Missionary to Three Millions

"Throughout our voyage," he says, in the pamphlet already referred to, "our earnest prayer to God was that He would overrule our return to this country for good to China, and make it instrumental in raising up at least five helpers to labor in Ningpo and Che-kiang." These simple extracts reveal to us the though the mission was not formally inaugurated till 1865. What was the result of these prayers? Several young men offered, and were sent out. Let Mr. Taylor tell the story in his own words:

Origin of the China Inland Mission,

"Coming home with little hope of ever returning—being told that it was improbable that I should ever be able to return there—I was occupied for some time in the preparation of an edition of the New Testament for the British and Foreign Bible Society in the vernacular of that part of China in which I have latterly labored — Ningpo; and while engaged in that work, spending day after day with a beloved and honored friend of the Church Missionary Society in the task of revision and translation, the Lord laid more heavily upon my heart than ever before the need of the whole Chinese Empire.

"At the end of the year 1864 and the beginning of 1865 I found that there were only ninety-seven Protestant missionaries in China. There had been as many as one hundred and fifteen, but they had gone down to ninety-seven; and surely there could be no question that there was a needs-be for some further evangelistic effort on behalf of China. I found that in eleven of the eighteen provinces there was and I felt that, without interfering with the work of those existing agencies, which God was then and is still largely blessing, there was abundant room for additional effort, and not only abundant room, but a loud and imperative call for it.

Not a Single Protestant Missionary;

"And recognizing that God means what He says—that He loves to hear and answer prayer—I was led, after a good deal of powerful conference with some friends interested in China, to sketch out the plan of the China Inland Mission, and to attempt its formation, and not without success.

"There was a little difficulty attending it. I was very anxious that what we did should not appear for a moment to conflict with the work of any of the older societies, and still more that it should not actually divert any help of any kind from channels already existing, because that would have been no gain to China or to the cause of God; but that we should have such a method of working given to us as should draw out fresh laborers, who probably would not otherwise go, and should open fresh channels of pecuniary aid which otherwise, perhaps, would not be touched.

"After a good deal of thought and prayer, I was led, in addresses on China, to lay its needs before the hearts of God's children as I was able, and to make it known that I should be glad to enter into correspondence with any persons desirous to go out to labor in an mission in China, and who were prepared to go out without guaranteed support. For having no single denomination at our back, and being anxious not to interfere with existing channels of communication, I felt it best just to leave one's self open to receive such remittances through the mail as God might lay on the hearts of His children to send; in this way interfering with no collections in places of worship, nor with any collections made in other ways.

Evangelical and Undenominational

"Well, forty or fifty persons entered into correspondence with us, and fifteen or sixteen were selected, and came up to London from various parts of the United Kingdom, and had a short period of preliminary testing—testing rather than training—training in some measure, but rather testing than training. In the May of 1866 we found ourselves in this position, that we had full confidence that there were who desired to go and live and labor for God; leaning on Him for grace and strength and support, and prepared to trust to Him, indeed, in what circumstances soever they might find themselves.

Consecrated Men and Women

"But, of course, their going out involved a considerable outlay. There were matters of outfits and passage money to be met, and we saw that not less than ten thousand dollars would be needed to launch the mission." Mr. Taylor then tells how, in answer to prayer, that sum was sent in, without appeals for money, and before the paper stating that so many persons were ready to go, which he had prepared, was received from the printer.

In February, 1879, Mr. Taylor returned to China, where, in the mysterious dispensations of Providence, he was destined to undergo a prolonged and painful illness. Through the mercy of God he ultimately rallied, and was enabled to render invaluable service in the supervision of the work of the mission, and in the encouragement of laborers beset with difficulties. In 1884 he again visited his native country, seeking additional missionaries to go out to China, and there he found that, through the blessing of God on Mr. Moody's labors, Messrs. Stanley Smith, T. C. Studd, D. E. Hoste, M. Beauchamp, Cecil Polhill-Turner, and his brother Arthur, with the Rev. W. W. Cassells, students and graduates of Cambridge University, had resolved to give themselves to the work of the mission. Since his return to China Mr. Taylor has done splendid service for Christ in the way of organizing and founding new stations.

THE FIRST RAILWAY IN CHINA.

(See Illustration on our front page.)

"THERE are two considerations," says the eminent missionary, the Rev. B. C. Henry, in his valuable work on "China," published by Anson D. F. Randolph, of New York, "which render the work of missions in China especially important. One is the vast population, which is nearly eight times that of the United States, or one fourth of the whole population of the globe; the other is the great antiquity of the nation. They were a people before Abraham was called; their early history is contemporaneous with that of the ancient Egyptians. Assyria, Babylon, Greece, and Rome each in its turn flourished and fell; but China continued her national identity; preserved it intact through all the wars and revolutions that deluged the Middle Kingdom with blood, and hurled dynasties into the dust. The great nations of Europe and America are but infants of a day compared with the hoary centuries through which China has passed. The political system of the Chinese has come down to them with their moral code, and their standard books of philosophy and literature through twenty centuries or more. To them the past is not a mass of musty records, filled with the suffocating odors of decay, as it often appears to us, but a rich treasure-house fragrant with the aroma of purest wisdom and noblest example.

"Growing out of this intense love of the past, we find an ultra conservatism. The ruling classes, the officials and gentry, the custodians of these treasures of the past, are opposed to innovations and reforms of every kind. They are exclusive to the extremest degree, and would never have had intercourse with other nations had they not been compelled to do so; and today most of them would be only too glad to shut their doors, exclude every foreigner, and retire into their shell again for the rest of time."

The introduction and common use of tea in Europe about the middle of the last century was the means, in the hands of God, of partially removing the barrier which had so long separated the "Celestial Empire" from the rest of the world. Money answereth all things, and for the sake of gain the Chinese consented to hold some intercourse with "barbarians." Then came treaties of commerce with England, France, and America, toleration, and at last full liberty was accorded to Protestant missionaries, and now the first railway in China has just been opened, a little local line, only some two miles in length, but which, in all probability, will speedily lead to most important results throughout the entire land.

There is no doubt that this experimental line is the beginning of a movement which in time will cover China with a network of railways; and this will not only open up the resources and augment the commercial and military power of that empire itself, but must also materially affect the balance of power

In Asia and in the World.

The present railway is from Tien Tsing to Tsching-Yang, and was opened by Li-Hung-Chang, the Viceroy of Petcheli, in person. The gentleman who in our engraving is receiving the Viceroy is the engineer of the line, M. Galy, who has acted for the French contractor, M. Decauville, whose name will be read on the side of the locomotive. The European officer in uniform is M. Ristelhueber, the French Consul. It is a wonderful stride to have made in advance. The unofficial and private people were wheeled to the ground in a kind of truck with a sedateness which was amusing; the Viceroy came in his sedan-chair. From trucks and sedan-chairs they proceeded at once to first and fourth-class carriages, which conveyed them two miles in eight minutes.

The undertaking is said to have been eminently successful, not merely as an engineering enterprise, but successful in the effect it has had upon the minds of the Chinese officials and people. It has convinced them, as nothing but experience could have convinced them, of the wonderful conveniences which the new mode of travelling offers; and it has also dissipated all their prejudices against this engineering of the men whom they call "foreign devils."

NEW MISSIONARIES FOR AFRICA.

AT Mrs. Palmer's weekly meeting for holiness at 316 East Fifteenth Street, New York, on the afternoon of Tuesday of last week, some missionaries were present for the last time before going out to join Bishop Taylor's mission in Africa.

The missionaries going out are E. E. Claflin, of Hayworth, Ill.; William S. Briggs, of Medford, Wis.; four members of the Waller family, of Burlington, Vt.; Belle Grover, of Waterville, Me.; Mary A. Angus, of Conemaugh, Pa.; Susan Collins, of Huron, Dak. Terr.; Anna M. Healey, of Dennison, Iowa, and Susan J. Trimble, of Sewickley, Pa.

Mrs. Langford Palmer, at whose house the meeting was held, was the second wife of the late eminent Dr. Palmer, whose first wife, Mrs. Phœbe Palmer, was the authoress of many well-known works. The valuable monthly periodical, the Guide to Holiness, established by them, is published at 62 Bible House, at one dollar a year. Each number contains 32 pages.

Mrs. Palmer opened the meeting by reading a chapter from Isaiah, and making a few well-chosen remarks. A blind minister then delivered an earnest exhortation, and mentioned that the doctors held out no hope of his recovery of sight, and that he was resigning himself submissively to this appointment of Providence. We could wish that he had faith enough to say that he was going to trust Christ as his healer for the restoring of his sight. The missionaries then each uttered a few words. Mr. Waller expressed his thankfulness for having been cleansed from all sin, and that he was going to preach a full salvation to the natives of Africa. His wife, Mrs. Waller, thanked God for the gift of purity and of deliverance from all unrighteousness through the blood of Christ. She felt a consuming desire to bring poor Africans to the cross of Christ. Their souls are of inestimable value in the sight of Christ. He has died for them. Miss Collins testified that she was rejoicing all the time in the possession of a full salvation, which she desired to communicate to the heathen, and thus to show her gratitude to Christ. Miss Trimble said, "I praise God that I am continually kept by His power. I was converted at an early age, but did not receive the blessing of entire sanctification until the camp-meeting at Niagara Falls last August. I then prayed the Lord to send me anywhere in the Gospel field to win souls to Christ, and He said to me distinctly, 'Go to Africa.' I have recently been at the missionary training-school in Chicago, and there found plenty of work in visiting tenement-houses; and though often much fatigued in so doing, felt that the Lord was with me." Miss Grover testified that she prayed earnestly for God to send forth laborers into the harvest, under a deep sense of the needs of heathen lands, and she found her prayers answered by herself being constrained to go. Africa will not be a Dark Continent to missionaries who have the light of Christ in their souls. She had had an overwhelming glimpse of eternity and of the unspeakable worth of souls. Herself and all she had were laid upon the altar. Miss Susan Collins, from Huron, Dakota, rejoiced in the experience of being cleansed by the blood of Christ from all sin, and this was the message which she exulted in being able to carry to the heathen. Two brothers from Iowa spoke. One of them said he felt it at first hard to go; now he felt it would be hard to stop away from Africa, and asked prayer that he might be kept in the narrow way, and to have souls given to him that would rejoice with him before the throne. E. E. Claflin from Australia was thankful for the privilege of going to Africa, and hoped that he would never come back again. He expressed plainly the desire never to see those present any more. When in Australia he had thought it a sacrifice almost to go to a foreign country like America, but now it did not seem any sacrifice to go and spend the rest of his life in laboring among Africans to bring them to Christ.

A minister remarked that our feeling toward the missionaries was not one of condolence, but of congratulation. We should not sorrow, but be full of gladness at their departure on so sublime an enterprise. A negro who was once sold to an owner in Georgia was at first dejected at the thought of having to go South, but he afterward plucked up courage when he was reminded by reading in the twenty-first chapter of Revelation that heaven had not only gates on the north, east, and west, but three gates on the south, so that he could get in from Georgia as easily as from Virginia. So these missionaries could go up to heaven through the gates open to them from whatever part of the earth they might be.

It was mentioned that Missionary Cameron's death had been the means of inducing several to go out as missionaries in his place; and when an invalid missionary in Africa was lately advised to return to England, he replied, "I don't want to see England again, anyway within five years." His health has since improved.

A Magdalen's Conversion.—"One Day when I was holding evangelistic meetings in Manchester," says Richard Weaver, "I was leisurely walking toward the place of meeting, when a young girl came and asked if she might accompany me. I said 'Yes.' As we walked along she asked where I was going. To such and such a hall. She knew it quite well, she said, and had 'been there a night or two before at a ball. Was it another ball to night?' I made no reply, as we at that moment had arrived at the hall, and taking her round by the private entrance, before she knew where she was she was upon the platform. There I gave her over into the hands of a true mother in Israel, and I proceeded to address the meeting. I spoke upon Christ's willingness to accept any one, and to save even to the very uttermost. The poor girl was broken down, and before the end of the meeting had given herself to Christ. She wrote to her parents at Leeds, telling them of her conversion, confessing her sin, and asking to be received home again; and they, believing that Christ had changed her heart, joyfully received her. A year or two afterward I was preaching in the Theatre Royal, Leeds, and I noticed sitting near the front a person with a baby in her arms, and accompanied by a young man, apparently her husband. At the close of the meeting they came to me, and the woman said, 'Mr. Weaver, don't you recognize me?' As I looked at her, her features looked strangely familiar, and I said, 'What, can it be Lizzie?' 'Yes, it is I,' was the response, and turning to the man who accompanied her, she introduced him as her husband. They insisted I should go home with them to tea, and a happier tea I never had. After tea her husband said to me, 'Yes, she told me all about her early life, yet I took her, and I can safely say that since our marriage there could not have been a better wife or mother.'"

THE OVERTHROW OF THE MONSTER.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, April 10, 1887.

[As is customary at the Brooklyn Tabernacle on Easter Sunday, the platform, pillars and galleries were profusely decorated with flowers.]

"He will swallow up death in victory."—Isa. 25 : 8.

The Queen of Sabbaths—Holds the Key of All the Cemeteries—The Black Giant of Death—His Cohorts—A Conqueror of Kings and Generals—His Antagonist—His Two Armies—The Decisive Battle—Victory—The Abolition of Death Proclaimed—The Cloak of Flesh to be Restored—Cremation no Hindrance—The Resurrection Body—Resurrection in Nature—Vitality of Buried Seeds—A Crop After Three Thousand Years—Resurrection in Horticulture—The Trance State—An Evangelist's Long Trance—The Archangelic Reveille—Embryonic Faculties in the Body—A Renovated House.

About eighteen hundred and fifty-three Easter mornings have wakened the earth. In France for three centuries the almanacs made the year begin at Easter, until Charles IX. made the year begin at January 1st. In the Tower of London there is a royal pay-roll of Edward I., on which there is an entry of eighteen pence for four hundred colored and pictured Easter eggs, with which the people sported. In Russia slaves were fed and alms were distributed on Easter. Ecclesiastical councils met at Pontus, at Gaul, at Rome, at Achaia to decide the particular day, and after a controversy more animated than gracious, decided it, and now through all Christendom, in some way the first Sunday after the full moon, which happens upon or next after March 21st, is filled with Easter rejoicing.

The Royal Court of the Sabbaths is made up of fifty-two. Fifty-one are princes, but Easter is Queen.

She wears richer diadem, and sways a more jewelled sceptre, and in her smile nations are irradiated. Unusually welcome this year because of the harsh winter and the late spring, she seems to step out of the snow-bank rather than the conservatory, come out of the North instead of the South, out of the Arctic rather than the tropics, dismounting from the icy equinox ; but welcome this queenly day, holding high up in her right hand the wrenched-off bolt of Christ's sepulchre, and holding high up in her left hand

The Key to all the Cemeteries in Christendom. It is an exciting thing to see an army routed and flying. They run each other down. They scatter everything valuable in the track. Unwheeled artillery. Hoof of horse on breast of wounded and dying man. You have read of the French falling back from Sedan, or Napoleon's track of ninety thousand corpses in the snow-banks of Russia, or of the retreat of our own armies from Manassas, or of the five kings tumbling over the rocks of Bethoran with their armies, while the hail-storms of heaven and the swords of Joshua's host struck them with their fury. In my text is a worse discomfiture. It seems that proposed to conquer the earth. He gathered for his host all the aches, and pains, and malarias, and cancers, and distempers, and epidemics of the ages. He marched them down, drilling them in the north-east wind, and amid the slush of tempests. He threw up barricades of grave-mound. He pitched tent of charnel house. Some of the troops marched with slow tread, commanded by consumptions ; some in double-quick, commanded by pneumonias. Some he took by long besiegement of evil habit, and some by one stroke of the battle-axe of casualty. With bony hand he pounded at the door of hospitals and sick-rooms, and won all the victories in all the great battle-fields of all the five continents. Forward march, the conqueror of conquerors, and all the generals and commanders-in-chief, and all presidents, and kings, and sultans, and czars drop under the feet of his war-charger. But one Christmas night his antagonist was born. As most of the plagues and sicknesses and despotisms come out of the East, it was appropriate that the new conqueror should come out of the same quarter. Power is given Him to awaken all the fallen of all the centuries and of all lands, and marshal them against the black giant. Fields have already been won, but the last day of the world's existence will see

A Black Giant

The Decisive Battle.

When Christ shall lead forth His two brigades, the brigade of the risen dead and the brigade of the celestial host, the black giant will fall back, and the brigade from the riven sepulchres will take Him from beneath, and the brigade of descending immortals will take Him from above, and death shall be swallowed up in victory.

The old braggart that threatened the conquest and demolition of the planet has lost his throne, has lost his sceptre, has lost his palace, has lost his prestige, and the one word written over all the gates of mausoleum, and catacomb, and necropolis, on cenotaph and sarcophagus, on the lonely khan of the Arctic explorer, and on the catafalque of great cathedral, written in capitals of azalea and calla lily, written in musical cadence, written in doxology of great assemblages, written on the sculptured door of the family vault, is "victory." Coronal word, embannered word, chief word of the triumphal arch under which conquerors return.

Victory!

Word shouted at Culloden and Balaklava and Blenheim ; at Megiddo and Solferino ; at Marathon, where the Athenians drove back the Medes ; at Poictiers, where Charles Martel broke the ranks of the Saracens ; at Salamis, where Themistocles in the great sea-fight confounded the Persians, and at the door of the Eastern cavern of chiselled rock, where Christ came out through a recess and throttled the King of Terrors, and put him back in the niche from which the celestial Conqueror had just emerged. Aha ! when the jaws of the Eastern mausoleum took down the black giant, "death was swallowed up in victory." I proclaim

The Abolition of Death.

The old antagonist is driven back into mythology, with all the lore about Stygian ferry and Charon with oar and boat. Melrose Abbey and Kenilworth Castle are no more in ruins than is the sepulchre. We shall have no more to do with death than we have with the cloak-room at a Governor's or President's levee. We stop at such cloak-room, and leave in charge of a servant our overcoat, our overshoes, our outward apparel, that we may not be impeded in the brilliant round of the drawing-room. Well, my friends, when we go out of this world we are going to a King's banquet, and to a reception of monarchs, and at the door of the tomb we leave the cloak of flesh, and the wrappings with which we meet the storms of this world. At the close of an earthly reception, under the brush and broom of the porter, the coat or hat may be handed to us better than when we resigned it, and the cloak of humanity will finally be returned to us improved, and brightened, and purified, and glorified. You and I do not want as they are now. We want to get rid of all their weaknesses, and all their susceptibilities to fatigue, and all their slowness of locomotion. They will be put through a chemistry of soil, and heat, and cold, and changing seasons out of which God will reconstruct them as much better than they are now as the body of the rosiest and healthiest child that bounds over the lawn at Prospect Park is better than the sickest patient in Bellevue Hospital. But as to our soul, we will cross right over, not waiting for obsequies, independent of obituary, into a state in every way better, with wider room and velocities beyond computation ; the dullest of us into companionship with the very best spirits in their very best mood, in the very parlor of the universe, the four walls burnished, and panelled, and pictured, and glorified with all the splendors that the infinite God in all the ages has been able to invent. Victory !

Our Bodies Returned

This view, of course, makes it of but little importance whether we are Cremated or Sepultured.

If the latter is dust to dust, the former is ashes to ashes. If any prefer incineration, let them have it without caricature. The world may become so crowded that cremation may be universally adopted by law as well as by general consent. Many of the mightiest and best spirits have gone through this process. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's children have been cremated—P. P. Bliss and wife, the evangelistic singers, cremated by accident at Ashtabula Bridge ; John Rodgers, cremated by persecution ; Latimer and Ridley, cremated at Oxford ; Pothinus, and Blandina, a slave, and Alexander, a physician, and their comrades cremated at the order of Marcus Aurelius—at least a hundred thousand of Christ's disciples cremated—and there can be no doubt about the resurrection of their bodies.

If the world lasts as much longer as it has already been built, there perhaps may be no room for the large acreage set apart for the resting-places ; but that time has not come. Plenty of room yet, and the race need not pass that bridge of fire until it comes to it. The most of us prefer the old way. But whether out of natural disintegration or cremation, we shall get that luminous, buoyant, gladsome, transcendent, magnificent, inexplicable structure called you will have it, I will have it. I say to you today as Paul said to Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead ?" The far-up cloud, higher than the hawk flies, higher than the eagle flies, what is it made of ? Drops of water from the Hudson, other drops from the East River, other drops from a stagnant pool out on Newark flats—up yonder there, embodied in a cloud, and the sun kindles it. If God can make such a lustrous cloud out of water drops, many of them soiled, and impure, and fetched from miles away, can He not transport the fragments of a human body from the earth, and out of them build a radiant body ?

The Resurrection Body ;

Cannot God, who owns all the material out of which bones and muscle and flesh are made, set them up again, if they have fallen ? If a manufacturer of telescopes drop a telescope on the floor and it breaks, can he not mend it again, so you can see through it ? And if God drops the human eye into the dust, the eye which He originally fashioned, can He not restore it ? Aye, if the manufacturer of the telescope by a change of the glass and a change of focus can make a better glass than that which was originally constructed, and actually improve it, do you not think the fashioner of the human eye may improve its sight and multiply the natural eye by the thousand-fold additional forces of the resurrection eye ?

Resurrection in Nature

"Why should it be thought with you an incredible thing that God should raise the dead ?" Things all around us suggest it. Out of what grew all these flowers ? Out of the mould and the earth. Resurrected ! Resurrected ! The radiant butterfly, where did it come from ? The loathsome caterpillar. That albatros that smites the tempest with its wing, where did it come from ? A senseless shell. Near Bergerac, France, in a Celtic tomb, under a block were found flower-seed that had been buried two thousand years. The explorer took the flower-seed and planted it, and it came up ; it bloomed in bluebell and heliotrope. Two thousand years ago buried, yet resurrected. A traveller says he found in a mummy-pit in Egypt garden peas that had been buried there three thousand years ago. He brought them out, and on the 4th of June, 1844, he planted them, and in thirty days they sprang up. Buried three thousand years, yet resurrected. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead ?"

Where did all this silk come from—the silk that adorns your persons and your homes ? In the hollow of a staff a Greek missionary brought from China to Europe the progenitors of those worms that now supply the silk markets of many nations. The pageantry of bannered host and the luxurious articles of commercial emporium blazing out from the silk worms. And who shall be surprised if out of this insignificant earthly body, this insignificant earthly life, into something worthy of the coming eternities? Put silver into diluted nitre and it dissolves. Is the silver gone forever? No. Put in some pieces of copper and the silver reappears. If one force dissolves, another force organizes. "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The insects flew, and the worms crawled last autumn feebler and feebler, and then stopped. They have taken no food, they want none. They lie dormant and insensible, but soon the south wind will blow the resurrection trumpet, and the air and the earth will be full of them. Do you not think that God can do as much for our bodies as He does for the wasps, and the spiders, and the snails? This morning at half-past four o'clock there was a resurrection. Out of the night, the day. In a few weeks there will be a resurrection in all our gardens. Why not some day a resurrection amid all the graves?

Our Bodies Unfold

Ever and anon there are instances of men and women entranced.

A Trance

is death followed by resurrection after a few days; total suspension of mental power and voluntary action. Rev. William Tennent, a great evangelist of the last generation, of whom Dr. Archibald Alexander, a man far from being sentimental, wrote in most eulogistic terms—"Rev. William Tennent seemed to die. His spirit departed. People came in day after day and said, 'He is dead, he is dead.' But the soul that fled returned, and William Tennent lived to write out the experiences of what he had seen while his soul was gone." It may be found some time that what is called suspended animation or comatose state is brief death, giving the soul an excursion into the next world from which it comes back, a furlough of a few hours granted from the conflict of life, to which it must return. Do not this waking up of men from trance, and this waking up of insects from winter lifelessness, and this waking up of grains buried three thousand years ago, make it easier for you to believe that your body and mine, after the vacation of the grave, shall rouse and rally, though there be three thousand years between our last breath and the sounding of

The Archangelic Reveille?

Physiologists tell us that while the most of our bodies are built with such wonderful economy that we can spare nothing, and the loss of a finger is a hinderment, and the injury of a toe-joint makes us lame, still that we have two or three useless physical apparati, and no anatomist or physiologist has ever been able to tell what they are good for. They are no doubt the foundation of the resurrection body, worth nothing to us in this state, to be indispensably valuable in the next state. The Jewish rabbins had only a hint of this suggestion when they said that in the human frame there was a small bone which they said was to be the basis of the resurrection body. Perhaps that may have been a delusion. But this thing is certain, the Christian scientists of our day have found out that there are superfluities of body that are something gloriously suggestive of another state.

I called at my friend's house one summer day; I found the yard all piled up with the rubbish of carpenter and mason's work. The door was off. The plumbers had torn up the floor. The roof was being lifted in cupola. All the pictures were gone, and the paper-hangers were doing their work. All the modern improvements were being introduced into that dwelling. There was not a room in the house fit to live in at that time, although a month before, when I visited that house, everything was so beautiful I could not have suggested an improvement. My friend had gone with his family to the Holy Land, expecting to come back at the end of six months, when the building was to be done. And oh! what was his joy when he returned and found and improved and glorified! That is your body. It looks well now—all the rooms filled with health, and we could hardly make a suggestion. But after a while your soul will go to the Holy Land, and while you are gone the old house of your tabernacle will be entirely reconstructed from cellar to attic, and every nerve, muscle, and bone, and tissue, and artery must be hauled over, and the old structure will be burnished, and adorned, and raised, and cupolaed, and enlarged, and all the improvements of heaven introduced, and you will move into it on resurrection day. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Oh, what a day

The Old House Enlarged

When Body and Soul Meet Again!

They are very fond of each other. Did your body ever have pain and your soul not pity it? or your body have a joy and your soul not re-echo it? or, changing the question, did your soul ever have any trouble and your body not sympathize with it? growing wan and weak under the depressing influence. Or did your soul ever have a gladness but your body celebrated it with kindled eye, and cheek, and elastic step? Surely God never intended two such good friends to be long separated. And so when morning shall come the soul will descend, crying, "Where is my body?" and the body will ascend, saying, "Where is my soul?" and the Lord of the resurrection will bring them together, and it will be a perfect soul in a perfect body, introduced by a perfect Christ into a perfect heaven. Victory! Do you wonder that to-day we swathe this house with garlands? Do you wonder we celebrate it with the most consecrated voice of song that we can invite, and with the deftest fingers on organ and cornet, and with doxologies that beat these arches with the billows of sound as the sea smites the basalt at Giant's Causeway? Only the bad disapprove of the resurrection.

The World's Last Easter

A Cruel Heathen Warrior

heard Mr. Moffat, the missionary, preach about the resurrection, and he said to the missionary, "Will my father rise in the last day?" "Yes," said the missionary. "Will all the dead in battle rise?" said the cruel chieftain. "Yes," said the missionary. "Then," said the warrior, "let me hear no more about the resurrection day. There can be no resurrection, there shall be no resurrection. I have slain thousands in battle. Will they rise?" Ah! there will be more to rise on that day than those want to see whose crimes have never been repented of. But for all others, who allowed Chrst to be their pardon, and life, and resurrection, it will be a day of victory. The thunders of the last day will be

The Salvo that Greets You into harbor. The lightnings will be only the torches of triumphal procession marching down to escort you home. The burning worlds flashing through immensity will be the rockets celebrating your coronation on thrones, where you will reign forever, and forever, and forever. Where is death? What have we to do with death? As your reunited body and soul swing off from this planet on that last day, you will see deep gashes all up and down the hills, deep gashes all through the valleys, and they will be the emptied graves, they will be the abandoned sepulchres, with rough ground tossed on either side of them, and slabs will lie uneven on the rent hillocks, and there will be fallen monuments and cenotaphs, and then for the first time you will appreciate the full exhilaration of the text, "He will swallow up death in victory."

"Hail the Lord of earth and heaven!
Praise to Thee by both be given;
Thee we greet triumphant now,
Hail the resurrection Thou!"

LUDWIG WINDTHORST,

The Opponent of Prince Bismarck.

See Portrait on page

A CURIOUS result has followed the new alliance between the German Government and the Pope. Hitherto the fierce struggle in the Reichstag has been a triangular one. Bismarck has been opposed by two sections, neither of which had any love for the other, though allied together against the Chancellor. He was hated by the Liberals and Socialists for his despotic principles, and he was hated by the Ultramontanes for his anti-Catholic policy. The leader of the latter section is Herr Windthorst (whose portrait appears on page 236), who gloried in fighting the battle of the Pope against the Protestant statesman. Powerful as Bismarck is, he is unequal to the struggle against the two sections. He has apparently come to the conclusion that the Socialists were his more formidable opponents, and he has bargained with the Pope to assist him in crushing them. Thus Windthorst finds the ground cut from under him, and has written to the Pope a very humble letter, promising to cease his opposition to Bismarck.

Windthorst is a great man intellectually, an eloquent orator, ready in repartee and fearless in debate. His personal appearance is striking, his head being of vast size and exceedingly disproportionate to his tiny body. He wears spectacles to assist his weak eyesight, but has marvellously acute hearing to help his quick perception. A witty French writer describes Windthorst as extremely ugly to look at, with a mouth stretching from ear to ear, and "frog's eyes." He draws an animated picture of Prince Bismarck and Windthorst face to face in the Reichstag—"the one (Windthorst) a dwarf, the other (Bismarck) a giant; the one an ardent Catholic, the other an austere Protestant."

When Windthorst was first heard of he was a lawyer practising his profession at Osnabrueck, Hanover. Later he was appointed one of the judges of the Court of Police at Zella. He was elected to the Legislature of Hanover, and was its presiding officer for a time. In 1866, before the battle of Sadowa, he was Minister of Justice to the King of Hanover, and also "Procureur-General." The annexation of Hanover and the consequent dismissal of Windthorst from the Ministry of Justice left him without occupation and added to his political and religious antagonism to Bismarck the personal element which gave it point and force. In the new line of policy he has taken up in obedience to the Pope he will not be happy.

An After-Tea Episode.—Mr. Richard Weaver, speaking at the Orphan Home, Glasgow, recently, said: "One day I was representing to a man the necessity of all Christ's children speaking faithfully for their Master, and he replied, 'Well, yes, that is true enough, but I cannot preach, I have not that gift.' My answer was, 'You may not be able to preach, but there is one thing you can do. You can say, "Come to Jesus," and that is the essence of the Gospel.' The man left me, and that night went to have tea with a friend, determined not to let the evening pass without inviting his friend to come to Christ. What followed I give in his own words: 'When I reached the house I could not get rest, nor enjoy myself, for thinking how I should ask him to come to Jesus. When tea was over, however, I mustered up courage, and said to my host, "Will you please reach over that Bible" (there was one lying on a little table which stood by his side). He looked surprised, but at once complied; and I began to read a portion from the New Testament, after which I knelt down and prayed. As I rose from my knees, my friend said, "Joseph, what brought you here to-night? Was it to have tea, or was it to preach?" "James," I rejoined, "I did not come to preach, for that is beyond my power; but I came to ask you to come to Jesus;" and taking his hands in mine I pressed him to take Christ as his Saviour. Thanks be to Him, before I left that house he had come.'"

JAPANESE LADY CONVERTS.

It would appear that Christianity is to make its entry into Japanese life through, and find its chief workers in, the wives and mothers. An interesting letter to the Missionary Record from M. L. Gordon shows how this has been already inaugurated. The following are the facts:

Some of the most striking results of the presence of Christianity have occurred within the past few months. One of the Japanese professors in the Imperial University has taken the ground strongly and publicly that the Christian religion is the only hope for the elevation of Japanese women. This is remarkable in several ways. Professor Toyama is not a Christian himself, and he does not seem to recognize the fact that Christianity is just as necessary for the other sex. Like not a few of his educated countrymen, he praises Christianity and recommends it to others rather than accepts it himself. There has just been organized in Tokio a "Society for the Promotion of Ladies' Education in Japan." Count Ito, the President of the Imperial Cabinet, is the President of this Society. Many noble ladies are on the list of vice-presidents. Its immediate object is the establishment in Tokio of an institute for the higher education of women. This will comprise a club, a lecture institute, and a high-grade school. Besides a limited number of boarding pupils, it will be open to a large number of married and unmarried ladies to whom instruction will be given in housekeeping, nursing the sick, dress, deportment, literature, and morals. The whole institution will be entrusted to the management of a foreign lady-principal, with assistants appointed by the shareholders.

These changes that we have noted are clearly seen to be the immediate effects of Christian truth and life. Mr. Mori and many other high officials have been the pupils of missionaries. When he was once asked if he was a Christian, he replied, "I try to live so that people will think me one." Count Ito holds Christianity to be the source of what is best in our civilization.

TWO BRILLIANT VICTIMS OF NARCOTICS.

Never was there a more impressive illustration of the fatal influence of narcotics than one that was reported in the New York daily journals of April 5th. Neither genius nor learning nor social influence is able to deliver the victim when once the seductive drugs have him in their power. Instances of emancipation, however, are chronicled in cases in which the enslaved man has gone to Christ in faith, and has been saved; but they are rare, for the drugs seem to deaden the feeling, paralyze the will, and leave their victim incapable of faith or resolve.

The fatalities reported last week were of the most melancholy character. An eminent physician and scientist with his wife, who also was a brilliant writer, died in New York in distressing circumstances. Francis Gerry Fairfield, A.M., Ph.D., M.D., who was only forty-three years of age, with his wife came to New York on March 30th, and took rooms in Stuyvesant Street. The next day the Coroner was notified that Mrs. Fairfield was dead, and when he went to see her, he found her body a mere shadow, wasted away by the constant use of the fatal drug, the empty bottles in which it had been lying on a bureau by her side. Four days later—on April 4th—he was called to an obscure hotel in Third Avenue, where the husband of the deceased woman also lay dead, the victim of the same fearful habit. The story of their lives is briefly told. Dr. Fairfield was born at Stamford, Conn., in 1844. At an early age he entered the Gettysburg University, where he graduated with distinction, and subsequently received his degrees of A.M. and Ph.D. Coming to New York, he studied medicine with the well-known Dr. Worcester, and subsequently graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons. About this time his talents attracted the attention of the late Fernando Wood, and some of the spiciest, raciest, and most caustic articles published in a journal came from young Fairfield's pen.

In 1867 the young journalist married Miss Josephine Griswold, daughter of Daniel Griswold and granddaughter of the once widely known Dunham, of steamboat fame. Miss Griswold had already attained a reputation in the literary world, and as an operatic singer is still remembered by many old New Yorkers. Her sister is now the wife of Bret Harte. Her father—a learned jurist—at one time held the position of United States Circuit Judge.

After their marriage the couple lived in affluence, both contributing to papers and magazines, and receiving large prices for their work. After a time both commenced the use of a popular narcotic, and soon both were enslaved by it. Talent and intellect succumbed, and both husband and wife sank into helpless misery. The brother of Dr. Fairfield kept them from want, and helped them to the last. So ended two lives in their prime, which might have been happy, and prosperous, and helpful to the world.

THE COMING REVOLUTION.

In an interview with a reporter last week Joseph Gruenhut, a leader among the Socialists of Chicago, outlined the programme of his party. This is part of his statement: "There are two hundred and twenty-five assemblies of Knights of Labor in Chicago and fifty trades unions. People must not imagine, though," Gruenhut went on calmly, "that this election decides the fate of the labor movement. What we cannot do with our votes we shall do with our fists. Force of arms will take the place of the beaten ballots. Chicago is peculiarly adapted for the first battle-ground in the great social revolution that is certain to sweep America within the next two decades. It is a European Colony. I made that statement a few days ago, and it was poohpoohed. But however disagreeable the phrase may sound, it is true. I can take you in a dozen districts of Chicago where English is an almost unknown tongue. You will hear German, low Dutch, Scandinavian, Italian, Polish, everything but the language of the land. These people could not rebel at home, because they were watched by trained policemen, repressed by Europe's army of six million men. Here the Government is weak, and in the midst of an uprising of the masses utterly powerless, and so if at to-morrow's election we do not prevail by ballot, we shall look in future to the bullet. The Chicago labor people have nothing in common with Henry George and Powderly. We want swords; they give us sermons. They started a little breeze, and when the breeze grew to a whirlwind they were swept aside."

REFORMATION OF A TURKISH DRUNKARD.

During a recent visit of Mr. Fowle and several American missionaries to Roomdighin, in Western Turkey, several persons were admitted to Christian fellowship. Mr. Fowle thus describes one interesting case in a letter to the Missionary Herald: One of the women presenting herself was the wife of a Cæsarean. Her husband had lived at the village for some years, and had been given to the use of intoxicating drinks, and was noted for the profanity of his language. For years she had tried to induce him to reform, but all in vain; she had tried kindness and she had tried harsher measures, yet with no appreciable results. Her one thought and desire seemed to be for her husband's reformation.

Just at the beginning of the year our faithful old Bible-reader met him in the street and made one last appeal to him, directing his attention to the tears of his wife that had hardly ceased to flow all that day, and begging him, for her sake and for the children's sake, as well as for Christ's sake, to forsake his evil ways. The man seemed touched, and promised to repent the next day. As was natural, little confidence was put in such a promise; but it seems that the Spirit of God was striving with him, and he then and there determined that at the prayer meeting the next day he would publicly acknowledge his repentance. It was during the Week of Prayer, and the house was crowded; yet, true to his word, in the presence of three hundred or four hundred people, with tears in his eyes, he rose to his feet, and, taking his little child in his arms, he held it up before the weeping audience, and said that that little child had tried to get him to go to the house of God, but that by reason of his drinking habits he had been deaf to all appeals, yet that now he had repented of his evil course and, by the help of God, he would never touch another drop. You can imagine the joy that filled the heart of wife and friends at this announcement; this joy increases every day, as he remains firm to his pledge. We pray that his faith fail not.

A MAN TIED UP HAND AND FOOT.

In a town in which Dr. George F. Pentecost has been holding meetings, one gentleman who had made a profession of faith in Christ was met by an acquaintance who saluted him with: "I hear you have been converted?" "Yes." "How came you to be converted; you are the last man I expected to hear of becoming a Christian?" "Well, I just dropped into one of those meetings, and I was interested in the sermon; it put things in a somewhat new light to me; so I went again, and the truth is, he (meaning the preacher) just began to wrap the Bible right around me; and every night I found myself getting more and more helpless to resist the conviction that I was a sinner, and that Jesus Christ was the only Saviour. I tried to get away, but, as I say, I was just tied up, hand and foot, with the Bible. I held out a few nights longer, and then had to give it up and surrender. That is all I know about it; but I am mighty glad I have given in. It is a good thing to get that matter settled."

A FRIEND AT COURT

In a letter to the Church from Tabriz, in Persia, the Rev. S. G. Wilson speaks of the advantages already accruing to the mission work there through the appointment of Dr. Holmes to be consulting physician to the Vali-Ahd or heir-apparent. He says: It was on the ground that it gave us recognition and encouragement that it was opposed by the Mollahs. His Highness was so much interested in an exhibition of the powers of the microscope that he then and there insisted on purchasing the instrument for his own use. Photography and telegraphy are already matters of practical knowledge to the prince. The Amir-i-Nizam, the governor who showed Dr. Nelson honor, has required considerable attention. Besides the fees accruing from such practice, the friendship of the authorities is worth much. Not long ago one of the colporteurs of the American Bible Society was robbed and beaten by some villagers. The governor, when appealed to through the English Consul, immediately sent his soldiers, punished the villagers, and refunded the value of the property. As many cases at law are allowed to hang on interminably, the promptness in this case was due to friendship for our physician.

A NAME WITH ASSOCIATIONS

A suggestive first name which has appeared in each generation of a well-known family excited the curiosity of a reporter on a Maryland journal, and has led to the publication of an interesting story. In the record of the family to which General M. C. Meigs belonged, which has been carefully preserved, it is seen that in each branch the name "Return," has been given to some of its representatives. It originated in a brief letter. It appears that early in the last century one Jonathan Meigs fell in love with a young lady, who rejected his addresses. Meigs was too proud and sensitive to offer himself a second time, but as he still loved her he determined never to marry any one else, and to live and die a bachelor unless she, of her own volition, relented. After a few years the lady did relent, and sent a letter to her former suitor. Meigs got the letter, and found in it only the two words, "Return, Jonathan." It was enough; Jonathan did return and made her his wife. Their first child was baptized "Return Jonathan," to commemorate the brief letter that had made father and mother happy, and from that day to this there has been a Return J. Meigs in every generation. There is a sense in which the same word lives in the grateful memory of every converted sinner, who, having turned again from his sins, finds in acceptance eternal joy (Ezek. 18 : 22, 23).

CARRYING A WIFE TO SCHOOL.

IN a recently published work by Annie R. Butler the following characteristic incident of Chinese life is reported: A lady was visiting a tiny Christian school, and was particularly struck with a bright little fellow about eight years of age, who for some months had refused to worship the village idols, and who repeated various Christian hymns with much feeling.

The little one carried in arms a wee baby girl, and the lady naturally asked whether it was his sister, whereupon he looked shy and did not answer. "She is his wife," said his brother. On the lady asking why so young a baby had been taken from its mother, the boy's mother explained that she had a baby of about the same age, and as another woman wanted a wife for her son, they had exchanged. Only as her baby was not so fat and large as this one, she had had to give a dollar and some cakes into the bargain to make things more fair and even.

PROGRESS IN JAPAN.

THE rapid advance being made by Christianity in Japan is not generally known. A letter recently received by the Presbyterian Board of Missions from Rev. J. B. Porter places it in a forcible contrast. He says: A few years ago there were no Christians here; now there are two churches, with about one hundred and twenty-five Christians, besides other members in the out-station. A few years ago public sentiment was against us, and wherever we went we had many to revile us; notably, at one time Mr. Winn was stoned in a town only half a day's journey from here. Now the more intelligent classes are in our favor, and the officials openly express their hope that Christianity may soon prevail. Our meetings are well attended, our Sabbath-schools are full, and our classes for inquirers are crowded. A few years ago we had no Christian school here; now we have three, all of which are crowded to overflowing. We have to turn off pupils because we can only accommodate a limited number. But best of all in regard to our schools is the evidence recently given of students turning to the study of the Bible, and to Christ as the Saviour. We have been surprised to see some of those who have apparently been the most thoughtless declaring their determination to follow the Saviour.

A LIFE-GIVING KISS.

A CHILD'S life saved by a kiss is an incident reported from Louisville, Ky. In that city a family was in deep distress over the dangerous illness of a beloved daughter. The father and mother and their little son surrounded the bed on which she lay dying, having been in convulsions all through the night. The child was barely breathing, and soon respiration stopped altogether. The doctor pronounced the child dead. The little boy, who was passionately fond of his sister, suddenly went to her, leaned over and imprinted a long-lingering kiss upon the pallid lips. The child's mouth was slightly open, and in kissing her the boy, who was sobbing bitterly, exhaled breath into her throat. The little lips suddenly moved, the child gave several sudden gasps, and then commenced to breathe—slowly at first, and then more naturally, until respiration became regular. From that time the child was gradually nursed back to life. The scene was a very impressive one, and though the doctor explained it by natural causes, the parents cannot forget that the brother's embrace was the means of saving their child's life. Nor can thousands of believers forget that when in danger of eternal death, the revelation to them of the infinite love of Him whom we are permitted to speak of as our Elder Brother has led them into everlasting life (John 3 : 16).

THE RETURN OF CHRIST.

By Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D.D.*

The Only Authority—Early Scholarship—The Reformers' Teaching—Modern Testimony of Much Value—The Meaning of Christ's Parables of the Kingdom—When it will Come.

THE one sole question for all loyal students of the sacred writings is, What do they teach? They are God's revealed will, and we are to take their witness as His truth, whether we can or cannot understand, or explain, or harmonize them. Their Author holds Himself responsible for all this; He holds us responsible for believing and obeying what He has revealed.

There is a prevalent impression that the doctrine of the Lord's pre-millennial return is a weak and unscholarly perversion of Scripture. There could not be a greater mistake. For the benefit of those not familiar with the facts, it may be stated that for three hundred years was a practical unit in teaching this doctrine as the clear testimony of the inspired writings. The rise of the Papacy and the growth of its superstitions enwrapped all truth as in a thick and almost rayless night. When the resurrection of the saints in the Apocalypse was declared by a Pope to mean the worship of their bones and their images, and intercession made to them by the Church, there was clearly no place for the truth as it is in Jesus, and, as always, true doctrine and true life died together.

The Scholarship of the Early Church

When the reformers of Luther's time arose, they were too intensely absorbed in assailing the gross abominations and heresies of Rome, to have much thought as to last things. However in England, such heroes as Cranmer and Latimer and Ridley discerned the truth about the coming kingdom of the Lord, and gave ringing testimony thereon. And from that day to this, there has been a steadily increasing number of the most learned and devout scholars in all lands, who have taught the doctrine of the return of the Lord as the undoubted witness of the Word of God. Among these may be named such leaders and teachers of the churches in England as John Knox, John Milton, the great bulk of the divines who framed the Westminster Confession, Sir Isaac Newton, Bishop Newton, Chalmers, Candlish, Tregelles, Alford, Bishop Ellicott, Jamieson, and Fausset. Among the Germans, out of a very host I name but a few: Bengel, recognized as a prince of exegetes; Auberlin, Krummacher, Delitzsch, at the head of modern Hebrew scholars, Luthardt, Ebrard, Christlieb, Lange, Olshausen, and Stier—these as representatives of a multitude whose claims to the best scholarship none will question. Let no one call this doctrine the offshoot of ignorance, or the conceit of ill-balanced minds. Through all the centuries it has been the faith of many of the wisest and most devout students of the Word and defenders of the faith.

Personal, Pre-Millennial

The Highest Authority.

The parables of the Tares and the Wheat, and of the Drag-net gathering in the good and the bad fish, given in the same discourse, plainly show that the Gospel is not to convert all men in this present age. No explanation can reconcile them with such a doctrine. So, likewise, the parables of the Ten Virgins, the Nobleman who went to receive a kingdom, the Lord who returned suddenly to the house, left in care of servants. What, then, is the intent of these parables? As I view them, this: Not to set forth the formal or regal characteristics of the kingdom, but to emphasize the outward and inward operation and development of the truth, which, in this dispensation, is the great central thing about the kingdom. Our Lord had said in the parable of the Sower, that only one part in four of the seed sown would come to fruit. He now adds this parable to show what that fourth part should have. His Gospel was, as compared with the philosophies and teachings of men, of the schools of Greece, Egypt, the Orient, utterly insignificant—a very mustard-seed of nothingness. But it was to have a mighty growth. The day was sure to come when that despised and jeered at Gospel would outgrow all philosophy, all human teaching, and, like a tree of prodigious size, spread its branches far and wide, till men of all kindreds, and peoples, and tongues, should find shelter and rest under its grateful shadow. It would not, indeed, fill the earth, but it would be the greatest among trees.

A Royal Outcome

And in this development and spread of the truth of this Gospel, another thing would be true. There would be no blowing of trumpets to herald the advance, no flaunting of banners, no noisy demonstrations by which it would be marked. But instead, as silently as the leaven penetrates the meal, would the truth of the Gospel work its way in the hearts of men, bringing thoughts, desires, affections, the whole inner life of such as should receive it, under its control.

If it be objected that this view ignores

The Element of Kingship

as concerns the Gospel, two things may be said in reply. First, that it is nowhere taught in the Scriptures that all they who hear the truth will obey it in the present dispensation, but that believers are to be those "Separated," "Called Out," "Chosen," "Ordained," and in them the Gospel of the kingdom does now reign. And, second, that in the age to come, after the Lord's return, according to the Word, all men will receive the truth. And all the facts as to the way the Gospel works in the world agree with such a view. Nowhere do more than a fraction of those who hear the truth receive it, and in no community, not even in the most favored Christian lands, do all people who receive it become wholly penetrated thereby. So that if it be insisted that these parables are aimed at showing how thoroughly the Gospel conquers and subdues all opposition, the time of conquest must needs go over until another dispensation, for no such absoluteness of results is realized now.

The kingdom of Christ will not come with observation—i.e., with heralding and pomp incident to the coming of some great human potentate like an Alexander or Cæsar. It flashes across the sky, in a moment, sudden, unexpectedly, except to those watching for it. And when the Son of Man thus comes in the clouds of heaven, it will be with power and great glory. That is to say, the kingdom comes with the King, and it cannot come before. And this kingdom is, indeed, "not meat and drink, but righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." These are the fruits which the Gospel of the kingdom now yields in all believing hearts. And these are what will be the blessed characteristics of that kingdom when it shall literally come, as we ever pray it may, upon the earth.

Will Come as the Lightning

So of the phrase, "the kingdom of God is within you" (Luke 17 : 21). The revisers set readers right here by reading "among you." Our Lord was speaking to the Pharisees, His bitterest enemies, and the most malignant haters of His Gospel. He evidently did not mean to have them think that the kingdom of God's love was set up in their hearts, and hence they need not look for any other! But He meant them to know that He, as the promised Messiah, the true King of Israel, was there in their midst, offering them and all His countrymen, His kingdom—its honors, glories, everything connected therewith. The kingdom was, so to say, embodied in the King, and if the nation had accepted Him, it would have then begun that career of glory which, because of its rejection of Christ, was postponed for ages.

* Part of his address at the recent Prophetic Conference in Chicago. The full report of the address is contained in a fifty-cent volume of 261 pages, which also contains reports of the other addresses at the Conference, with portraits of the chief speakers. May be had by sending fifty cents in stamps to the CHRISTIAN HERALD Office, Bible House, New York.

CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

OFFICE, 63 BIBLE HOUSE, NEW YORK.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-Class Matter.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50.

Remittances by mail should be by bank cheques, Post-office orders, or Express money-orders whenever possible. If currency is sent it should be in a registered letter. Cheques and money-orders should be made payable to The Christian Herald. Making them payable to individuals often causes delay.

New subscriptions may commence at any time. When subscribers do not indicate their wish, they commence with the first number of the month in which the subscription is received.

The paper will be sent to any address for two months for twenty-five cents.

CURRENT EVENTS.

A Warning to the Rich Corporations which are rapidly absorbing the public domain was conveyed last week in an interview with President Cleveland, published in the New York Herald. The President is reported to have said: "When a real settler has legally taken possession of his one hundred and sixty acres he ought to feel that the Government is behind him, and that if his rights are ever invaded the Government will stand by him and see that no injustice is done. . . . I think it should be specially jealous of the rights of the farmers and the working classes. . . . I am of the people, I believe in the people, and I stand by them and with them first, last and all the time." That will be good news for the settlers, though it must be somewhat bewildering to the corporations, who hitherto have found little difficulty in ousting settlers and appropriating their land if it happened to be of value to them. Many of these corporations are composed of European shareholders whom it will be well to watch.

A Letter from the President on the Question of retaliation on Canada in the fishery dispute was published on Saturday. It was addressed to Mr. Steele, of the American Fishery Union, who appears to be anxious that the power entrusted to the President by Congress of prohibiting the importation of Canadian goods should be used only against the fishery trade. The President declines to take this view of the question. He says, "The retaliation contemplated by the act of Congress is to be enforced, not to protect solely any particular interest, however meritorious or valuable, but to maintain the national honor and thus protect all our people. In this view the violation of American fishery rights, and unjust or unfriendly acts toward a portion of our citizens engaged in this business, is but the occasion for action, and constitutes a national affront which gives birth to or may justify retaliation. This measure once resorted to, its effectiveness and value may well depend upon the thoroughness and extent of its application, and in the performance of international duties, the enforcement of international rights and the protection of our citizens this Government and the people of the United States must act as a unit—all intent upon attaining the best result of retaliation upon the basis of a maintenance of national honor and duty." It may be hoped, however, that some better means than this may be found for adjusting the dispute. It will be sad if designing men, intent only on winning the Irish vote for their party, persuade the Administration to quarrel with England.

The Defeat of Prohibition in Michigan Last week is, with apparently good reason, believed to have been achieved by fraud. At the close of the week the majority against the amendment stood at 3500—the report from every outlying district reducing the majority as given on the day after election. It is alleged that voters were imported in large numbers from Wisconsin by the anti-Prohibitionists, and beside this that in some cases the returning boards dealt fraudulently at the ballot-boxes. A thorough investigation will be made, and as a preliminary step advertisements have been issued requesting every citizen who voted for the amendment to send his name and address to the Prohibition headquarters. Gogebie County is stated to have given an anti-Prohibition majority of 2200, whereas the Prohibitionists assert that it does not contain 1800 voters altogether, and last fall, when the county formed part of Ontonagan County, the entire vote of Ontonagan County was only 1500. It is certain that the liquor interest was thoroughly aroused, and would do its utmost to defeat the passage of the amendment. That was within its right; but if illegitimate means were used, the result ought not to stand.

General Astonishment has been Produced by a Democratic triumph in Rhode Island. Among all the spring elections this has caused the greatest sensation, for it seemed the very climax of improbability that Rhode Island should go Democratic. The result does not appear to be due to a change of political principle in the State, but to the independent vote. A large number of citizens who are Republicans in principle voted the Democratic ticket this year as a reproof to the managers of their own party, and as an intimation to all whom it might concern that something more was required of a candidate to gain their support beside the fact that he was regularly nominated. The old party managers sneer at the independent vote and call it by opprobrious names, but it is evidently growing, and last week's result in Rhode Island is a conspicuous proof of it.

The Election of a Republican Mayor in Chicago on April 5th is a notable fact apart from party politics. The course taken by the present mayor, Carter Harrison, in the contest changed the issue involved from a political to a social one. His friends, who controlled the Democratic convention, renominated him, and Harrison, after declining, accepted the nomination. Later, he again resigned his candidacy at a time when it was unadvisable if not impossible to secure another Democratic candidate. The contest thereupon lay between Mr. Roche, the Republican nominee, and Mr. Nelson, the Labor candidate, who was supported enthusiastically by the Socialists. This fact excited deep interest not only in Chicago, but throughout the country. With so large a proportion of foreign Socialists in the city, it was realized that the election of a Socialist mayor would be a shock to public confidence, and might involve disaster in the event of an anarchist outbreak. The result has been reassuring, and has shown the public spirit of the Democratic Party. Though urged to support Nelson in preference to a Republican, they largely voted for Roche, who was elected by a majority of 27,858. The labor vote was 23,410. It is generally conceded that Nelson's candidacy was forced on the Labor Party by the Socialists, who have captured the labor organization, and are discrediting the cause of labor in the city by their extreme opinions and violent utterances.

Miss Catherine L. Wolfe, the Munificent philanthropist whose benefactions we have frequently chronicled, died on Monday, April 4th, in New York, at the age of fifty-nine. She inherited a fortune of seven millions from her father, who died in 1872, and her sole object in life after that event appeared to be to use her money for the good of others. Of her private charities there is no record, and Miss Wolfe always endeavored to keep them secret; but they are known to have reached an enormous total. Her gifts to public institutions during the past year will show the scale on which she gave. The first sum was $50,000 to purchase a site and building in New York for the Italian mission. In October last she presented the trustees of Grace Church with $30,000 for the purpose of purchasing a building on Fourth Avenue, and her last act was the endowment of a diocesan house at No 29 Lafayette Place, which cost $170,000. To the Virginia Seminary she gave over $25,000. The American Church in Rome was given $40,000 and the American School in Athens $20,000. In Iowa she endowed the chair of English literature and belles lettres at Griswold College, and gave $30,000 to that State for other educational purposes. In Nevada, California, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, and Minnesota she gave large amounts to schools and churches, and over $100,000 to home and foreign missions. Miss Wolfe's valuable collection of pictures will not be sold by auction, as was the Stewart collection, but is given in her will to the city, with $200,000 to keep the pictures in order. Her will also bequeathes $350,000 to Grace Church, New York.

The After-Effects of the Earthquake in the Riviera are being felt at Monte Carlo, which escaped injury from the shocks at the time. On April 7th heavy land slides occured there. Immense masses of rock and earth slid down and entirely blocked the railway and carriage roads between Monte Carlo and Cannes and Mentone. Trains from Cannes and Mentone, well laden with tourists, had marvellous escapes from destruction, getting over the tracks just in time to avoid annihilation. The land slides were so great that they stopped all railway communication with Monte Carlo for twenty-four hours.

Increased Nihilist Activity is Reported from Russia. A plot to assassinate the Czar was discovered last week. A man and a woman who were standing on some steps overlooking the route by which the Czar was to pass on April 6th from the Winter Palace to the railway were observed to be acting suspiciously. They were arrested, and when searched dynamite bombs were found concealed in their clothing. Only eight days before, on March 29th, the Czar was shot at by an army officer. Efforts have been made by Russian officials to keep both attempts secret, but the reports being in cipher escaped their notice, and the numerous arrests being made confirm them.

The Discontent of Alsace and Lorraine Under German rule does not appear to diminish. On April 7th a disturbance occurred at the town of Zabern, Alsace, during which a number of recruits hauled down the German flag from the official buildings. About thirty men were concerned in the affair, several of whom have been arrested. The Strasbourg papers report increased expulsions of French sympathizers. The searching of houses for compromising documents is also being more vigorously prosecuted. The Chief of Police at Rappoltsweiler has arrested a suspected member of the League of Patriots. At Colmar a gendarme has been arrested for placarding the town with caricatures of Emperor William. Three leading residents of the town are implicated. Press correspondents aver that the impression is growing in France that Germany wishes to provoke a war.

The Papal Condemnation of the Knights of Labor was formally withdrawn on Sunday last. Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop of Quebec, who issued the mandamus directing priests to refuse absolution to members of the order, caused a letter to be read at morning service in all the churches of his diocese announcing the Pope's decision. The Cardinal attributes it to the influence of cardinals of the United States. Members of the order who confess their sins to the priests and express their willingness to abandon the order whenever the Pope may so command, may now obtain absolution from the priest, if they think it is of any value to them.

The Rev. M. Baxter Preached Three Times last Sunday in the principal theatre of Lynchburg, Va. He had good audiences. He hopes soon to preach at Charleston, S. C.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Two hundred persons are believed to have been converted at one station recently. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y. Received with thanks: $5 from C. H——, Des Moines, Iowa.

Subscriptions to the Fund for Supplying Colored ministers with this journal have been received since our last acknowledgment to the amount of $18. They are from : Ogdensburg, N. Y., $1 ; Fair Haven, Conn., $1 ; Chicago, Ill. ; $1 ; Minneapolis, Kan., 50 cents ; Lone Star, Texas, 50 cents ; Owen Sound, Ontario, Can., $1 ; Sherburne, N. Y., $1 ; Norwood, Minn., $1 ; Waco, Texas, $2.50 ; Pingree Grove, Ill., $1 ; Allegheny, Pa., $1 ; Edom, Va., $1 ; Hartford, Conn., $1.50 ; Antigonishe, Nova Scotia, Can., $1 ; Galt, Ontario, Can., $2 ; Newark, N. J., $1.

Legal Advice Gratis is to be Supplied in Connection with "the People's Mission" in Varick Street, New York. The Rev. C. C. Goss requests us to state that during his twenty-five years of mission work in the city he has found continually that many poor persons, especially immigrants, have suffered loss through their ignorance of the law, and have been imposed upon by unscrupulous men. He has, therefore, arranged with several eminent lawyers to attend every Monday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock at the mission 97 Varick Street, to hear complaints and give advice gratuitously.

A Paralyzed Invalid Who has Not Walked for six years was restored at Kokomo, Ind., on March 23d, at a prayer-meeting. A despatch to the New York Times says that Mrs. J. A. Hermon was carried by friends to a prayer service held at the Kokomo Mission Church. After fervent supplication in her behalf by a large audience of faithful Christian workers the Rev. Mr. Shutters took Mrs. Hermon by the arm and walked twice across the church with her. Then addressing her he said : "My sister, have faith in Jesus and walk alone," and to the joy of her friends she walked, shouting, up and down the aisles of the church. The service closed at midnight with a grand jubilee. After the meeting was over Mrs. Hermon walked to her home, a distance of three squares. She was visited at her home by a reporter, to whom she stated that she had not been able to take a step for six years, and that she was perfectly free from pain, with the exception of a tingling sensation in one of her knees. To prove that there was no deception about the matter she walked about the room in the presence of the reporter. The cure is a remarkable one and is the all-absorbing theme of conversation in church circles.

Captain Boyton, the Famous Swimmer, Narrowly escaped drowning on March 26th. He made an attempt to swim from a south bound schooner to the Jersey coast. The sea being calm and the wind favorable, he donned his rubber suit and plunged overboard. No sooner, however, had he left the ship than the sea rose and the wind changed to the west. He struggled heroically to make the shore, but could make no headway. He sighted several vessels and burned his signal lights, but could not attract their attention, until he succeeded with the steamer Lawrence, at about four o'clock, by waving an ensign with the union down on his paddle. He was taken aboard and carried to Providence, R. I. Captain Boyton showed more wisdom than do many tempest-tossed men in danger of spiritual disaster. When he found that his vaunted strength and skill and the rubber suit in which he had unbounded confidence were of no avail, he put aside his pride and sought deliverance. Very often awakened sinners cannot be persuaded to do this. They continue trying to save themselves instead of looking to Christ to save them (Rom. 7 : 23–25).

A Surgeon's Terror at an Anarchist in Chicago occasioned prolonged suffering to a child on April 6th. The child had been run over by a street car, and was so badly injured that it was necessary to amputate his leg to save his life. The surgeon commenced the operation, but before he had completed it the child's father, a well-known anarchist, entered the room. He had heard of the accident while away from home, and was furious against the company which owns the car that had run over his boy. He was in a perfect frenzy, and when he saw what the doctor was doing, his anger turned against him. Drawing his pistol, he levelled it at the surgeon, who looked up just as the man pulled the trigger. Providentially the pistol missed fire ; but the doctor, realizing his peril, jumped through a rear window, carrying the sash with him. It was some time before the man could be brought to reason, and to understand that the surgeon was doing a work of mercy. When, at last, he was calmed, the doctor was induced to return and finish the operation, but in the interval the child had suffered horribly through the delay which his father's stupidity had caused. Similar wrong headedness is often shown by men upon whom trouble falls They rail against God for permitting it, as Job's wife urged her husband to do (Job 2 : 9) ; but they only show their folly. Even in chastisement God is proving His love (Heb. 12 : 5–8).

A Transfer of Blood from a Husband to a wife took place in Indiana recently. A press dispatch from Wabash, Ind., dated April 4th, states that Mrs. Daniel Slouder, of Goshen, has been very ill for several weeks through the impurity of her blood. As a desperate resort, the attending physician determined to try the transfusion process. Mr. Slouder, a strong man of thirty-five, offered himself as a subject. After Mrs. Slouder had been placed under the influence of an anæsthetic, a vein was opened in her left arm, while another was cut in the right arm of her husband. A rubber tube was used as a connection, and for thirty-five minutes there was a rapid flow of blood through the tube from husband to wife. The veins were then closed, and Mrs. Slouder immediately displayed indications of vitality she has not shown for months. The physician is confident she will now recover As this expedient involves danger to the person from whom the blood is taken, and sometimes causes his death, it is resorted to only when the ordinary means of purifying the blood have failed, and the case is really desperate. That was so in the case of the whole human race ; when sunk in moral corruption, Christ shed His blood for its salvation (John 6 : 53, 54).

An Interpreter's Assistance at a Wedding was required in New York on April 4th. The ceremony was performed at St. Joseph's Church, and the bridal couple brought an interpreter with them to help the clergyman in his duty. The bride was a pretty little German maiden, who understands no language but that of the Fatherland, while the bridegroom was a big raw-boned Irishman, whose linguistic accomplishments are limited to English, with the Irish brogue. They had been in domestic service together in the same household, and had fallen in love. The Irishman had done his wooing and the German girl had given her consent without verbal intercourse, but for the marriage the services of an interpreter were necessary. If now they would enjoy the familiar conversation and interchange of ideas that are associated with married life, one of them should learn the language of the other, otherwise their union will be but a partial realization of the intention of marriage. Their uncongeniality, however, even in their present state will not be so marked as that of those unions in which one person is a citizen of Christ's kingdom and the other is not. In that case the difference is one more important than in language, being one of thought and feeling and the whole being (II Cor. 6 : 14).

A Man Blown from a Moving Train Narrowly escaped death on April 2d. A telegram from Boston, Mass., says that shortly after the last train on the Saugus branch of the Eastern Road had passed Mystic Bridge it was brought to a standstill with a jerk, and the announcement was made that a man had fallen off. The wind was blowing a terrific gale at the time, and the snow was very deep. A full half hour was passed in a fruitless search, and train men and passengers came to the conclusion that the man was thrown over the bridge into the icy water of Mystic River. As the same train started from Boston the next morning it was boarded by a battered individual, who told the conductor that he was the missing passenger, and his story was that as he was passing from one car to another on the previous night he was caught by a gust of wind and blown clean off the train. He landed in a snow bank, which broke his fall, though he was badly bruised. When he got on his feet he found that he was on the bank of the river. The train dashed across the bridge, and he walked back and put up for the night. His escape was almost miraculous. It may be hoped that in his journey through life he may remember this experience, and by availing himself of the Divine shelter, escape the fate of him of whom it is said, "The east wind carrieth him away, and he departeth, and a storm hurleth him out of his place" (Job 27 : 21).

BRIEF NOTES.

The Legislature of Maine has abolished capital punishment and substituted imprisonment for life in all cases of murder in the first degree.

A revival is in progress among the pupils of Oxford Female College, Ohio. Of the 120 pupils, almost all have made a profession of faith.

More than 500 persons have been received into church-membership since the recent revival in Franklin, Ind. The city has less than 4000 inhabitants.

Union Evangelistic services under Major J. H. Cole are being held in Hannibal, Mo. Sedalia and Springfield, Mo., have been much blessed during his services.

In response to a circular asking their views on the subject, the Irish Wesleyan ministers, with six exceptions, have replied that they are opposed to Home Rule.

The American Missionary Association reports a serious falling off of receipts during February, making its total receipts $3438 less than up to the first of March last year.

The streets of Jerusalem, which have long been in a dilapidated and dangerous condition, are being repaved and widened. Those leading to Bethlehem and Hebron are now finished.

Mr. Moody's meetings in Chicago are now being held in the Rink on the south side. He expects to remain in Chicago about a month longer, and will close his work at the Chicago Avenue Church, which he established.

The fiftieth birthday of Mr. R. R. McBurney, the honored secretary of the New York Y. M. C. A., was celebrated in the rooms of the Association on March 31st. Mr. William E. Dodge congratulated him on behalf of the Association, and presented him with a velvet bag containing eighty-five gold eagles.

Mr. Richard T. Booth, the Blue Ribbon Temperance Evangelist, now on his way from Australia to his home in this country, has made a brief stay at Sacramento, Cal., to hold a few meetings at the request of the temperance friends in that city. The meetings have been crowded. It is estimated that through Mr. Booth's efforts in the various countries he has visited nearly a million persons have become abstainers and assumed the blue ribbon.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond addressed the students, by invitation, in Union Theological Seminary, on the "Conversion of Children," on March 31st. He repeated "The Story of a Bible," showing how a Bible given to a Catholic lady of high rank in London by S. A. Blackwood was the means of her conversion ; and then of a priest, to whom she gave it ; and then of a nun, to whom she gave it. This interesting story by Mr. Hammond has been issued by the American Tract Society in tract form.

Bishop Taylor's missionaries, whose farewell meeting is described on page 227 of this journal, sailed on Thursday on the White Star steamer Germanic, from New York to England, whence they will proceed to join Bishop Taylor in Africa. Bishop Taylor's mission, which has no superior in value or importance among the missionary societies of the world, has its headquarters at 181 Hudson Street, New York. Contributions toward its support, which are much needed, may be sent to the treasurer, Mr. Richard Grant, at that address.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, The Christian Herald. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of Christian Herald, 63 Bible House, New York. FIVE PRIZES will be given on June 30th to the canvassers who have sold the largest number of copies each week between May 1st and that date. The two at the head of the list will receive ten dollars each and the next three five dollars each.

THE BREAKER AND THE FLOCK.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel; I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold; they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men. The breaker is come up before them; they have broken up, and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it; and their king shall pass before them, and the Lord on the head of them."—Micah 2: 12, 13.

A Promise in the Midst of Threatenings—The Conversion of Israel Assured—The True Israel of the Church—A Greater Fulfilment—I. The Flock Gathered—Surely—Completely—Unitedly—Happily—Numerously—II. The Champion Shepherd—The Way Cleared—III. The Flock Advancing—Becoming Breakers, Too.

You will remember, dear friends, from our reading last Sabbath morning, in the second chapter of the Book of Micah, that the prophet was delivering reproofs and rebukes against a sinful people, a people who tried to straiten the Spirit and silence the voice of prophecy, and refused to listen to the messengers of God. He threatened them with condign punishment from the Most High. To our surprise, in the very midst of the threatening He delivers a prediction brimming with mercy. The thunder-bolts stay their course in mid-volley; when the prophet is hurling destruction upon sin and sinners He pauses to interpose a passage of promise most rich and gracious—a passage which I wish to open up to you at this time, as the Spirit of God shall enable me.

Certain wilful persons were proudly confident that no enemy could reach them behind the walls of their cities, though the Lord declared that He would make Samaria a heap, and would strip Jerusalem. They coveted fields and took them by violence, and went on with their oppressions as if there had been no Judge of all the earth. The Lord warned them again and again, and assured them that they must not expect to be preserved from chastisement because they were the Lord's people. They were by no means to escape the rod; rather might they look for grace after they had been severely chastened. The prophet cried to the daughter of Zion, "Thou shalt go even to Babylon; there shalt thou be delivered; there the Lord shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies." I have no doubt that of this prophecy was given when Cyrus conquered Babylon and gave permission for Israel to return to their own land. Then was this promise in a measure fulfilled. But, brethren, the promises of the Lord are perennial springs forever overflowing with new fulfilments. In the latter days, the God of Israel, in abundant grace, will remember His covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and will gather together His ancient nation, who are at this time a people scattered and peeled. The Son of David, whom their fathers slew, not knowing what they did, shall be made known to them as the promised seed, and then they shall look on Him whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for Him. May this day soon come!

The First Fulfilment

Even this will not exhaust the prophecy. I regard this passage as setting forth a vision of spiritual things in which Micah dimly saw the gathering together, and the heavenward march of the true Israel, namely, the elect of God, whom He hath given to His Son Jesus, and whom the Lord Jesus has undertaken to save. It shall come to pass that all the elect of God shall yet be gathered together from the places whereto they have wandered in their sin, and for them a clear way shall be opened up to the land of their inheritance. The Breaker, who is also their King and God, shall lead them through all opposition, and bring them without fail to their quiet resting-place.

First, in the text I see the flock gathered: "I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel. I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold: they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men." Secondly, we behold the champion Shepherd clearing the way of the flock: "The Breaker is come up before them." He, with the arm of His strength, breaks all opposers, and breaks up for them a way from their captivity. Thirdly, behold the flock advancing, with their great Shepherd at their head: "They have broken up, and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it: and their king shall pass before them, and the Lord on the head of them." Jehovah leads the van, and the hosts of His redeemed march triumphantly after Him.

I. To begin then, brethren; here is

The Flock Gathered:

"I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee." Who knows where God's chosen are? Babylon was far off from Jerusalem, but our places of wandering are further off from God than that. One is aloft yonder on the hill-side in his pride and self-conceit; another is down below in the despondency of His disappointment. One wanders in the pastures of worldliness, sporting Himself in the plenty thereof, and hard to be brought back for that reason; another is entangled in the briars of poverty, half starved and ready to die, and hopeless of ever seeing the face of God with joy. They are everywhere, my brethren—these lost sheep; they seem to have chosen out, as if deliberately, the most dangerous places; they stumble on the dark mountains, they are caught in the tangled thickets, they have fallen into pits. Therefore doth God Himself come to the rescue. He Himself shall assemble Jacob, and gather the remnant of Israel. Driving with the terrors of His law, drawing with the sweetnesses of His gospel, He shall surely bring them in. By one instrumentality or by another, and in some cases, apparently, without instrumentality at all, He will bring them from all points of the compass to the place where He will meet with them.

Following the text closely, we notice that this gathering is to be performed surely There are no "ifs" where there is a God; there are no "peradventures" where divine predestination rules the day. Let Jehovah speak, and it is done; let Him command, and it shall stand firm. God will not change His purpose, nor turn from His promise, nor forget His covenant; He will surely gather together His chosen people wherever they may be. Oh, thou that art buffeted by opposition, and driven to sore distress in thy holy service, be not thou dismayed, for the purpose of the Lord shall stand! Thou mayest fail, but the eternal God will not. Thy work may be washed away like the work of little children in the sand of the seashore, but that which God doeth endureth forever. Wherefore let us be of good courage, and seek out the lost ones in full confidence that they must and shall be found.

This leads us to notice that they shall be Gathered Completely.

"I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee." The Lord will leave none of His sheep in their wanderings, and surrender none to the lion or the bear. Dear friend, sighing and crying afar off and thinking that God will never gather you, have faith in Him. Helpless as thou art, trust Him to do His work as a Saviour. Thou must not dream that Thou hast sinned Thyself beyond the power of grace, for His mercy endureth forever! Only do thou look unto Christ, and let thy soul stay itself on Him, and God will not overlook thee in the day when He gathers His own. He will not forget thee, thou weakest of all the flock. Thou art needful to the completeness of the company.

Further, our text declares that the people shall be gathered unitedly. There shall be a wonderful union among them: "I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah." Oh, that the Lord would in these days more fully and evidently carry out this promise in the happy unity of His visible church! Sinners hate each other while they wander in their different ways; but when the Lord brings them together by His grace, then love is born in their hearts. The truly spiritual are really

One in Heart.

You may meet with a man from whom you differ in many respects, but if the life of God is in him, and in yourself also, you will feel a kinship with Him of the nearest kind. Often have I read books which have awakened in my soul a sense of true brotherhood with their authors, although I have known them to be of a church opposed to many of my own views. If they praise my divine Lord, if they speak of the inner life, and touch upon communion with God, and if they do this with that unction and living power which are the tokens of the Holy Spirit, then my heart cleaves to them, be they who they may. Is it not so with you? When the Lord brings people to Himself, He brings them to one another. What is wanted in the much-divided visible church of God is, that we should all come under the divine hand more fully, that we should all feel the touch of the divine life, and yield ourselves more completely to the teaching of the divine truth. Schemes of union are of small value; it is the spirit of union which is wanted.

This gathering together will be done happily; they are to be gathered "as the flock in the midst of their fold." Oh, you that are wandering afar from God, there can be no rest for you until the Lord gathers you to the fold of which Jesus is the centre and the Shepherd! When you come to Jesus you shall find rest unto your souls, but not till then. "The peace of God that passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds by Christ Jesus," but by Jesus only.

One more note must be made on this head: they shall be gathered numerously: "They shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men." The Lord's camp is very great. If you have taken into your head the idea that the Lord has chosen for Himself a very small company, and that in the end there will be only a few saved, dismiss the notion. The redeemed are a number that no man can number. The prophet represents them as making a great noise by reason of their multitude; he alludes to "the busy hum of men," as when the bees are swarming. As in a city there is an indescribable sound by reason of the multitude who are making traffic in it, so shall there be a noise in the Church of a great concourse of men. What a suggestion of the voices of the innumerable hosts of the redeemed when they shall finally be brought together, and shall all in fullest joy lift up their voices! If all the gathered-out company were to pray together, what a sound of supplication would go up by reason of the multitude of men! But when they all sing—what a sound shall that be! I saw one stand up at the opening of this service to look around the Tabernacle, to see the multitude; and well he might, for it is a thing to do one's eyes good to behold this vast assembly. But what shall be our joy when we shall stand up in the midst of the great company of the redeemed? We shall look far and wide, and see no end of the great gathering. When they begin to sing, how will our spirits bear the swell of that majestic psalmody? I know I shall find my best voice that day, when in the midst of the congregation of the faithful I shall sing praise unto the Lord my God.

The Buzz of the Crowd

II. Follow me while, next, I speak of clearing the way. "The Breaker is come up before them." In the tenth verse the Lord says to His people, "Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest: because it is polluted." But we say to ourselves—How are they to depart from the place where they now are, and press forward to the pastures on the hill-tops of heaven? They are as sheep. How can they find their way? How can they face their foes? How can they break down barriers? The answer to our fears is before us: "The Breaker is come up before them." That great Shepherd of the sheep, whose name is "The Through-breaker" or "The Breaker-up," makes a way for His people, yea, creates it by force of arms.

The Champion Shepherd

Between us and heaven once lay the tremendous Alps of sin. Not one of all the flock of God could climb those hills; all must perish who attempt to cross those awful barriers. The way to heaven was effectually blocked by these heaven-defying mountains, for no passes existed; even the eagle's eye could not discover a way. One sin might keep a man out of heaven; but the multitudes of our iniquities, the blackness, the aggravation, the repetition of our offences made the case hopeless to all human power or wisdom. I see those awful hills, and wonder how the flock of God can hope to reach eternal bliss with those in the way. Behold, He comes, "The Breaker," before whom the mountains sink. "He His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree; and by that bearing He put them all away."

But, my brethren, if our sins were all forgiven us, there are other for we are without strength, and the depravity of our nature is not readily to be overcome. Think of the hardness of our hearts, the waywardness of our wills, the blindness of our judgments, the readiness of our minds to yield to temptation! How can we force our way through such obstacles! Why, if the Lord would forgive me all my sin, and give me heaven on condition that I should find my way to it, mine would still be a hopeless case. Even the regenerate find that they have a hard struggle with the flesh; how can we win our way in the teeth of our fallen nature? Beloved, the Breaker has gone up before us. The Lord Jesus Christ assumed our nature, and was "tempted in all points like as we are;" He overcame the adversary at every point of the conflict, that through His victory we might be more than conquerors.

Difficulties in the Way;

Yet, even though this be so, that sin is forgiven and our corrupt nature overcome, still there is another difficulty; the prince of darkness has set Himself to obstruct the way; He defies us to advance, He stands across the road, and swears that He will spill our souls. By no means let us be afraid, for the Breaker is gone up before us, and the enemy knows the force of His strong right hand. This brings us face to face with the last enemy.

Death Blocks the Way to eternal life. Be of good, courage the Breaker has gone up before you in this matter also. Jesus died; the Ever-blessed bowed His head and yielded up the ghost. Hearken yet again: He has risen from the dead; He slept awhile in the cold prison of the tomb, but He could not be holden with the bands of death, and therefore in due time He arose. He arose in newness of life, that all His own might also rise in Him. Come, be not afraid to die, for you will travel a well-beaten track.

But can I hope I shall ever enter the gates of heaven? Those gates of pearl whose mild, pure radiance chides my perturbed and guilty heart—can I hope to pass their portal? Can I hope to stand where all is absolutely perfect? I shrink in the presence of such matchless purity. But, brethren, the Breaker has gone up before us. He hath opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers. It will be safe for us to enter where He has gone; yea, we must enter; for where He is, there also shall His servants be. He will welcome each one of us with, "Come in, thou blessed of the Lord; wherefore standest thou without?" The Breaker has rent the veil from the top to the bottom, and given us free access to heaven itself.

III. Lastly, I have to show you for a minute

The Flock Advancing,

their royal Breaker leading the way. As the Lord Jesus, in His death, resurrection, and ascension, has gone up before us, so by His grace we are led to follow Him from grace to glory. "They go from strength to strength." He saith to them, "Follow Me;" they know His voice, and as His sheep they follow Him.

Along the way which the great Champion clears we find the whole of the flock proceeding. All down the centuries, in every land, they are marching along that appointed road which Jesus, the Breaker, has cleared for them. You and I, I hope, are in that goodly company; sometimes our following is lame and halting, but yet we are not turned out of the way. To whom else could we go if we were to leave our chosen Leader? Faint we may be, but pursuing we will be. Oh, that we could keep closer to the Breaker! Oh, that He would break our hearts with His love! Oh, that might be broken by His grace! We would follow our King whithersoever He goeth.

All Our Evil Habits

Observe, that in the text the people of God are described as imitating their King; for it is written, "They have broken up." He is the Breaker; and are they breakers, too? Yes, they also have broken up. Christ is the great warrior for His people; but not without conflict will any one of them be crowned. It is so arranged in the wisdom of God, that everything is so done for us as not to drive us into inaction, but to draw us into holy diligence. Christ's warfare is repeated in His saints in their measure.

Notice that as these people were led on by the Breaker, they persevered in following Him. "They have broken up; they have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it." They did a little at a time; they advanced step by step; they stopped at nothing, but went onward and upward. So do saints go from grace to grace, from faith to greater faith. Note the sentences: "They have broken up, they have passed through the gate, and have gone out by it;" this looks as if they did it slowly but surely, gradually but grandly. So, when the grace of God enters into the heart, and we, the sheep of God, are made to follow Him, we are attentive to detail, and notice each part of our obedience. You cannot in grace, any more than in anything else, do a great deal at once, and do it effectually. I find that advance in grace, if it be suppositious, can be rapid; but if it be real, it requires patience. Our Lord gives us line upon line, precept upon precept; here a little, and there a little. Let us be sure even if we be slow.

But now I would have you dwell upon the fact that they are marching

Under Royal Leadership:

"Their King shall pass before them." Christ is always at the head of His own church. Why? because He loves it so that He cannot be away from it. He is at the head of His own flock because He has purchased it with His own blood. He knows the necessities of His church to be such as He, and only He, can meet; therefore as the King He always remains at their head. Brethren, let us always reverence, honor, and obey Him. Our active, present King must be loyally and earnestly served. As Breaker He did us service; as King we must render Him service. Do you ever fear that the cause of truth and righteousness will fail? Shake this dust from off thee. Banish such a thought. If Jehovah leads the van, who shall stand against Him? If Jesus Christ, once the man of sorrows, but now the King of kings, is to the fore, He will reckon with our adversaries, and make short work of their boastings. Wherefore, follow quietly and unquestioningly as sheep follow the shepherd, and your way shall be prosperous. The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge; wherefore comfort one another.

I cannot express the joy I feel that I am

One of the Company

which is following the Breaker's lead; but my sorrow is that some of you are not of His flock. Oh, that you may belong to those of whom He says, "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold: them also I must bring!" Oh, that He may bring you in speedily! Do you feel a desire toward Christ this morning? Have you any longings to be reconciled to God by Him? Then you may freely come, with the confident assurance that him that cometh to Him He will in nowise cast out. He invites you to His cross, yea, to Himself. Obey the gentle impulse which is now stirring your bosom. Jesus has come on purpose to seek and to save the lost: you are lost; pray that He may save you.

Should the enemy of all good tell you that if you should believe, yet you would never hold out to the end, remind him that the Breaker has gone up before His people, and their King at the head of them, and therefore you are not afraid of meeting anything upon the road which can beat you back from hope and heaven. Join the army which marches under our victorious Joshua, and through sin, and hell, and death the Breaker will clear your way. To Him be praise forever and ever! Amen.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

A PASTOR'S HAIR-BREADTH ESCAPES.*

IN the year 1868 an incident occurred that should have a place among "Hair-breadth Escapes;" by which I mean all the time manifest deliverances in circumstances of great and imminent peril.

On Thursday, July 9th, I left home with two daughters to accompany them across the river to New York. We reached the ferry on the Brooklyn side just as the boat was being loosed from its fastenings. It was before the "ferry gates" were established, as they now are, to hinder passengers from passing on the boats, except when they are secured to the bridge. The tide was low, and it was quite down hill from the outer entrance to the boat. The younger daughter was ahead, and hurried down the bridge, and stepped aboard.

I stopped at the point where the chains are unhooked, and looked back for the elder daughter, who was coming. She started to run and the boat left the dock. She had quite a distance to come, and the declivity would have made it difficult to have stopped, if she so inclined. She did not realize the danger, and it was the work of a few seconds. As she reached me, I said "jump!" Had I attempted to arrest her, the great probability is that we had both gone down into the water together.

She jumped, and, as she went over the chasm, the opening was much wider than I would have thought it possible for her to have leaped. Her full foot did not land on the boat, but her momentum, and what? carried her safely over. The man at the wheel by me said, "I thought she was gone sure!"

But as she went over that increasing gap, another vision came to me. It was of an outstretched hand to lift the human form over the boiling flood. Whether there was a hand or not, I do not say. And if there was, whose it was I do not know. But if in the unfoldings of the future life I shall learn that there was really an agency present that, unseen to mortal eyes, carried this unthinking girl, I shall not be surprised to be assured of what appeared so real then as I stood in that eventful moment looking at what I could neither help nor hinder.

In the early summer of 1871 this same daughter, whom God so graciously preserved to us in the perilous feat just noted, in company with myself, had another marvellous deliverance worthy of record to the praise and glory of our loving and ever-present Heavenly Father. While enjoying a trip in the mountains of Colorado, we visited Green Lake. We started from Georgetown in our mountain buggy on June 15th, with two as good horses as ever need be desired for any trip. Some ladies accompanied us on horseback, as that was the usual method employed in climbing the mountains. The ascent was somewhat gradual at first. After a considerable distance had been passed we came to a place where carriages were left. But I had a remarkably strong and gentle pair of horses, and the buggy was not heavy, and I did not want my daughter to climb the hills beyond us. The road was rough to be sure, and went up at an angle of nearly forty-five degrees much of the way. But there were "break-waters" at reasonable distances, and I thought, "Surely if I get out my daughter can guide the team." But difficult as was the getting up, it bore no comparison with the getting down.

* From Grace Magnified: Incidents in the Life and Ministry of William Garritson Browning. Pp. 451. Price, $1. Published by Palmer & Hughes, 122 Bible House, N. Y.

Herr Ludwig Windthorst. (See page 229.)

The Appeal to Lawyer Slocombe.

When we were ready to return, our horses were hitched and we took our seats. About as soon, however, as I had fairly headed down the mountain, I discovered that what I had calculated would be easy was nearly impossible. My horses were almost under me. The brake, upon which I had depended, would not hold the buggy, but, despite my best efforts, let it slip and crowd the horses. The trace unhitched on the outside of the nigh horse, and he swung out at right angles with the pole. God kept me in mental poise, but I saw the perilous position, with the sloping mountain before us like a partial precipice. I remarked to my daughter, "I don't see but we are gone, unless the Lord interferes in our behalf!"

I did the only thing that I could see to do, and that was to draw the horses about to the right, until the carriage stood between some small trees or shrubs across the mountain side, and the pressure upon the horses was relieved. In a little while the ladies came to see what had become of us, and having ascertained, they rode to the lake and secured help from some young men who were there. The men, with their combined strength and by skilful lashing of the wheels, got the buggy down the steepest places to where the angle was not so sharp. I managed to get the horses to the lower grade, where we hitched on again, and were soon back to our place of entertainment for the night. I do not know whether I have the distinction of being the first man to take a carriage to the top of the mountain or not; and, as I did not feel very proud of the performance, I never took any pains to ascertain the facts as to this.

A SCENE IN A CHINESE TEMPLE.

(See Illustration on page 237.)

The Taoist temples in China, the entrance to one of which is depicted in the illustration, are places in which the Christian witnesses sights deeply saddening to his spirit. They are spectacles indicating gross ignorance and superstition. Taoism is altogether corrupt and bad, while Confucianism and Buddhism, which flourished by its side, have each elements of good in them which partially redeem them from the utter degradation of Taoism. Buddhism, especially, startles one by the resemblance of some of its doctrines to Christianity, until the discovery is made that the most ancient Buddhist books had no such resemblance, and it did not appear until after Christianity had been taught and the Buddhist priests had secured the opportunity of adopting such of its doctrines as could be applied to their system. Confucianism is merely a system of morality dealing with the relations of man to man, and not concerning itself except indirectly with the relations of man to God. Taoism, however, is a system of polytheism and demon worship of the lowest type, and being the religion of the million, its temples abound.

The worship in these temples, as described by the Rev. B. C. Henry, who was ten years a missionary in Canton, and whose interesting work on "The Cross and the Dragon" is well known, is a marvellous spectacle. He says that it consists not in prayer, but in burning incense, wax candles, gilt paper, and prostrations. Entering a temple, the worshipper takes up two semi-oval blocks of wood, and bowing before the idol, tosses them into the air. The position in which they fall is closely watched, and if they fall with one oval side and one flat side up they are satisfied. A cylindrical cup is next taken, in which are twenty or thirty bamboo slips, all numbered; and kneeling on a mat and repeating the usual formula for luck, the cup is held at an angle and shaken until one of the slips falls out. This is taken to the temple keeper or his assistant, who examines the number, and opening a drawer marked with the name of the idol worshipped, hands out a written answer corresponding with the number presented, for which a fee is charged. Unable to read the answer, it is taken to a fortune-teller, who gives his interpretation of it, and exacts another fee. If not satisfactory, the process is repeated.

In the main hall stands the image of the patron deity of walled cities, blackened by the smoke of incense, the silken scrolls and banners all begrimed, and the branches of the artificial flowers covered with dust. In front of this shrine is a scene that must be witnessed to be understood. Scores of worshippers are prostrating themselves. In an immense tripod censer three feet high long sticks of incense slowly consume, and wax candles cast a pallid glare. From a large iron receptacle flames of burning paper ascend, while with each act of devotion a great drum is struck to call attention to the worship. Idle crowds of the great unwashed press and jostle the worshippers on every side, and the din of fire-crackers, the heavy fumes of incense, and the smoke of burning paper, added to all the unpleasant concomitants of a promiscuous Chinese assembly, are very trying to the nerves.

LAWYER SLOCOMBE'S ADVICE.

(See Illustration.)

"I WISH we had not come," said Margaret Jepson, as she and her intimate friend, Mrs. Woodlake, sat in Lawyer Slocombe's reception-room waiting until that old-fashioned but eminent, respectable practitioner was disengaged. "It is a miserable thing to do—unkind, too, I think. Let us go away, Amy."

"I have no patience with you, Margaret," Mrs. Woodlake replied. "You have no spirit. You ought to have done this six months ago; and, then, see how sure you were last night that you would not draw back. You must go through with it now, for here is Mr. Slocombe."

The lawyer, who entered at this moment, was a quiet, sedate man, not a good hand at browbeating a witness, but a man whose influence in the courts was very potent—the influence of an honest man, who, as was well known, never appeared in any case which he did not thoroughly understand and approve. "Other professions," he used to say, "come under the ordinary Scripture laws and precepts, but lawyers have been specially warned, their temptations being extraordinary." "I dare not," he once said to a wealthy trickster who sought his services. "I fear God, and He has said, 'He that justifieth the wicked and he that condemneth the just, even they both are abomination to the Lord'" (Prov. 17 : 15). "Stupid fellow!" said the client afterward; "he is a great deal too fastidious for a lawyer." But somehow Mr. Slocombe got on very well as a lawyer, and found that there was plenty of legal work that an honest man could do.

The two ladies were not strangers to him, and he greeted them cordially as he ushered them into his private office. He placed chairs for them, and composed himself to listen.

"Mr. Slocombe," said Mrs. Woodlake, "Mrs. Jepson must have a divorce. She is being treated shamefully. Her life is unbearable. Her husband is a horrid brute. I could not have believed that any man calling himself a gentleman could have treated a woman so. She must be set free, and I hope you will arrange it for her."

" Dear, dear!" said the lawyer, sadly; " I am sorry to hear that. How long have you been married, Mrs. Jepson?"

" Two years and a half, sir."

" Ah! I thought it was but a short time. And so you want a divorce?"

" Mrs. Woodlake thinks it is the only remedy. I have never wanted it, because I hoped things would mend; but they grow worse, and last night in my trouble I went to see her, and she advised me to come to you."

" Well, tell me all about it."

It was a very common story—a dissipated husband, a neglected home, love turned to coldness and then to harshness, cruel words and taunts, debts accumulating while money was poured out lavishly in pleasure, even—and that was the climax which had caused this appeal to the lawyer—threats of personal violence.

" You could not get a divorce on those grounds alone in this State, Mrs. Jepson."

" Not get a divorce!" Mrs. Woodlake cried excitedly. " That comes of men making the laws. It's an outrage! Then you can do nothing for her?"

" Excuse me, I did not say that. She cannot get a divorce on those grounds in this State, but there are laws short of that to which she may appeal successfully. Do you really want a divorce, Mrs. Jepson?"

" Oh, no, sir!" said the ill-used wife, covering her face with her hands and sobbing violently. " If he would only be as he used to be; that is what I really want."

" I am afraid the law cannot help you there. If you will forget for the moment that I am a lawyer, and will take the advice of a plain Christian man who has seen much of life, it is that in your trouble you seek grace rather than appeal to the law. Patience and love and prayer have done greater wonders than this of reclaiming your husband. Ask God to give him a new heart; show him always that in spite of his faults you love him still, as I see you do, and don't scold and reproach him, but be gentle and affectionate. Depend upon it, you will succeed. If not, come to me again."

The ladies were bowed out, Mrs. Woodlake indignant, but Margaret Jepson subdued, thoughtful, and resolved. Some months passed, and then Mrs. Jepson did go back to Lawyer Slocombe's office, as he had suggested. But it was not to crave his assistance. It was to thank him with tears of gratitude in her eyes for the advice which he had given her and which she had followed, and which God had blessed to the restoration of her husband's love.

Entrance to a Chinese Temple.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 223.)

A Recognition.

LITTLE did they know, that little group at Aspen Garth, how near to them Alfred Atheling was just then: " So near and yet so far." Could their vision have penetrated space and darkness, they would have seen a young man dressed in a rough suit of seagoing clothes, disguised as a sailor in hat and flowing neckerchief, passing the Chequers with a swinging gait as of one whose life for some time past had been on the unsteady deck of a ship. A few men much the worse for liquor emerged from the hostelry as he passed, and he drew aside to let them go on. He did not wish to mix with them, for there might be a sober man among the company, who, looking under the broad-brimmed hat, might recognize in the disguised man Alfred Atheling. That would not have been pleasant, for he had only run down for the night to have another look at the home before setting out again for America.

But what was it that noisy reveller behind was saying? Alfred recognized voice and form in a moment. It was Tim Crouch the cobbler, and he was talking in a confused way about Alfred Atheling. After boozing all day in fulfilment of his wife's prediction, Tim was stumbling home, and the long pent-up knowledge about Alfred's former visit was exuding now under the influence of beer and the silence of the night.

" I know; I know," he was saying with a tipsy attempt at dignity. " They knows nowt. Tim's the man er knows. Course ah know R-raif R-a-ra—what yo' call 'im's Alf Ath'ling. What o' that? What bus'ness is't o' theirs? They've no call te med'l we't! Hang that musty-dusty-fusty oad mil'r! Mis'r Alf'd's a jolly good fello'. All the Athl'ngs jolly good fello's. Three cheers for Mis'r Alfr'd. Hip, hip, hip, hurra!" And so it came to pass that Alfred Atheling, who was standing on the grassy roadside, was unexpectedly startled into a standstill to hear himself, of all men, the subject of such unwelcome and noisy encomium.

For some moments, while Tim was talking and walking in this confused and crooked way, Alfred felt himself bereft of the power to move. It was a surprising thing to hear his own name at all in such a fashion, but to hear his cherished shelter name so intimately mixed up with it was very strange indeed. He felt that he must have more information; that this mystery must be explained. Tim evidently had drunk too much beer to recognize him, so he stepped boldly to the cobbler's side, and said cheerily:

" Good evening, my friend, good evening. You have been having a good time of it?"

" Evenin'," said Tim, lowering his tones considerably, and steadying himself as well as he could to get a good look at the newcomer. " Iss, ah've had a good tahme on it. It's a poor 'art 'at niver rejoices. Le's drive dull care way, eh? Them's my sentiments. What's yours?"

There is no doubt that those were Alfred's sentiments, too, but, alas! he had no means of driving his care away, a care so heavy that he could say with Shelley—

" I could lay down like a tired child,
And weep away the life of care
Which I have borne and yet must bear."

All the reply he could make, however, was, " Very good sentiments, indeed, so long as one can manage to do it. You seem not to have had much trouble; how do you manage it?"

Tim gave the questioner an arch look, which showed clearly enough that he had some of his wits about him, and was fully cognizant of his condition, as he replied — " Middledick's beer. That's the preshkiption. It's a wonnerfu' brew. You're a stranger i' these pairts, ah fancy?"

" I've come a long way," said Alfred, evasively. " I shall find some inn or other at Thorpe Aspen, I suppose?"

" No, yo' weeant," said Tim. " 'Cos why? There isn't yan. You mun gan back te t' Chequers. Middledick's gotten good commydation for travellers, an' his beer's wonnerfu' good. Stop," he continued, seeing as he thought another jug of it in prospect, " ah'll gan back wi' yo' an' show yo' t' way."

" Oh, dear no," said Alfred, hastily and thoughtlessly. " I'll go on with you. I expect I can get what I want at the Royal George."

Even to the beer-bemuddled wits of the tipsy cobbler it was evident that, in the slang of the day, the traveller had " given himself away." It was no stranger who would know that although there was no inn at Thorpe Aspen, there was the Royal George a mile beyond it. At that moment Tim's head was not in a condition to solve problems. He noted the inconsistency, but turned to the more practical business close to his hand of getting the traveller to " stand " beer.

" Royal George's miles awa'. You'll na be goin' sa far to-night. Come back to th' Chequers, I say. Good beds—good ale—best o' ale—what more d' y' want?" and Tim sang:

" Man wants b' little here below, Nor wants that little long."

" Come 'long, I'll show you th' way. You must be drunk; sober man wouldn't walk to th' George wi' a good place like the Chequers close by. Here, don't go. Stop, I say," for Alfred was walking briskly on. Tim stretched out his hand to grasp Alfred's shoulder, but " Middledick's ninepenny" had disarranged the focus of his vision, and his reach fell short. Tim stumbled, and came to a collapse upon the ground.

" What did yo' push me doon for?" said Tim, with tipsy querulousness and a disposition to make the most of a grievance on which to found a claim for beer as damages.

Alfred was so anxious to hear more concerning himself, that though he was at first inclined to leave Tim seated where he was in the roadway, he coincided with Tim's way of putting it, with a view to keeping him in good humor. " I didn't mean it," said he, lending him a helping hand.

" All right," said Tim, scrambling on his feet again. " It's all right. Ah'll say ne mair aboot it. You'll stan' a quart of ale?" And so saying, he sought again to turn his companion's steps in the direction of the Chequers.

"Come 'long, Tim," said Alfred, coaxingly, quite forgetting that he was a "stranger" in his anxiety to keep the cobbler from parting company with him or turning rusty on his hands, in which case he knew very well he should get but little information from him.

Tim put his arm within Alfred's uninvited, and with that substantial aid was able to get over the ground in a more satisfactory way.

"I heard you saying something about the Athelings just now," Alfred said. "Do they live in this neighborhood?"

"Iss," answered Tim, looking furtively at his companion. "They live at Aspen Garth. Jolly good fellows all on 'em; specially Mis'r Robert, an' Mis'r Edgar, an' Mis'r Alfred, an' Missus an' Miss Clara, specially, all on 'em. I knows 'em all. Friend o' the family. Le's go an' see 'em. You'll be welcome as friend o' mine. Mis'r Alfred's not there. He's jolly good fello'. De yo' knoa owt aboot 'im?"

"I've known a little of him," said Alfred, and added, with more truth than vanity, "but not much good any way," and could not help sighing to think how true it was.

By this time they had reached the outskirts of the village. At one side of the road, in a recess of hedge and bank, there was a pump whose clear, cold waters had been available for Thorpe Aspen from time immemorial. Alfred was inclined for a drink out of the well-remembered spout, and Tim seemed to have some views in the same direction. The cobbler laid hold of the pump-handle, and set to work with vigor to fill the trough with water. Then down he went, with the air of a man who had tried the same recipe before this; kneeling on the ground, and doffing his battered hat, he plunged his head into the water once, twice, thrice, and rose cool and sobered to his feet. He rubbed himself fairly dry with a big colored pocket-handkerchief from his pocket, put on his hat again, and turning to his companion, said:

"There! That's mah prescription for cheeatin' the ninepenny. Noo, Mr. Alfred, give us a grip o' your hand. Ah knoa yo', bud your seeacrit's as seeafe wi' me as if it were locked up i' the Bank o' England. If you'll cum' along o' me, oor Sally 'll gi' ye a corner an' a rasher o' bacon, an' jump at t' job. Ah reckon yo' deean't want to be knoan."

Alfred was nonplussed, taken thoroughly aback. He was just about to hasten back with all speed along the Chilworth Road, when Tim continued, "Jacob Benson tell'd me when yo' com' afoore, an' 'im an' me's kept it dark for your seeak fra' that tahme te this; an' ah can keep this dark an' all."

There was something so honest and straightforward in this avowal, and Alfred hungered so much for news of home, that he resolved to trust Tim for the night at any rate. He was strangely humble, and his heart was sick and sore. "Tim Crouch," said he, taking the cobbler's hand, "I'll trust you!"

"You may," said Tim, with a nod so vigorous as to topple his tall hat over his eyes, and as he brought one closed fist down upon the open palm of the other by way of solemn oath and covenant, the two passed along rapidly through the darkened village street to the cobbler's home. Doubtless Tim felt that in one thing he was already a gainer by this transaction; with Alfred by his side, he should escape the anticipated cudgelling of Sally's trenchant tongue. He would talk no more till they reached home, but plodded along in silence.

Alfred also was silent, busy with sad thoughts. The peaceful village scene with which he was familiar spoke eloquently and reproachfully to him as he passed each well-remembered spot. Here he had played as a boy; here the name of Atheling was an honored one; here people spoke well of his father and his brothers, yet he had been caught visiting it secretly at night, and under an assumed name. How much had passed since he, a light-hearted boy, had run along these very roads but a few years ago! How quickly time had flown!

How much, too, had passed since he was here, not many weeks ago, on the same errand that had brought him here again—the desire to look once more on the old homestead. That desire had come suddenly, irresistibly. He was in London, intent on making another effort to reach America, when everything was set aside to make this one more excursion to Aspendale.

Inez and her father would have been glad to have him visit them at Deal, but he had declined. When he discovered that his heart had been impressed by the loveliness of Inez and the gentleness of her disposition, he was much disconcerted. But when she said to him that she had obtained permission for him to spend a little time at Captain Lanyon's house, he thought to himself, "Then she has been speaking with her father for this," and found in the thought another proof that she would fain keep him at her side. It was a subtle and strong temptation, not only in that he should still be near her, still be within sound of her voice, and still see the love-glance of her eye, but that it might well afford him shelter and safety from the peril that he feared. Gladly, eagerly would he have said "Yes" to so fair a pleader, and at the prospect of having such a nurse, but he felt that it must not be.

"No, Inez," he said, kindly and gently. "Some day I may come to Deal and see you both, and talk over our strange perils and adventures; but I must get on shore at once, and —and—" "Yes, I know," she answered with a sigh; "your friends will be very anxious about you. I do not wonder at you wishing to go. I suppose you ought to, but it will be very sad for us to say good-by, and not to know—"

It was a very fortunate thing for many reasons that Captain Lanyon's approach cut short the conversation, for Alfred Atheling was impulsive, and the strain was great. "How long are we likely to stay here, think you, Captain Lanyon?" said Alfred.

"I fancy," said the captain, "the skipper will wait the arrival of his employer, Ephraim Hartgold, who, he says, 'has a knack of minding his own business, especially where his ships are concerned.' I shall be glad to see him myself. There would be some real satisfaction in getting into his employ. But what about yourself? I've been telling Inez that a fortnight at Deal would help to bring the color into your cheeks again. I need not tell you what pleasure it would give to us."

Alfred saw how Inez seconded the appeal and endorsed the statement with an expressive glance of her "eloquent dark eyes." But he held firm by his resolves, and explained to Captain Lanyon that as his plans had been so thoroughly broken in upon by the wreck of the Boadicea, it was absolutely essential for him to attend to his own affairs.

Now, Alfred Atheling felt an instinctive indisposition to meet the Quaker merchant, who was hourly expected to board the Good Intent. Whether he remembered the name in connection with the grain grown on the fields of Aspen Garth, or whether he simply dreaded to meet with one who had been in England all the time of his own absence, and who might therefore be supposed to be conversant with the continued "hue and cry," which he did not doubt would be made for himself, I cannot say. He resolved to take the first opportunity of leaving the ship, and so get out of the way alike of peril and temptation, and once more do battle with his secret trouble and carry his heavy burden alone. The opportunity came sooner than he hoped for. A boat which had brought fresh provisions for the ship was available for his purpose. Taking a last farewell look at the maiden who had so silently and unwittingly crept into his heart, he quietly waited his time, dropped into the boat unobserved by any of the three whose notice it was necessary to elude, and in the shadows of the evening he was put on shore.

Alfred's first impulse was to make his way direct to the well-remembered cottage of his good friends Ned Saltmer and his excellent "spouse Nancy." He felt well assured that they would gladly give him shelter for awhile, until he could again replenish his purse, and embark a second time to cross the Atlantic to find a sure haven from his perils beyond the sea. Had he done so, there is little doubt that his wanderings would have come to a sudden and perpetual end by the meeting with his brother Robert, who, as it will be remembered, had taken up his abode in the Saltmer household.

It is wonderful what small events and apparently insignificant incidents are sufficient to turn and curve the pathway of our pilgrim life, so that it leads altogether away from the pilgrim's original plans and first desires, and gives to his experiences an unanticipated loss or gain. "It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." Passing along the London streets, Alfred perceived a group of people looking with evident interest into the window of a large shop well lit with gas, and he must needs turn aside in curiosity to see on what their eyes were looking. There was a large picture of a battle scene, an engagement, which some little while before had been the subject of high laudation. It had excited much admiration while it hung on the walls of the Royal Academy, and was now subjected, previous to engraving, to the popular gaze.

Alfred Atheling had no taste just then for that kind of art, and after a very brief inspection he was turning to elbow his way through the clustering sight-seers, when another picture, hanging on the side of the window, and of altogether a different kind, caught his eye. It was a remarkably well-painted landscape, and Alfred recognized at once the beautiful Valley of Aspendale. Closer inspection revealed to him the fact that on the right of the picture there was an exact representation of the queer old gables and steep-tiled roof and ivy-covered walls of Aspen Garth.

This unexpected vision riveted the wanderer's gaze, and for a moment the picture disappeared from view blurred by the mist of tears that filled his eyes. It produced in him sensations that cannot be described. He saw the very window, with its diamond panes, through which he had stolen a last long look on that former never-to-be-forgotten night when he was about to flee his native land forever. He found himself flattening his nose against the big plate-glass window of the shop, in the fond hope that he could find some shadowy presentment of his mother there. "O mother! mother!" he murmured, "would to heaven that I might look upon you once again!" And then the irresistible spell had come upon him:

Alfred resigned himself to the potent charm without a struggle. Turning from the window, he resolved to find some quiet secluded hostel for the night, and to-morrow to take the train for Chilworth, and in the dim twilight to walk the familiar lane that led from Chilworth to Aspen Garth, and steal another vision of that "home, sweet home," and that still more sweet, beloved mother, at whose feet he longed to kneel, and on whose lap he longed to lay his weary head. As he sauntered along the crowded streets, indifferent to danger and oblivious to every passer-by, he murmured the poet's touching lines—

> "Between broad fields of wheat and corn
> Is the dear old home where I was born.
> The peach-tree leans against the wall,
> And the woodbine wanders over all.
> There is the barn, and as of yore,
> I can smell the hay from the open door,
> And see the busy swallows throng,
> And hear the peewits' mournful song;
> Oh ye who daily cross the sill,
> Step lightly, for I love it still!"

Poor Alfred Atheling! so he thought as he moved along through the roaring streets of London town, a stranger and a wanderer with a houseless feeling at his heart, and, because of his misdoings, with a price upon his head.

Thus it was that he had braved the risk of discovery, incurred expense, and submitted to delay in his departure to America that he might visit once more the scenes of his youth. That accounts for his trudging along the roads by the side of Tim Crouch, and consenting to accept the hospitality of the cobbler's wife.

(To be continued.)

JOSEPH HONORING HIS FATHER.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for April 24, Gen. 46 : 29-34; 47 : 1-12. Golden Text, Eph. 6 : 2.

An Oft-Reiterated Command—The Invitation to Jacob—The Jubilant Journey Homeward—The Astounding News—The Halt at Beersheba—The All-Important Assurance—The Joyful Reunion—Joseph's Public Acknowledgment of his Family—The Believer's Occupation—Joseph's Bargain with the People—The King's Prerogative Enlarged—Jacob's Death.

"HONOR thy father and thy mother" is a command of God, so important in His eyes that it is given six times in Scripture, besides another which is very similar, "My son, keep thy father's commandment, and forsake not the law of thy mother" (Pro. 6 : 20). Our blessed Lord rebuked the Jews of His time for making the Word of God of none effect by their tradition, and among other things He specially alluded to their failure in honoring their father and mother (Mark 7 : 9-13). Joseph was a man with whom the Lord was; he walked with God in the midst of Pharaoh's court, and while occupied with all the pressing business which he had to attend to as Premier and Secretary of State of Egypt.

A True Man of God is Known by his Life.

Until now Joseph had no opportunity to manifest his filial devotion; but no sooner had he made himself known unto his brethren than he thought of his old father. "Tell my father," he said to his brethren, "of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste and bring down my father hither." Pharaoh endorsed Joseph's command, and in the most royal manner commanded a supply to be taken for the father's journey, and added, "Also regard not your stuff; for the good of all the land of Egypt is yours."

Very different was the return of Jacob's sons on this occasion. Before they had brought heavy tidings with the food supply; now all was changed; fear had departed; Simeon and Benjamin were with them; they had joy to bring to their aged father's heart, their own consciences were lightened, the load of years was gone, and there was overwhelming gladness in the hearts and voices which brought him

The Astounding News,

"Joseph is yet alive, and he is governor over all the land of Egypt." The revulsion of feeling was too much for the old man—the spring of youth was gone, the months which had elapsed since the departure of all his sons had passed in gloomy anticipations of what might befall his beloved Benjamin; and now that Benjamin had returned, and all his other sons, and that with a story that seemed to him beyond the wildest stretch of imagination, it took time for the heart so used to sorrow to take it in. But when he listened a second time to the words of Pharaoh and Joseph which were told him, and when he saw the Egyptian wagons which were sent by Joseph for him, the truth dawned upon him, and he cried, "It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive; I will go and see him before I die." It must have been an exquisite joy to him to know that, in all his grandeur and state in the land of Egypt, Joseph had not forgotten his old father; and perhaps the proverb was never more true than in the case of Jacob, "A wise son maketh a glad father" (Prov. 10 : 1).

One stage of the journey was already passed, the caravan which contained all the large family, with wives and children, servants and cattle, had got as far as Beersheba, when, halting for the night, Jacob offered sacrifices "unto the God of his father Isaac," and God spoke to him and said, "I am God, the God of thy father:

Fear Not to Go Down Into Egypt;

for I will there make of thee a great nation. I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again; and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes." Now Jacob was free. If all his family had gone up with him into Egypt, and yet God had not been with him, he could not have been blessed. It is of the utmost importance in any step we take to know certainly, "Is the Lord with me in this?" Moses said, "If Thy presence go not with me, carry us not up hence" (Ex. 33 : 15). Many of our mistakes arise from making our plans without an absolute certainty as to the will of God. Better far to wait if we are not sure than to run the risk of taking a wrong step.

The caravan approached Egypt, and Judah, the most energetic of the brethren, and the man of most princely bearing, was sent to court to apprise Joseph of its arrival. Joseph made ready his chariot, and came to meet his father. Oh, what a meeting! How the old man must have scanned the features of that lordly personage, who was and yet was not his lost son Joseph! He was so unlike the simple shepherd lad; but the same; Joseph "fell on his neck, and wept on his neck a good while." The cup of Jacob ran over, and he said, "Now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive." But Joseph had yet much to do. He might indeed show honor, love, and respect to his father when he met him in a private way, but would it not be rather "a come down" to introduce this simple old man and these countrified brethren at court? Had Joseph lived only for himself, something of this mean pride might have influenced him; but Joseph lived for God, and he knew that it was to God's glory and assume nothing. He instructed his brethren to acknowledge that they were shepherds, although "every shepherd is an abomination to the Egyptians." Some people are ashamed to own poor or uneducated relations; they wish to be thought superior to them, and so they conceal their relationship to them. Jesus taught that when we bid men to a feast we are not to call our friends, nor our brethren, nor our kinsmen, nor our rich neighbors, lest they bid us again, and a recompense be made us. There is no prohibition against inviting poor relations or neighbors, for they cannot recompense us. Self is always on the lookout to get credit—credit for being so highly connected, or so learned, or so tasteful, or so lavish, or something else; credit for sometimes in which we may excel our fellow-sinners. How few of us can take credit to ourselves for being so Christlike, for having in everything the mind of Christ!

That He Should be Real

Joseph boldly introduced his brethren to Pharaoh, who asked what was their occupation. This was before the degenerate days in which many men and women look upon honest labor as a degradation, while they go in debt for what they want, and expect others, who work hard for their living, to pay their debts for them.

Pharaoh expected every honest man to have an occupation.

"Occupy Till I Come,"

says our Lord, not, "Idle till I come." The men said that they were shepherds, and that they were come to dwell in the land, because they found no pasture in Canaan. The king graciously apportioned them the best of his land for their purpose. Then Joseph presented his aged father to the king, and set him before Pharaoh. The greatest king in all the earth and the oldest believer in the world at that time were face to face. Which should take precedence? The one was a servant of God, the other a king of men. "Jacob blessed Pharaoh," "and without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better" (Heb. 7 : 7). With courteous kindness the King of Egypt asked Jacob how old he was, and he replied, "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are a hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage." One cannot but be struck with the difference between father and son: Joseph, whose trials had been so bitter, yet saw God's hand in all, and was full of praise; Jacob, who had done so much in providing for himself, and whose trust in God had been very wavering, spoke with a tone of sadness; he did not recommend God to those with whom he had to do, as Joseph did.

Joseph lost nothing from frankly owning his relations; the same blessing of God followed him. The inhabitants of Egypt were now feeling the famine as much as strangers from other lands, and they mortgaged their cattle, their flocks, their land, and, at last, sold themselves to Joseph for bread, and still the granaries of Joseph's storing held out. By this means, Joseph readjusted the occupation of the whole land; he removed the people to the most distant parts of the land, so that the labor supply and the laborers should correspond, and then, when he knew the time of famine was coming to an end, he gave seed to the people to sow the whole land, and so insured the prosperity of Egypt, which might otherwise have been many years in recovering from such a blow as the seven years of famine.

Seventeen years Jacob lived in the land of Egypt, cared for all the time by his son Joseph. Then the time of his death drew near; he knew it without having any physician to tell him, and he sent for Joseph, and made him swear that he would not bury him in Egypt. The promised land must be his resting-place, and he would have his bones laid there, in token that he believed the promises of God. Soon after this Jacob was sick. This is in the Bible. It would seem that Adam, Seth, Noah, Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, and all God's people up to this time had just gone home when their time was come, without any attack of sickness. Now, when Jacob was sick, instead of sending for the physicians, he, knowing that his time was short, sent for his grandsons, and then for his sons, that he might give them his parting blessing. There is a wonderful repose about the deaths of these old patriarchs. We read nothing of doctors, nurses, medicines, appliances, but of a quiet saying of the last words, and then departing. Jacob had yet to declare that as God had given him precedence of Esau, so should Ephraim have of Manasseh. He had yet to pronounce upon the present and prophesy the future of each of his sons as they came for a last farewell. In that solemn hour no sin was hidden or hushed up, everything was dealt with. From the threshold of eternity the inspired patriarch told out the truth of God.

The First Mention of Sickness

"And when Jacob had made an end of commanding his sons, he gathered up his feet into the bed, and yielded up the ghost, and was gathered unto his people." His own words were like an epitaph, "Behold, I die; but God shall be with you, and bring you again unto the land of your fathers" (Gen. 48 : 21).

Volume IX. of the Christian Herald, Containing the Numbers for 1886, with complete index, bound in cloth, may be had from this office; price, $2.50, including postage. A few volumes of 1883, 1884, and 1885 are also for sale. We have none prior to 1883.

An Illustrated Work on the Unfulfilled Prophecies of the Bible, by the Rev. M. Baxter, entitled: "Forty Coming Wonders," may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York, by remitting 75 cents. It is a book of 528 pages, is handsomely bound in cloth and contains fifty full-page pictures and diagrams representing the scenes described in the prophecies of Daniel and in the book of the Revelation. It also contains a a résumé of the opinions of other expositors, and extracts carefully collated from the works of all the most eminent writers on prophecy from the earliest ages of the Christian era down to those of recent date. It thus forms the most useful and complete guide the student can have on entering the study of that portion of the Word of God. The book may now be obtained for seventy-five cents from any bookseller, who can procure it from the American News Company This reduction in price is made to encourage the study of this important subject.

For The Christian Herald.

A PRESENT HELP.

By Lilla M. Alexander.

There is never a day so dreary,
But God can make it bright;
And unto the soul that trusts Him,
He giveth songs in the night.

There is never a path so hidden,
But God will show us the way,
If we seek for the Spirit's guidance,
And patiently wait and pray.

There is never a cross so heavy,
But the nail-scarred hands are there,
Outstretched in tender compassion,
The burden to help us bear.

There is never a heart that is broken,
But the loving Christ can heal;
For the heart that was pierced on Calvary,
Doth still for his people feel.

There is never a life so darkened,
So hopeless and so unblest,
But may be filled with the light of God,
And enter his promised rest.

There is never a sin or a sorrow,
There is never a care or a loss,
But that we may carry to Jesus,
And leave at the foot of the cross.

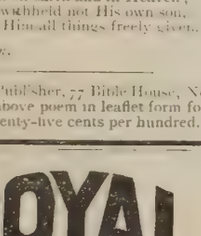
What more can we ask than He's promised
(And we know that His word cannot fail),
Our refuge when storms are impending,
Our help when temptations assail:

Our Saviour, our Friend, our Redeemer,
Our portion on earth and in Heaven;
For He who withheld not His own son,
Hath with Him all things freely given.

Greenville, Conn.

J. L. Jewett, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER



Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

MEXICO

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of

J. P. HEATH,
43 Bible House, New York.

NEW BOOKS! INTERESTING!

Life of Mrs. Mary D. James. By her son—
The Beloved Physician. Life of Dr. W. C.
Fragrant Memories of the Tuesday Meeting, New York. By Rev. C. Hetzel—three Guide to Holiness. Unsectarian Magazine.
Illustrated Handbook on Africa. Rev. E.
Sample Copies Sent Free. Address
PALMER & HUGHES, 62 & 64 Bible House, New York

TALES OF TRUST.

Authentic accounts of Providential assistance and deliverance. By H. L. HASTINGS.
"How many men and women in this land might be greatly helped by reading up this record for its pages are all say saying "Yes, it is good to trust all thing work together for good." Many [illegible] pages, crown 8vo, cloth, 75 cents, postpaid.
WILBUR B. KETCHAM, Pub'r, 71 Bible House, New York.

DR. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC CORSETS AND BELTS.

Corsets, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00. Belts $3.00. Nursing Corset Price, $1.50. Abdominal Corset, Price, $3.00.

Probably, never since the invention of Corsets, has so large a demand been created as now exists for Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets and Belts. Over three thousand families in the City of New York alone are now wearing them daily. Every Man and Woman, well or ill, should daily wear either the Corset or Belt.

OUR CORSETS ARE DOUBLE STITCHED AND WILL NOT RIP.

If you have any pain, ache, or ill-feeling from any cause, if you seem "pretty well," yet lack energy and do not "feel up to the mark," if you suffer from disease, we beg you to at once try these remarkable curatives. They cannot and do not injure like medicine. Always doing good, never harm. There is no shock or sensation felt in wearing them. There is no waiting a long time for results; electro-magnetism acts quickly; generally the first week, more frequently the first day, and often even during the first hour they are worn, their wonderful curative powers are felt. Every mail brings us testimonials like the following

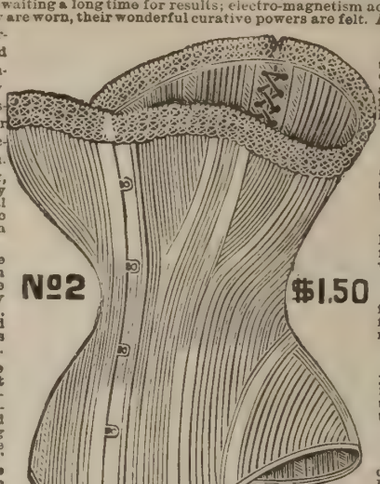
The mind becomes active, the nerves and sluggish circulation are stimulated, and all the old-time health and good feeling come back. They are constructed on scientific principles, imparting an exhilarating, health-giving current to the whole system. Professional men assert that there is hardly a disease which Electricity or Magnetism may not benefit or cure, and they daily practice the same, as your own physician will inform you.

The Celebrated Dr. W. A. Hammond, of New York, formerly Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, lately lectured upon this subject, and advised all medical men to make trial of these agencies, describing at the same time most remarkable cures he had made, even in cases which would seem hopeless.

The Corsets do not differ in appearance from those usually worn; we substitute our flat steel magnetods in place of the ordinary corset steels. These Corsets are nearly all equally charged, differing chiefly in quality and design. They are elegant in shape and finish, made after the best French pattern, and warranted satisfactory in every respect. Our Belts for both gents and ladies are the genuine Dr. Scott's, and are reliable.

The prices are as follows: $1, $1.50, $2 and $3 for the Corsets and $3 each for the Belts. The accompanying cut represents our No. 2 or $1.50 Corset. We have also a beautiful French shaped Sateen Corset at $3 a Sateen Abdominal Corset, and a short Sateen Corset at $2. The $1 and $1.50 goods are made of fine Jean, elegant in shape, strong and durable. Nursing Corsets, $1.50; Misses, 75c. All are double stitched. Gents' and Ladies' Belts, $3 each; Ladies' Abdominal Supporter, an invaluable article, $12. We make all these Corsets in dove and white only. They are sent out in a handsome box, accompanied by a silver-plated compass by which the Electro-Magnetic influence can be tested. We will send either kind to any address, post-paid, on receipt of price, with 20 cents added for packing and registration, and we guarantee safe delivery into your hands. Remit in Post-office Money-order, Draft, Check, or in Currency by Registered Letter at our risk. In ordering kindly mention this paper and state exact size of corset usually worn. Make all remittances payable to GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, New York.



SENT POSTPAID ON TRIAL.

N. B.—Each article is stamped with the English coat-of-arms, and the names of the Proprietors, THE PALL MALL ELECTRIC ASSOCIATION.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

Trinity Springs, Ind., Jan. 31st, 1887.
Dr. Scott—My wife has suffered acutely from Dyspepsia for 20 years. She has worn one of your Electric Corsets for four weeks and is greatly benefited in her appetite and digestion, and has gained considerably in flesh. My wife desires an agency in our community. Please send terms. (Rev'd) Isaac Carothers, Baptist Minister.

Hollis Centre, Me.
I suffered severely from back trouble for years and found no relief till I wore Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets. They cured me, and I would not be without them. Mrs. H. D. Benson.

Memphis, Tennessee.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have given me much relief. I suffered four years with breast trouble, without finding any benefit from other remedies. They are invaluable. Mrs. Jas. Campbell.

De Witt, N. Y.
I have an invalid sister who had not been dressed for a year. She has worn Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets for two weeks, and is now able to be dressed and sit up most of the time. Melva J. Doe.

South Abington, Mass.
Dr. Scott—My sister and I are very much pleased with your Electric Corsets. They have given us great satisfaction. For weak stomach and nervousness they are unexcelled. I have felt uncommonly well since wearing them, and can confidently recommend them. Flora E. Cole.

Niles, Mich.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have cured me of acute dyspepsia, from which I had suffered for eight years. His Electric Hair Brush cures my headache every time. Mrs. Wm. H. Peak.

Princeton, Minn.
Your Corsets have accomplished wonders in my case. I was previously thoroughly incapacitated, and could not help myself. I have worn your Corsets now for two weeks, and I am able to be up and around helping to do housework, etc. My friends are astonished. With many thanks, etc. Julia J. McFarland.

Streator, Ills.
Dr Scott—Your Electric Corsets are beautiful in appearance, wonderful in effect, and elegant in fit and finish. M. J. Briggs.

2121 Henrietta St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Dr. Scott—Your Belt has cured me of rheumatism of and around the Kidneys. W.H. Upjohn.

Newark, N. Y.
Dr. Scott's Electric Corsets have entirely cured me of muscular rheumatism and female troubles of many years standing, and also of a severe case of headache. Mrs. L. C. Spencer.

Dr. Scott's Electric Hair Brushes, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, $2.50, $3.00; Flesh Brushes, $3.00; Dr. Scott's Electric Tooth Brushes, 50 cents; Insoles, 50 cents; CHEST PROTECTOR, $3.00; ELECTRIC HAIR CURLER, 50 cents; LUNG AND NERVE INVIGORATORS, $5 and $10.

The Dry Goods Trade supplied by H. B. CLAFLIN & CO., New York, Sole Wholesale Agents. Remittances for single articles and applications for Canvassing Agents' Terms must be made ONLY to GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, New York.

A GREAT SUCCESS ☞ A Good, Live Canvassing Agent WANTED in your town for these splendidly advertised and best selling goods in the market. LIBERAL PAY, QUICK SALES. Satisfaction guaranteed. Apply at once. GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N.Y.

THE GLAD REFRAIN.

By LOWRY & DOANE.

The cheapest as well as the strongest and most useful Sunday School Song Books ever issued. Try it.

Price, $25 per 100 Copies in Board Covers.

SPECIMEN PAGES FREE.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York & Chicago.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1871 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free. FOR OIL.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.
It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.
In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.
WM. H. H. CHILDS, 75 Maiden Lane, N. Y.
For sale by W. H. Schieffelin & Co., 170 and 172 William St., N. Y., and the wholesale drug trade.

AMERICAN SILKS.

JAMES McCREERY & CO.

offer during the next thirty days a large stock of BLACK GROS GRAINS at prices ranging from 75cts to $2 per yard.

These goods are of American manufacture and are especially recommended for their durability.

James McCreery & Co.
Broadway, cor. 11th St.,
NEW YORK.

Sole Agent for the Clifton Silk Mills.

TRAIN UP A CHILD

To wear the perfect-fitting

GOOD SENSE CORDED CORSET WAIST and when she becomes

A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN

enjoying good health, she will then be sure to wear them.

FITS ALL AGES—Infants to Adults.
☞ Every one recommends them.
SOLD BY LEADING RETAILERS
Everywhere. ☞ Be sure your corset is stamped "GOOD SENSE." Take no other. Send for descriptive circular.
FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers,
341 Broadway, NEW YORK.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF
HENRY WARD BEECHER

by Theo. W. Knox. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

WARNER BRO'S

9 Millio worn dur
the past years.

This mar
ous succes due—

1st.—To superiority Coraline o all other terials, as stiffener Corsets.

2d.—To superior qu ity, shape workmans of our Cors combined w their prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various ki of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.

WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York Ci

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now is your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York

DO YOU INTEND TO BUILD

a suburban or country house? Valuable information free. Address, Co-O. Building Plan Ass'n, Box 2702, New York.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 18. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, MAY 5, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAITS AND LIVES OF THE LATE MR. ROBERT SIMPSON, AND MR. WM. QUARRIER.

BOOKS AND PICTURES. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning.

PROBABLE END OF MOHAMMEDANISM ABOUT THE YEAR 1900. By the Rev. A. B. Simpson.

Heathen Devotees at Midnight—A Christian in an Earthquake—Celestial Music Over a Dwelling, etc.

CURRENT EVENTS: The President and the Public Domain—The Civil Service Commission's New Powers—The Franco-German Difficulty Settled, etc.

A GARDEN, A SISTER AND A WIFE. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's New Sermon.

PORTRAIT OF THE HON. JAMES R. HOSMER.

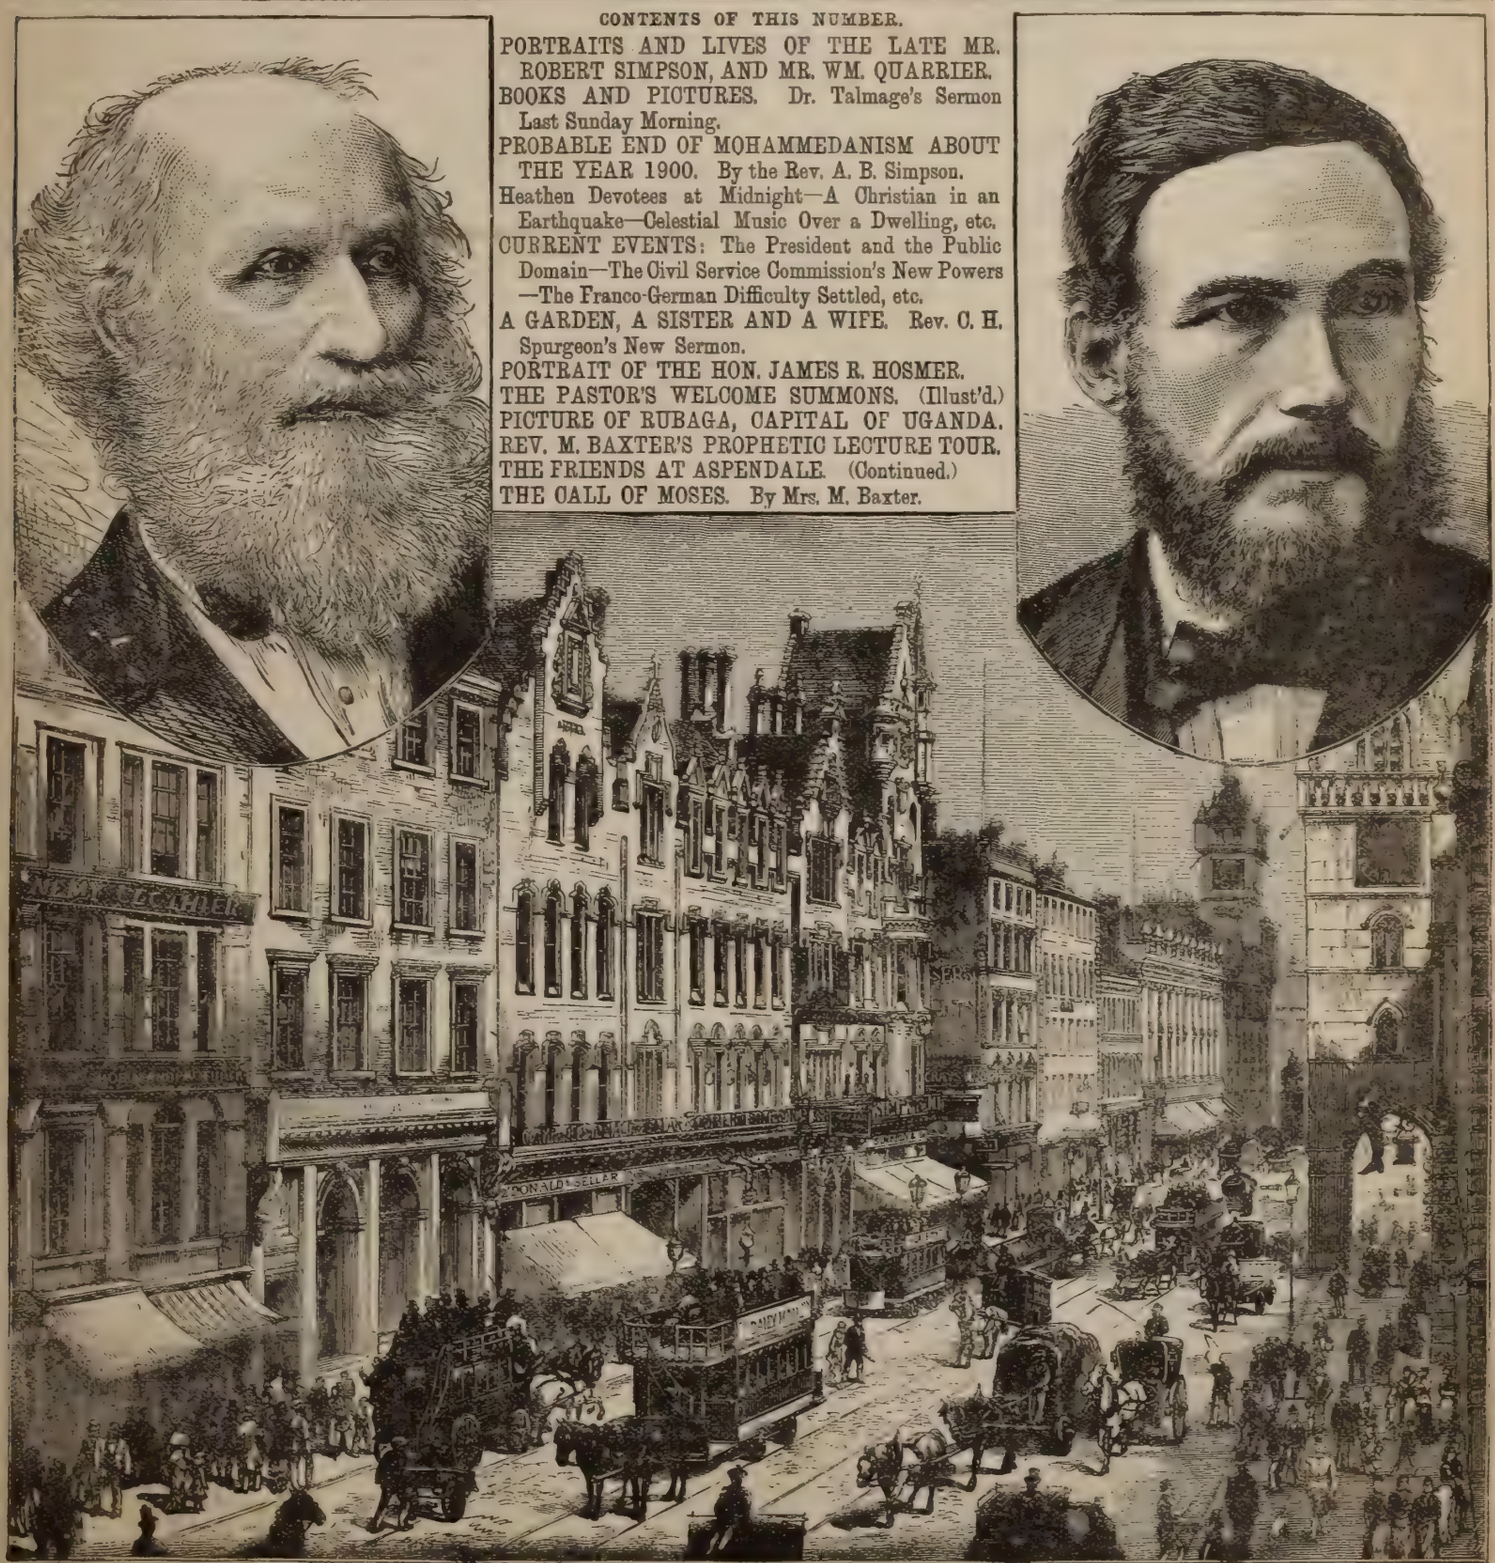
THE PASTOR'S WELCOME SUMMONS. (Illust'd.)

PICTURE OF RUBAGA, CAPITAL OF UGANDA.

REV. M. BAXTER'S PROPHETIC LECTURE TOUR.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. (Continued.)

THE CALL OF MOSES. By Mrs. M. Baxter.



Mr. R. SIMPSON, the Christian Merchant—Mr. W. QUARRIER, the Friend of Orphans—Trongate, Glasgow.

THE LATE MR. ROBERT SIMPSON,

The Veteran Christian Merchant of Glasgow.

Born at Saltcoats in 1807—Enters on Business in Glasgow—Studies at the Congregational Academy and at Glasgow University—His Successful Evangelistic Labors—Work for the Temperance Cause—His Co-operation with Mr. Moody—A Man Rescued from Suicide—Latest Evangelistic Tour—His Last Sunday—Praying with Peddlers.

THE devoted and indefatigable Christian worker whose portrait is given on our front page, was born at Saltcoats, Ayrshire, Scotland, in May, 1807. He died on Sunday, April 3d, and had, therefore, entered the eightieth year of his age. He went to Glasgow early in life, and in 1826, when he was only nineteen, he opened a store of his own. He began a dry-goods an important thoroughfare in that great city, a view of which appears on the first page. God greatly prospered him in his commercial pursuits, which, with the help of his sons, he vigorously and successfully carried on until about two years ago, when he finally retired, leaving his sons as sole partners in the concern.

Business in Trongate,

It might have been expected that a young man engaged in a thriving business, and with the prospect of making a large fortune very clearly before him, would have found enough in that to absorb all his attention, but after being in business twelve years Mr. Simpson entered upon a severe course of study. In the year 1838 he was converted, and was filled with the desire to engage in Christian work. In order to fit himself the more fully to work in his Lord's service, he entered the Glasgow Congregational Academy, and became a student for several sessions in Glasgow University. He studied hard for the ministry, while, at the same time, he continued to conduct his business. The brilliant Morell Mackenzie, acted as professor in the theological hall during a part of his course; and Mr. Simpson used to tell how difficult it was for him to get up so as to be at Mr. Mackenzie's house in Woodside Place, where a Hebrew class was taught at seven o'clock in the morning, and be back in town for the opening of his store. It must have been very difficult for him to run from hall to business, from business to college, from college back to business, and then to hall in the afternoon again, closing with business in the evening. He used to say with characteristic humor that Morell Mackenzie's Hebrew roots had taken out the roots of his hair and Made Him Bald for Life.

He found frequent opportunity for preaching the Gospel, and as a result of his evangelistic labors in Bridgeton (a thickly-populated part of Glasgow), from 1838 to 1840, a Congregational Church was formed, and a place of worship was erected for that body. The church, under the pastorate of the Rev. Robert Hood, is still in the enjoyment of much prosperity. During the following forty years, Mr. Simpson was instrumental in raising some eight or ten churches in different parts of Scotland, and his labors in various directions were greatly blest.

In the year 1832 Mr. Simpson first threw himself with characteristic heartiness, into the temperance movement, and about 1870 he joined the Good Templars' Order on its introduction into Scotland. His reason for the latter step was twofold: First, he thought that the Church of Christ was paying far too little attention to the unfortunate class of men and women who were daily drifting into habits of helpless intemperance; and, second, he thought he could best reach them, and rouse public opinion on the subject, through Good Templarism.

From that time Mr. Simpson was an unsparing foe of the licensed victuallers' "trade." With unceasing energy he lifted up his voice against "the liquor," and never drew back the hand held out to the rescue of the liquor's victims. In saddest truth there was a wide field for his labors in Glasgow. He gave efficient when the great evangelist visited Glasgow four years ago, and when the Mizpah choir and Mizpah band were formed one of his most trusted lieutenants and constant helpers in the work was Mr. Robert Simpson. To this task Mr. Simpson brought a ripened, albeit a melancholy experience acquired by labor among the outcasts of Glasgow, for whose benefit he arranged services in a tent in the summer, and a hired hall in the winter. He frequently conducted the meetings himself, and always was present conversing with the people, and trying to win them to total abstinence. Many a Glasgow family is now rejoicing in a peaceful happy home, who years ago was in poverty and wretchedness, and the change has been due to God's blessing on the efforts of Mr. Simpson to rescue the drunken father from his slavery to the glass. One case of the kind may serve as a specimen of a large number. At a public meeting in Glasgow not long ago, a prosperous, cheerful man rose and told how he had been through meeting with Mr. Simpson, at the Morrison Street Hall. He declared that for days he had gone about with a razor in his pocket, intending to destroy himself, but lacked the courage to take his life by that means. He then went to the railway station, bent upon throwing himself beneath one of the passing trains. Here, again, however, his resolution failed him. His wretched plight, however, was such that he induced a liquor-seller to lend him a sum of money to carry him home. But the passion for drink was still raging within him, and except the bare railway fare to Glasgow, he spent all the money he had received upon whiskey. He found himself in the streets of that city perfectly penniless. Thoughtlessly and aimlessly he wandered into the James Morrison Street Hall. There service was going on, his attention was aroused by something he heard; he remained to the after-meeting, was kindly spoken with and assisted, and, finally, being led to put his trust in One who is a sure refuge in time of need, he was saved from the grave of the suicide.

Aid to Mr. Moody

Rescued from Suicide,

Time would fail to tell a tithe of all Mr. Simpson did in the service of the Master. He labored joyfully, and seemed to find refreshment and never fatigue in his work. After a day's occupation, when other men go home to rest, Mr. Simpson would go to a meeting of the poor, and there find his recuperation in laboring to win souls for Christ.

He died in harness. Though nearly eighty years old, he had returned less than three weeks before his death from Avoch, Inverness-shire, where he had preached daily for weeks with all the force and fervor of his youth. He came back, "bringing his sheaves with him." He gave an account of his work there in Dr. Ferguson's church exactly two weeks before the day of his funeral. Little did the people think that they would see his face no more.

"Let me tell," says Dr. Fergus Ferguson, "how he spent on earth. In the morning he addressed the Partick Free Breakfast, over which one of his sons presides. Next he came up to town to address the forenoon meeting at James Morrison Street Hall. Mr. Maughan was in the chair, and Mr. Simpson followed up his ten minutes' address on 'The Prodigal Son,' with a powerful discourse for another half hour on the same subject. The he retired to converse with two young women, anxious inquirers, and whom he was the means of bringing into the peace of the Gospel. Then he crossed the river and preached in the afternoon in Rutherglen Road Congregational Church, at four o'clock he dined at the house of Mr. Grant, of Overnewton Congregational Church, and preached for him in the evening. Thus our veteran merchant-minister preached four times that day at the age of seventy-nine, and was the means, besides, in the hands of the Holy Spirit, of bringing two seeking souls to the knowledge of the truth."

His Last Working Sabbath

On the Friday before his death, in the evening, he delivered an address at a Mizpah meeting, in the town of Renfrew, walking through the town with the procession. At the close of the service, and while waiting at ten o'clock for the Glasgow train, he was found conversing with two peddlers about their souls' salvation, and actually knelt down with them in prayer in the waiting-room. That may be called the last direct work for God he was engaged in. It makes a fine close to more than half a century of service for his divine and beloved Master—Robert Simpson on his knees with two peddlers in the waiting-room of Renfrew Railway Station, when he had only a day and a half to live!

On Saturday afternoon, April 2d, he attended what is called the practice of the Mizpah choir, and took tea in the evening with his son-in-law, Mr. Hunter Craig. About eight o'clock he rose up, and, buttoning his coat, said, "I must be off now, as I will need a good sleep to-night. I have to preach to-morrow in the forenoon in Govanhill Congregational Church, and in the afternoon in my own church at Govan." These engagements he did not fulfil. "The Master came and called for him." Early on the Sunday morning he summoned his family, and complained of sickness. Neither he nor they felt any alarm, and he rallied a little, but a few hours later he quietly and peacefully passed away.

MR. WILLIAM QUARRIER,

The George Muller of Scotland.

A Poor Boy's Resolution—Learns Shoemaking—Conversion—Prosperity—Orphan Home Projected—Founds a Shoeblack Brigade—The Orphan Home—How the Work has Grown.

FORTY-NINE years ago a boy of eight years old stood, barefooted, bareheaded, and numb with cold, in the streets of Glasgow. He had tasted no food for a day and a half. His eager, imploring eyes looked in vain to each passer-by for help. He wondered in a boyish fashion why nobody pitied him, and thought if he could give a copper to the starving how differently he would act. That thought was ever after associated with the recollection of that day, and it grew in the mind of the boy with his years, until it took the form of a resolution that, when he got to be a big man, and earned enough money, he would comfort and care for the waifs of the street. That boy was William Quarrier, who is now known as "the George Müller of Scotland."

The boy's mother was a widow, and very poor so he was sent at an early age to earn his own living. At ten he was trade, to which he applied himself with such vigor that at fourteen he was able to help his mother with the income of the house. This early helpfulness, however, promised to be but short lived, for his companions were the boys of the district, rude in speech, and rough in manner, very fond of the low drama, and precociously acquainted with vice. Providentially Mr. Quarrier was brought under Christian influences. A lady persuaded him to go to church, where he was deeply impressed with the Gospel, about which his mother, an unconverted woman, had told him nothing. He went again and again, and finally was converted. The wild boys on the streets reckoned him no longer among their number.

Apprenticed to the Shoemaking

When young Quarrier first knew the Saviour's love, his first effort was to bring his mother to the same knowledge, but she would not listen. He kept on speaking to her, and praying for her for more than seven years. Then she had two strokes of paralysis, and her life was in danger. This made him more importunate at the throne of grace on her behalf, and at last he was heard—his mother gave her heart to Christ. She lived long enough to give unmistakable proofs of the sincerity of her profession, and died in the joy of the Gospel she had long despised.

His Cherished Hope

had not been forgotten during those years, but before beginning to care for the outcast boys he wanted to acquire a fortune and begin on a large scale. He had settled in his mind that, when he had a hundred thousand dollars, he would commence the work. Though he had begun life at the bottom, the acquisition of that sum did not seem very improbable when he was thirty-four years old ; for, so industrious and enterprising had he been that, in 1864 he was the proprietor of the three largest shoemaking establishments in Glasgow. Still he had not the hundred thousand, his liberal contributions to religious and philanthropic schemes having prevented his gathering the money so quickly as he had hoped. This disappointment was salutary, as it led him more and more out of self, and made him more dependent on God.

One night, in November, 1864, he came across a boy crying bitterly in Jamaica Street. His sympathy was awakened. He listened to the story of distress and relieved the want. That incident lay at the foundation of in Scotland. A house was rented in a suitable district, waifs were brought to it, and clothed, fed, and sent out to polish shoes. The movement turned out a success financially and morally. The boys soon became self-supporting, and the brigade, which began with forty, rapidly grew in size. Its members were bound by certain rules which kept them together, and furnished a discipline for their unruly natures.

The First Shoeblack Brigade

His success with the shoeblack enterprise led him to doubt whether it was necessary to wait for the possession of so much money as he had thought before beginning on which he had set his heart. That doubt grew under the influence of the good lady, who has sent so many waifs out of the British streets to Canada, Miss Macpherson, who paid him a visit in 1871. She urged him to begin in faith, and begin at once. Eventually he resolved that if he could obtain five thousand dollars within twelve days from persons willing to help, he would "take it as a sign." He wrote a modest statement of his project to the newspapers, and in less than twelve days he received a guarantee of ten thousand dollars. He hesitated no longer, but he commenced on a smaller scale than he had at first intended. He rented a large room, intended for a workshop, partitioned off a kitchen, and brightened up the bare walls with Scripture texts. A homeless boy, without shoes or comfortable clothing, was brought to the fireside and invited to stay. He was not sure about passing the night there, but the warmth of the fire persuaded him. More came. Once they entered they did not think of leaving. What they all felt was expressed by one little fellow, who, on being asked, why he did not run away, replied,

The Orphan Homes

"'Cause This Place is Guid."

It was good, for food and clothing were furnished, and a tender care was shown toward them which they had never experienced before. During the first year ninety-three waifs were received. Of these thirty-five were sent to Canada, and the others were helped to a respectable livelihood in Scotland—that was fifteen years ago. Since then the work has steadily grown, until to-day, instead of one room, with accommodation for thirty children, there are the Orphan Homes of Scotland, at Bridge-of-Weir, which cost $250,000 ; the City Homes, in James Morrison Street, which cost $60,000 ; and are supported there. And there is not a penny of debt on the buildings or connected with the work. The total amount of money received during 1886, was upward of $64,130, of which sum over $5000 was earned by the boys of the Homes. The current expenses per day amount to $150. Scepticism and ridicule have been lived down, and scoffers silenced. Men have been forced to see the hand of God in the, to them, Quixotic scheme of the Glasgow shoemaker. Other movements rose and fell, but this one went steadily on, because it was rooted in obedience to the divine call, and sustained by believing prayer.

Seven Hundred Children

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

A Trickster on his Rounds.—A Well-Known Christian worker pertinently remarked : "Some people make use of their religion as a means of furthering their interests in this life, and if they think a profession of religion will procure them pecuniary advantage they at once make a most obtrusive and demonstrative display of their Christianity. It is said that a man on one occasion called on Mr. Spurgeon, of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, who was very busily engaged at the time. Wishing to have an interview as quickly as possible, he sent word by the messenger to Mr. Spurgeon, that 'a servant of the Lord wished to see him.' 'Tell the gentleman who sent you,' was the response, 'that I am at present engaged with his Master.' Mr. Spurgeon concluded what was the nature of the visitor's errand, from the means that were adopted to secure an interview with him, and framed his answer to his demand accordingly."

Wine in Honor of a Great Man.—A Friend of home missionary effort observed : "Women have more to do with the discountenancing of the use of intoxicating liquor in the family than the men have. I heard of a husband and wife in America who had determined that in their house there should be no strong drink, and for a time the rule was strictly adhered to. One day they had a large dinner-party in honor of a distinguished man, and they wished to have as grand a display as possible. And the lady said, 'We're going to have this great man to dinner ; we must not have our dinner spoiled, and so we must have some of the best wine we can procure just for this once.' The husband grumbled, and replied, 'It's selling your conscience ; but if it's only for this once, I don't much care.' The day of the dinner-party came, the guests arrived, among them the man whom the hosts delighted to honor. The substantial part of the dinner had been discussed, and the wine was put on the table, when the great man for whom all this wine had been got, and for which the highest price had been paid, helped himself to a glass of water. 'Will you not take a glass of champagne?' said the host. 'No, thank you ; I'm a total abstainer,' was his unhesitating answer. This episode, I am happy to say, proved effectual in curing them of any shame they might have had of being total abstainers."

A Visit to Newgate Prison.—Mr. George Clarke observed : "When I was in London not long ago, I went to visit Newgate Prison, and was shown over the place by an official, who explained to me the different classes of criminals who were confined in its various parts. I felt a strange melancholy feeling creeping over me, and I wished to be off ; yet, wishing to see the whole place, I turned to the warder, and asked, 'Is there any other place I have not yet seen?' 'Yes, sir,' he said, 'this way, please.' He led me up a staircase to where there were two or three cells, with iron doors more than usually massive. Entering one, which to me seemed to contain nothing but a little bed, I asked him, 'What place is this?' 'This is a condemned cell, where men sentenced to death pass the short time between their condemnation and their execution.' I was sitting on the bed as he said that, but learning that I was sitting where probably many wretched men had sat listening to the neighboring St. Sepulchre's Church clock, as it tolled out hour after hour, I jumped up ; I could stand it no longer, and hastened from the cell. From there the warder took me to the prison chapel. 'Ah, here,' I thought, 'I can feel a species of joy as I urge upon the poor criminals around, the glorious offer of salvation.' I asked permission to enter the pulpit, and there I stood in fancy addressing a congregation of prisoners. Just then my eye caught sight of a large black chair, immediately beneath the pulpit. Inquiring for whom that was, I was informed that in it sat the men condemned to death upon the Sunday before their execution. Then I thought I should not care to preach to such an audience, in which there was a man so shortly to be ushered into eternity. But then the thought struck me, that all alike are condemned to death who have not accepted salvation from the Lord Jesus ; that there is just as pressing need to come to Christ on the legally free man as on the condemned prisoner. Yes, I can preach to condemned men because I was once condemned myself, but Jesus Christ came as my substitute, and taking my guilt upon Himself, He died in my place, that I might go free."

Saved Through the Wife's Prayers.—Mr. John Gilbert Forbes said : "Not long ago, a young man, a clever mechanic, came to Glasgow. In his native village he had been a sober, industrious, steady young fellow, but, coming into town, he took up with evil companions, and soon became as dissipated as they. A girl, whom he fondly loved, and to whom he was engaged, followed him to town, thinking to find in him an affectionate husband. They were married, and for a few short weeks theirs was a life of uninterrupted happiness. But soon old habits and associations began to renew their demand. He constantly left his wife in the evenings, 'to take a quiet walk,' he said, and generally on Sundays went an excursion down the river Clyde, returning home helplessly intoxicated, to abuse his wife, who, instead of retaliating, meekly bore it all, and often, when during the night she supposed him sleeping, he saw her get upon her knees and pray to God to change her husband's heart. God eventually answered that prayer, and now they live united in Jesus, praising and glorifying Him."

Some Cherished Idols.—Dr. Elder Cumming, speaking at a Christian conference in Glasgow lately, said : "When people stand up in a consecration meeting, and affirm that they give themselves and all that they have to their Lord, it is seldom indeed that they fully realize what they are doing. Sometimes we do meet with a young person who really gives himself up without reservation or repining to the Lord, with the whole-heartedness that He desires, but in the general run of cases there is a something that stands between God and us. I have at this moment in my bedroom two pipes, both given me by workingmen from the east end of Glasgow. On one of them is printed, 'This has been my idol for twenty years, but, by the grace of God, I have been enabled to give it up.' The other pipe, though it is not printed on it, is just a similar idol. A lady whom I know had made an idol of a piece of jewelry. Its intrinsic value was not much, but there were associations with it which made it specially precious, and she hugged that idol to her soul, and thought over it, and, in short, let it come between her and the Lord ; but, by the help of God, she has been enabled to relegate that to its right place, and now Christ alone is enthroned in her heart."

A Snowball Through the Window.—A Christian worker remarked : "There were a number of little boys in one of our streets during a time of heavy snow. They were amusing themselves throwing snowballs at each other, and one little fellow, throwing a ball at a companion, missed him, and sent it right through a large window. The other boys cried, 'Run, run!' but the brave boy stood still. The shopkeeper came out of his shop, and rushing up to the group of boys, angrily inquired, 'Who broke my window?' No one answered for a moment or two, then the perpetrator coming tremblingly forward, said, 'I did, sir.' 'What!' he exclaimed, 'you broke my window, and dare stand there and tell me. Are you not afraid?' 'I am afraid to tell you I broke your window ; but I am more afraid to tell a lie, sir.' The man looked admiringly at the little fellow, and then asked, 'And what are you going to do about it?' 'Oh, sir,' he answered, 'don't tell my mother, please, and I'll do anything I can for you!' So it was arranged that the boy should every morning during that winter scrape the snow from the shopkeeper's door. Brave little fellow! Had half the Christians of the present day the same moral courage, and were as real as he, what a different world we should have."

BOOKS AND PICTURES.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, May 1, 1887.

"Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver."—Acts 19: 19.

The Bad Books of Ephesus Burned—Plenty of Fuel Here for a Similar Bonfire—The Influence of the Press—What Shall we Read?—The Good and Bad Novel—The Freshet of Impure Literature — What Books to Avoid — False Pictures of Life—Compounds of Good and Evil —A Man's Hand Bitten by a Leopard—Exciting and Corrupting Books—Apologies for Crime—A Midnight Scene—Pernicious Pictures—The Bait Satan Fishes with—A Student Ruined.

Paul had been stirring up Ephesus with some lively sermons about the sins of that place. Among the more important results was the fact that the citizens brought out their and in a public place made a bonfire of them. I see the people coming out with their arms full of Ephesian literature, and tossing it into the flames. I hear an economist standing by, and saying, "Stop this waste. Here are seven thousand five hundred dollars' worth of books —do you propose to burn them all up? If you don't want to read them yourselves, sell them, and let somebody else read them." "No," said the people, "if these books are not good for us, they are not good for anybody else, and we shall stand and watch until the last leaf has turned to ashes. They have done us a world of harm, and they shall never do others harm." Hear the flames crackle and roar!

Bad Books,

Well, my friends, one of the wants of the cities of this country is of bad books and newspapers. We have enough fuel to make a blaze two hundred feet high. Many of the publishing-houses would do well to throw into the blaze their entire stock of goods. Bring forth the insufferable trash, and put it into the fire, and let it be known, in the presence of God, and angels, and men that you are going to rid your homes of the overtopping and underlying curse of profligate literature. The printing-press is for good and for evil. The minister of the Gospel, standing in a pulpit, has a responsible position; but I do not think it is as responsible as the position of an editor or a publisher. At what distant point of time, at what far-out cycle of eternity will cease the influence of a Henry J. Raymond, or a Horace Greeley, or a James Gordon Bennett, or a Watson Webb, or an Erastus Brooks, or a Thomas Kinsella? Take the simple statistic that our New York dailies now have a circulation of about eight hundred and fifty thousand per day, and add to it the fact that three of our weekly periodicals have an aggregate circulation of about one million, and then cipher, if you can, how far up, and how far down, and how far out, reach the influences of the American printing-press. Great God,

A Great Bonfire

The Mightiest Agency on Earth

What is to Be the Issue of all this? I believe the Lord intends the printing-press to be the chief means for the world's rescue and evangelization, and I think that the great last battle of the world will not be fought with swords and guns, but with types and presses —a purified and gospel literature triumphing over, trampling down, and crushing out forever that which is depraved. The only way to overcome unclean literature is by scattering abroad that which is healthful. May God speed the cylinders of an honest, intelligent, aggressive Christian printing-press.

I have to tell you this morning that the greatest blessing that ever came to this nation is that of an elevated literature, and the greatest scourge has been that of unclean literature. This last has its victims in all occupations and departments. It has helped to fill insane asylums, and penitentiaries, and almshouses, and dens of shame. The bodies of this infection lie in the hospitals and in the graves, while their souls are being tossed over into a lost eternity, an avalanche of horror and despair!

The London plague was nothing to it. That counted its victims by thousands, but has already shovelled its millions into the charnel-house of the morally dead. The longest rail-train that ever ran over the Erie or Hudson tracks was not long enough or large enough to carry the beastliness and the putrefaction which have been gathered up in bad books and newspapers of this land in the last twenty years.

This Modern Pest

Now, it is amid such circumstances that I put this morning a question of overmastering importance to you and your families. What books and newspapers shall we read? You see I group them together. A newspaper is only a book in a swifter and more portable shape, and the same rules which will apply to book-reading will apply to newspaper reading.

What Shall We Read?

Shall our minds be the receptacle of everything that an author has a mind to write? Shall there be no distinction between the tree of life and the tree of death? Shall we stoop down and drink out of the trough which the wickedness of men has filled with pollution and shame? Shall we mire in impurity, and chase fantastic will-o'-the-wisps across the swamps, when we might walk in the blooming gardens of God? Oh, no! For the sake of our present and everlasting welfare we must make an intelligent and Christian choice. Standing, as we do, chin-deep in fictitious literature, the question that young people are asking is, "Shall we read Novels?"

I reply, There are novels that are pure, good, Christian, elevating to the heart and ennobling to the life. But I have still further to say that I believe that ninety-nine out of the one hundred novels in this day are baleful and destructive to the last degree. A pure work of fiction is history and poetry combined. It is a history of things around us with the licenses and the assumed names of poetry. The world can never pay the debt which it owes to such fictitious writers as Hawthorne and McKenzie, and Landon and Hunt, and Arthur and Marion Harland, and others, whose names are familiar to all. The follies of high life were never better exposed than by Miss Edgeworth. The memories of the past were never more faithfully embalmed than in the writings of Walter Scott. Cooper's novels are healthfully redolent with the breath of the seaweed, and the air of the American forest. Charles Kingsley has smitten the morbidity of the world, and led a great many to appreciate the poetry of sound health, strong muscles, and fresh air. Thackeray did a grand work in caricaturing the pretenders to gentility and high blood. Dickens has built his own monument in his books, which are a plea for the poor and the anathema of injustice.

Now, I say, books like these, read at right times, and read in right proportion with other books, cannot help but be ennobling and purifying; but, alas, for the loathsome and that has come upon this country, in the shape of novels, like a freshet everflowing all the banks of decency and common sense! They are coming from some of the most celebrated publishing-houses of the country. They are coming with recommendation of some of our religious newspapers. They lie on your centre-table to curse your children, and blast with their infernal fires generations unborn. You find these books in the desk of the school miss, in the trunk of the young man, in the steamboat cabin, on the table of the hotel reception-room. You see a light in your child's room late at night. You suddenly go in, and say, "What are you doing?" "I am reading." "What are you reading?" "A book." You look at the book; it is a bad book. "Where did you get it?" "I borrowed it." Alas, there are always those abroad who would like to loan your son or daughter a bad book! Everywhere, everywhere, an unclean literature. I charge upon it the destruction of ten thousand immortal souls, and I bid you this morning wake up to the magnitude of the theme.

Impure Literature

I shall take all the world's literature—good novels and bad, travels true and false, histories faithful and incorrect, legends beautiful and monstrous, all tracts, all chronicles, all epilogues, all family, city, State, and national libraries—and pile them up in a pyramid of literature, and then I shall bring to bear upon it some grand, glorious, infallible, unmistakable Christian principles. God help me to speak with reference to my last account, and help you to listen.

I charge you, in the first place, to stand aloof from all books that give False Pictures of Life.

Life is neither a tragedy nor a farce. Men are not all either knaves or heroes. Women are neither angels nor furies. And yet, if you depended upon much of the literature of the day, you would get the idea that life, instead of being something earnest, something practical, is a fitful and fantastic and extravagant thing. How poorly prepared are that young man and woman for the duties of to-day, who spent last night wading through brilliant passages descriptive of magnificent knavery and wickedness! The man will be looking all day long for his heroine, in the tin-shop, by the forge, in the factory, in the counting-room, and he will not find her, and he will be dissatisfied. A man who gives himself up to the indiscriminate reading of novels will be nerveless, inane, and a nuisance. He will be fit neither for the store, nor the shop, nor the field. A woman who gives herself up to the indiscriminate reading of novels will be unfitted for the duties of wife, mother, sister, daughter. There she is, hair dishevelled, countenance vacant, cheeks pale, hands trembling, bursting into tears at midnight over the fate of some unfortunate lover; in the daytime, when she ought to be busy, staring by the half hour at nothing; biting her finger-nails into the quick.

The carpet that was plain before will be plainer after having wandered through a romance all night long in tessellated halls of castles. And your industrious companion will be more unattractive than ever, now that you have walked in the romance through parks with plumed princesses, or lounged in the arbor with the polished desperado. Oh, these confirmed novel-readers! They are unfitted for this life, which is a tremendous discipline. They know not how to go through the furnaces of trial through which they must pass, and they are unfitted for a world where everything we gain we achieve by hard and long-continuing work.

Again, abstain from all those books which, while they have some good things, have also

An Admixture of Evil.

You have read books that had two elements in them—the good and the bad. Which stuck to you? The bad! The heart of most people is like a sieve, which lets the small particles of gold fall through, but keeps the great cinders. Once in a while there is a mind like a loadstone which, plunged amid steel and brass filings, gathers up the steel and repels the brass. But it is generally exactly the opposite. If you attempt to plunge through a hedge of burrs to get one blackberry, you will get more burrs than blackberries. You cannot afford to read a bad book, however good you are. You say, "The influence is insignificant." I tell you that the scratch of a pin has sometimes produced the lock-jaw. Alas, if through curiosity, as many do, you pry into an evil book, your curiosity is as dangerous as that of the man who would take a torch into a gunpowder-mill merely to see whether it would really blow up or not.

In a menagerie in New York, a man put his arm through the bars of a black leopard's cage. The animal's hide looked so sleek and bright and beautiful. He just stroked it once. The monster seized him, and he drew forth a hand torn, and mangled, and bleeding. Oh, touch not evil, even with the faintest stroke! Though it may be glossy and beautiful, touch it not, lest you pull forth your soul torn and bleeding under the clutch of the black leopard. "But," you say, "how can I find out whether a book is good or bad without reading it?" There is always something suspicious about a bad book. I never knew an exception—something suspicious in the index or style of illustration. This venomous reptile always carries a warning rattle.

Again, I charge you to stand off from all those Books Which Corrupt

the imagination and inflame the passions. I do not refer now to that kind of a book which the villain has under his coat waiting for the school to get out, and then, looking both ways to see that there is no policeman around the block, offers the book to your son on his way home. I do not speak of that kind of literature, but that which evades the law and comes out in polished style, and with acute plot sounds the tocsin that rouses up all the baser passions of the soul. To-day, under the nostrils of this land, there is a fetid, reeking, unwashed literature, enough to poison all the fountains of public virtue, and smite your sons and daughters as with the wing of a destroying angel, and it is time that the ministers of the Gospel blew the trumpet and rallied the forces of righteousness, all armed to this great battle against a depraved literature.

Again, abstain from those books which are Apologetic of Crime.

It is a sad thing that some of the best and most beautiful bookbindery, and some of the finest rhetoric, have been brought to make sin attractive. Vice is a horrible thing anyhow. It is born in shame, and it dies howling in the darkness. In this world it is scourged with a whip of scorpions, but afterward the thunders of God's wrath pursue it across a boundless desert, beating it with ruin and woe. When you come to paint carnality, do not paint it as looking from behind embroidered curtains, or through lattice of royal seraglio, but as writhing in the agonies of a city hospital.

Cursed be the books that try to make impurity decent, and crime attractive, and hypocrisy noble! Cursed be the books that swarm with libertines and desperadoes, who make the brain of the young people whirl with villainy! Ye authors who write them, ye publishers who print them, ye booksellers who distribute them, shall be cut to pieces, if not by an aroused community, then at last by the hail of divine vengeance, which shall sweep to the lowest pit of perdition all ye murderers of souls. I tell you, though you may escape in this world, you will be ground at last under the hoof of eternal calamities, and you will be and you will have the vultures of despair clawing at your soul, and those whom you have destroyed will come around to torment you, and to pour hotter coals of fury upon your head, and rejoice eternally in the outcry of your pain, and the howl of your damnation. "God shall wound the hairy scalp of him that goeth on in his trespasses."

Chained to the Rock,

The clock strikes midnight. A fair form bends over a romance. The eyes flash fire. The breath is quick and irregular. Occasionally, the color dashes to the cheek, and then dies out. The hands tremble as though a guardian spirit were trying to shake out of the grasp. Hot tears fall. She laughs with a shrill voice that drops dead at its own sound. The sweat on her brow is the spray dashed up from the river of death. The clock strikes "four," and the rosy dawn soon after begins to look through the lattice upon the pale form that looks like a detained spectre of the night. Soon in a madhouse she will mistake her ringlets for curling serpents, and thrust her white hand through the bars of the prison, and smite her head, rubbing it back as though to push the scalp from the skull, shrieking, "My brain! my brain!" Oh, stand off from that! Why will you go sounding your way amid the reefs when there is such a vast ocean in which you may voyage, all sail set?

The Deadly Book

There is one other thing I shall say this morning before I leave you, whether you want to hear it or not. That is, that I consider the of the day as most tremendous for ruin. There is no one who can like good pictures better than I do. The quickest and most condensed way of impressing the public mind is by picture. What the painter does by his brush for a few favorites, the engraver does by his knife for the million. What the author accomplishes by fifty pages, the artist does by a flash. The best part of a painting that costs ten thousand dollars you may buy for ten cents. Fine paintings belong to the aristocracy of art. Engravings belong to the democracy of art. You do well to gather good pictures in your homes.

Lascivious Pictorial Literature

But what shall I say of

The Prostitution of Art

to purposes of iniquity? These death-warrants of the soul are at every street corner. They smite the vision of the young man with pollution. Many a young man buying a copy has bought his eternal discomfiture. There may be enough poison in one bad picture to poison one soul, and that soul may poison ten, and ten fifty, and the fifty hundreds, and the hundreds thousands, until nothing but the measuring line of eternity can tell the height and depth and ghastliness and horror of the great undoing. The work of death that the wicked author does in a whole book, the bad engraver may do on a half side of a pictorial. Under the guise of pure mirth, the young man buys one of these sheets. He unrolls it before his comrades amid roars of laughter, but long after the paper is gone the result may, perhaps, be seen in the blasted imaginations of those who saw it. The queen of death holds a banquet every night, and these periodicals are the invitation to her guests.

Young man, buy not this

Moral Strychnine

for your soul! Pick not up this nest of coiled adders for your pocket! Patronize no newsstand that keeps them! Have your room bright with good engravings, but for these outrageous pictorials have not one wall, not one bureau, not one pocket. A man is no better than the pictures he loves to look at. If your eyes are not pure, your heart cannot be. At a news-stand one can guess the character of a man by the kind of pictorial he purchases. When the devil fails to get a man to read a bad book, he sometimes succeeds in getting him to look at a bad picture.

When Satan Goes A-Fishing

he does not care whether it is a long line or a short line, if he only draws his victim in. Beware of lascivious pictorials, young man, in the name of Almighty God I charge you.

Cherish good books and newspapers. Beware of bad ones. The assassin of Lord Russell declared that he was led into crime by reading one vivid romance. The consecrated John Angell James, than whom England never produced a better man, declared in his old days, that he had never yet got over the evil effects of having for fifteen minutes once read a bad book. But I need not go so far off. I could tell you of who was great-hearted, noble, and generous. He was studying for an honorable profession; but he had an infidel book in his trunk, and he said to me one day, "DeWitt, would you like to read it?" I said, "Yes, I would." I took the book and read it only for a few minutes. I was really startled with what I saw there, and I handed the book back to him, and said, "You had better destroy that book." No, he kept it. He read it. He re-read it. After awhile he gave up religion as a myth. He gave up God as a nonentity. He gave up the Bible as a fable. He gave up the Church of Christ as a useless institution. He gave up good morals as being unnecessarily stringent. I have heard of him but twice in many years. The time before the last I heard of him, he was a confirmed inebriate. The last I heard of him, he was coming out of an insane asylum—in body, mind, and soul an awful wreck. I believe that one infidel book killed him for two worlds.

A Comrade

Go home to-day and look through your library, and then, having looked through your library, look on the stand where you keep your pictorials and newspapers, and apply the Christian principles I have laid down this morning. If there is anything in your home that cannot stand the test, do not give it away, for it might spoil an immortal soul; do not sell it, for the money you get would be the price of blood; but rather kindle a fire on your kitchen hearth, or in your back yard, and then drop the poison in it, and the bonfire in Brooklyn shall be as consuming as that one in Ephesus.

MR. JAMES R. HOSMER.

(See Portrait on page 284.)

THE newly-appointed Consul-General to Guatemala, whose portrait is given on page 284, is Mr. James R. Hosmer, a gentleman well known in New York. He had previously had some diplomatic training while attached to the United States Legation in London. Mr. Hosmer is fifty-three years of age, having been born in New York in 1834. In 1855 he was graduated from Columbia College, after which he read law in the office of Charles O'Conor. Previously to 1862, when he entered the Union Army, Mr. Hosmer had practised law in New York, Chicago, and Baltimore. He resigned from the army in December, 1864, and became a writer on the newspaper press. His present appointment is a responsible one. Though he is assigned to Guatemala nominally, his duties as Secretary of Legation and Consul-General relate to the five Republics known as the Central American States. These are Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, and San Salvador. While the aggregate of trade between the United States and these Republics is considerable, it is capable of expansion, which Mr. Hosmer will try to promote.

A CLERGYMAN'S WELCOME SUMMONS.

(See Illustration on page 284.)

A LONG summer day was drawing toward its close when Dr. Vernon, coming in from a long round of visits among the poor and sick members of his congregation, seated himself in his armchair to spend an hour with his wife and daughter before retiring to his study.

"You look tired, dear," said his wife.

"Yes, I am very tired, and somewhat depressed, too."

"You have been to see Mr. Thomas, I suppose?" said the wife.

"No, I wish I could, for he is very sick, and I am told that his recovery is improbable. But I have spent much time in prayer for him, for I fear God has given him over to his sins."

As he spoke a knock was heard at the door and Mrs. Thomas was ushered in. Very sadly she said, "Oh, Dr. Vernon, do come and see my husband. He is near his end and he has no hope. He wishes to see you now, though he refused when I asked him before. He says he knows you will not come, but I assured him you would. Here is a letter he has written."

The clergyman rose and went to the window to get a better light on the letter, which was written almost illegibly under the influence of pain and mental anguish.

"I will go back with you," said Dr. Vernon.

"Oh, thank you," said the wife. "My husband feared that after his rudeness you would refuse."

"That is nothing—less than nothing," said the clergyman. "I never felt any resentment on that score. I am glad that he will see me."

It was a difficult task to deal with the man. Well-educated and intelligent, he had drifted into scepticism, yet now he was in great dread of meeting the God whose existence he had denied. Dr. Vernon would not argue with him, but labored to convince him that mercy was what he needed, and that he might have it through Christ. The whole night was spent in prayer and in showing him, step by step, the way of salvation. As day broke the light of God broke upon his darkened soul, and to his great joy Dr. Vernon left him rejoicing in Christ.

FOOD FOR THE DEAD.

AMONG the superstitious rites practised in India, is that of making an annual offering of food to dead relatives. Miss Hamilton, writing to the Missionary Link, thus describes it:

On going into one home I saw a mother busily engaged in carrying large brass plates of eatables into a room in the outer court, which had the appearance of a preparation for puja. She did not make any excuse for her being engaged, as is usual, but placed a stool for me in an inner apartment, where I could see what was being done. I was distressed, although I could see she was doing this worship as a mere matter of business. She read her passage of Scripture with apparent pleasure. In the next house I learned that this was the anniversary of her father-in-law's death, and her husband being his only son and heir, was obliged to make him the annual offering of food and other necessaries to which he was accustomed while living. A Brahmin led the service, of course. The woman who informed me of this said it must be done by all who profess Hindooism, as their predecessors have all done it.

In talking of our duty in praying to God in spirit and in truth, she acknowledged the benefits she had received since she had prayed to Christ. She said she did not now use the foul language she used to before hearing of Him, and that "she knew her book better."

A WOULD-BE MURDERER BECOME A PREACHER.

AT the commencement of Pastor Christian Dieterle's work at Hall, in South Germany, much opposition was manifested. One man whose brother was converted was especially bitter. He was the son of a widow and one day the pastor went to the house.

The servant, an earnest friend of the work, warned him not to enter. "John," said she, "is watching for you with a gun at the head of the stairs, and I have been watching for you, too, from the kitchen window."

He turned away, and went to the meeting. The mother and the converted son, Henry, desired him to return with them, saying that John was now ashamed of his conduct. He complied, but had not been long in conversation when the mother suddenly sprang up, and he saw the muzzle of a gun thrust through the door. Henry seized the weapon, dragged John into the room, and, after a fierce struggle, gained possession of the gun, and John could vent his spite only in threats and curses. "John," said the minister, "if you had shot me you would have done me no real harm, for I should have now been in heaven, but you would have been a wretched murderer, and would have had no more peace. Thank God, then, that you failed. Were complaint made against you, you would go to prison, but I shall only pray for you." Said he, "I need none of your prayers." "But you cannot help my praying for you, and when you want to be a new man come to me for advice, and I will pray with you; I shall look for you every day."

Three weeks after, he came, weeping, determined to give himself up to Christ. He is now a faithful local preacher, and his brother Henry is also upon the circuit.

HEATHEN DEVOTEES AT MIDNIGHT.

MR. LAUGHTON thus writes from Si-Ning-Fu: "While I was at Taehersi, I was deeply impressed with the apparent zeal with which the Thibetans serve their false gods. One night I went out for a walk by moonlight, and saw all along the main road, in front of their temples, men and women prostrating themselves, and repeating their prayers. In their left hand they have a string of beads, and in their right a short piece of wood or bone, which they use when they prostrate themselves, to mark where their foreheads reach to; then, rising up, they place their toes at this mark, clasp their hands, kneel, and again prostrate themselves, travelling thus along the road for quite a long way. I spent two days amid crowds of these people, selling Scriptures, and preaching the Gospel. I had a very fair sale, especially of Arabic Scriptures. I was quite struck with the willingness of the Mohammedans to purchase. When we present the Scriptures to them they ask who the writer was, and when they hear the name of Moses they make such a work about it; then, when they open the book and see the Arabic characters, they smile, and, pressing the book to their lips, kiss it. Those who purchase a copy walk away for a short distance, and call to some of their companions to come and see what they have got. The Thibetans, on the other hand, are rather shy; they admire the paper and binding, but are afraid the books are not good. Before returning the book they touch their forehead with it. I returned pleased with my visit, and thanking the Lord for His goodness. I trust, God willing, to pay them another visit on their next festival, which takes place in the beginning of the sixth moon."

A CHRISTIAN IN THE EARTHQUAKE.

A LETTER from San Remo, signed E. A. G. O., describes the sensations produced in the writer by the recent earthquake. The following is an extract from the letter:

I never shall forget the morning of February 23d, when at 6.20 we experienced that fearful earthquake; it made one realize in some little measure what the "day of the Lord" would be; that day which is to be "darkness and not light," in which "sudden destruction" comes. The day before was so sunny and bright, one of those real Italian days, everything around seemed to speak of "peace and safety," so that no one could dream of danger. The night was quiet—there did not seem one sound of warning—when suddenly began this roar, advancing toward us "like the sound of underground artillery," and almost simultaneously we were in it. The whole house rocked hither and thither as in the wildest storm at sea; one could only wait breathlessly to see where one would be hurled in the fury of the elements beneath. It was only about thirty seconds, but it seemed like minutes.

Thanks to the mercy of God we came safely through undamaged and unscathed; but, oh! what suffering those few seconds wrought to this poor land! Numbers were buried under the ruins of their own houses, children left without their parents, parents without their children. Numbers fled and saved their lives, but most were left houseless and homeless. The consternation was dreadful, and each fresh shock seemed to increase the panic, even though they were slight compared to the first. The earth trembled for many a day from the effect of it, and one was made to realize that terra firma was not such a very solid foundation beneath our feet, and to cling more to "the things" which "cannot be shaken."

And yet we know that what we experienced is only a faint picture of what is coming. What will it be in that day when God says He "makes to tremble not the earth only, but also the heaven," when in the midst of "peace and safety," "sudden destruction" comes when none shall escape, when, through the effects of frightful earthquakes, every mountain and island shall be moved out of their places, and they shall cry to the mountains and rocks to hide them "from the wrath of the Lamb?" As we have tasted a foretaste, may it stir us up with new zeal to warn others to "flee from the wrath to come."

A MOORISH ASSASSIN.

MISS CALEY, the medical missionary, whose temporary headquarters are at Arzila, Morocco, gives the following sketch of one day's work: "On September 14th: Quite early we went to see a young woman who we feared was dying, but had the joy of seeing her greatly relieved by our treatment in answer to prayer; and heartfelt 'Hallelujahs' rose to God. Several came afterward for medicine; among them, one who, a month ago, was a poor, miserable, dirty, sick woman; she came many days to have a bad sore dressed, and to-day we hardly knew her, she looked so clean and tidy; she is now well, and has a much brighter expression. We trust she has learned that there is One in heaven who loves her, and some on earth who care for her. Then a man came to ask us if we would go to a collection of huts a little way out of the town, to see a poor man who had been stabbed four nights before in his home, and was in great pain. We started with the man who came to tell us. In about an hour we reached the hut to which we were bound, and found the poor man lying on a piece of matting, groaning, looking very miserable. The stab, made either with a sword or large knife, was in the thigh near the hip-joint. I did all I could for him. The people from the other huts gathered, and soon thirteen were listening while we sang and talked to him of sin and the Saviour. The poor man was much interested, and before we left, the dressing had relieved his pain; the words cheered his heart, and he looked quite happy. When we left we were presented with a chicken and two large melons, and the patient said when he is well he will come and see us, 'En shah Allah' (if God will). On our homeward journey I was told that the man who had been our companion and guide going, was the 'would-be murderer!' He had come for us because he feared the man would die, and then he would have been imprisoned; if the injured man lives, no notice will be taken of his dreadful deed. We thought he was rather a surly man, but spoke and sang to him as we rode along, so he has heard the Gospel message."

A BIBLE IN A MILAN WINDOW.

A CITIZEN of Milan put into his window a Bible printed in large type, so that passers-by might read therein, and every day he turned over a leaf. Thus many read the book, and so continued its study from day to day. But one morning there was some commotion outside, and on inquiring the cause of it, the good man was informed that he had not turned the leaf! This little incident indicates a certain condition of the public mind, not in Milan only, but everywhere, and it points to a method whereby that condition might be gratified very largely by a moderate expenditure.

A DAY WITHOUT WORK IN A FACTORY.

A MANUFACTURER speaking at the London Young Men's Christian Association three weeks ago, told how a work of grace commenced among his own employés. He was some months before in great distress and anxiety. It was pointed out to him that God had said, "Call upon Me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify Me." Acting on the suggestion, he and his wife did call upon the Lord, who abundantly answered; and praise and gladness filled their hearts and their home. Just at this time a Swedish evangelist, a man of beautiful Christian character, paid them a visit.

Having greatly enjoyed the conversation of his guest, it occurred to the employer that he would ask the men and women and young people in the factory if they would like to hear his friend give a short address. They replied, "Yes; they had no objection." So he came and told them, somewhat diffidently in his broken English, something of his own spiritual experience. During the day a petition, numerously signed, was presented from the operatives, asking that the Swedish gentleman would address them again the next morning. He gladly responded, and this time, being invited, he spoke with great liberty and power; he pressed home on their acceptance the Lord Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour.

At the close of the address, the employer, quite unused to evangelistic work, but being very desirous to secure some immediate result from the deep impression evidently made, asked those who had enjoyed the address, and would like the speaker to come again, to testify their approval by a hearty clap. They all responded. Being thus encouraged, he asked those who would promise not to make it "hot" and disagreeable in the factory for any who desired to begin to live a Christian life, to testify their good-will in the same way. So many heartily responded that he was encouraged to ask that any who would like to accept the Saviour, and begin the new life at once, would testify their desire by coming to the front. He was astonished at the result of his inquiry. Men and women were seen kneeling down all over the factory—at the tables and at the machines, crying for mercy and acceptance. A group of four boys, in deep earnestness, were seen kneeling together at one machine. There was no work that day, but one continuous pointing of anxious, seeking souls to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Ever since that day it has not seemed out of place to commence the work in that factory with singing and prayer, and weekly meetings established for the workers have been well sustained.

CELESTIAL MUSIC OVER A DWELLING.

[THE following statement has been sent us by Rev. David Street, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Felicity, Clermont County, Ohio :]

On Sunday night, March 27th, Miss Lucy Zink, the daughter of a pious Methodist minister of this place, fell asleep in Jesus. She was about twenty-four years of age, and had been suffering with rheumatism during a period of eight years, which had rendered her physically helpless. She was a member of "The Shut-in Society," which I understand is a company of invalids who maintain correspondence with each other, and pray daily for blessings upon each other.

Miss Zink died about three o'clock in the morning, and messengers were then sent to several of the neighbors, to request their presence and aid in preparing the dead body for its coffin. One of these neighbors is a member of my church, the wife of a prominent physician, and a lady of superior intelligence and education, and a talented musician. The messenger who summoned her did not inform her of the death of Miss Zink, but told her that Mr. Zink's family desired her to come as soon as possible. It was a chilly night, and the wind was blowing strongly. When she opened the door to pass into the street she noticed that the air seemed vibrating with harmonious sounds, which seemed to proceed from the residence of Mr. Zink, a distance of two squares away. Her husband also noticed the singing, which was a surprise to both of them, and they thought the daughter must be living or the family would not be singing. After going a little more than a square, she stopped at the residence of a lawyer, whose daughter had also been summoned, and who was to accompany her to the residence of Mr. Zink. When this young lady came upon the street, her attention was immediately attracted by the singing, and they talked of it as they passed along. These two ladies called at the residence of a third, also an educated lady of intelligent Christian character, and noted for her sound judgment. The attention of this lady and of her mother were attracted immediately to the strange music which floated on the blustering night wind. These four ladies listened to the music, and talked of it until they were within a few feet of the bereaved family's residence, and then they ceased to hear it. Finding that the daughter was dead, they asked with some surprise who had been singing, and were informed that no person had been singing in the dwelling since the early part of the evening.

At the funeral service, Rev. Dr. W. H. Sutherland, the pastor of the Methodist Church, related the foregoing facts. The physician whose wife is mentioned is especially averse to recognizing any supernatural appearance or special providence. When I asked him what he thought of this remarkable singing, he replied promptly, "It was supernatural." The credibility of the witnesses establishes the facts beyond a doubt, and the event has produced a profound impression upon the minds of the people, as the only reasonable belief is, that it was the singing of angels

---

PROBABLE END OF MOHAMMEDANISM AT THE END OF THIS CENTURY.

By the Rev. A. B. Simpson, Pastor of the Tabernacle, 45th St. and Madison Ave., New York.

The Little Horn in the East—Islam a Twin System with the Papacy—The Scourge of Corrupt Christianity—To Devastate the Holy Land—Its Destiny—Its Duration—Its Fall Initiated.

[In January, February, and March monthly numbers of "The Tabernacle Sermons," by Rev. A. B. Simpson, price 12½ cents each number, at "Word, Work, and World" office, Madison Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, New York, Ten able sermons are given on Daniel's Prophecies from which we extract the following :]

WE have seen that the seventh chapter of Daniel describes a little horn (the Papal Antichrist) which was to rise in the West and become the most prominent figure in the last ages of Christendom.

In the very next chapter, however, he describes another little horn which was to rise in the East, out of the subdivisions of the Greek Empire, and become the most prominent figure in the subsequent history of the Jewish people. It is to this we turn our attention at this time.

This vision describes the fall of the Persian before the Macedonian Empire, the breaking asunder of Alexander himself, and the rise of four horns that succeed him. These are the four sections into which Alexander's empire was divided. Out of one of these the little horn was to arise. That one was Syria. Its fulfilment is to be found only in the rise and progress of that widespread and long-continued system of iniquity and Satanic policy which has overspread the eastern world for centuries, just as Romanism has the West. We mean Mohammedanism.

This Little Horn was to attack Christianity, to magnify itself against the host of heaven, and to cast some of the stars down to the ground, and to cast the truth down to the ground.

This was Terribly Fulfilled in the first conquests of the Moslems. Their opponents were chiefly the Eastern Christians and the armies of the Greek Empire. Their victims received no quarter except by embracing the Koran, and multitudes of people and pastors perished in the awful tempest. When we remember that Syria, Palestine, Persia, Asia Minor, and North Africa were the very seats of Eastern Christianity, and that it was in a generation almost wholly obliterated from all these regions, and we only find to-day a few scattered Nestorians, Armenians, and Copts, who have almost forgotten the very elements of Apostolic Christianity, we can realize how complete has been the desolation of this Oriental scourge.

It was to be "because of transgression" that God would thus suffer His cause and people to be spoiled and scourged. Oriental Christianity had become as thoroughly corrupt as the Roman Papacy. Image worship filled all the Greek churches, and Mohammed considered himself a real purifier of religion and destroyer of idolatry. And the latter he surely was, although he brought in a more terrible substitute.

It was especially to desolate the Holy Land—take away "the daily sacrifice and tread down the place of the sanctuary," and to set up "the abomination of desolation." The word "sacrifice" does not occur in the Hebrew. It is simply "the daily" or "continual," and it may refer to worship as much as sacrifice. We know that in the year 637 Omar captured Jerusalem and set up the Mosque of Omar on the site of Solomon's Temple. The place of the sanctuary was, indeed, cast down, and the old Bishop went out of the city crying, "The abomination of desolation is set up." Since that time for twelve hundred years the Turk has been the desolator of Jerusalem and Judah. It was to recover the city of Jerusalem from this humiliation that the Crusades were undertaken. But the Turk still treads down the ancient land, and will till the seed of Abraham inherit again.

This power was to "be broken without hand." And so the Moslem power has been breaking now for many years by the Unseen Hand of God, and all the fostering care of Europe cannot much longer keep the Turk alive.

The time that should elapse according to Daniel 8 : 14, from the initial date until the end of its oppression and was to be 2,300 years. If this period be measured from the most natural points of departure—viz., the beginning of the Restoration by the Decree of Artaxerxes by Ezra (a), 457, or by Nehemiah (b), 444 ; or from the close of the Old Testament (c), 400, we reach the following dates in order of time, respectively—(a), 1844 ; (b), 1856 ; (c), 1900.

The Restoration of Jerusalem

In 1844 Turkey was compelled to pass an Edict of Toleration, revoking the law which prohibited a Turkish subject from embracing Christianity under pain of death. Our next important date is 1856, and that marked the close of the Crimean War and by which Turkey virtually passed into the hands of the European powers, who have since acted as pall-bearers for the slowly dying corpse. In 1860 a cruel massacre of Christians in the Lebanon compelled the interference of France and England, and the renewal of the Treaty of Toleration, with stringent provisions for its observance, including the appointment of a Christian Governor of Syria. In 1877 a further dissolution of Turkey followed. After a series of atrocious cruelties in Bulgaria, committed by Turkish officials and soldiers, Russia declared war against her ancient enemy, and in a few months left her a shattered wreck, only saved by England's interference from the loss of Constantinople. The Treaty of San Stefano left Turkey despoiled of part of Armenia, all of the Dobroudcha, Roumania, Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro, Cyprus, with Great Britain as protector of Turkish interests in Syria and Palestine.

The Treaty of Paris,

In 1882 the Egyptian war struck a final blow to Turkish power in that land, and revealed the imbecility of the Sultan. Every day shows more clearly the speedy approach of Turkis dissolution. The country is so bankrupt that it cannot even pay interest on its enormous debt. And its incorrigible worthlessness and wickedness make it an event to be heartily desired by all good men. The latest dates, according to the figures given Expire With This Century.

May God grant that with them may expire this infamous and monstrous imposition.

It should be added, that in the closing chapter of Daniel the exact duration of Mohammedanism proper in its oppression of Jerusalem is 1,260 years. There are two dates from which to measure this : 622, the Hegira ; and 637, the Fall of Jerusalem under Omar.

In lunar, calendar and solar years the dates reached by this 1,260 years are 1844, 1860, 1878, 1882, 1897. The first was the Decree of Toleration, the second its Enforcement, the third the Treaty of San Stefano, the next the Egyptian war. The last is still to come, and with it perhaps the final stage of Islam's fall.

Mohammedanism as a system is still intensely alive. From its great university in Cairo 10,000 students are ever going out as evangelists of Islam. It holds 175,000,000 of the human race yet under its thrall, and they are almost inaccessible to the Light. Its followers are rapidly increasing every year. It will not be fully destroyed until Christ's coming. Then the Beast and the False Prophet shall both be cast into the Lake of Fire.

[While we in common with many expositors hold to the above yearday fulfilment of the 2,300 and 1,260 days, yet we also hold that they will have a future literal day fulfilment in connection with the literal Infidel Personal Antichrist. The 2,300 years began in Nisan 445 B.C. and ended in Nisan 1856 A.D. (as Mr. Simpson states above), but then there are only 45 years more from Nisan 1856 to the end of the age in Nisan 1901—the excess of the 1,335 beyond the 1,290 years in Daniel 12 : 11, 12.—EDITORS.]

Price, Five Cents, Post Free—160th Thousand Enlarged Edition—64 Pages—

COMING WARS AND GREAT EVENTS,

and Ten Signs of the Approaching Final Crisis, by Rev. M. Baxter—Dissolution of the Turkish Empire into the Five Ancient Kingdoms of Greece, Egypt, Syria, Thracian Turkey and Bulgaria, which with Britain (separated from Ireland), France, Spain, Italy and Aus tria, will be formed into an Allied Confederacy of Ten Kingdoms—Subsequent Rise of Napoleon as King of Syria—His Seven Years' Covenant with the Jews—Resurrection and Translation of Saints—3½ Years' Great Tribulation and world-wide Persecution of Christians—Descent of Christ at Armageddon—Ensuing Millennium of 1000 Years after the Year 1900. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The President's Letter to Secretary Lamar, published last Thursday, is a document of the highest importance to settlers, corporations, and the general public. It was elicited by the claim of the Northern Pacific Company to a farm occupied by a settler named Guilford Miller. This wealthy and influential corporation received from Congress the grant of a belt of land reaching from Lake Superior to the Pacific Coast, forty miles wide in States and eighty miles wide in the Territories. It also has an indemnity grant empowering it in the event of its not being able to secure all this land, owing to prior ownership, to select other land within twenty miles of the belt to make up the deficiency. Under this grant the company selected among other lots a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Washington Territory, which Guilford Miller had occupied as a homestead settler since 1878, and on which he had spent money and labor in improvements. The farm was outside the original grant to the company, but within the indemnity grant. The local land officer recommended that Miller's homestead entry should be cancelled, but Commissioner Sparks declined to do so. The case was then submitted to Attorney-General Garland, whose decision was, as might be expected, in favor of the company. It was at this point that President Cleveland interfered, and in a vigorous letter to the Secretary of the Interior, pointed out the injustice of the company's claim and practice in this and other cases, and directed him to use the power of the department whenever possible to protect settlers from the land-grabbing corporations. He also suggests that if the laws empower corporations to make such claims, those "laws should be repealed or amended." The letter does three very good things: it affords encouragement to settlers, gives wholesome warning to corporations, and administers a delicate reproof to the Attorney-General.

A Colossal Statue of President Garfield has been erected in Washington, D. C. It will be unveiled on May 12th. It stands at the foot of Capitol Hill, and looks down Maryland Avenue. Its height is ten feet six inches, and its weight five thousand pounds. It is supported by a granite pedestal eighteen feet high, which was paid for by the Government, Congress appropriating twenty thousand dollars therefor. Three recumbent, life-size figures representing Garfield respectively as the student, the warrior, and the statesman, are at the base of the pedestal. An inscription on the pedestal states that the statue was erected by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland. With a singular lack of tact, the notorious ex-Speaker Keifer has been chosen to make the oration on the opening day. Efforts have been made to spare Garfield's memory this identification with Keifer, but without success.

Another Martyr to Prohibition has Fallen. A despatch from Portsmouth, a town on the Ohio River a hundred miles above Cincinnati, states that a struggle has been going on for some time at the adjacent town of Haverhill, between the law and order people and the liquor-sellers. A family named McCoy has been prominent among the latter, while the leader of the temperance men was an eminent physician, named W. T. Northup, who was Vice-President of the County Medical Society. Dr. Northup has been working hard to carry local option. He had incurred the enmity of the McCoys, one of whom, to the disgrace of the Government, has recently been appointed Postmaster. On Thursday last, Alfred McCoy, the Postmaster, with his brother and his two sons waylaid Dr. Northup as he was going to his office, and opened fire on him. The doctor had no weapon but his pocket-knife, which he used in self-defence. He was shot three times, but still continued the fight until one of the young McCoys placed his gun almost against the doctor's breast, and fired both barrels, killing him instantly. Dr. Northup was only thirty-five years old, and was engaged to be married. His brutal murder has intensely excited the community, and has stimulated public feeling against the saloon-keepers as a dangerous and lawless class.

An Extension of the Functions of the Civil Service Commissioners is being advocated. It is proposed to give them power over promotions as well as appointments. Then if the proposal is adopted, would follow examinations conducted with a view to ascertaining the familiarity of the candidates with the business of the offices in which they have been employed. These examinations are expected to show whether the clerks are taking an interest in the business, or are doing their work in a merely perfunctory and mechanical fashion.

The Failure to Carry a Prohibition Amendment to the Constitution in Michigan, has led to the introduction of a bill to restrict the liquor traffic and abolish some of its most deplorable results. The bill, which is known as the "Bates Liquor bill," requires every person to pay a tax of $500 for manufacturing, selling, or keeping for sale spirituous and malt liquors, with a bond of from $3000 to $6000. The husband, wife, parent, child, guardian, or employer may forbid the sale of liquor, and may recover actual and exemplary damages for injuries inflicted upon persons to whom sales had been forbidden. Ten dollars are to be paid to the person making the complaint on conviction of the accused. Half the tax goes to the county, and half to the city or township. A fine of $100 is provided for any official, or prosecuting attorney, or other officer refusing to take complaints. No billiard, card, or pool-table is to be kept in the same room with a bar or in adjoining room. No bar is allowed in any place of amusement. Bars are to be on the first floor of a building, in a front room, and no screens will be permitted.

Intelligence of a Momentous Proposal Which is said to have been presented by Russia to Turkey, was cabled to the New York Times, by its European correspondent last week. He states that Russia has reminded Turkey that the war indemnity has not yet been paid by the Sultan, and suggests that, as the Constantinople treasury is empty and no prospect is discernible of the money ever being paid, Russia is willing to accept territory in lieu of money. The location also was intimated. A certain district in Asia Minor in the neighborhood of Batoum would be acceptable to the Czar. How the Sultan may decide is doubtful, though if left to himself he would probably accept the offer. But England's consent would be necessary, because she is pledged to maintain the integrity of the Sultan's Asiatic territories. Possibly it would suit England better to lend the Sultan the money to pay off the Czar's claim rather than have Russia secure more land in Asia.

Mr. H. M. Stanley's Expedition for the Relief of Emin Pacha is making good progress, and Mr. Stanley hopes that by June he will be able to render effectual assistance to him. Mr. Stanley's letter is from Matadi on the Congo River, at which place the expedition arrived on March 22d. It had come there from Boma, the capital of the Congo Free State, where it received a cordial reception. From Matadi the route is to Leopoldville by land, the river route being impracticable by reason of the Livingstone Falls. This will occupy eighteen days. Mr. Stanley is reserving his strength for the final march from Stanley Pool, which he means to make a swift one, in the hope of surprising the forces surrounding Emin. Four steamers belonging to the Congo Free State and two missionary steamers await the arrival of the expedition at Leopoldville. The alliance with Tippoo Tib will, Mr. Stanley believes, suffice to insure the safety of the expedition when it gets beyond the limits of the Congo Free State. The progress of the expedition is being watched with deep interest by the whole civilized world, and many prayers are being offered that Emin may be saved from the fate of his friend General Gordon, who fell only a few days before the arrival of the expedition sent for his rescue.

The Release of M. Schnaebeles, the French Commissary, whose arrest by the Germans caused Europe a week of anxiety, took place on Friday last. The negotiations were conducted on the French side with consummate tact, and an evident desire to avoid war. Dignified representations were made to the German Government, and proofs given that the arrest was a violation of the treaty between the two nations. Bismarck, finding that a mistake had been made, and that public opinion in Europe, and especially in England, was against him, consented to release the arrested man. He refused, however, to admit that a trap had been set for Schnaebeles, or that there had been any infringement of the law regarding the frontier, notwithstanding that the investigation of the Procureur Général of Nancy proved the contrary. He said that the German Commissary, whose invitation led to the arrest, had no intention, when he wrote to Schnaebeles about the repairing of the frontier post, to decoy him across the frontier for the purpose of arresting him, and that the fact that he was arrested as he was crossing the frontier was due solely to a coincidence. The incident shows that, in spite of outward courtesy between the two Governments, there is a deep suspicion and hostility under the surface. The Germans insist that Schnaebeles was stirring up disloyalty and was acting as a spy, while the French contend that the arrest proved German disregard of treaties and an arrogance almost intolerable.

The German Reichstag has Been Asked by the Government to vote a supplementary credit of forty-two million dollars for military purposes. When pressed to explain the necessity for so large a sum in addition to the usual credit, the Minister of War said that it was rendered inevitable by the new military law. The amount, he said, was not too much. The Government was in every way prepared to prove that the credit was indispensable. These vague and general assurances not being satisfactory, and details being demanded, it was decided to refer the credit to a committee, as it was partly connected with matters which could not be discussed in public. Such incidents explain how it is that the pacific assurances of kings and statesmen are not credited.

The Trial of the Nihilists Charged With complicity in the plot to kill the Czar, on April 10th, commenced on Thursday last. Nine men and three women were arraigned. The most painful detail is the extreme youth of the accused. One of the young girls, Raisa Schmidova, is remarkably beautiful and excites great sympathy. The judges are the political law senators. The trial is conducted with closed doors. Even the relatives of the accused persons are excluded from the court. The indictment, which has been drawn up by the Attorney-General, is a voluminous document of twenty-three folios. It is stated that the accused have confessed their guilt. It is said that the Czar would have been killed without a doubt on the day named, if he had taken his usual carriage-drive. The plot leaked out through information given by the landlady of the house where some of the students boarded.

The Rev. M. Baxter Held Meetings Last Sunday at Norfolk, Va., and Portsmouth. He had large audiences at both places, and an intelligent interest was manifested in his lectures. A descriptive sketch of some of his movements will be found on page 284 of this number.

The New Mission in "the Devil's Kitchen," as the district at Tenth Avenue near Thirty-second Street, New York, is called, will soon be an accomplished fact. On Saturday afternoon last a most interesting spectacle was witnessed there. In an excavation surrounded by high tenement houses a number of Christian people were gathered, a small organ set on a mound of dirt gave forth sacred music, and several hymns were sung. Prayer was offered, and then Rev. A. B. Simpson, the pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle, laid the foundation-stone of the new Berachah Mission. Dr. Wilson, of St. George's Church, Dr. John Cookman, Rev. Stephen Merritt, and several other ministers gave congratulatory addresses. From every window of the tenement houses around, and from the fire-escapes, faces looked down on the scene with strange interest, and on all those faces were signs, if not that the locality is appropriately named, at least that it is a locality sorely in need of just that kind of Gospel work which the mission is to introduce, and which it has carried on for a year and a half in its old quarters. The captain, officers, and crew of the steamship Otranto of the Wilson Line, and sailors from other ships, were among the spectators, and many of them were living witnesses of the blessing of God on the Berachah Mission. Mr. and Mrs. Naylor expect to spend thirty thousand dollars in the erection of the building, which will be in every way suited to its purpose, and will include a free day school in addition to its distinctively religious operations. The sailors who have been blessed at the mission in the old quarters have insisted on contributing a testimony of their gratitude in the shape of a stained glass window to be placed at the back of the platform.

The New York Medical Missionary Society is extending its work, and has been reorganized on a more efficient basis to meet the new opportunities and better facilities at its disposal. The gift of a thousand dollars from Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and of five hundred from Mr. George Vanderbilt, has auspiciously opened the list for the twelve thousand dollars needed for the year's work. The society will in future be known as the International Medical Missionary Society. While enlarging the scope of its operations the new society will have the same object in view as the old one—that of training and sending out medical missionaries to foreign lands on an unsectarian and self-supporting basis. Dr. Dowkontt retains his office as medical superintendent, at the head of the movement which he originated. The treasurer is Mr. B. C. Wetmore, of 7 Nassau Street, New York, to whom subscriptions in aid of this most deserving work may be sent.

The Desperate Leap of a Heroic Railroad conductor cost him his life on April 28th. He had charge of a freight train on the Boston & Albany road, which, while climbing a steep grade between Spencer and Brookfield, Mass., broke apart in two sections owing to the failure of one of the couplings. The rear cars instantly sped down-hill at a terrific rate toward Brookfield. The conductor saw them and trembled, for he knew that unless their course was checked they might dash into an east-bound passenger train then due. He signalled to his engineer to reverse and go back at full speed after the runaway cars. The chase was begun, but the speed soon became so great that there was danger of collision between the two sections. The conductor, therefore, told the engineer to run near enough to the runaways, to permit him to jump on board, and then slow up while he set the brakes on the runaway section. The conductor then went to the rear car and stood ready to jump as soon as it appeared safe. He miscalculated, however, for, though he leaped with all his might, he fell short, and, dropping on the track, was ground to pieces. Providentially the baggage-master at Brookfield saw the approaching cars and turned them into a siding in time to save the passenger train. The despatch narrating the incident does not say if the heroic conductor was a Christian man, but it may be hoped that a man capable of risking his life to save that of others had given his heart to Him who, seeing a whole world going to destruction, went to it and died to save it (Rom. 5 : 7, 8).

Four Gold Bricks Worth Forty-Five Thousand dollars was the description given of a package which a wealthy gentleman took to the Assay Office, in New York, on April 19th. He desired to have the bricks refined and made into standard bars. The Receiver who attends personally to all such deposits, lifted one of the bricks, and as soon as he touched it, remarked that he didn't believe it would pan out quite so well as the depositor expected. Oh, yes, it would, that gentleman insisted, and went his way confidently, after explaining that he was an old Californian himself and could not be fooled. He learned better the next day. The Receiver sent him word that the four bricks all together were worth about twenty dollars. They were merely bricks of copper lightly washed in gold. He was therefore proved to be neither so rich nor so shrewd as he had supposed. This is not the first time that men have learned those two facts at the Assay Office, for the gold-brick swindle has made many dupes. A similar discovery awaits many self-righteous persons who think that their spiritual position is an exalted one, and have perfect confidence in their own judgment in spiritual things (1 Cor. 3 : 13–15).

The Loss of a Fortune of Thirty Thousand dollars is likely to occur through a clergyman's forgetfulness. Two weeks ago a widow lady residing in New York was notified that her deceased husband's father, who lived at Bath, England, was dead, and had left his property to his son or his heirs. The widow immediately presented her claim on behalf of herself and her daughter who is twelve years old. The English lawyers, however, required legal proof of the marriage, but when the widow produced a transcript from the books of the church where she was married in 1868, they declined to accept it as legal proof, and demanded a certificate from the Bureau of Vital Statistics. When the widow went there for it, it was found that, although the clergyman had duly recorded the marriage in the church books, he had omitted to register it at the Bureau. As the lawyers will not pay the money until they are furnished with the certificate from the Health authorities, it seems probable that the widow will fail to get her fortune, unless she can induce the Bureau to register the marriage on the testimony of the church books. It was doubtless a surprise to her to find that the church record was not sufficient to substantiate her claim to the inheritance, and there is reason to fear that in a far more important matter a similar mistake is being made by many persons. The title to the heavenly inheritance is not valid, if there is no record of union with Christ, except the record of membership in a Christian church (Matt. 7 : 22, 23).

A Withering Denunciation of American Institutions, particularly prisons, was uttered by Johann Most, the Anarchist, at Philadelphia, on a recent Sunday, where he was invited to speak by the International Working People's Association. "Liberty is a lie," he screamed, in German. "The American prisons are the worst in God's world—worse than the pen of the filthiest hog! But nothing can kill me. I am only made more bitter. It is time for the bullet, not the ballot." Some one in the audience cried out, "And bombs! and bombs!" "Yes, bombs! bombs are far better!" screamed Johann. "The Church," he said, "was run by the rich to exclude the masses and keep them in ignorance." "The Church kills the spirit of man," he said, "and the State kills his body. I agree with the Anarchists of Chicago. I agree with everything they did. I would and will do the same. I am proud of them." He concluded by giving murderous advice as to the measures to be taken preparatory to the great crash of anarchy to come soon. The applause with which these utterances were greeted showed that Most is not alone in his villainous ideas. Students of prophecy will remember that among the signs by which we are told that we may recognize the last days is that such men as Most will appear (II Timothy 3 : 3).

An Interruption at a Wedding Caused Some amusement in a church in Georgia, recently. The Griffin News states that a few days ago a clergyman was reading the marriage service in that city, the bride and bridegroom being colored, when the latter interrupted him as he read the obligatory clauses defining the wife's duty. When the words "love, honor, and obey" were reached, the groom stopped the preacher and said, "Read that again, sah; read it wunce mo', so's de lady kin ketch de full solmnity ob de meanin'; I'se ben married befo'." Apparently his experience had not been a happy one, and, in making another experiment, he was anxious that there should be no uncertainty in his wife's mind about the nature of her duty. Unhappily, this tendency to withhold love, honor, and obedience is not only manifested by some wives, but it is too often seen in the Church, the bride of Christ, where there is no excuse (Eph. 5 : 22–24.)

BRIEF NOTES.

THE Rev. George F. Pentecost has commenced a series of special services in Montpelier, Vt.

Messrs. Whittle and McGranahan have been holding meetings in Bradford, Pa., and the blessing of the Lord has evidently been added to the preaching of His Word. Many have been led to Christ.

Dr. L. W. Munhall has been invited to visit Toronto under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. A movement is in progress to secure union efforts. This has been successful in other cities visited by Dr. Munhall.

A committee of Baltimore clergymen have sent a document to President Cleveland urging him to consider the propriety of a change in the army regulations that will secure to the United States soldiers the privilege of a better observance of Sunday, and protect them against excessive duties on that day.

The Rev. E. Payson Hammond has been holding meetings at Yonkers, N. Y., in the Temperance Hall on week-days and in the Rev. C. E. Allison's church on Sunday. Though the meetings were intended for children, many adults found their way with the young to the inquiry-room and made a profession of faith.

The havoc wrought by the cyclone at St. Clairsville, Belmont County, O., has resulted in the most appalling distress. A large number of families have lost everything they possess, and are actually dependent on charity for food and shelter. This is being freely rendered, but outside help is needed to do all that is needed in the town. Any contributions to the relief fund will be gratefully received by the treasurer, Samuel D. Riley, Esq., St. Clairsville, Ohio.

A tablet to the memory of Jerry McAuley was unveiled in the old mission in Water Street, New York, on April 17th, by the present superintendent, Mr. S. H. Hadley, who was converted from a life of hopeless drunkenness five years ago at Jerry's Mission. The tablet is of pure white marble, set in the southern wall, and has the following inscription: "In loving memory of Jerry McAuley, the founder of this mission." "He rests from his labors, and his works follow him." "Where I am there also shall My servant be."

The Chicago Evangelization Society, of which Mr. D. L. Moody is president, will hold an Institute for Christian students and workers, men and women, in Chicago, commencing on May 10th. There will be lectures to young converts on practical subjects and a four-weeks' carefully arranged plan of Bible teaching and study. This part of the Institute will be under the leadership of Professor W. G. Moorehead, of Xenia, O. Applications for admission may be sent to Mr. D. L. Moody, 150 Madison Street, Chicago, or to Miss E. Dryer, secretary.

A Report of the Addresses Delivered at the Recent Prophetic Conference, at Chicago, with portraits of some of the speakers, may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. It contains 216 pages. Fifty cents in paper covers; Seventy-five cents bound in cloth.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. FIVE PRIZES will be given on June 30th to the canvassers who have sold the largest number of copies each week between May 1st and that date. The two at the head of the list will receive ten dollars each and the next three five dollars each.

A GARDEN, A SISTER, AND A WIFE.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed."—Song of Solomon 4 : 12.

What the Church is—I. Nearness of Kin to Christ—Sister and Wife—Relationships of Birth and Choice—No Divorce Possible—II. The Security Involved—A Legend of Solomon's Court—Care Necessary for a Garden—Weeding and Pruning—III. Separation Implied—Not Seclusion—Not Singularity of Dress or Manner—IV. Reservation Declared—What the Church Exists For—Trespassers Warned Off—The Captive King Richard Cheered by his Friend.

We understand this sacred love-song to be a Canticle of Communion between the Lord Jesus Christ and His Church. He is the Bridegroom, and she the bride. Solomon furnishes the figure, as some think, and his Solyma is with him; but the type is dimly seen, it is the antitype which shines forth as the sun to the view of all spiritual minds.

At the very outset of the discourse it is needful, for the sake of the less instructed, to say

What the Church Is.

A church is a congregation of faithful men—that is to say, of men who are believers in the Lord Jesus, men in whom the Holy Spirit has created faith in Christ, and the new nature of which faith is the sure index. The one Church of Jesus Christ is made up of all believers throughout all time. Just as any one church is made up of faithful men, so is the one Church of Christ made up of all faithful churches in all lands, and of all faithful men in all ages.

The love of the Lord Jesus is to His Church as a body, and it is the same to each believer as a member of that body. That which is true of the whole number is true of the units which make it up. He who invites a company to a feast virtually invites each person of the company. Jesus loves each one of His people with that same love wherewith He loves the whole of His people; insomuch that if you, my brethren, are Christ's beloved, and if you were the only persons that were ever born into the world, and all His love were yours, He would not then love you one atom more than He loves you now. The love of Jesus is dispersed, but not divided.

I. The Nearness of Kin of the Church to Christ, and Christ to the Church. He calls her in the text, "My sister, my spouse." As if He could not express His near and dear relationship to her by any one term, He employs the two. "My sister"—that is, one by birth, partaker of the same nature. "My spouse"—that is, one in love, joined by sacred ties of affection that never can be snapped. "My sister" by birth, "My spouse" by choice. "My sister" in communion, "My spouse" in absolute union with Myself. I want you who love the Saviour to get a full hold of this thought of near and dear kinship. Oh, how near akin Christ is to all His people!

But first, do try to realize the person of Christ. I am not going to speak to you at this time of a doctrine, or a mere historical fact that has vanished into the dim past. No, we speak of a real Person. Jesus Christ is. As Man and as God in the perfection of His nature He still exists. Then let this further truth be equally well realized, that He has so taken upon Himself our human nature that He may correctly call His Church His sister. He has become so truly man in His incarnation, that He is not ashamed to call us brethren. He calls us so because we are so. No; He is not a deified man any more than He is a humanized God. He is perfectly God, but He is also perfectly man; and man such as we are, touched with the feeling, not only of our attainments, but of our infirmities; not only trusting in all points as we do, but tempted in all points like as we are, though without sin. He was, when He was here, evidently man and eminently man; and He now so remembers all that He passed through while here below that He remains in perfect sympathy with us at this very moment. Change of place has made no change of heart in Him. He in His glory is the same Jesus as in His humiliation.

We may not think of Him as one among a vast number who may be distantly akin to us, as all men are akin to one another by descent; but the Lord comes near to each individual. He takes each one of His believing people by the hand, and says, "My brother." In our text He salutes the whole Church as

"My Sister."

He says this with tender emphasis. He is your brother. "The man is next of kin unto us." You may have the joy of saying, "I know that my near Kinsman liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Happy man who, without presumption, can feel the ties of kinship with the Son of Man, and can sing with the poet of the sanctuary—

> "Jesus, our Kinsman and our God
> Array'd in majesty and blood,
> Thou art our life; our souls in thee
> Possess a full felicity."

As we have already observed, the first term, "sister," implies kinship of nature; but the second term, "my spouse," indicates dearer, and, in some respects, nearer; a kinship undertaken of choice, but, once undertaken, irrevocable and everlasting. This kinship amounts to unity, insomuch that the spouse loses her name, loses her identity, and, to a high degree, is merged in the greater personality to which she is united. Such is our union to Christ, if, indeed, we be His, that nothing can so well set it forth as marriage union. We may henceforth forego our name, for "this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The Lord our righteousness." Wonderful that the very name which belongs to our Lord Jesus, and one of the most majestic of His names, should yet be used as the name of His Church. We feel no dreadful lordship now. Though He is Master and Lord, yet it is such a loving lordship which He exercises toward us that we rejoice in it.

Another Kinship,

I do not know how to preach upon this subject. Who can? One with Jesus! By eternal union, one with Jesus! There can be no divorce between Christ and His Church, for thus it is written, "The Lord, the God of Israel, saith that He hateth putting away." He will have nothing to do with putting away. Having espoused us, He declares the thing done. "I am married unto you, saith the Lord." He has taken our nature, and made us "partakers of the divine nature;" and, after He has done that, who shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord? Neither height, nor depth, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, shall ever be able to effect a break-up of this most complete, perfect, mystical union between Christ and His people.

II. To a second thought I would call your attention. See in the text of God in consequence of being what they are. "A garden enclosed is My sister, My spouse; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed." We are not only like a garden, but a garden enclosed. If the garden were not enclosed, the wild boar out of the wood would bark the vines, and uproot the flowers; but infinite mercy has made the Church of God an enclosure, into which no invader may dare to come. "For I, saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her." Is she a spring? Are her secret thoughts and loves and desires like cool streams of water? Then the Bridegroom calls her "a spring shut up." Otherwise, every beast that passed by might foul her waters, and every stranger might quaff her streams. She is a spring shut up, a fountain sealed, like some choice cool spring in Solomon's private garden around the house of the forest of Lebanon—a fountain which He reserved for His own drinking, by placing the royal seal upon it, and locking it up by secret means, known only to himself.

The Security of the People

The legend has it that there were fountains which none knew of but Solomon, and he had so shut them up that, with his ring he touched a secret spring, a door opened, and living waters leaped out to fill his jewelled cup. No one knew but Solomon the secret charm by which he set flowing the pent-up stream, of which no lip drank but his own. Now, God's people are as much shut up, and preserved, and kept from danger by the care of Christ, as the springs in Solomon's garden were reserved for himself.

Beloved, this is a cheering thought for all believers, that the Lord has set apart him that is godly for himself. He has taken measures to preserve all His chosen from all those who would defile and destroy them. He sets a hedge about them in providence, so that nothing shall by any means harm them. He has shut them up from the enemy, and sealed them up for perpetual preservation. A garden is a dependent thing, requiring perpetual care from the husbandman; and that care the Church of God shall have, for it is written, "He careth for you." Jesus says, "My Father is the husbandman;" and surely that is enough.

In a garden weeds spring up; and, alas! in the Church, and in our hearts, of sin are plentiful; but there is One who will take care to pluck up evil growths, and cut away all rank shoots, that none of the precious plants may be choked or overgrown. In all ways every single plant, however feeble, shall be tended with all sufficient skill. It is very precious to see how the Lord lays Himself out to preserve His own beloved. We are too dear to Him to let us perish. Yet, oh tender plant, thou art often fearful! Didst thou say the other day that He had left thee? How can this be? Dost thou know at what a price He bought thee? Leave thee! Will the husband forget his beloved spouse, and will the Husband of your soul forget you? Let not the thought tarry with you for a moment, for it is dishonoring to your Lord's love. Do not let anything drive from your mind a sense of your security in Christ. I hear somebody say that this might lead men to carnal security. Far from it; the security of the Spirit is death to the security of the flesh.

The Weeds

I look upon this sense of security in a Christian as being the mainspring of unselfish virtue. A man is drowning, the ship is going down from under him; he is not a likely man to be looking after the interests of those about him. Once let him grasp an oar in the lifeboat, and he is the man to be the saviour of others. I want you to be out of the wreck, and in the lifeboat, that you may be a hearty worker for the salvation of the perishing. When you are assured that you are not only a garden, but a garden enclosed, not only a spring, but a spring shut up, and a fountain sealed against all adversaries—then you will give all your strength to Him who has thus secured you.

III. Thirdly, a striking idea of the text is that of Separation:

"A garden enclosed is my sister, my spouse; a spring shut up, a fountain sealed." A garden is a plot of ground separated from the common waste for a special purpose; such is the Church. The Church is a separate and distinct thing from the world. I suppose there is such a thing as "the Christian world;" but I do not know what it is, or where it can be found. It must be a singular mixture. I know what is meant by a worldly Christian; and I suppose the Christian world must be an aggregate of worldly Christians. But the Church of Christ is not of the world. "Ye are not of the world," says Christ, "even as I am not of the world." Great attempts have been made of late to make the Church receive the world, and wherever it has succeeded it has come to this result, the world has swallowed up the Church. It must be so. The greater is sure to swamp the less. They say, "Do not let us draw any hard and fast lines. A great many good people attend our services who may not be quite decided, but still their opinion should be consulted, and their vote should be taken upon the choice of a minister, and there should be entertainments and amusements, in which they can assist." The theory seems to be, that it is well to have from the Church to the world; if this be carried out, the result will be that the nominal Church will use that gangway to go over to the world, but it will not be used in the other direction. If the world will not come up to the Church, let the Church go down to the world; that seems to be the theory. Let the Israelites dwell with the Canaanites, and become one happy family. Such a blending does not appear to have been anticipated by our Lord in the chapter which was read just now; I mean the fifteenth of John. Read verses eighteen and nineteen: "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Did He ever say—"Try to make an alliance with the world, and in all things be conformed to its ways?" Nothing could have been further from our Lord's mind.

A Broad Gangway

Let us, however, take heed that our separateness from the world is of the same kind as our Lord's. We are not to adopt or a singular mode of speech, or shut ourselves out from society. He did not so; but He was a man of the people, mixing with them for their good. He was seen at a wedding-feast, aiding the festivities; He even ate bread in a Pharisee's house, among captious enemies. He neither wore phylacteries, nor enlarged the borders of His garments, nor sought a secluded cell, nor exhibited any eccentricity of manner. He dwelt among us, for He was of us. No man was more a man than He; and yet, He was not of the world, neither could you count Him among them. He was neither Pharisee, nor Sadducee, nor Scribe; and at the same time, none could justly confound Him with publicans and sinners. Those who reviled Him for consorting with these last did, by that very reviling, admit that He was a very different person from those with whom He went.

A Peculiar Dress

We want all members of the Church of Christ to be, manifestly and obviously, distinct persons, as much as if they were of even when they are seen mingling with the people around them. We are not to cut ourselves off from our neighbors by affectation and contempt. God forbid. Our very avoiding of affectation, our naturalness, simplicity, sincerity, and amiability of character, should constitute a distinction. Through Christians being what they seem to be, they should become remarkable in an age of pretenders. Their care for the welfare of others, their anxiety to do good, their forgiveness of injuries, their gentleness of manner—all these should distinguish them far more than they could be distinguished by a livery, or by any outward signs. See what came to pass when the Church and the world became one in Noah's day; when "the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair," and were joined with them. Then came the deluge. Another deluge, more desolating even than the former, will come, if ever the Church forgets her high calling, and enters into confederacy with the world.

A Separate Race,

Come, now, my dear friends, are you of this sort? Are you foreigners in a country not your own? You are no Christians, remember, if you are not so. If there is no difference of life between you and the world, the text does not address you as the "sister" and the "spouse" of Christ. Those who are such are enclosed from the world, and shut up for Christ. "I wish I were more so," cries one. So do I, my friend, and may you and I practically prove the sincerity of that desire by a growing separateness from the world!

IV. Lastly, I think the text bears even more forcibly another idea, namely, that of Reservation.

The Church of God is "a garden enclosed." What for? Why, that nobody may come into that garden, to eat the fruit thereof, but the Lord Himself. It is a "a spring shut up," that no one may drink of the stream but the Lord Jesus. I beg you to consider this for a few minutes, and then practically to remember it all your lives. I am persuaded that if any church desires to be much honored of the Lord in these days, both as to internal happiness and external usefulness, it will find that the nearest way to its desire is to be wholly consecrated to the Lord. The Church is not formed to be a social club, to produce society for itself; not to be a political association, to be a power in politics; nor even to be a religious confederacy, promoting its own opinions: it is a body created of the Lord to answer his own ends and purposes, and it exists for nothing else.

You are a spring shut up, a fountain sealed for Jesus, for Jesus only, and that altogether, and always. Should self come forward, or personal advantage, you are to bid them be gone. They must have no admission here. This garden is strictly private.

Trespassers Beware!

Should the world, the flesh, or the devil leap over the wall, and stoop down to drink of the crystal fountain of your being, you are to chase them away, lest their leprous lips should defile this spring, and prevent the King from drinking thereat again. Our whole being is to be a fountain sealed for Jesus Christ alone. All for Jesus; body for Jesus, mind for Jesus, spirit for Jesus, eyes for Jesus, mouth for Jesus, hands for Jesus, feet for Jesus, all for Jesus. The wall must wholly enclose the garden, for a gap anywhere will admit an intruder everywhere. If one part of our being be left under the dominion of sin, it will show its power everywhere.

I recollect, some years ago, when I was very weary, faint, and heart-sore, I was vexed with the question as to whether all was right between my Lord and my heart. I went into an obscure country meeting-house, where a brother who preached did me a great service. There was not much in the preaching of itself, but it was all about Jesus Christ, and I found myself within a few minutes weeping freely. The Gospel had found out the secret fountains of my being, and set them flowing. The name of Jesus acted on me like a charm. Ay, I thought, my Lord knows how to get at my heart as nobody else does; depend upon it, He must have been there before! Beloved, I am sure that many of you can thus assure yourselves of your interest in Christ. My heart is often like who sat pining in a lonely tower, with nothing to relieve his sadness, as he remembered his native land and his vacant palace, and the malice of the enemy who kept him in exile. Nothing aroused him from his dreamy melancholy. Many were the voices within and without the castle, but they were nothing to him. The serenade of troubadours only mocked his misery. But on a day a tender voice thrilled him. He listened to the verse of a song. It was even as life from the dead. None knew the next verse but himself. See what effect that sonnet has had on the monarch! His eyes, how they sparkle! His whole frame, how it is re-animated! He sings in response. With what rapture he pours forth the lay! He is a fine singer, surely! We did not know that the king had such a voice. How charmed he is as a third stanza is sung by the minstrel below! And why? Because it is Blondel, his friend, who has at last found him out, and thus salutes him. They knew, and nobody else in the world knew that song. Even thus, the secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him. My Lord knows what it is that can move me, and my heart melts when he speaks.

The Captive King,

Dear friends, if you know that this is so, be happy in His love. See to it that you live wholly to Him, and for Him. As you have a good hope that He is altogether yours, be altogether His. Honor Him in your families, and honor Him in the outside world. Serve the Lord wherever you are, whether you are most found in the kitchen, the parlor, the workshop, the street, or the field. Make it your delight that you are reserved unto Him. Acknowledge that the vows of the Lord are upon you. You are His sister and His spouse—give Him love in both forms; find in Him brother and bridegroom. You are His garden enclosed, His spring shut up, His fountain sealed—then yield your all to Him, both of fruit and flow, of work of hand and warmth of heart. Be yours the honor, the bliss, of being altogether your Lord's.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

THE TEN GENERATIONS.*

IN the life of Fidelia Fiske, the devoted Persian missionary, we have an instance of the covenant blessing descending not only through generations but through centuries.

In the year 1637 when the effort seemed hopeless to establish in England a practical world based on belief in God, two brothers, William, and the Rev. John Fiske, emigrated from the county of Suffolk to America, settling first in Salem, Mass., and subsequently in the adjoining town of Wenham. According to the testimony of Cotton Mather, who places the name of John Fiske in the list of reverend, learned and holy divines, by whose evangelical ministry the churches of New England have been illuminated, they were children of pious and worthy parents, yea of grandparents, and great-grandparents, eminent for zeal in the true religion.

Let this last sentence be noticed. These two Englishmen were the children of ancestors eminent for zeal in the true religion, we shall thus be able to arrive at one of the most encouraging and remarkable instances of the blessing of the Lord in the seed of the godly. It may be presumed that these grandparents of Suffolk lived a hundred years before these two brothers sailed for America. Let parents observe, and let the fidelity of God to His promise be adored—for more than three hundred and thirty years the line of the holy seed has been preserved.

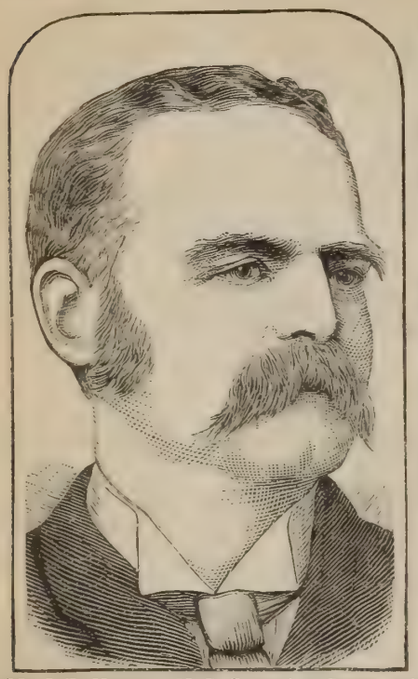
From William Fiske, a man of great intelligence and Christian integrity, descended a second William, who inherited largely his father's abilities and virtues, was deacon of the church, and, like his father, held various offices of public trust and honor, representing his town for six years in the General Court.

Ebenezer Fiske, son of William Jun, was born in 1679, resided at Wenham, was deacon of the church, and died at the age of ninety-two. The son of Ebenezer was born in 1786, and removed to Shelburne. He was a man of inflexible religous principles, and exerted great influence on the growing community. His wife was a woman of energy and eminent piety, and would frequently set apart whole days to pray that her children might be a goodly seed, even to the latest generation. In 1857 three hundred of the descendants of this praying mother were members of Christian churches!

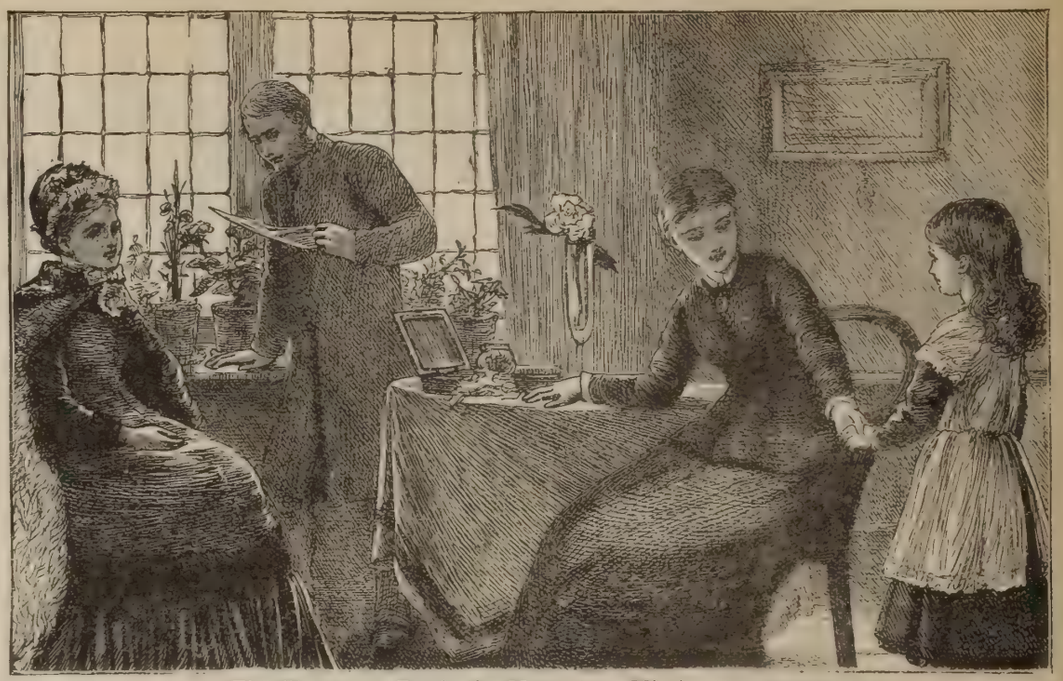
Ebenezer Fiske was the child of these Shelburne settlers. He was a man of noble form, benignant face, saintly character, and he, like his grandfather, lived to the patriarchal age of ninety-two. His son Rufus was a devout and exemplary Christian, sound in doctrine, firm in principle, and of a meek and benevolent spirit. His wife was a woman of great activity and equability [the latter a most rare and delightful trait], a native of Taunton, Mass.

What a blessed testimony is this to the faithfulness of God to His people through more than ten generations! How impossible for any human mind to estimate the chain of sanctifying influence which must have extended more and more as time rolled on! Ye praying fathers and mothers, let this remarkable genealogy confirm your faith in the promise of God. The emotions of the sainted head of such a house as he beholds his descendants through successive generations coming into heaven, and the numerous converts they have won from Satan and from eternal death can scarcely be conceived much less described.

* From "The Children for Christ." By Rev. Andrew Murray. A book full of excellent advice and practical suggestions for parents and children. Pp. 448. Price, $1.25. Published by Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., 38 West Twenty-third Street, New York.



Mr. J. R. Hosmer, U. S. Consul to Guatemala.



The Clergyman Reads the Momentous Missive. (See page 277.)

A PROPHETIC LECTURE TOUR.

By the Rev. M. Baxter.

WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, AND RICHMOND.

At the end of February, 1887, I visited Washington, D. C. The Federal capital of the United States, is called "the City of Magnificent Distances," from the fact that, instead of growing up and extending as the needs of commerce and the increase of population required, as other cities have done, it was "made to order" for the capital. When the Government was first established each State was anxious to have the capital city within its borders, and the rivalry was ended by taking a section of land offered by the State of Maryland, and planting on it a city which was to be free from the control of any State. That is called the District of Columbia, and is the only section directly governed by Congress. A magnificent design for the new city was prepared with the object of making it a city worthy to be the capital of so great a nation. Avenues a hundred and fifty feet wide were marked out, all radiating from the Federal buildings like the spokes of a wheel, and each called by the name of a State. These were intersected by streets which crossed each other, those running from North to South being designated by numerals, and those running from East to West by the letters of the alphabet. The avenues and streets thus marked have at last filled up with residents although slowly.

The city contains about 150,000 inhabitants, but when the Senate and House of Representatives are in session the population is larger. It is the great show city of America. There is more of interest for the stranger to visit there than elsewhere. The stately buildings used for public offices, such as the Treasury, the Naval and Interior Departments, and especially the magnificent marble palace called the Capitol, in which Congress holds its sittings. This is the most imposing edifice in the whole country, having a dome of the same shape as St. Paul's Cathedral in London. Any one can go into the galleries of the Senate and House during the sessions and there behold the celebrated statesmen, whose names are household words alike in the great cities, and the Western settlements, for in America interest in politics and public affairs is widespread. If people would only take as lively a concern in the interests of their own souls and in Christ's kingdom, it would be well. There are several colossal paintings on the walls of the Capitol representing historical scenes connected with the organization of the Government, and the independence of the nation.

There, also, is to be found the largest library in America, and any respectable person may enter its reading-room and have any book brought to him that is in the library. One of the librarians was good enough to have brought down to me all the books that were on the shelves under the head of Daniel and Revelation. They did not number many more than a hundred, but I found a few among them that I had never heard of before. In the British Museum Library, in London, the number of books on Daniel and Revelation I should estimate at about two thousand. Altogether, there are half a million books on various subjects in the Library of Congress.

Other sights visited by tourists are Fairmount Cemetery and the White House, the official residence of the President of the United States, who can be seen there and be shaken hands with by any citizen, or by any stranger who is introduced by his ambassador on certain reception days. The cemetery is like the cemeteries of other cities, a place much frequented, and picturesque both with trees and monuments, and strangers are generally taken to visit it. This custom caused some amusement in England in 1863-64, when the Prince of Wales was visiting the United States. It was said that to whatever city he went the first object of interest he was taken to see was the cemetery.

I gave three discourses each day on Sundays, February 27th and March 7th, in the Masonic Temple to some hundreds of hearers, and on a Monday evening in a large church for colored people. There is an excellent mission, called the Central Union Mission, which is doing good work in Washington. It is conducted by some intelligent, zealous, devoted Christians, whose efforts have been blessed. The city is provided with many large and well-attended churches but neither here nor in Baltimore nor Richmond, could I hear of any settled minister or church holding forth the proclamation of the Speedy Second Advent of Christ. How true it is that "while the Bridegroom tarries all the Virgins slumber and sleep." But it is equally certain that all these Virgins are to arise when the midnight cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom Cometh" shall be preached after 1891, when the Ten Kingdoms shall have been formed (Matthew xxv. 5, 7). The conspiracy of silence has indeed been broken for one evening lately by the Rev. Mr. Dinwiddie, a Southern Presbyterian minister, who lectured in Washington. He was an able speaker at the Chicago Prophetic Conference.

Sundays, March 13th and 20th, I was at Baltimore, Maryland, a beautiful city of about 300,000 inhabitants. I occupied a large hall in the centre of the city called the Mammoth Museum Hall, costing fifty dollars each Sunday. Several hundred persons were present in the afternoon, which was the largest audience of the day on each occasion. Although Baltimore is accounted a stronghold of Roman Catholicism, yet there are many earnest evangelical preachers there. On two successive Saturdays, I found in the Baltimore Sun, a list of Sunday services in about one hundred different churches, filling two long advertisement columns. There are three daily morning journals published in the city—the American, Sun, and Herald. They are edited with markworthy talent, as is the case with most of the leading daily papers in large American cities, standing in vivid contrast to the papers in small towns. They gave fairly long reports of my lectures. A large tabernacle in Pennsylvania Avenue has now been secured for evangelistic services every evening, to be conducted by the Gospel Union. A leading detective in the Baltimore police force, who was converted some time ago in one of Mr. Moody's meetings, was one of those present at my meetings. All the audiences included a higher class of people than is generally found at such meetings in England, and here as well as in New York, Philadelphia, and Washington the collections for expenses were much better than in the Western cities of Chicago, St. Paul, Omaha, etc.

Baltimore is called "the monumental city," and certainly the imposing character of the monuments it contains justify the title. It is well built, with numerous streets of brown stone and brick houses in continuous rows, presenting a marked contrast to the Western cities, which consist largely of streets of detached or semi-detached wooden frame houses. The result of this is that the Western cities are scattered over a much larger space of ground, rendering it less easy for large audiences to come together at any given point.

The Sunday observance laws appear to be strictly enforced in Baltimore, so that not only drinking saloons but barbers' shops, etc., are closed, and the city is very quiet, in pleasant contrast to the Continental Sabbath-breaking in Chicago, and some other cities, where theatres, saloons, and some stores are open on Sundays.

At Richmond, the capital of Virginia, containing 80,000 inhabitants, I occupied on Sundays, March 27th and April 3d, the Richmond Theatre on Broad Street. Some of the audiences numbered about eight hundred persons. The subject of prophecy was much newer to the people here than in Baltimore and Philadelphia, where there has been preaching on the subject from time to time. No one here seems to have made any public utterance of late years on the speedy Second Coming of Christ. The general public does not appear to have so much ready money to give at collections as in some towns in the North, and this is said to be the case generally in the South.

Richmond was the seat of the Confederate Government during the Civil War, and when it was taken by the Federal Army, the Confederacy practically collapsed. The streets are wide and compactly built, and the general aspect of the people and thoroughfares is very like that of an English city. The journey from New York to Richmond is by way of Baltimore, and occupies about ten hours—five from New York to Baltimore, and five from Baltimore to Richmond. There are day and night trains. The railroad and sleeping-cars are very commodious, and the tracks are solid and smooth, very different, indeed, from some of the Western roads, which rock the cars like a cradle. The fare from New York to Richmond and back is about $18.

Rubaga, the Capital of Uganda in Central Africa.

RUBAGA, THE CAPITAL OF UGANDA.

(See Illustration.)

THE Central African city of Rubaga, of which a picture appears on this page, is the capital of Uganda, though King Mwanga has left the spacious palace there which King Mtesa built, and has gone to reside at a new palace erected at Mengo, a mile and a half off, where, with his thousand wives the young ruffian of eighteen years holds his orgies. The Church Missionary Society has also removed its station from Rubaga to Natate, a mile and a half in the opposite direction. It was toward Rubaga that Bishop Hannington was journeying when he was seized and murdered, and it was at Rubaga that Mr. H. M. Stanley was royally entertained by the late King Mtesa. The city is now an uninhabited hill, but when Stanley visited it in 1875 it was thickly populated by the aristocracy of Uganda, a race of much higher intelligence and civilization than other denizens of Central Africa. King Mtesa's palace, a huge, handsome building, was in the centre of the city with extensive grounds well fenced in. From this palace radiated avenues one hundred feet wide, and these were crossed by streets narrow and crooked. On the avenues lived the higher classes, each house or hut embowered in gardens of bananas and figs, and neatly fenced. A villa was placed at Stanley's disposal, and there he spent some weeks visiting the king daily, and receiving much kindness at his hands. It was Stanley's report of the king's urbanity and intelligence that led to the Church mission establishing a station there. Recent reports show that King Mwanga is not the ferocious monster we have been led to suppose, but simply a weak, pleasure-loving man, whom bad counsellors sway as they please.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 271.)

A Potent Ally.

Now there arose a question which neither Jacob nor Ethel could well answer—What were they to do with their prisoner? Jacob scratched his head, as though to draw a suggestion from his brain in that direction; but it did not help him. He was in a quandary. He had come into possession of a white elephant. What to do with him, Jacob did not know.

Should he disarm him and let him go? Should he march him off to the village and haul him up before the alcalde, or whatever other legal functionary was available? Then he suddenly thought of the absent Don Antonio de Diaz, and wondered, as he was such a great man in these regions, what effect his name would have upon his captive.

"What will Don Antonio de Diaz have to say when you are brought before him?" inquired Jacob, drawing his bow at a venture.

A sinister flash, noted well by the questioner and by Ethel, too, lit up the robber's dark eyes with a dangerous light. The color mounted to his olive cheeks, and his fettered hands twitched as though they would seek a weapon at his belt, as he replied in a hoarse whisper, and with an awful exclamation that may not be repeated, "I fear him not. I wish I could get at him and kill him." Ethel, who had heard the answer, and had noted the gleam of rage with which the name of her guide had been received, began to fear for the safety of that gentleman if he fell into the hands of men who could speak of him like this. She requested Jacob to ask him if he was a member of Red Pedro's band. The question was asked, and the reply came instantly:

"I was. Red Pedro had not a more faithful soldier in his troop than I, and he has repaid me with foul wrong. Have I not said that I would kill him?"

"It was De Diaz that you wanted to kill, you murdering villain!" said Jacob. "I believe I should save some lives if I gave you your own quietus. First it was De Diaz, then it was Pedro; how many more do you want to kill?"

"That is only one," said the man, sullenly. "What matters his name? Here it is Pedro, a mile or two away it is De Diaz. It is all one."

Ethel turned deathly pale as she heard this, and realized the danger which threatened her. She was utterly in the power of this desperate fellow, whose fascinating, polished courtesy had decoyed her into his power. Jacob, however, having distrusted the man all along, was not so much overcome by the discovery. Moreover, he quickly perceived that in his captive he had a valuable ally if he acted adroitly.

"Well," he said to his prisoner, "you shall have your life on one condition, and perhaps I can help you to your revenge. You must accompany us part of the way to the village, and must wait while I take this lady to the hotel. Then I will see you again, and tell you what I will do. But first tell me, has this scamp of a Pedro any captives now in his lair?"

"Yes, two," said the man; "an Englishman, a young one, held for ransom, and a rich old Cuban. Oh, let me live; surely you will let me live, and I will serve you in any way! Pray, lady, intercede for me."

"I have told you that you shall live," said Jacob, "but I suppose you can't be expected to trust promises. Now, then, you obey me, and if I see any crookedness, you'll die sure."

There was as Jacob soon saw no need of threats. The desperado walked submissively in attendance, and showed no disposition to escape. In truth, the prospect Jacob held out to him of aid in getting vengeance on Red Pedro was a sufficient inducement to secure his alliance. Besides which, he had a shrewd idea that these English people would pay him well for his services, and he might make more money and incur less risk by aiding them than by highway robbery. He therefore accompanied them willingly toward Montana. When within half a mile of the town he called Jacob's attention to a clump of thick bushes, and, beckoning him to follow, showed him a dark recess.

"Yes," said Jacob, "that will do. Wait there till I return, and you shall hear our terms."

"I will serve you willingly," said the fellow, "and none can serve you so well as I. Give me enough money to carry me away from this place, and help me to start fair, and I will never rob another man, I swear."

"Well, we will see. I should think you are about tired of this life."

Jacob returned to Ethel, and conducted her to the hotel. There they consulted as to the best way of employing the resources thus strangely placed at their disposal.

"That fellow wants nothing more than to kill De Diaz," said Jacob. "All we have to do is to keep him around until De Diaz returns, and then put him on his track. When that treacherous, sneaking Spaniard is dead, we can get Mr. Harold easy. You give our man ten pounds—or twenty, if you want to act handsome—and he will be satisfied. I'd kill him myself for nothing."

Ethel shuddered. "Oh, Jacob," she said,

"you would never kill a man! I cannot believe you would do such a thing. It is dreadful. Think what it must be to have the responsibility of sending a fellow-creature into eternity unprepared. Never let me hear you express such a desire again."

"All right, miss. If you want him to live, I'm agreeable. Myself—I should say there's no more need to worry about killing him than about killing a rat. But you're in command, and I take orders."

"Then this is what we should do, I believe. Tell this man that we do not want murder done. Tell him we are Christians, and there must be no bloodshed in our service. We want Harold, and his fellow-prisoner released. If he can get the two at liberty, we will give him five thousand pounds."

Even Jacob's obedience was staggered by this proposal. "Five thousand, Miss Ethel! it is wicked; it is a waste; it is sinful! No, give him a hundred, if you must, but not a penny more."

The dispute was continued, until at last Ethel agreed to reduce her offer to one thousand pounds, and Jacob could not induce her to go lower than that. Then he set out for the robber's hiding-place, and made him acquainted with the service required of him, and the prize he would win by performing it. As he anticipated the man grasped eagerly at the offer, and would have been content with a much smaller sum. This, however, whetted his zeal, and he was profuse in his thanks. He pledged himself to deliver the two prisoners, and bring them safely to the hotel. Jacob supplied him with a little money in advance, as the man said it would be necessary to bribe the guard, and, untying his wrists set him at liberty with a hearty prayer for his success.

All unconscious of the efforts being made for his deliverance, Harold lay in the robbers' lair growing more despairing every day. He was waiting for his death, and not now hoping, and, in truth, not caring for escape. His physical suffering had latterly been very great, and his guard, the ruffianly Blackbeard, seemed to have either received orders to treat him with gross indignity, or his natural tendencies that way had received a sudden and special development. Harold was pale and haggard, and his whole appearance gave proof and token that he had been, and was still, drinking of a bitter cup, indeed.

The desperate discipline to which he had been subjected had been nevertheless of great service to him. His was a real repentance, and his remorse for his many and shameful misdeeds was very genuine, however it might have been brought about. His long imprisonment and his growing peril had led him to think seriously, and to think righteously, concerning himself and his past conduct. With this had come memories of his godly mother, the mother whom he had so often and so greatly grieved, and his sister Ethel, the sister who he knew was praying for him at that hour. With this had come a desire and a resolve to pray for himself. Many a time and oft, while on his bed of leaves, with the brawny Blackbeard walking to and fro as sentinel outside, he had asked of Heaven the pardon of his sin; had dared at times to ask for liberty and life, but in these wiser moments, with this proviso—"Rather than live as I have lived, let me die."

For some short time past, Harold had had a comrade in distress, one who shared his cave with him, and was of great value to him, not only in relieving the monotony of his solitary imprisonment, but in strengthening and guiding those better feelings and desires which had come to him in these dark days. This was Señor Bonanza, a Cuban of great wealth and high character, who had fallen into the hands of the brigands while on a tour through Spain, and was brought, like Harold, into the Montana forest fastness to be imprisoned until a large ransom should be paid. He was a gentleman who, judging from his snow-white hair—white as his locks were his beard and brows—was considerably over middle age. But it was not so, grief, a double grief, a grief that had taken out of life all that seemed to him to make life worth having had whitened his hair and permanently saddened his soul. He was a man of commanding and yet attractive mien, and his influence over his fellow-prisoner was good, and that continually. He refused to write for his ransom, for said he, "The sea has swallowed up all my real treasures, and as for my life, it is not worth robbing my heirs for. Let them have the money. My life is not worth the ransom. My dear Lord has already ransomed my soul with His precious blood, and that is all that is of value in my being. As for my body, I care not. If these wicked men put an end to its existence, I shall be all the sooner with my loved ones. That will be better for me than life on earth without them." So they waited, these two, expecting every morning the summons to come out and lay down their lives.

One evening, just as twilight was darkening into night, the robber whom Benson had overcome, and had set to the task of effecting the rescue of Harold, drew near to Red Pedro's camp in the forest, where the two were confined. He silently crept toward that portion of the glade known as the "prisoners' cave," by a way known only to the initiated. Safely hidden on the hill-slope behind the foliage of some stout evergreens, he could see the miserable Harold pacing to and fro along the ground in front of the cavern in which he spent the greater part of his time. Just within the cave he saw another individual. This he had no doubt was the Cuban, though the place was too dark to recognize him. Blackbeard, the stalwart and brawny jailor and sentinel who had these two in charge, was leaning against the face of a rock at some short distance with his loaded musket, placed handily by his side. The spy among the evergreens knew Blackbeard well, knew also his prevailing weakness. It was by taking advantage of this that he hoped to gain his purpose without danger and without alarm.

He had provided himself with a flask of spirits in which an opiate had been judiciously mingled. Moreover, he had taken care that flask and case and leathern strap should be just like those which were constantly in use among the brigands on their sorties after prey. Carefully watching his opportunity, he succeeded in lowering this into such a position that it would be seen by the sentinel as soon as he changed his position and began to stroll again along his monotonous path. He had not very long to wait in order to see the success of his bait. The night was cold, and Blackbeard not averse to gaining a little temporary artificial warmth in his feet while walking. He caught sight of the strap, and then the eminently suggestive case to which it was attached. It looked precisely as though it had come unbuckled by accident, and had dropped from the shoulder of one of his absent comrades.

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Blackbeard, as he drew a cigarette which he was lazily smoking from between his lips, "I don't know who has been unlucky enough to lose you, but I know who is the lucky man to use you. That's just the sort of cordial I've been wishing for." Blackbeard lost no time in uncorking the flask, and finding, as he expected, that it was well replenished, he lifted it to his lips with a prophetic smack to give it welcome, and regaled himself with a few such hearty draughts that but little was left behind.

"Both good and strong!" said he, and smacked his lips again with evident relish. Then he proceeded to drain the bottle dry. The man above him, secreted behind the evergreens, smiled grimly at the success of his scheme. He soon perceived that the opiate was beginning to work. Blackbeard felt drowsy. Leaning against the face of the cliff, he gradually sank to the ground as his sleep deepened, and, at last, as he lay prone and insensible upon the earth, his stertorous breathing convinced the plotting watcher that he had lost all power for some hours to interfere or sense to understand.

It was not many moments before Harold Spofforth noticed this unusual sound, and was asking himself the question whether he might not make a bold dash for freedom.

"Señor Bonanza," said he, to his noble-looking, white-haired fellow-prisoner, who had greatly won upon his regard, and whose kind and helpful companionship had made his trouble less—"Señor Bonanza, why shouldn't we give our good friends the slip? Blackbeard's asleep, and, as it seems to me, drunk into the bargain."

At that moment, they were both startled by a voice from the slope above. It was the emissary of Ethel and Jacob Benson who spoke, and as he spoke, he came boldly forward with a bow and a smile. "Señor," said he to Harold, "if you desire to make your escape, follow me. Jacob Benson waits you at the waterfall."

Harold thought he had lost all desire to escape, but now that an opportunity occurred all his old love of life returned, and he was prepared to follow anywhere, for nothing could be worse than to remain. He did not know anything about the waterfall, but he did know Jacob Benson, and rightly argued therefrom that his friends had not only not forsaken him, but were hard at work on his behalf.

"I have a comrade in trouble," said Harold to the new-comer; "we must escape together."

"Certainly," said the man, "only make haste, lest Blackbeard come to life again." This was said with a low exultant laugh, and in a tone which showed that he did not by any means expect to see such a sudden resurrection.

As may be imagined neither of the two prisoners needed pressing to make haste from their prison. They followed their guide along the tortuous path he had previously trodden. This was necessary in order to avoid the outposts of the camp, for Red Pedro was a military genius, and no camp could have been better guarded, so far as his plans were concerned.

Without further speech or adventure they made their way until they came into the open country, and were drawing near to the neighborhood of the waterfall, where Jacob Benson was supposed to be in wating to complete the transaction by payment of the thousand pounds promised to the bandit in the event of his success. But he was not there. The robber began to think he had been deceived, and saw his hope of the promised prize begin to vanish. He waited, however, a few moments on the chance of Jacob appearing. The three stood silently under the shadow of the trees in suspense. As they waited a piercing shriek rang on the still air, and they cautiously crept out of their place of concealment to see what was going forward. There they saw at a short distance a desperate struggle around a carriage. At the window of the vehicle was a woman's face, evidently she who had given utterance to that cry. Beside the carriage were two men, whom Harold recognized as De Diaz and Jacob Benson. They were engaged in a life-and-death struggle, and with the same impulse Harold and his guide sprang forward to take part in the fray.

The robber guide threw himself instantly on De Diaz, and Jacob, thus unexpectedly reinforced, sprang to his feet, he having been felled to the ground by a blow scientifically delivered by his assailant. Harold made for the carriage door, where, in the lady whose face had been before but imperfectly visible, he now recognized his beloved sister. He found that she was carefully but securely bound with shawls and wraps, so that she could not move hand or foot, but he lifted her from the vehicle and embraced her tenderly.

That done, he went to the assistance of Jacob Benson. That worthy, however, needed no more help. He was panting, and somewhat dizzy with the struggle, but De Diaz had been engaged by his vengeful enemy, and the two had closed in a death struggle fatal to both. They now lay motionless side by side.

It appeared that no sooner had Jacob set out that evening to keep his appointment at the waterfall than De Diaz had returned, and, finding Ethel unprotected had attempted to carry her off to his mountain fastness. But he had taken the way by the waterfall, and Jacob, waiting there, had recognized both Ethel and the driver, and, shooting the mule he had been able to stop the nefarious project. Then he and De Diaz had engaged in the struggle, which might not have ended so well for Jacob had not Harold and the robber providentially arrived.

(To be continued.)

THE CALL OF MOSES.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for May 15, Ex. 3 : 1-12. Golden Text, Ex. 4 : 12.

Moses Visiting the Brick-field—His Interference Resented—All Lost and Nothing Gained—A Common Rebuff—Self-Nothingness a Difficult Lesson—Forty Years Learning—The Groaning People—The Instrument Prepared—A Scientific Problem in the Desert—The Ineffable Name Imparted—Encouragement for the Diffident—The Call Recognized.

EITHER by the teaching of his mother, or by some direct dealing of God with his own soul, Moses came to feel an irresistible conviction that he was called to deliver his people. This conviction was so strong that, when he went down from Pharaoh's palace to the brick-fields, where his countrymen were at work, counting, perhaps, upon his position at court, he took the law into his own hands, slew an oppressing Egyptian, and hid him in the sand, and then

Appealed to His Own People who were striving together, and he marvelled that they did not recognize his vocation. "He supposed that his brethren would have understood how that God by His hand would deliver them; but they understood not" (Acts 7 : 25). Instead of rallying round him, and taking up the cause of their national freedom, and their inheritance in Canaan, which cause lay so heavily on Moses' heart, they reproached him, and said, "Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? Thinkest thou to kill me as thou didst the Egyptian yesterday?" When Moses had slain the Egyptian, he had "looked this way and that way," and saw no man (Ex. 2 : 12). Now that his secret was known, he passed from the highest hopes for his people and himself to the deepest despair. One day, he saw himself the once heir-apparent of Egypt, nobly sacrificing himself for his people's good, leaving riches, fame, all he had for them, and hoping they would understand and appreciate his noble patriotism; the next day, he saw that he had foregone the honor of being called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, had given up position and prospects such as few men ever had for God and for his people; and yet, to all appearance, neither God nor his people appreciated the sacrifice! It must have been a bitter moment when he felt that all was lost to him, and he was in the eyes of the Egyptians and the Hebrews neither more nor less than a murderer, and who had turned his hand against the country to which he owed so much! Poor misunderstood Moses! How like numbers of God's children who, with beating hearts and eager spirits, rush into projects for doing good which involve immense personal sacrifice, and yet, to their immense disappointment, are not appreciated by older and wiser people. It is easy to say that the latter have no zeal, and have grown cold, but the bitterest part of their trial is that God has permitted that cold water should be thrown upon their grand schemes. But God is at work in all this. He sees that many of these dear enthusiasts really, at heart, want people to believe in them, to appreciate them, to understand them. God wants His children to be a means whereby men may believe in Him, appreciate Him, understand Him.

An Unsuccessful Revolutionist

Moses fled from Egypt, disappointed with God, with his people, and with himself, and he who was "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds," had to learn that most difficult of all lessons—

His Own Nothingness.

For forty years, the best years of his life, humanly speaking, this chosen deliverer of Israel was learning his lesson while he tended the sheep among the unlearned shepherds of Midian. There Moses married the daughter of Reuel, a priest of Midian, and one son was born to him.

Meanwhile, God was not sleeping. The children of Israel who did not believe in the mission of Moses when he came, perhaps with a patronizing air from Pharaoh's court, now began to groan and sigh under their burdens. They were Godward sighs, and "their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage. And God heard their groaning, and with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. And God saw the children of Israel, and God took knowledge of them" (R. V.). All the time that God is providing and caring for His work with souls, He is also schooling His instruments, both for their work in time and for eternal companionship with Him. He never sacrifices the instrument to the work, for He could just as easily work without them. Moses' call to deliver Israel was truly from Him, but Moses had to learn that it was not for him to initiate the way of deliverance or pioneer God. He must be ready and willing to follow, but must never in anything precede God, or go forward unsent. Patiently and industriously this learned man worked as a common day laborer, and was thus made much more fit for the work to which God called him than he was just when he left college in Egypt.

God Remembered His Covenant

One day, "the angel of the Lord appeared to him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush." It was something unusual to see a bush burning, and yet no single twig consumed. Moses' learning had not had the effect on him of making him exalt natural law above its Maker. He knew very well that nothing could happen but that God was some way in it. He turned aside to see why the bush was not burned. Just at that moment the Lord called him by name, and directed him to take his shoes off, for the place whereon he stood was holy with the presence of God. The Lord then revealed Himself as the God of his forefathers, and showed him that the cause for which he thought he was a martyr, and about which God had seemed so indifferent, was really on the heart of God all the time. "I have seen, I have seen the affliction of My people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their task-masters, for I know their sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them up out of that land into a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey. . . . Come, now, therefore, and unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth My people, the children of Israel, out of Egypt." Had Moses waited for that "Come, now, I will send thee," the children of Israel might, perhaps, have been delivered sooner! We lose time when we do not wait for the Lord.

I Will Send Thee

Human nature is terribly prone to exaggerate. Now that the call of God really came to Moses as a present thing, and God said, "Come, now," Moses made the very lesson he had been learning an obstacle in the way of doing God's will. "Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" Formerly, he had been bitterly disappointed that the Hebrews did not know he was a somebody; now, he was equally anxious to teach God he was a nobody. "Certainly I will be with thee," was the passport God gave him; not His authority only, but His very presence. But Moses would now make sure of every step, and he asked by what name he should speak of the God who sent him. "I AM THAT I AM," was the answer. "I am thy Salvation," "I am the good Shepherd," "I am the Lord that healeth thee," etc. "I am that I am." God gave full directions to Moses as to how he should proceed, how he should gather the elders of Israel together, and tell them that God had visited them (v. 16), and declare to them the coming deliverance. "And they shall hearken to thy voice, and thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel, unto the King of Egypt, and ye shall say unto him, The Lord, the God of the Hebrews hath met with us; and now let us go, we pray thee, three days' journey into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to the Lord our God. And I know that the King of Egypt will not give you leave to go, no, not by a mighty hand. And I will put forth My hand, and smite Egypt with all My wonders which I will do in the midst thereof; and after that he will let you go" (vs. 13-20, R. V.). Here was God's plan of operation clearly unfolded to Moses. But this man of God was now as much occupied with his littleness as he once had been with his greatness. He even took upon himself who had told him that the people would hearken to him. He said, "But, behold, they will not believe me, nor hearken to my voice, for they will say, The Lord hath not appeared unto thee." His unbelief set up probabilities against the Word of God. How many do this! God lovingly met him here by giving him signs which should prove his mission, just as He has given signs as one proof of Christianity (Heb. 2 : 3, 4; II Cor. 12 : 12). Moses made another difficulty, "O Lord, I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since Thou hast spoken unto Thy servant; for I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue." Still it is "I" and "me;" he is harping on what he is and what he is not, instead of considering Him who is with him. The Lord said, "I will be with thy mouth." Once Moses had been "mighty in words," now he was "slow of speech," but if the Lord who made man's mouth was to be with his mouth, Moses was not much to be pitied! Reader, if you are dumb in the prayer-meeting, or if you cannot open your mouth to speak to a lost sinner, let God be with your mouth, and out of the abundance of the heart, it will speak (Matt. 12 : 34). Once, again, Moses demurred, "O my Lord, send, I pray Thee, by the hand of Him whom Thou wilt send." At last, God was angry, and, contrary to His first plan, driven to it by

To Contradict God

Moses' Unbelief,

He gave him Aaron to be his spokesman. Had Moses trusted God, perhaps the golden calf of the wilderness would never have been made.

At last, Moses was satisfied. He returned home to his father-in-law, and, without telling him his mission, he asked leave to visit his friends in Egypt. God made all easy at home, and He departs. But yet one more controversy had God with him—it was that his son was not circumcised, and, therefore, had not come to belong to the covenant of promise. The omission was made right on the journey. By God's call, Aaron came to meet Moses in the wilderness, and Moses told his brother of God's revelation to him, and the two brethren went to the elders of Israel, "And Aaron spake all the words which the Lord had spoken unto Moses, and did the signs in the sight of the people. And the people believed; and when they heard that the Lord had visited the children of Israel, and that He had looked upon their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshipped." Thus was Moses' call recognized.

An Illustrated Work on the Unfulfilled Prophecies of the Bible, by the Rev. M. Baxter, entitled: "Forty Coming Wonders," may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York, by remitting 75 cents. It is a book of 528 pages, is handsomely bound in cloth and contains fifty full-page pictures and diagrams representing the scenes described in the prophecies of Daniel and in the book of the Revelation. It also contains a a résumé of the opinions of other expositors, and extracts carefully collated from the works of all the most eminent writers on prophecy from the earliest ages of the Christian era down to those of recent date. It thus forms the most useful and complete guide the student can have on entering the study of that portion of the Word of God. The book may now be obtained for seventy-five cents from any bookseller, who can procure it from the American News Company. This reduction in price is made to encourage the study of this important subject.

"MY FATHER'S HOUSE."

"To be with Christ, which is far better."—PHIL. i. 23.

These are words of Bible lore,
Dear to every Christian heart:
How we long yet more and more
Christ to meet, and never part.
But the Saviour bids us rest
On His promise sweet and true:
"In My Father's House on high I'll prepare a place for you."

Only here "a little while,"
Then to enter home above,
Where there's nothing to defile—
All is brightened by His love.
Oh! to be with Jesus there,
"Better far" than earthly friends;
Sweetest rest forever share—
Blessed rest—it never ends.

But while left upon time's shore,
Let us work with all our might,
For we know 'twill soon be o'er:
Then for us 'twill all be bright.
Not the light of sun or stars,
But the Lord Himself the Light:
No more death, nor naught that mars,
When our faith is changed to sight.

REV. G. B. GREIG.

Sydney, Australia.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Semi-Porcelain Dinner Sets as Premiums with $5, $7 and $20 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces or Imperial Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES—cutting out Agents and Dealers whose profits and expenses double the cost on every Piano they sell; and send this First-Class UPRIGHT Cabinet GEM 7⅓ Octave Rosewood Piano, Warranted 6 years for $193! We send it with Beautiful Cover and Stool—for Trial in your own Home before you buy. Send for circulars to Marshal & Smith, 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED

For ALLAN PINKERTON'S Thrilling and Wonderful book,
30 Years a Detective.
The only book of its kind. Full of illustrations, low in price, easy to sell.
Descriptive circulars and terms to agents sent free.
G. W. DILLINGHAM, Publisher, New York.

AGENTS WANTED (Samples Free) for DR. SCOTT'S beautiful Electric Corsets, Brushes, Belts, Etc. No risk, quick sales. Territory given. Satisfaction guaranteed.
DR. SCOTT, 843 Broadway, New York.

WAIT FOR THE ONLY AUTHENTIC AND AUTHORIZED BIOGRAPHY OF

Henry Ward Beecher

MORE MATERIAL DISCOVERED!

As is well known MR. BEECHER made a contract with us just before his death for the publication of his Autobiography. When he died it was at first supposed that very little of it was written, BUT ON A MORE CAREFUL EXAMINATION A GREAT AMOUNT OF MATERIAL HAS BEEN DISCOVERED,

WRITTEN BY MR. BEECHER HIMSELF.

THEREFORE, A LARGE PART OF

This Life Will be Autobiographic and it will be completed from notes which Mr. Beecher left, by his son WM. C. BEECHER and his son-in-law, Rev. SAMUEL SCOVILLE, assisted by Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher.

The Full Account of the Great Trial and the greater part of the work from 1860 up to date is Written by Mr. Beecher Himself.

PROSPECTUS WILL BE READY VERY SOON.

DO NOT BUY

or take up the canvass of any other life, as this will be the STANDARD.

This is the ONLY BOOK the sale of which benefits Mrs. Beecher and her family, as they are LARGELY interested in the PROFITS.

SOLD BY SUBSCRIPTION.
AGENTS WANTED.

CHAS. L. WEBSTER & CO.,
3 East 14th Street, New York City.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. ECCLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

BLACK SILKS.

MESSRS.
JAMES McCREERY & CO.
Will offer during this week a large stock of rich
BLACK SILK NOVELTIES
from $1 to $2 per yard. They have been previously sold at from $1.50 to $3 yer yard.
Mail orders receive careful and prompt attention. Address
James McCreery & Co.,
BROADWAY, COR. ELEVENTH ST.,
New York.

Infant Wardrobes

Ladies who are unable to examine our stock of these goods personally, would find it to their advantage to correspond with us. The most complete information furnished, and careful attention given to special orders.

Lord & Taylor,
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y.

Floral Praise
No. 5.

A BEAUTIFUL MUSICAL SERVICE FOR Children's Day & Flower Sunday,
BY HUBERT P. MAIN.
Price $4 per 100 copies; 5 cts. each by Mail.
Previous issues furnished at same price.

PALMER'S
Book of Gems.
For the Sunday School.

111 Songs, many of them Entirely New. Music for every hymn. The old favorites are Gems of a high order, selected by H. R. PALMER, Mus. Doc., and by Superintendents representing 200 different Sunday Schools.

100 BOOKS FOR $10.
Copy by mail on receipt of 6 P.O. 2c. Stamps

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York and Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF
HENRY WARD BEECHER
by THOS. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

FOR Biliousness,
Sick Headache,
Constipation,
Dyspepsia.

Now when the buds begin to show,
'Tis time for young and old to know
That Fevers, Lassitude and all
The ills at Indigestion's call,
With every trouble, ache or pain,
That follows in the Bilious train,
Will scatter, like the thieves of night,
Before a draught of SELTZER bright.

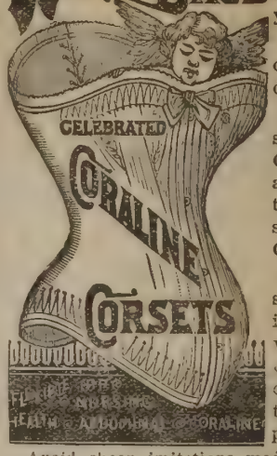
GOSPEL BOOKLETS AND BOOKS.

Tract distributors, Evangelists, Ministers, Y.M.C.A. and other Christian Workers, should send for our new catalogue of Tracts, Booklets and Books imported from Britain. Sample Packet of Tracts will be forwarded to intending purchasers on receipt of a stamp to pay postage. GOSPEL BOOK AND TRACT REPOSITORY, Orillia, Canada.

WARNER BRO'S



9 Mil... worn d... the past ... years.
This ma... ous succe... due—
1st.—T... superiori... Coraline ... all other ... terials, ... stiffener ... Corsets.
2d.—To... superior ... ity, shap... workman... of our Cor... combined ... their ... prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of va... kinds of cord. None are genuine unless "DR. WARNER'S CORALINE" is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.
WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This Magazine portrays Amer... can thought and life from ocean ... ocean, is filled with pure high-cla... literature, and can be safely we... comed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.

Sample Copy of current number mailed upon ... ceipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.

Premium List with either.

Address:
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N.Y.

GET UP CLUBS

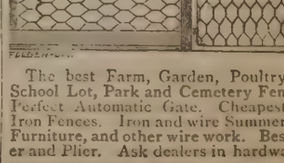
THE DINGEE & CONARD CO.
BEAUTIFUL EVER-BLOOMING
ROSES

For 18 Years our Great Specialty has b... growing and distributing ROSES. We have all ... Latest Novelties and finest standards in di... ent sizes and prices to suit all. We send STRONG, VI... OUS PLANTS safely by mail or express to all poi...

3 TO 12 PLANTS $1, $8 to $... per Hundr...

Our New Guide, 88 pp., describes nearly 500 fin... varieties of Roses, the best Hardy Shrubs, Climbing Vines, and New and Rare Flow... Seeds, and tells how to grow them—FR... Address THE DINGEE & CONARD C... Rose Growers, West Grove, Chester Co...

SEDGWICK STEEL WIRE FEN...



The best Farm, Garden, Poultry Yard, L... School Lot, Park and Cemetery Fences and G... Perfect Automatic Gate. Cheapest and Ne... Iron Fences. Iron and wire Summer Houses, L... Furniture, and other wire work. Best Wire Str... er and Plier. Ask dealers in hardware, or add...

SEDGWICK BROS., RICHMOND, I...

DO YOU INTEND TO BUI...

a suburban or country house? Valuable information... Address, CO-O-PERATIVE BUILDING PLAN ASS'N, Box 2702, New...

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 63... House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 19. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, MAY 12, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PICTURE AND NARRATIVE OF THE WRECK OF THE VICTORIA ON THE FRENCH COAST.

A SPRIG OF HEARTSEASE. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

WAS CHRIST CRUCIFIED ON NISAN 14 OR 15? By the Rev. Canon Browne.

LARRY O'MEARA'S PROMISE. (Illustrated.)

The Madman in the Market-Place—A Windfall of Quails—Priceless Treasure Trove—Treasured Door-Steps—A Missionary at a Leopard's Den, etc.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Earthquakes in the South-West—Visit of Queen Kapiolani—A Mining Disaster—A Curious Law Case in New Jersey—Discovery of a Chest of Gold in Wisconsin—A Wife's Trusteeship—Advice to a Senator, etc.

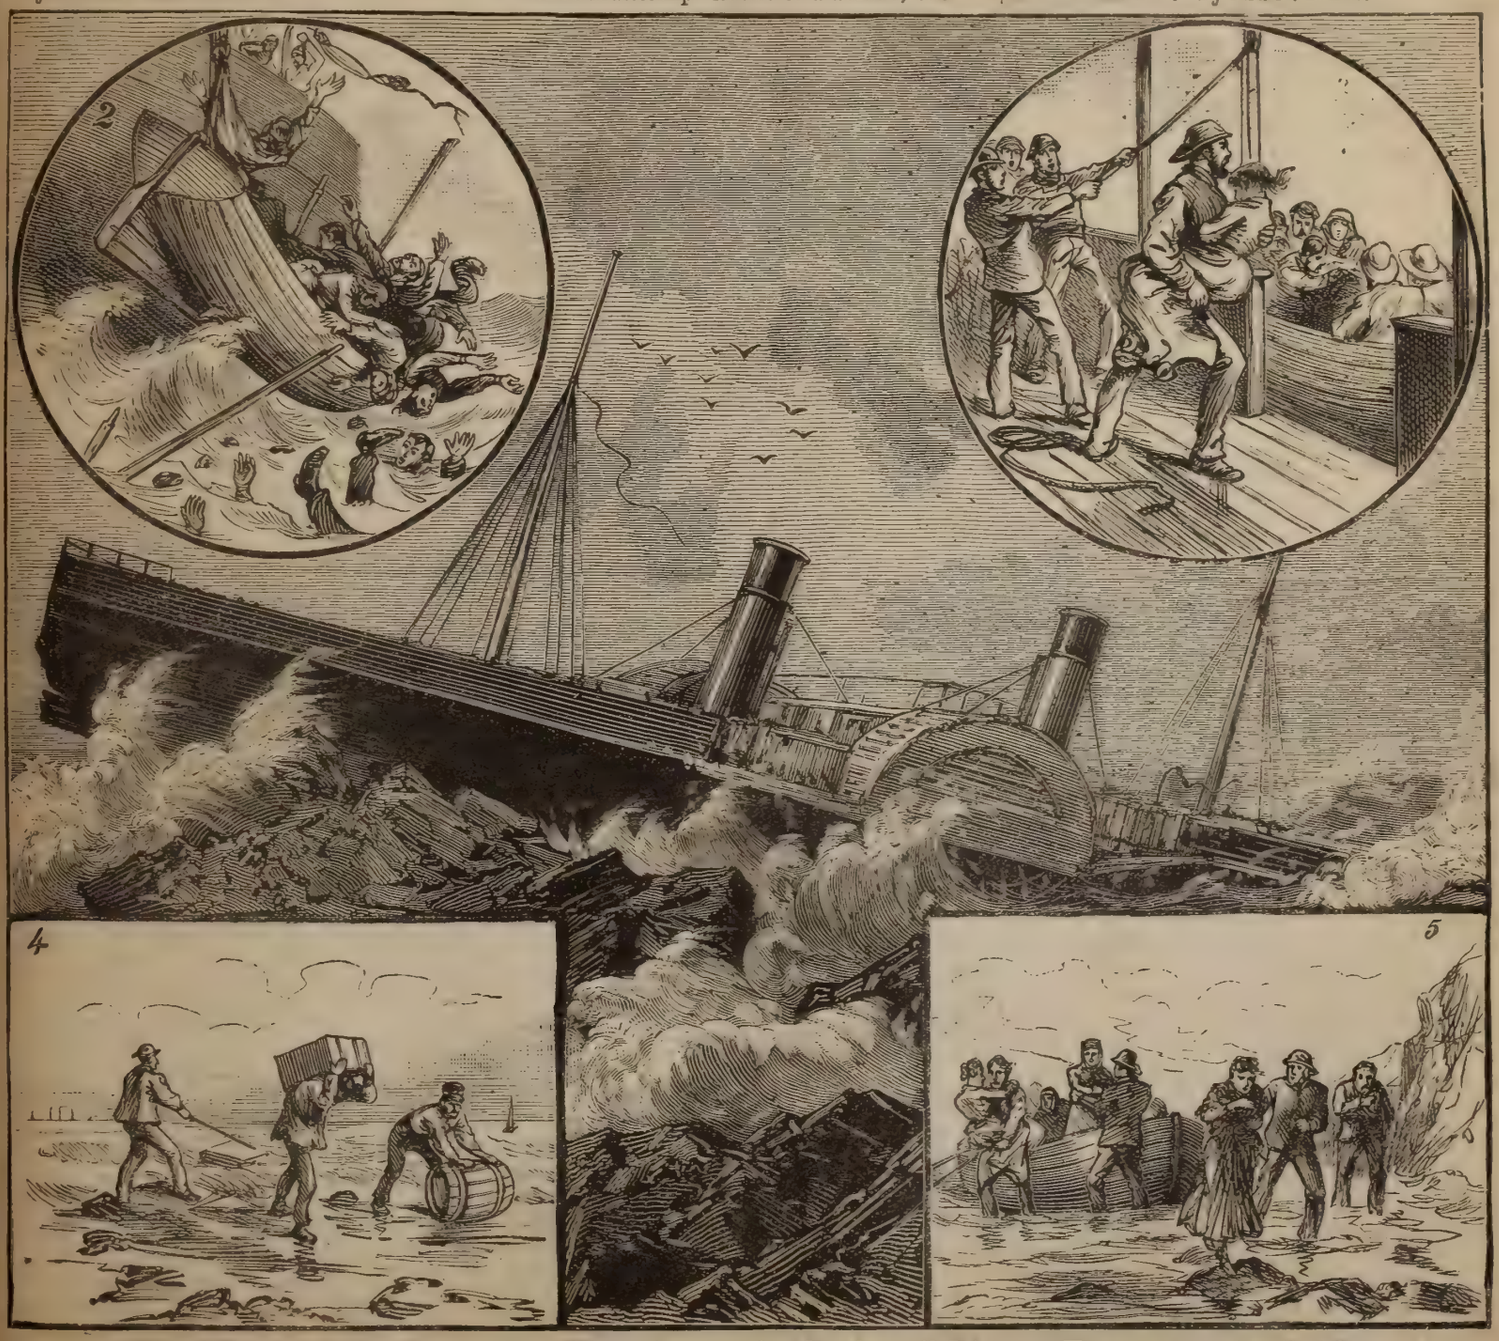
THE RISEN LORD WITH THE ELEVEN. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's New Sermon.

Gems from New Books: An Ocean Graveyard.

PORTRAITS OF THE HONS. WILLIAM R. MORRISON, JUDGE COOLEY AND A. SCHOONMAKER, INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSIONERS.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. A Serial Story. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

THE PASSOVER. By Mrs. M. Baxter.



The Wreck of the Steamship Victoria on the Rocks off Dieppe, France, on April 13.

THE WRECK OF THE VICTORIA.

The Ship and Its Captain—A Fatal Fog—Mischief Wrought by a Shawl—Explanation of the Disaster—The Captain's Report—The Stories of the First Mate and the Second Steward—A Lady Passenger's Narrative—Wreckage—Generous Hospitality to Those Who Reached the Shore.

To the record of the calamities which will make the early months of this year memorable, must be added the wreck of the steamship Victoria, a picture of which appears on the first page of this number. She was wrecked on the French coast on April 13th, and about twenty of her passengers lost their lives.

The Victoria was a stanch, swift vessel, built in Glasgow in 1878, to carry passengers between the British port of Newhaven and the French port of Dieppe. The passage was generally made in about six hours, and, owing to the care of the captains and the excellence of the boats the line has been heretofore remarkable for its freedom from disasters. On the night of Tuesday, April 12th, the Victoria left Newhaven at half-past eleven with about a hundred and twenty persons on board, ninety-four of whom were passengers. She was commanded by Captain Clarke, one of the oldest and steadiest officers of the company. All went well until about four o'clock, when the Victoria should have been nearing her destination. Then she ran into a bank of dense fog. The captain proceeded cautiously, and listened for the fog-horn which is stationed near Dieppe. Suddenly, however, all being still, he saw a dark shade, which he took for land, and he immediately reversed the engines, ported his helm, and went ahead pointing N.W., but the ship struck on a ledge of rocks, and by 4.35 the bows of the steamer were deep under water. He gave orders for the boats to be lowered, and begged the passengers to be calm. The ladies got into the first boat, but some Frenchmen jumped in also. As a crowning disaster a lady's shawl got entangled in the davit, causing the boat to tilt over and upset many into the sea. In fact, out of about fifteen, only four who were in that boat survived.

The Panic

that ensued may be conceived. In that mad rush of men to the first boat there was the danger which all seamen would understand. The boat would be overcrowded and would probably founder. That consideration would cause them to hurry the lowering of the boat lest more should jump in. Then, when the lady's shawl stopped the running of the pulley-block at one end of the boat, that end would become stationary in mid-air while the other would fall, emptying the passengers out into the sea. The drowning of so many of those who had entered the first boat does not seem to have taught the other passengers prudence. Some Italians in the bows, who were first startled by the crash, and immediately afterward by a rush of water and steam under their feet, and as the steamer sank by the head would assume that she was going down altogether, rushed aft in a mad charge for the second boat. This time, however, the officers were able to enforce order, and the ladies remaining on the ship were placed in the boat, and were carried safely to Fécamp. A third boat also got away, and, having landed its living freight on a strip of shingle it returned to the ship for another party. This boat made five trips in all, and at her last voyage took the last man on board the ship off. This was the captain, who conscientiously refused to quit until every one else was safe.

The Silent Fog-horn.

All this time no warning sound of fog-horn had come from the lighthouse on the cliff, and it was not till about an hour after the accident that the steam trombone on the shore gave forth the signal, which, heard earlier, would in all probability have prevented the disaster. Instead of this apparatus being kept ready for use at a moment's notice, it seems that an hour had to be wasted in lighting a fire and getting up steam to work it. In this instance, the loss of that hour meant the loss of the ship and of precious lives. Even when the vessel had struck, however, no lives need have been lost. The wretched selfishness of the men who struggled to get into the first boat, though in doing so they risked their own lives and those of their fellow-passengers, was the cause of the fatalities. Had they remained calm, and obeyed orders, probably not one life would have been lost.

The Captain's Official Report made to the company of the ill-fated vessel is: "Left Newhaven at 11.30 P.M. on 12th. Flood setting; wind east, fresh. All went well till about 4.15 A.M. Weather thick on land. Had seen no light, nor heard the horn on the cape. All at once I perceived a dark shade, which I thought to be land. Stopped engines and went full speed astern for the space of three or four minutes. Then went ahead on port helm [to the right], thinking it was easterly of Dieppe, not hearing the horn on the cape. When the ship's head was north-west by compass, she struck upon the rock, at once began to fill, settling down by head, still upon the rock.

"Ordered mate to lower boats and land passengers. When lowering the port quarter boat, level with the rail, passengers all made a rush to her, jumping in as soon as the boat was being lowered, in opposition to all the officers could do to prevent them, being the first boat. While in the act of lowering, a lady's shawl became entangled in the after-fall, and after choking the block, and, at the time, a sea striking the boat, caused the fore-tackle to unhook, capsizing the boat and throwing the passengers into the water, of whom we saved two with a lifeboat. We then put as many as prudent into the other lifeboat, and they drifted away to leeward of the ship. Landed the remainder with the other lifeboat in safety under the cape. Remained by the ship till the sea was making a clean breach over her. I left with the remainder of the crew and proceeded to Dieppe, where we arrived about midday. I very much regret the loss of life which has occurred, but feel assured that had all the passengers listened to my entreaties, and been amenable to my orders, all would have been saved. I attribute the sad accident to the fog and the not sounding of the horn at the cape."

The Steward's Story.

The second steward of the Victoria, whose name is Scadden, furnishes a graphic picture of the scene. He says: "I was below in the main cabin at the moment of the collision, which took place about ten to twelve minutes after four o'clock. The shock, which made the ship reel, was very apparent to all around, and caused every one to rush up the cabin stairs on deck to see what was the matter. When I reached the deck I saw the captain, and heard him giving his orders with distinctness to lower the boats. The first boat lowered was that to leeward. Into this I saw Frenchmen scrambling without the slightest regard for the women, who were piteously crying for aid. The French travellers, no doubt, lost their heads completely. We did our best to restrain them from overloading the boat, and in this we were somewhat successful.

"Seeing there was no hope for it but to lower the boat, so as to get the women into the next boat, we let go the ropes. A woman with a shawl upon her arm, stood near the stern-davit, and as the rope ran through the block it caught the shawl and dragged it into the pulley-block, so that the latter got clogged. The bow-davit ran true, so the bows of the boat reached the water first. At that moment a wave came, and rising the bows, threw the ring in the boat off the hook of the davit-pulley, and the craft instantly dropped low down into the water, and the people in her were thrown into the water struggling. Lifeboats, rafts, seats, coops, and other helps were thrown overboard to them, but whether stricken by panic, or by reason of clutching to each other, only two or three of the lot were saved. There was a choppy, nasty sea, and we could see in the midst of that many people were preparing to jump overboard. I kept several back from doing such a mad thing, and had to use some force. I left the bows, and went to assist at the stern boats, and a few minutes afterward I saw that the whole of the forepart of the ship was submerged, and the sea was rushing over the foredeck as far as the saloon doors. In the second boat, which we launched successfully, there were a great number of women, and also in the third boat, but there was a great difficulty in making them take their seats properly, as they were all in such fear. Every one was dressed, as only ten minutes before the collision the chief mate and the carpenter (the latter of whom is missing), had gone round the ship to tell the passengers that they were close to the harbor, and to collect tickets. There was and this the captain ordered to make straight for the cliffs, half a mile distant, find a landing-place, and then return. The boat went and found a piece of shingle about a mile away, where five times she landed loads, the captain coming off last. I came off the fourth journey, and then I saw that the Victoria was rapidly being covered with the flow tide. At high tide there was nothing to be seen of her except her masts and funnels. I saw Moneypenny rush into the engine-room and turn off all cocks. I think he saved us from a terrible death, for a few minutes after he had done this the water rushed into the boiler-rooms, and there was nothing to be seen through the steam that came up from there. There would have been an awful explosion only for Moneypenny. It was a full hour after the Victoria struck when we first heard the fog-horn."

The Turmoil on Board

Only One Boat Left

A Lady's Experience.

A lady on the boat gives this account of her impressions during and after the shipwreck: "Everything gave promise of a charming passage. The sea looked so lovely that I remained on deck for nearly an hour after we went out of Newhaven; but, the weather being bitterly cold and the wind freshening, I went to the second-class cabin, the first-class one being rather crowded, and cases of sea-sickness numerous. When below I found myself close to a nun who was engaged in her devotions. When she had finished I ventured to get into conversation with her. I learned that she was English, and going to teach in a convent in Normandy. She seemed a little nervous, and I, to strengthen her courage, said that wrecks were unknown on the Dieppe line. An old lady here joined in the conversation, and said she remembered a wreck twenty-two years ago. It was caused by a steamer running on a rock just outside Dieppe Harbor during a foggy morning.

"After that I lay down, and was considerably shaken by the increasing swell of the sea, but managed to sleep for a few hours, and was awoke by a man coming round to ask for tickets. I then got up and went to the other cabin for some parcels I had left there. As I was just descending the stairs I felt the ship go to smash, and was by thrown head forward to the bottom. The ship was lurching forward, and the deck was a steeply inclined plane toward the figurehead. Men, women, and children rushed up on deck. We were in a thick fog, and unable to see beyond the ship. I could not see well the fore-part. My friend the nun joined me. I must say that the seamen and the captain were wonderfully cool, brave, and unselfish, but how describe the

The Violence of the Shock

Fearful Cowardice

of some of the passengers, or their hideous conduct as the boats were being taken from the davits! Everything was done so fast that my impressions are muddled. A strong pair of arms, belonging to whom I do not know, swung me into a boat (see Illustration No. 3). I had at first tried to get into the one that sunk, but a wretched, troublesome woman, the one whose shawl caught in the tackle, so delayed things that my unknown saviour thrust me into the other one which took me to land. Some gentlemen fired revolvers, hoping that they might be taken as tokens of distress. There were some men who acted like perfect savages in cutting the tackle of a boat to get it for themselves.

"As we were putting off from the sinking Victoria, the oarsmen pulled as if for their very lives to be quickly out of the vortex of the vessel. We were quite in the dark when we got off from the lanterns of the ship, for, though day was going to dawn, the fearful fog encompassed us. After the fog cleared, we found we were running parallel to the coast, and getting near Fécamp. I wonder we ever got there."

The Vessel Breaking Up.

On the following evening (Thursday, April 14th), the Victoria was lying deep upon the rocks, and tremendous head seas were making a clean breach over her. The bridge had been washed away, and the quarter-deck had disappeared. Everything that was loose on board the vessel was washing toward shore, and numerous boxes, crates, hampers, fish-boxes, and timbers, were being picked up both on the French shore and at sea. There was then no doubt that the vessel was breaking up fast. The banks of rocks upon which the vessel lay have sharp points, and each successive wave drove her farther upon the piercing edges, which tore open her keel.

The shipwrecked passengers who were landed at Fécamp received the utmost kindness and assistance from the inhabitants of that place. On reaching the land they were, of course, in a most pitiable condition, being wet and exhausted. The inhabitants of the town, however, quickly made them comfortable, doing all for them that their circumstances permitted, private families entertaining one, two, or three, as their accommodation allowed. They also cheerfully supplied those who needed with change of clothing.

Many affecting incidents have been related, among them that of the death of A Young Husband and Wife.

As the first boat was lowered, a tall, fair-haired girl was lovingly embraced by her husband and placed by him in the boat. He was apparently going to swim by her, and was standing on the bulwarks when the little craft capsized. Suddenly he disappeared. It is conjectured that, seeing his wife in the water, he jumped to save her, and both were drowned. From the description it is surmised that the pair were Mr. Towers Brown and his wife, who were but recently married. Mr. Brown was the son of a clergyman. Their baggage has been recovered, but not claimed, and, while every search is being made by sorrowing relations, no news of either of the bodies has been obtained. Another sad case was that of a boy named Swift, who saw his mother and brother drowned. These members of the family were on their way to Switzerland, to join the father, who now had to travel to Dieppe to consign his dear ones to the grave. Most of the English in that town attended the funeral, and marks of the deepest sympathy were shown by all, whether French or English. There are three children missing who were seen to go on board with a middle-aged woman. It has been stated by the saved seamen that the women and children were seen to run aft after the Victoria struck, but there is no tidings of them. It is more likely that these children were drowned in the fore-cabin as they lay sleeping. It appears that the carpenter, also, was drowned in his berth, which was in the forehold.

An Illustrated Work on the Unfulfilled Prophecies of the Bible, by the Rev. M. Baxter, entitled: "Forty Coming Wonders," may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York, by remitting 75 cents. It is a book of 528 pages, is handsomely bound in cloth and contains fifty full-page pictures and diagrams representing the scenes described in the prophecies of Daniel and in the book of the Revelation. It also contains a a résumé of the opinions of other expositors, and extracts carefully collated from the works of all the most eminent writers on prophecy from the earliest ages of the Christian era down to those of recent date. It thus forms the most useful and complete guide the student can have on entering the study of that portion of the Word of God. The book may now be obtained for seventy-five cents from any bookseller, who can procure it from the American News Company. This reduction in price is made to encourage the study of this important subject.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

The Baker and His Bible.—At a Workers' meeting the Rev. William Ross remarked: "A day or two ago, I was visiting a baker, and while speaking to me he went on with his work, and as I watched him handling the dough, my eye caught sight of a book propped up before him, and I asked him what book is that? The Bible, he replied, that while I am preparing the bread for the physical body, I may be feeding my soul with manna from the store-house of God."

A Magnetized Bar of Iron.—Mr. Campbell White remarked: "The best way I can explain how the Christian worker, in complete contact with Christ, is a power to save souls, is by the following example: Take a common bar of iron, and first bending it into the shape of a horseshoe, apply it to a battery. The stream of magnetism flows through it, and by this power it is enabled to hold, even though there be suspended from it extremely heavy weights. As long as the iron is in contact with the battery, so long does the power endure; but the moment the connection is broken the power ceases, the weights fall, and the magnet becomes only a piece of iron. Similarly the Christian worker, in immediate contact with Christ, has His Spirit flowing through him, and this Spirit is the power, and by it we are enable to do great works for Christ; but the moment we lose touch of Christ, that moment we lose power, and become, for God's purpose, a worthless piece of clay."

A Band of Imperilled Swimmers.—Mr. White said: "When I was at school, I was very fond of swimming, and with a few of my companions took every opportunity to indulge in our favorite sport. We were not very good swimmers, and the utmost we could conveniently do was about one hundred yards at a stretch. Just about that distance from the shore there was a rock to which it was our custom to swim, and then, having rested ourselves a little, swim back. One day we started as usual, but as we came to where we expected to find the rock, to our horror we discovered we had lost our bearings; we could find no rock there. We therefore swam about looking for it, but no rock could we find. Here was a fix; about half a dozen boys floundering about in the water, a hundred yards from the shore; some of them already faint and beginning to sink; when suddenly I felt my feet on the rock, which the tide had covered by about a foot, and, standing straight up, I cried, 'Here you fellows, here's the rock!' and soon they were all standing beside me. When I felt myself safe, I was so glad I could not rest till I had my companions all safe. That is how a man feels who gets upon the Rock Christ: he wants all his friends there too."

An Appalling Colliery Explosion.—Mr. Weaver said: "On one occasion I was speaking at Allerton, in Lancashire. The audience consisted mainly of colliers, and I was telling that I had been in six explosions, and by the goodness of God had escaped unhurt. I went on to say that if there is anything on earth that resembles hell, it is a pit immediately after an explosion. The lurid flame of the exploded gas has given way to intense darkness. No one knows what has happened; he is afraid to move, lest he bring something down upon him. Then the fearful, sulphurous smell, which impregnates the air, while from the utter darkness around issues the groans of the dying, and the howls, oaths, and imprecations of the maimed. Oh, it is an awful experience through which to come; and as you stagger forward you trip over the dead body of a friend, perhaps, or that of a father or a son. The men to whom I spoke knew the truth of this picture, and some were moved to make their peace with God on the spot. Next night I had another meeting at the same place, but my audience was small—very small. Why? There had been an explosion at the pit close by, and thirty-nine poor fellows had been hurled into eternity, prepared or unprepared. I was told that one of the young men after he had been taken up out of the pit, and realized that he was indeed safe, while his mate had been killed by his side, fell down on his knees and gave himself to Christ, and has since led a consistent Christian life. 'For,' as he said, 'if I had been taken instead of him, where should I be now?'"

The Work of Two Detectives.—A Worker testifying at a Gospel meeting, observed: "Three years ago I was loitering one evening in the neighborhood of Gaol Square, Glasgow, when a friend asked me to accompany him to a Gospel meeting in this place. As I accompanied him here I was spoken to about my soul, but obstinately declined to decide. On leaving the meeting my friend and the missionary said they would walk home with me. As we approached the street in which I live, I met my wife. 'Is that you, John?' she said. 'Yes; and two detectives with me,' I replied. 'Two detectives!' she rejoined in alarm; 'what have you been doing?' 'Oh, they are detectives from the Lord, and they won't let me go,' was my answer. However, I would not yield myself to Christ that night. But my friend, in parting, said he would call for me the next night, and warned my wife not to let me have any drink; but I forced her to give me the price of a glass. Next evening, according to promise, my friend called on me, and insisted on my going to the meeting; and glad am I to-night that I did so, for there Christ met me, and I gave myself to Him, and He has kept me by His grace ever since."

A Drunken Sleep in the Snow.—The Rev. Mr. Leithley observed: "As I was coming along the street the other day, it was snowing heavily, and the ground was covered to a depth of two or three inches; and, as I passed up one of the less frequented streets I came upon a man dead drunk. His face and clothes showed he had not been home since he had ceased his labors, and been paid off; yet there he was, having, doubtless, squandered, in pandering to his selfish and insatiable appetite for strong drink, the money which his wife and family impatiently awaited at home. To have allowed him to remain there in the state in which he was might have meant death; consequently he was awakened, but so stupefied had he become that he was unable to give his address, or even his own name; and had not a friend recognized and escorted him home it might have fared badly with him. Though we may all be addicted to the sin of intemperance, yet there are other vices which as completely enslave the body and taste, and paralyze the will; and though friends may awaken them and show the danger—the ruin to which they rush—yet ofttimes they madly continue the downward course. Oh, for some friendly hand to snatch such victims from the consequences of their own folly!"

A Ruined Man's Regret.—Mr. Clyde Re-marked: "I knew a gentleman, at one time a most active Christian worker. He was fairly well off, and had a good business, which business began to improve, getting better and better, and engrossing more and more of his time, energy, and thought, until he had almost wholly slipped back again into the world. And Satan was watching him, and as soon as he saw him leave his stronghold and sure defence—Christ Jesus—he darted upon him. The man fell into his old snare, strong drink, and his business became neglected. Business losses did not, however bring him to his senses, they only drove him to indulge in the cup, still more deeply, to drown his cares; and now that man has scarcely a shilling, and lies at home dying of consumption. One day last week, as I sat with him by the fire, he rolled up in a blanket, he said to me, 'I am converted now; it happened last week. I knew I was a sinner, and that I was dying, so one night last week, as I lay there in bed I prayed, "Oh, Father, Thou knowest I am a sinner, and deserving of punishment, but for Christ's sake have mercy on me."' 'Well, and what after that?' I asked. 'Oh, I felt as if God had immediately answered my prayer, and cried, "Lord Jesus, I thank Thee, and I am so sorry that now I have nothing of all my wasted years to dedicate to Thy service."'"

A SPRIG OF HEARTSEASE.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, May 8, 1887.

"And his disciples . . . went and told Jesus."—MATT. 14 : 12.

The Agonized Soul Craving Sympathy—The Vandal Troubles of Life—A Prescription for Heartaches—I. Suited to the Sinful and Unpardoned—False Refuges—King Alfred's Horologic Candles—II. To the Tempted—Temptations for Every Temperament—A Crafty Pope—III. To the Slandered and Persecuted—Every John has a Herod—Slanders a Proof of Worth—The Best Course for the Maligned—IV. To the Bereaved — The Constant Emigration — Eternity Being Peopled—Sympathy Assured Always at Hand—A Captain's Child in a Storm—Xerxes Weeping Over his Army.

AN outrageous assassination had just taken place. To appease a revengeful woman, King Herod ordered the death of that noble, self-sacrificing Christian, John the Baptist. The group of the disciples were thrown into grief and dismay. They felt themselves utterly defenceless. There was no authority to which they could appeal, and yet grief must always find expression. If there be no human ear to hear it, then will cry it aloud to the winds and the woods and the waters. But there was an ear that was willing to listen. There is a tender pathos, and at the same time a most admirable picture, in the words of my text: "They went and told Jesus." He could understand all their grief, and He immediately soothed it. Our burdens are not more than half so heavy to carry if another is thrust under the other end of them. Here we find Christ, His brow shadowed with grief, standing amid the group of disciples, who, with tears and violent gesticulations and wringing of hands and outcry of bereavement, are expressing their woe. Raphael, with his skilful brush putting upon the wall of a palace some scene of sacred story, gave not so skilful a stroke as when the plain hand of the evangelist writes, "They went and told Jesus."

The Agonized Soul

The old Goths and Vandals once came down upon Italy from the north of Europe, and they upset the gardens, and they broke down the altars, and swept away everything that was good and beautiful. So there is ever and anon in the history of all the sons and daughters of our race an incursion of that come to plunder and ransack and put to the torch all that men highly prize. There is no cave so deeply cleft into the mountains as to allow us shelter, and the foot of fleetest courser cannot bear us beyond the quick pursuit. The arrows they put to the string fly with unerring dart, until we fall pierced and stunned.

Rough-handed Troubles

I feel that I bring to you a most appropriate message. I mean to bind up all your griefs into a bundle, and set them on fire with a spark from God's altar.

The Prescription that Cured

the sorrow of the disciples will cure all your heartaches. I have read that when Godfrey and his army marched out to capture Jerusalem, as they came over the hills, at the first flash of the pinnacles of that beautiful city, the army that had marched in silence lifted a shout that made the earth tremble. Oh, you soldiers of Jesus Christ, marching on toward heaven, I would that to-day, by some gleam from the palace of God's mercy and God's strength, you might be lifted into great rejoicing, and that before this service is ended you might raise one glad hosanna to the Lord!

I. In the first place, I commend the behavior of these disciples to all in this audience who are Sinful and Unpardoned.

There comes a time in almost every man's history when he feels from some source that he has an erring nature. The thought may not have such heft as to fell him. It may be only like the flash in an evening cloud just after a very hot summer day. One man to get rid of that impression will go to prayer, another will stimulate himself by ardent spirits, and another man will dive deeper in secularities. But sometimes a man cannot get rid of these impressions. The fact is, when a man finds out that his eternity is poised upon a perfect uncertainty, and that the next moment his foot may slip, he must do something violent to make himself forget where he stands, or else fly for refuge.

If there are any here who have resolved that they would rather die of this awful cancer of sin than to have the heavenly surgeon cut it out, let me say, my dear brother, you mingle for yourself a bitter cup You fly in the face of your everlasting interests. You crouch under a yoke and you bite the dust, when, this moment, you might rise up a crowned conqueror. Driven and perplexed as you have been by sin,

Go and Tell Jesus.

To relax the grip of death from your soul, and plant your unshackled feet upon the golden throne, Christ let the tortures of the bloody mount transfix Him. With the beam of His own cross He will break down the door of your dungeon. From the thorns of His own Crown He will pick enough gems to make your brow blaze with eternal victory. In every tear on His wet cheek; in every gash of His side; in every long, blackening mark of laceration from shoulder to shoulder; in the grave-shattering, heaven-storming death groan, I hear Him say, "Him that cometh unto Me, I will in nowise cast out."

"Oh," but you say, "instead of curing my wound you want to make another wound—namely, that of conviction!" Have you never known a surgeon to come and find a chronic disease, and then with sharp caustic burn it all out? So the grace of God comes to the old sore of sin. It has long been rankling there, but by Divine grace it is burned out through these fires of conviction, "the flesh coming again as the flesh of a little child;" "where sin abounded, grace much more aboundeth." With the ten thousand unpardoned sins of your life, go and tell Jesus. You will never get rid of your sins in any other way; and remember that the broad invitation which I extend to you will not always be extended.

King Alfred, before modern time-pieces were invented, used to divide the day into three parts, eight hours each, and then had three wax candles. By the time the first candle had burned to the socket, eight hours had gone, and when the second candle had burned to the socket, another eight hours had gone, and when all the three candles were gone out, then the day had passed. Oh, that some of us, instead of calculating our days and nights and years by any earthly time-piece, might calculate them by the numbers of opportunities and mercies which are burning down and burning out, never to be relighted, lest at last we be amid the foolish virgins who cried, "Our lamps have gone out"!

II. Again, I commend the behavior of the disciples

To All who are Tempted.

I have heard men in mid-life say they had never been led into temptation. If you have not felt temptation it is because you have not tried to do right. A man hoppled and handcuffed, as long as he lies quietly, does not test the power of the chain; but when he rises up, and with determination resolves to snap the handcuff or break the hopple, then he finds the power of the iron. And there are men who have been for ten and twenty and thirty years bound hand and foot by evil habits who have never felt the power of the chain, because they have never tried to break it. It is very easy to go on down with the stream and with the wind, lying on your oars; but just turn around and try to go against the wind and the tide, and you will find it is a different matter. As long as we go down the current of our evil habit we seem to get along quite smoothly; but if after a while we turn around and head the other way, toward Christ and pardonand heaven, oh, then how we have to lay to the oars! You will have your temptation. You have one kind, you another, you another, not one person escaping.

It is all folly for you to say to some one,

"I Could Not Be Tempted

as you are." The lion thinks it is so strange that the fish should be caught with a hook. The fish thinks it is so strange that the lion should be caught with a trap. You see some man with a cold, phlegmatic temperament, and you say, "I suppose that man has not any temptation." Yes, as much as you have. In his phlegmatic nature he has a temptation to indolence and censoriousness and over-eating and drinking; a temptation to ignore the great work of life; a temptation to lay down an obstacle in the way of all good enterprises. The temperament decides the styles of temptation; but sanguine or lymphatic, you will have temptation. Satan has a grappling-hook just fitted for your soul. A man never lives beyond the reach of temptation. You say when a man gets to be seventy or eighty years of age he is safe from all Satanic assault. You are very much mistaken. A man at eighty-five years of age has as many temptations as a man at twenty-five. They are only different styles of temptation. Ask the aged Christian whether he is never assaulted of the powers of darkness. If you think you have conquered the power of temptation, you are very much mistaken.

A man who wanted the Papal throne pretended he was very weak and sickly, and if he was elected he would soon be gone. He crawled upon his crutches to the throne, and having attained it he was strong again. He said, "It was well for me while I was looking for the sceptre of another that I should stoop, but now that I have found it, why should I stoop any longer?" and he threw away his crutches and was well again. How illustrative of the power of temptation! You think it is a weak and crippled influence; but give it a chance, and it will be it will grind you to atoms. No man has finally and forever overcome temptation until he has left the world. But what are you to do with these temptations? Tell everybody about them? Ah, what a silly man you would be! As well might a commander in a fort send word to the enemy which gate of the castle is least barred as for you to go and tell what all your frailties are, and what your temptations are. The world will only caricature you, will only scoff at you. What, then, must a man do? When the wave strikes him with terrific dash shall he have nothing to hold on to? In this contest with "the world, the flesh, and the devil," shall a man have no help, no counsel?

A Tyrant In Your Soul,

Our text intimates something different. In those eyes that wept with the Bethany sisters I see shining hope. In that voice which spake until the grave broke and the widow of Nain had back her lost son, and the sea slept, and sorrow stupendous woke up in the arms of rapture—in that voice I hear the command and the promise, "Cast thy burden on the Lord, and He will sustain thee." Why should you carry your burdens any longer? Oh, you weary soul, Christ has been in this conflict. He says, "My grace shall be sufficient for you. You shall not be tempted above that you are able to bear." Therefore, with all your temptations, go, as these disciples did, and tell Jesus.

III. Again, I commend the behavior of the disciples to all those who are abused and to

The Slandered and Persecuted.

When Herod put John to death the disciples knew that their own heads were not safe. And do you know that every John has a Herod? There are persons in life who do not wish you very well. Your misfortunes are honeycombs to them. Through their teeth they hiss at you, misinterpret your motives, and would be glad to see you upset. No man gets through life without having a pummelling. Some slander comes after you, horned and husked and hoofed, to gore and trample you; and what are you to do? I tell you plainly that all who serve Christ must suffer persecution. It is the worst sign in the world for you to be able to say, "I haven't an enemy in the world." A woe is pronounced in the Bible against the one of whom everybody speaks well. If you are at peace with all the world, and everybody likes you and approves your work, it is because you are an idler in the Lord's vineyard, and are not doing your duty.

All those who have served Christ, however eminent—

All Have Been Maltreated

at some stage of their experience. You know it was so in the time of George Whitefield, when he stood and invited men into the kingdom of God. What did the learned Dr. Johnson say of him? He pronounced him a miserable mountebank. How was it when Robert Hall stood and spoke as scarcely any uninspired man ever did speak of the glories of heaven? and as he stood Sabbath after Sabbath preaching on these themes his face kindled with the glory. John Foster, a Christian man, said of this man, "Robert Hall is only acting, and the smile on his face is a reflection of his own vanity." John Wesley turned all England upside down with Christian reform, and yet the punsters were after him, and the meanest jokes in England were perpetrated about John Wesley. What is true of the pulpit is true of the pew; it is true of the street, it is true of the shop, and the store. All who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. And I set it down as the very worst sign in all your Christian experience if you are, any of you, at peace with all the world. The religion of Christ is war. It is a challenge to "the world, the flesh, and the devil;" and if you will buckle on the whole armor of God, you will find a great host disputing your path between this and heaven. But when you are assaulted and slandered and abused, as I suppose nearly all of you have been in your life? Go out and hunt up the slanderer? Oh, no, silly man! While you are explaining away a falsehood in one place, fifty people will just have heard of it in other places. I counsel you to another course. While you are not to omit any opportunity of setting yourselves right, I want to tell you this morning of one who had the hardest things said about Him, whose sobriety was disputed, whose mission was scouted, whose companionship was denounced, who was pursued as a babe and spit upon as a man, who was howled at after He was dead. I will have you go unto Him with your bruised soul, in some humble, child prayer, saying, "I see Thy wounds—wounds of head, wounds of feet, wounds of heart. Now, look at my wounds, and see what I have suffered, and through what battles I am going; and I entreat Thee, by those wounds of Thine, sympathize with me." And He will sympathize, and He will help. Go and tell Jesus!

What are You to Do

IV. Again, I commend the behavior of the disciples

To All the Bereaved.

How many in garb of mourning! If you could stand at this point where I am standing and look off upon this audience, how many signals of sorrow you would behold! God has His own way of taking apart a family. We must get out of the way for coming generations. We must get off the stage that others may come on, and for this reason there is a long procession reaching down all the time into the valley of shadows.

This emigration from time into eternity is so vast an enterprise that we cannot understand it. Every hour we hear the clang of the sepulchral gate. The sod must be broken. The ground must be ploughed for resurrection harvest. Eternity must be peopled. The dust must press our eyelids. "It is appointed unto all men once to die." This emigration from time into eternity keeps three fourths of the families of the earth in desolation. The air is rent with farewells, and the black-tasselled vehicles of death rumble through every street.

The body of the child that was folded so closely to the mother's heart is put away in the cold and the darkness. The laughter freezes to the girl's lip, and the rose scatters. The boy in the harvest-field of Shunam says, "My head! my head!" and they carry him home to die on the lap of his mother. Widowhood stands with struck into the pallor of the cheek. Orphanage cries in vain for father and mother. Oh, the grave is cruel! With teeth of stone it clutches for its prey. Between the closing gates of the sepulchre our hearts are mangled and crushed. Is there any earthly solace? None. We come to the obsequies, we sit with the grief-stricken, we talk pathetically to their soul; but soon the obsequies have passed, the carriages have left us at the door, the friends who stayed for a few days are gone, and the heart sits in desolation listening for the little feet that will never again patter through the hall, or looking for the entrance of those who will never come again—sighing into the darkness—ever and anon coming across some book or garment, or little shoe or picture, that arouses former association, almost killing the heart. Long days and nights of suffering that wear out the spirit, and expunge the bright lines of life, and give haggardness to the face, and draw the flesh tight down over the cheek-bone, and draw dark lines under the sunken eye, and the hand is tremulous, and the voice is husky and uncertain, and the grief is wearing, grinding, accumulating, exhausting.

Tragedies of Woe

Now, what are such to do? Are they merely to look up into a brazen and unpitying heaven? Are they to walk a blasted heath unfed of stream, unsheltered by overarching tree?

Has God Turned Us Out on the barren common to die? Oh, no! no! no! He has not. He comes with sympathy and kindness and love. He understands all our grief. He sees the height and the depth and the length and the breadth of it. He is the only one that can fully sympathize. Go and tell Jesus. Sometimes when we have trouble we go to our friends and we explain it, and they try to sympathize; but they do not understand it. They cannot understand it. But Christ sees all over it, and all through it. He not only counts the tears and records the groans, but before the tears started, before the groans began, Christ saw the inmost hiding-place of your sorrow; and He takes it, and He weighs it, and He measures it, and He pities it with an all-absorbing pity. Bone of our bone. Flesh of our flesh. Heart of our heart. Sorrow of our sorrow. As long as He remembers Lazarus's grave He will stand by you in the cemetery. As long as He remembers His own heart-break, He will stand by you in the laceration of your affections. When He forgets the footsore way, the sleepless nights, the weary body, the exhausted mind, the awful cross, the solemn grave, then He will forget you, but not until then.

Often when we were in trouble we sent for our friends; but they were far away, they could not get to us. We wrote to them, "Come right away," or telegraphed, "Take the next train." They came at last, yet were a great while in coming, or perhaps were too late. But —before you, behind you, within you. No mother ever threw her arms around her child with such warmth and ecstasy of affection as Christ has shown toward you. Close at hand—nearer than the staff upon which you lean, nearer than the cup you put to your lip, nearer than the handkerchief with which you wipe away your tears—I preach Him an ever-present, all sympathizing, compassionate Jesus. How can you stay away one moment from Him with your griefs? Go now. Go and tell Jesus.

Christ is Always Near

It is often that our friends have no power to relieve us. They would very much like to do it; but they cannot disentangle our finances, they cannot cure our sickness and raise our dead; but glory be to God that He to whom the disciples went has all power in heaven and on earth, and at our call He will balk our calamities, and, at just the right time, in the presence of an applauding earth and a resounding heaven, will raise our dead. He will do it. He is mightier than Herod. He is swifter than the storm. He is grander than the sea. He is vaster than eternity. And every sword of God's omnipotence will leap from its scabbard, and all be exhausted, rather than that God's child shall not be delivered when he cries to Him for rescue. Suppose your child was in trouble; how much would you endure to get him out? You would go through any hardship. You would say, "I don't care what it will cost. I must get him out of that trouble." Do you think God is not so good a father as you? Seeing you are in trouble, and having all power, will He not stretch out His arm and deliver you? He will. He is mighty to save. He can level the mountain and divide the sea, and can extinguish the fire and save the soul. Not dim of eye, not weak of arm, not feeble of resources, but with all eternity and the universe at His feet. Go and tell Jesus. Will you? Ye whose cheeks are wet with the night-dew of the grave; ye who cannot look up; ye whose hearts are dried with the breath of a sirocco; in the name of the religion of Jesus Christ, which lifts every burden, and wipes away every tear, and delivers every captive, and lightens every darkness, I implore you now, go and tell Jesus.

The Resources of Infinity

A little child went with her father, a sea-captain, to sea, and when the first storm came the little child was very much frightened, and in the night rushed out of the cabin and said, "Where is father? where is father?" Then they told her, "Father is on deck guiding the vessel and watching the storm." The little child immediately returned to her berth and said, "It's all right, for Father's on Deck."

Oh, ye who are tossed and driven in this world, up by the mountains and down by the valleys, and at your wit's end, I want you to know the Lord God is guiding the ship. Your Father is on deck. He will bring you through the darkness into the harbor. Trust in the Lord. Go and tell Jesus.

Let me say that if you do not, you will have no comfort here, and you will forever be an outcast and a wanderer. Your death will be a sorrow. Your eternity will be a disaster. But if you go to Him for pardon and sympathy, all is well. Everything will brighten up, and joy will come to the heart and sorrow will depart; your sins will be forgiven and your foot will touch the upward path; and the shining messengers that report above what is done here will tell it until the great arches of God resound with the glad tidings, if now, with contrition and full trustfulness of soul, you will only go and tell Jesus.

But I am oppressed, when I look over this audience, at the prospect that some may not take this counsel, and go away unblessed. I cannot help asking what will be the destiny of these people? Xerxes looked off on his army. There were two million men—perhaps ever marshalled. Xerxes rode along the lines, reviewed them, came back, stood on some high point, looked off upon the two million men, and burst into tears. At that moment, when every one supposed he would be in the greatest exultation, he broke down in grief. They asked him why he wept. "Ah!" he said, "I weep at the thought that so soon all this host will be dead." So I stand looking off upon this host of immortal men and women, and realize the fact, as perhaps no man can, unless he has been in similar position, that soon the places which know you now will know you no more, and you will be gone—whither? whither? There is a stirring idea which the poet put in very peculiar verse when he said:

The Finest Army

"'Tis not for man to trifle: life is brief,
And sin is here;
Our age is but the falling of a leaf—
A dropping tear.
Not many lives, but only one have we—
One, only one;
How sacred should that one life ever be—
That narrow span!"

"THE MADMAN" IN THE MARKET-PLACE.

THERE is a poor stone-cutter in Macomer, Sardinia, who is called "the madman." An evangelist visited him, and believes him to be a man truly converted simply through the reading of God's Word and Mr. Spurgeon's sermons, translated into Italian. His knowledge of Scripture is wonderful. He can give a good account of the doctrines of the Bible. He is very fond of reading, but the Bible is his favorite book. He talks to others of the truth he has found. One day, in the market-place, he was maintaining that the saints ought not to be worshipped, but God only. A priest, who heard him, said, "This madman utters many truths. What are the saints? Many who are called such will be in hell, and many whom we think of as in hell are with God." Another time a priest stood by him. "Yes," said he, "our religion is no longer the religion taught by Christ and His apostles."

A WINDFALL OF QUAILS.

A SHOWER of birds in Navada is reported by the Virginia City Enterprise. It states that about four o'clock one evening a flock of quails was observed approaching the city from the north, and as they came over the city they fell by hundreds about the streets, where they were easily caught with the hand. Where the quails came from no one could imagine, as they were of the large mountain variety, and perfect beauties. The fall of birds extended from about Sutton Avenue out north to the Union shaft, reaching over three-quarters of a mile of ground. Besides the birds that were killed, about a hundred were caught alive and kept in cages and pens in various parts of the town. The most probable solution of the phenomenon was that the birds had collected at some point in the Sierras for the purpose of migrating to the southward, but had either mistaken their course or had been blown out of it, and so flew on and on till they were obliged to come to the ground through exhaustion. It is quite in accordance with the spirit of our times to seek a solution of the phenomenon; it is, however, significant that when the sacred writer had occasion to chronicle the shower of quails which made provision for the Israelites in the desert (Num. 11 : 31) he did not experience the difficulty which was found in Nevada. He states simply that the quails were brought by "a wind from the Lord." It would be well if Christian men when they are delivered out of trouble would thus give the glory to their God (Deut. 8 : 16–18).

PRICELESS TREASURE TROVE.

PASTOR CREMER, of the Evangelical Continental Society, in the course of his evangelistic journeys, has met with an excellent woman, who is making it her business to sell Scriptures, and to read them from house to house. Her history is not a little singular. She had an uncle, a priest, who recommended her to read the New Testament assiduously. For a long time this excellent advice was neglected, but one day she happened to pick up a New Testament in which was a card with the name and address of a priest in the neighborhood. On taking it to the priest in question, he said that it was not his property, and told her to keep it until somebody should claim it, but added, "Don't let your children read it." This stimulated her curiosity, and she began to read it, and then discovered that it was the same book which her uncle had urged her to read. She soon became interested, and continued to read it eagerly. Soon after, her confessor, learning what she was doing, threatened her if she did not give up the practice, but it was too late. The book had won her heart. As she goes about, she reads the New Testament to the people, and explains it. She is described as utterly fearless, and has again and again resisted the priests with an amount of authority which must have been given her of God. Her face is radiant with joy, and yet her trials have been neither few nor small. She has watched over a drunken husband with exemplary care and patience, and has now much hope of seeing him reclaimed. She is thus in herself a shining light. In one house she helps the housewife a little, in another gives a tract to a child, in many she lends books, and in several gives regular instruction to women who, at present, are secret disciples.

TREASURED DOOR-STEPS.

IN a recent address on the duty of the Church to look after young men and women who quit the villages to get employment in large cities, the Rev. Thomas Champness related a remarkable incident. He said: I want to tell you a story. I find folks remember my stories even when they forget my sermons. I have not to go to books for them; I meet them in my daily walks. Some years ago there was a family of farmers, well-to-do. They came down in the world. The sons emigrated, but the girl said she would not emigrate; she would go out and seek a situation, and she became—not a governess, not a companion, but just a straightforward servant-girl. This girl felt it a nobler thing to go and work in a big town and earn wages as a servant-girl than to idle at home; and one day, when she was cleaning the steps a bricklayer fellow came up. He saw this nice girl cleaning the steps, and he said, "I must see her again." So he managed to find out what place of worship she went to, and it turned out to be the Methodist chapel, and so he said, "I'll go there." When he went there for something he hoped to get, he got something he never expected. He was converted. After a time his thoughts turned again to the girl, and he asked her if he might come and see her a bit, and so "they made it up." They got married, and he worked at his trade for some time. He kept on saving money till by and by, he said, "I shall build a house for myself." He built this house, and when it was finished he took his wife and children up to the front door, and there he said to his wife, "Do you see those steps?" And she said, "I do." "Those were the steps thee wert cleaning when I first saw thee. The master's house was pulled down, and I went and bought the steps. I said, 'When thee hast a house of thine own these steps shall be in the front.'" It is too long a story to tell, but their son went into business with his father, and they bought a field of clay which turned out to be almost like a mine of gold to them. It has made their fortune, and the son of the woman who cleaned the steps when I saw him last lived in a villa of his own, a rich man, and a great blessing to Christ's cause, and my feeling is that we must care for the girl that cleans the steps.

A NEW SOLDIER'S ACCOUTREMENTS.

THE Rev. S. R. Brown, of the McAll Mission, in Paris, relates the following: In one of our Paris stations a young woman was observed who was nicely dressed for a Parisian ouvrière, and who was most attentive to the things that were spoken. Seeking an opportunity to talk with her, I found her a devout Roman Catholic, but being disappointed, she, as a last resort had come to the meeting for advice.

She had completed a "Neuvaine" at the privileged altars of Notre Dame des Victoires, without any result. "What is a 'Neuvaine?'" I inquired, and the answer given was a small book of directions. A Neuvaine is nine days of prayers offered fasting at a special church, with a candle burned each morning at the altar.

A Testament was given her, with several tracts. She continued to attend the meetings.

One day, stepping down from the platform, I asked her, "Have you found?" "Oh, no!" was the answer. "I have been seeking three months and have not found." "They that seek Me shall find," was the word given to her.

The next Sunday after the meeting had commenced, she came forward to a front row of chairs, and I saw at once that a change had come, the sparkling eyes, the radiant face, were outward and vsible signs of an inward and spiritual grace. So, after the meeting, I said, "All is well!" and she answered in the words of Scripture, "I have found rest." "Now, then, tell me how it happened?" "Well, I went home, and I did ask, and I received, and then I just believed altogether. But won't you come and see me?"

I went, and found her in a quaint attic in what was once the hotel of the Prince de Condé, the old Huguenot chief.

We bowed our knees and gave thanks to God for what He had done for her, and then we interceded for her mother and brother, and for a person whom she is trying to bring to the meetings. For she, too, has joined the army and become a soldier. She showed me the weapons of her warfare. First, a bundle of tracts received at the Salle, and now lent to her neighbors; small arms in which she has great faith. Second, a Bible and a New Testament: the sword of the Spirit. And another weapon, called All Prayer, which she asked me to wield in her room for an unknown person. She is starting on a campaign soon to see her mother, and already she is sure of victory.

We came down the stairs of the old hotel, tarried a moment in the quadrilateral court-yard, from whence armed men had often gone forth to battle for religious liberty and to die. Times are changed, and the quiet, unpretending work done and doing by such agencies as the McAll Mission, soldiers like Mlle. Dupont going forth with tracts, with the New Testament, with prayer and faith, is destined to do for France more than the armies of Condé and others of the fifteenth century.

[Money for the support of the McAll Paris Mission should be sent to Miss Frances Lea, 1622 Locust Street, Philadelphia, Pa.]

A MISSIONARY AT A LEOPARD'S DEN.

THE Rev. A. E. Haegert, of the Bethel Santhal Mission, India, sends the following to THE CHRISTIAN HERALD: One Thursday morning an enormous leopard visited Goomro village and wounded four men. The old Zemindar sent a man on horseback to beg the Padri Sahib to bring his firearm. In consequence, I went with five men, armed with battle-axes and clubs. On my arrival I attended first the wounded; one of them was in much pain, having been bitten three or four times. After an hour we all marched off to a neighboring rock, where the leopard had his castle. On the road I was shown the place where two men had been attacked in the village street by the leopard.

To go hunting a leopard in the rainy season, when the ground is wet and slippery and vegetation abounds, is no easy matter. The rock where the leopard dwells is rather bare, and of gray sandstone. The wind has carried sand and dust into the crevices, and planted trees, which have been irrigated by passing clouds, and now give shade, and a picturesque appearance to the fearless robber's abode. On arrival, I poked my head into the den, and saw a pair of fiery eyes gleaming in the dark, and fired. The thunder reverberated in half-a-dozen caves, but the leopard died without a murmur. The bullet penetrated his head between his eyes. I hear he had killed three calves, and many goats, besides wounding four men. Having reloaded my gun, I again cautiously pushed my head and shoulders into the den, and saw some yellow spots, and fired; but the leopard was quite dead. By and by a man crept in, tied a cloth round his foot, and four men pulled him out; he measured eight feet seven inches. His legs were then tied together, a pole passed through them, and four men carried him home. We had to cross four villages, and everywhere the men, women, and children rushed out to have a peep at their dead foe. Very profound and smiling were the salaams made to me. I urged on the throng that they should put their trust in Christ, who would save them from a greater enemy. As for the country at large, they get heartily ashamed of their dead idols, that cannot even move a finger to save themselves from the white ants that devour them. When I was attending the wounded, a man suggested that if a leopard came they should throw their idol in his mouth.

WAS THE CRUCIFIXION ON THE 14th OR ON THE 15th DAY OF NISAN?

DID CHRIST EAT THE PASSOVER FOR THE LAST TIME AT THE BEGINNING OF THE 15TH OF NISAN?

By the Rev. Canon Browne, Author of "Ordo Sæculorum."

An Apparent Discrepancy in the Gospels—John's Statement Explicit—The Meaning of the High Day—A Probable Misunderstanding of the Three Gospels—The Prohibitions of Jewish Law—Trials Unlawful on High Days—Intrinsic Improbabilities—An Anticipative Celebration—A Probable Explanation—A Type Fulfilled.

[The importance of this question to students of prophecy is greater than may at first sight appear. Its answer would help to solve several problems. One of them is the actual year of our Lord's death. It is certain that our Lord was crucified on a Friday, because reference is made to the next day as being the Sabbath (Mark 15 : 42). Now if we can discover whether it was Nisan 14 or 15, and if astronomers can tell us in what year the moon's changes caused the day to fall on a Friday, then that year will be the year of the crucifixion; and we then know positively the date of the end of Daniel's sixty-nine weeks and consequently the end of this age, which, according to Daniel, is to be 1862 years afterward.—EDS.]

IT has long been a controverted question among theologians (giving rise to endless debates, dissertations and ecclesiastical councils and schisms and even conflicts) whether the day on which our Lord suffered was the 14th day of Nisan, the day of the Jewish passover, since the three first Gospels seem at variance on this point with the fourth. At least the statements differ so much that it is still a critical question whether the crucifixion is to be referred to the 14th or to the 15th. This question must needs be discussed; let us see, then, first what St. John says or implies on this matter, and afterward examine the counter-statements of the other three Gospels.

It appears from John 18 : 28, that, at an early hour (πρωΐ) on Friday morning the Jews who conducted our Lord to the prætorium had not yet eaten the passover, and intended to eat it; ἵνα φάγωσι τὸ πασχα. The expression φαγεῖν τὸ πασχα invariably denotes the supper on the paschal lamb, which

Supper was to be Held between sunset and midnight of the night following the 14th Nisan, i.e., in the first six hours of the νυχθήμερον, called 15th Nisan. It follows that the 15th Nisan was not arrived on the morning of Friday when the Jews stood with our Lord before the prætorium.

St. John says of the same day, 19 : 14, ἦν δὲ παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα: a phrase which, agreeably with its invariable usage, can only mean the day immediately preceding the celebration of the paschal supper, the day ending at sunset of 14th Nisan, the עֶרֶב־פֶּסַח or passover eve, in short, the day on which the paschal lamb was to be sacrificed. He further says that the following ἦν μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα ἐκείνου τοῦ σαββάτου. This Saturday was either the 16th or 15th Nisan. If it was the 16th, it was in no pre-eminent sense μεγάλη ἡμέρα, being only a common Sabbath in passover week; the 15th, on whatever day of the week it fell, was a higher day, being the Sabbath extraordinary, the first day of unleavened bread. The execution of criminals on that day was a greater desecration of the Sabbath than the suffering the bodies to remain on the crosses on the ordinary weekly Sabbath. But if the Saturday was the 15th, it was pre-eminently a great day, not only as being the extraordinary Sabbath, but by its concurrence with the weekly Sabbath. These statements prove unanswerably, that, according to St. John, the Friday of the crucifixion was not the 15th and was the 14th day of Nisan.

Saturday Was An High Day,

But then on the other hand

The First Three Gospels

declare that "on the first day of unleavened bread" (Matt. 26 : 17; Mark 14 : 12, Τῇ πρώτῃ τῶν ἀζύμων; Luke 22 : 7, ἡμέρα τῶν ἀζύμων), the disciples asked, Where shall we prepare for Thee to eat the pascha? were sent to a certain householder to prepare it, did accordingly prepare it (ἡτοίμασαν τὸ πάσχα, Matthew, Mark, Luke), and that our Lord at even ate a supper there with His disciples, which supper in Luke 22 : 15, is called τοῦτο τὸ πάσχα. From all which it is concluded that in the view of the three earlier evangelists the Last Supper was the ordinary pascha, and, therefore, occurred in the first six hours of the 15th Nisan, consequently, that the Crucifixion itself occurred on the 15th. If this be so, the fourth Gospel is at variance with the other three on a matter of fact of no slight importance; for it is vain to attempt to prove that in the view of John the day of the Passion was the 15th. But let us examine this

Supposed Contradictory Statement of the first three Gospels. In the first place, it is scarcely credible that this should be its true meaning, because of the intrinsic improbability which attends this view of the matter. The first day of unleavened bread, or 15th Nisan, was one of the most sacred days in the year, a day on which no servile work was to be done. Ex. 12 : 16; Lev. 23 : 7. As soon as the sun went down on the 14th all work must cease, none must go abroad out of their houses until the morning (Ex. 12 : 22, Lightfoot, Horæ Heb. in Mark 14 : 36), at least not beyond the city. But if that night was the Thursday night, not only Christ and His apostles transgressed this peremptory law by leaving house and city, but the persecuting Jews did the same. Nay, the whole Sanhedrim, by sitting in judgment on our Lord, and all those Jews who took part in His execution, violated the sanctity of a most holy Sabbath, and, moreover, transgressed

An Express Precept

of the elders, which prescribed that "on Sabbath days and festival days no trial or judgment may be held." The disciples, also, in taking down the Body from the Cross and laying it in the tomb, were guilty in the same respect; and Luke must have overlooked this antecedent breach of a positive command when he says, concerning the holy women 23 : 56, "they returned and prepared spices and ointments, and rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment." It is intrinsically improbable both that these should have been done on the 15th Nisan, and that the authors of the three narratives should have intended to represent that they were done. It is vastly more likely that we misconceive their meaning in affixing this sense to the narratives, than that writers, acquainted as these were with matters of Jewish observance, should have delivered an account which would surprise and shock every Jew who should read it. Independently, therefore, of the flat contradiction afforded by St. John's narrative to this supposed statement of the three former Gospels, the intrinsic improbability of the one interpretation obliges us to presume that there must be some other and true statement of their meaning.

Accordingly, on looking into Matthew, one is struck by that expression of our Lord in the Message to the Householder

Ὁ καιρός μου ἐγγύς ἐστιν· πρός σε ποιῶ τὸ πασχα μετὰ τῶν μαθητῶν μου. Surely that first clause stands as a reason for something unusual in respect of the pascha about to be celebrated. Might it be meant as a reason why the celebration should take place at this particular person's house? This is conceivable, as if (e.g.) it were said, My time is at hand; I will do thee this honor—or, thou shalt do Me this service, ere I suffer, that, etc. But it is at least equally conceivable that the meaning may be of this kind, My time is at hand, I may not celebrate the passover at its appointed time after to-morrow's sunset, I will therefore hold it this night at thy house. To which we may add from the same narrative (for I take them separately, as discussing the question on the ground of those who will not allow us to fetch explanations and corrections from the other two narratives of the same incidents), that the householder was probably himself a disciple, as he was to be addressed with the words ὁ διδάσκαλος λέγει, and that he may be supposed to have received in some other way, some previous intimation respecting the Lord's purpose; and, further, that there is nothing to forbid the supposition, that the time when the question was put was at the very beginning of the 14th Nisan, i. e., at sunset; for, upon any view of the case, the day called "first of unleavened bread," cannot mean the day strictly so called but only the 14th Nisan, since if the 15th had commenced there would not have been time for due preparation, nay, such preparation had been unlawful.

The question then was put at some time on the 14th, and why not at the very beginning of it? The householder, too, may have had the paschal lamb in readiness, and whatever else being requisite could not be procured at short notice. All this is conceivable enough, and, notwithstanding that it is not expressed in the narrative, is more credible than a view of the transaction which labors under improbability.

In Mark, we find the πρώτη τῶν ἀζύμων plainly marked as the 14th Nisan by the note ὅτε τὸ πάσχα ἔθυον, 14 : 12; but I do not perceive anything in the other additions which tells one way or the other. In Luke, the day called ἡ ἡμέρα τῶν ἀζύμων, is described as that ἐν ᾗ ἔδει θύεσθαι τὸ πάσχα, 22 : 7. The words of our Lord ἐπιθυμίᾳ ἐπεθύμησα τοῦτο τὸ πάσχα φαγεῖν μεθ' ὑμῶν πρὸ τοῦ με παθεῖν, like those in Matthew, ὁ καιρός μου ἐγγύς ἐστιν, may be understood as meant to imply that the time of holding the supper was anticipated.

It may be objected, indeed, that such

An Anticipation of the Passover was a thing so unprecedented, that the disciples themselves must have expressed their surprise, and have asked the reason of this new thing; while yet there is nothing in the three first gospels to show that they were at all surprised, or that there was anything extraordinary in the circumstances of the case. No doubt they were surprised, unless the Lord had prepared them for it beforehand. But was it necessary that all this should be recorded, when in the narrative itself the anticipation is explained by the very fact that when the appointed hour arrived, the Lord lay in the tomb? It should also be considered, that the first Gospel in particular was written at a time when it must have been well known to every one who should read it, that the Lord suffered on the very day on which the paschal lamb was to be slain. No Christian Jew could need to be expressly informed that such was the fact, or, consequently, that the paschal supper at which Christ instituted the Eucharist was anticipated by the space of four-and-twenty hours. The knowledge of this fact the reader or hearer brought with him to the recital of the evangelist; what need then was there to record the expression (if such occurred) of the disciple's surprise, the mention of which could lead to nothing which the reader did not already know—as, for instance, Now this was done

Because the Lord Foreknew

that ere the appointed hour were come, He would have given up the ghost? Objections, in short, of this kind rest upon a mistaken view of the Gospels, as if they were intended to afford complete information to persons possessed of no previous knowledge of the facts; whereas, in truth they were designed for persons who would, so to say, interlineate the written story with that information which they had obtained from the common notoriety of the facts, and from the Church's catechetical and liturgical teaching. For it may be confidently affirmed that until the destruction of the temple and cessation of the sacrifices, as often as the Jews' passover-day came round, the very liturgy would teach all Jewish Christians, at least, that this was the day on which τὸ πάσχα ἡμῶν ἐτύθη ὁ Χριστός (1 Cor. 5 : 7); as also on the second day of unleavened bread, that on it the Lord's resurrection fulfilled the type of the first-fruits, Χριστὸς ἐγήγερται ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀπαρχὴ τῶν κεκοιμημένων (1 Cor. 15 : 10).

[Dr. Eadie's Cyclopædia and the Eastern Churches and the Church of Rome also hold the above view. But some expositors adduce strong arguments in support of the view that Christ eat the passover on the evening of Nisan 14, which was the beginning of Nisan 15 EDITORS.]

Price, Five Cents, Post Free—160th Thousand Enlarged Edition—64 Pages—
COMING WARS AND GREAT EVENTS,
and Ten Signs of the Approaching Final Crisis, by Rev. M. Baxter—Dissolution of the Turkish Empire into the Five Ancient Kingdoms of Greece, Egypt, Syria, Thracian Turkey and Bulgaria, which with Britain (separated from Ireland), France, Spain, Italy and Austria, will be formed into an Allied Confederacy of Ten Kingdoms—Subsequent Rise of Napoleon as King of Syria—His Seven Years' Covenant with the Jews—Resurrection and Translation of Saints—3½ Years' Great Tribulation and world-wide Persecution of Christians—Descent of Christ at Armageddon—Ensuing Millennium of 1000 Years after the Year 1900. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

An Executive Order of Much Significance was issued by the President on May 4th. It forbade the importation into the Territory of Alaska of breech-loading rifles and intoxicating liquors. The prohibition is absolute except under a permit from a customs officer at the port of destination, who may issue a permit in the case of the rifles, when he is satisfied that they are for the use of temporary visitors and white settlers who are not traders. In the case of liquors he may issue a permit only when he is satisfied that they are to be used for sacramental, medical, or scientific purposes. It is a significant fact that when the Government sets itself to consider how best to promote the peace, security, and prosperity of the Territory, it concludes that the two articles which it will be wise to keep out of it are firearms and liquor. The Government is quite right. In their own interest, as well as in that of their neighbors, it will be well that the Indians should not have those two articles within easy reach. White men being better civilized and having more self-control continue to have access to them; but as we read the reports of crime in the newspapers of every State in the Union, and notice how frequently the combination of firearms and liquor appears, the thought suggests itself that Alaska is not the only place nor the Indians the only race that would be all the better for such an executive order.

The Fishery Difficulty with Canada Appears to have given the diplomatists plenty of work. The correspondence laid before the Dominion Parliament on May 3 filled three hundred pages and comprised one hundred and ninety-five despatches. The Liberal members appeared to be under the impression that Canada was suffering in the discussion and that some of her rights had been abandoned. Though no agreement has been reached, a spirit of conciliation and friendliness pervades the despatches, which encourages the hope that a settlement is probable. Mr. Bayard's proposals are that the line of limitation in bays shall not be more than ten miles from the mouth, and not be reckoned as a straight line from headland to headland three miles from each; that each Government have a war vessel and a cruiser to see that the treaty is observed and that the in-shore fisheries are not encroached upon; and that vessels engaged in the deep-sea fisheries be allowed to enter Canadian ports on the same terms as other vessels not engaged in fishing. These and other details of the Secretary of State's proposal indicate that his endeavor is to make the treaty of 1818 effective. The Governor General of Canada rejects these proposals, and an answer was sent proposing a modification of the Treaty of Washington.

Queen Kapiolani, the Wife of King Kalakaua, of the Sandwich Islands, visited the President on May 4th. Her Majesty is on the way to England to be present at the jubilee celebrations, and is making a short tour of this country before crossing the Atlantic. The President gave Her Majesty a very kind welcome to our country, and she in reply expressed the pleasure she had had in visiting the different cities, and her gratitude for the flowers he and his wife had sent her, and for the welcome which has been given her. The President and Mrs. Cleveland returned the Queen's call a few hours later. The Queen does not speak English, but her husband's sister, Princess Lydia Kamekaeha Lilinokalani, who accompanies her, acted as interpreter. The princess is heiress to the throne of the Sandwich Islands. She is married to Colonel John O. Dominis, an Englishman, fifty-seven years of age, who, in the event of his wife succeeding to the throne, will not be King, but Prince Consort. The Queen is very intelligent, and the interest she takes in her subjects, especially in the poor and afflicted, has made her very popular. Not long ago she set a good example to other royal personages by founding and endowing out of her private fortune a large home for the children of the sick and indigent.

The Treasury Report Issued Last Week shows an increase both in income and expenditure over last year. Ten months of the fiscal year are now complete, and the total showing so far is an increase of income of about $27,000,000, of which $20,000,000 comes from customs, and an increase in expenditure of $24,000,000, half of which is in pensions. The public debt was reduced during the month of April by $13,053,098.

A Shocking Mining Disaster Occurred at Nanaimo, on the eastern shore of Vancouver Island, on the night of May 3, in a pit belonging to the Vancouver Coal Company, the stock of which is held in England. About six o'clock a terrific explosion was heard, and soon afterward smoke and flame issued from the shaft. A volunteer rescuing party went down, and found dead bodies near the foot of the shaft and the deadly gas pervading all parts of the mine. One of the rescuing party inhaled the gas, and died from its effects. Seven dead bodies and six injured men were brought up, but eighty-eight white men and over fifty Chinamen were imprisoned and could not be reached. Efforts to extinguish the fire and force air into the pit were continued without intermission until Friday, when a second descent was made. Only dead bodies were found, and the rescuers believe that all the imprisoned men must be dead. The scene of desolation in the village is melancholy in the extreme. Every family mourns the loss of some member. One woman has lost husband, father, and brother by the explosion. It has made thirty women widows and one hundred and forty children fatherless.

Severe Earthquake Shocks Disturbed Sections of California, Texas, Arizona, and Mexico on May 3d. Slight shocks are frequent on the Pacific coast, but this was heavier than any experienced there in fifteen years. A despatch from Tucson, Ariz., says: Considerable damage was done to buildings, goods were thrown from shelves of stores, and many houses were more or less cracked. The shock was accompanied by a rumbling sound. Many clocks were stopped, and the entire population of the city took to the streets terror-stricken. The court-house cupola swayed like the mast of a ship in a turbulent sea, and the building itself seemed as though it were toppling over. When the shock struck Santa Cataline Mountain great slices of the mountain were torn from its side and thrown to its base. Vast clouds of dust rose above its crest, 7000 feet above sea level, at three different points from three to four miles apart. It was believed for some time that a volcano had burst out on the crest of the mountain. One towering peak, known as the "Old Castle," a prominent landmark from Tucson, has entirely disappeared. The extent of the damage done cannot be told for several days. The public school building rocked to and fro like a cradle, and some of the plastering fell, creating the utmost consternation among the scholars. The school was at once dismissed, for fear of a repetition of the shock. According to a gentleman who timed it, the shock lasted just twenty seconds. At Benson several large buildings were cracked from roof to basement, and will have to be torn down. At Tombstone a lake covering an acre of ground completely disappeared in a few minutes. At Albuquerque, N. M., the adobe dwellings were levelled, and many families are destitute and homeless. Lieutenant-Colonel Forsyth, commanding Fort Huachuaca, reported that a severe earthquake shock passed through the Huachuaca Range on Tuesday afternoon, followed by two lighter shocks at intervals of forty minutes. A heavy pall of smoke hung over the San José Mountains and a heavy column of smoke began to ascend from the highest peak of the Whetstone Range, the top of the cone becoming aflame. As there is no timber in this range, and the hills in the vicinity are covered with lava, it is thought the mountain was once and has again become an active volcano. Students of prophecy will not fail to observe that the opinion expressed more than twenty years ago by the Rev. M. Baxter, that this period would be marked by the increased frequency of earthquakes, is being proved a correct interpretation of prophecy.

The Nihilists Convicted of Conspiring to Assassinate the Czar have, with two exceptions, had their sentences commuted to imprisonment at hard labor for life instead of execution. This does not appear to have been due to their contrition, for Polianovsky, one of the condemned, said he and his accomplices acted from firm conviction that what they set out to do it was their duty to perform. Another of the prisoners, a young student who had just finished his studies with brilliant success, having taken the gold medal of the university, was so ardent in the cause of Nihilism that he sold his gold graduation medal to obtain funds to enable an accomplice to leave the Empire. All the prisoners pleaded guilty, and every one refused, under threat or promise, to betray any accomplice. The evidence adduced at the trial of these men indicated the existence of four widely ramifying Nihilist organizations, having head centres at St. Petersburg, Kief, Vilna, and in Siberia. A Nihilist sheet declares that the order will persevere in trying to kill the Czar unless he grants a constitution.

The Production of Wagner's Opera Lohengrin led to a popular disturbance approximating a riot in Paris on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. The performance in the theatre was not interrupted, the audience being lovers of music rather than patriots of the howling variety; but outside the theatre there was wild excitement. Hundreds of students assembled, blowing tin whistles and shouting "Down with German music," "Down with the Germans," "Down with Bismarck," etc. Another mob surrounded the Russian embassy hurrahing for Russia and the Franco-Russian alliance. The same mob was proceeding to the German embassy, with the intention of expressing its sentiments by unequivocal words and acts, but it was intercepted by the police and, after a short contest, dispersed. The French Government had previously been warned that any such demonstration would be regarded by Bismarck as an insult to Germany. The opera, though financially successful, has now been withdrawn in deference to the wish of the French Premier, who has promised to recoup the manager for his loss. It is clear that the French Government is anxious to avoid giving offence to Germany, but a prominent French journal announces that "France has concluded a defensive alliance with certain other powers, and that henceforth she will not be alone in the event of aggression against her. The statement is interpreted as meaning that the Czar has promised to help France if the latter should be attacked, and that Denmark, Sweden, and Norway have favorably received overtures to join in the same alliance."

The Rev. M. Baxter Delivered Three Discourses on "Coming Great Events" in the Horticultural Hall, Boston, Mass. He had large audiences. He expects to preach there again next Sunday.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Two hundred persons are believed to have been converted at one station recently. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y. Received with thanks 55 cents from F. De Forest, St. Louis, Mo.

A Methodist Clergyman has Left a Practical memorial behind him in a church in New York. The Rev. A. C. Morehouse, who has been thirty-two years in the Methodist ministry, has presented the Seventh Street Church, on the occasion of his removal under the arrangements of the Conference, with a black walnut pulpit designed and made by himself.

A Legal Decision of Interest to Young Men's Christian Associations has been rendered by the Supreme Court of New York State. The officers of associations in other States will do well to note it, and ascertain whether their laws will not bear the same construction. The decision, which was written by Judge Lawrence, establishes the fact that the Young Men's Christian Association is a religious organization within the meaning of the law, and is therefore entitled to the privilege accorded the religious incorporations in this city of exemption from taxation. When a tax of $1200 was imposed on the Young Men's Institute on the Bowery, a branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, having its headquarters at the corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, its payment was resisted. The court has declared that this branch establishment is a religious society, and therefore exempt from taxation.

A Solid Gold Invitation Card is on Exhibition in the National Museum at Washington, D. C. It is among the relics of General Grant, which were presented to that institution during the General's illness. The unique invitation card was made in San Francisco and sent to General Grant to invite him to a reception on his arrival in that city, in 1879, from his tour around the world. It is engraved on solid gold, and was enclosed in a silver envelope with the address engraved upon it. In the right-hand corner is a two-cent stamp, and in the left the usual "If not delivered in 10 days return to," etc. Apart from its intrinsic value its reception must have pleased the General by the evidence it gave of the desire to show him the highest honor. The seeking soul yearning to receive the Saviour to abide and reign in his being has the same desire, but it is a still more precious offering that is acceptable to Him (John 14 : 23).

A Child's Conception of Heaven may be Inferred from a remark made to his mother by a little boy in St. Paul, Minn. He was recently taken to the place where his grandfather had been buried a few weeks previous—a lonely spot on the edge of a gloomy wood down in Le Sueur County. "Is this heaven, mamma?" whispered the little fellow, fearfully. "No, dear; this is a graveyard." "Well," returned the little fellow, thoughtfully, "I'm glad it isn't. You told me grandpa had gone to heaven, and I thought that this was the place." The mistake was very natural, and his disappointment can be understood. It may be hoped that the high conception he evidently has of the glory of the place will remain with him, and that although no one can tell him where heaven is, he may learn that it is possible to begin the heavenly life here, of which the life beyond the grave will be only the development (Rom. 10 : 6-9).

A Lady's Appeal for Mercy for her Imprisoned lover was made at Nashville, Tenn., on May 6th. Eighteen years ago a citizen of Maury County was sent to State prison for life on the charge of having murdered a German peddler. He stoutly protested his innocence, but was convicted, and a new trial ordered by the Supreme Court also ended in his conviction. He was assured that if he would plead guilty he might get off with fifteen years, but as he would not he was sentenced to imprisonment for life. During the eighteen years the man has been in prison he has won the good opinion of every officer of the prison, but all his friends outside, except one, have died or forgotten him. On Friday last that one—the young lady to whom, before his conviction, he was engaged to be married—entered Governor Taylor's office and begged for his release. She made an eloquent appeal, concluding by saying, "I am the only friend he has in the world. I believe in him, and have loved him through all these long, weary years, and I want you to pardon him. I do not ask you to think him an innocent man, but for the sake of two lives that may yet be happy I implore you to set him free." It is stated that the Governor, though not satisfied of the man's innocence, was so impressed with the lady's constancy that he decided to release him for her sake. It is in that way that sinners may have mercy from God. The merits of their Advocate are alone effectual, only in their case their guilt, which is indisputable, must be confessed (1 John 1 : 9).

Sound Advice to a Future Senator was Given by his college president. Among some recently published reminiscences of the late Senator Anthony is one related by a friend, who said: "I recollect his telling me that, at an interview with the president of his college, when a young man, he confessed a doubt or want of thorough conviction of the personal existence of the devil. Dr. Wayland entered into no argument and brought no proofs from the Bible nor the newspapers, but merely said, 'Believe in him or not, my son, but be sure you keep out of his way.' Advice which, perhaps, the good doctor would have reiterated with emphasis if he had foreseen that his pupil was, as a public man, to pass so many years among Washington politicians." It would be well for many other young men if they would follow the same advice. Safety is secured rather by the performance of duty than by speculation and theorizing. The Saviour inculcated this principle (Luke 13 : 23, 24).

A Buried Chest of Gold was Found Recently in Milwaukee, Wis. An eccentric citizen who died six months ago left no will, but told his wife on his death-bed that she would find plenty of money to support her and their children. No money, however, was found anywhere about the place, nor any record of a bank deposit, though careful search was made. A few days ago some repairs having to be made in the cellar of the house which the dead man had occupied, the workmen came upon a chest buried under the cellar floor. The widow was called and the box opened. It was found to contain over twenty thousand dollars in gold coin. The delight of the widow, who had begun to believe that her husband had deceived her, may be imagined. There are many who have similarly been led to distrust God's assurances, who have come to find that inexhaustible riches of grace are laid up for all who diligently seek them (Eph. 1 : 18).

The Absence of Wax from a Legal Document has raised a curious dispute in a New Jersey court. In the course of a trial on April 27th in the Court of Chancery before the Master, one of the parties produced in evidence a transcript of the proceedings of a court in Missouri. The opposing lawyer objected to its being received as evidence because it was not properly authenticated. An appeal was taken to the Vice-Chancellor, and it then appeared that the objection was based on the fact that there was no wax used on the transcript, whereas it was provided that all such documents must bear the seal of the court. The Vice-Chancellor, to the surprise of the lawyers, pronounced the document admissible, because a court might print its seal, and there was no law to compel any State to use wax on its documents. He said that it seemed to be against reason and to violate the principles of justice and equity to reject the document on that ground. Congress was much more liberal than those who have been called upon to interpret its acts. Congress said that the seal of the court should be annexed, but Congress was not so worshipful of the seal as to assign to it the sole arbiter of the rights of men. Under the act of Congress everything in the shape of a seal may be dispensed with and the proceedings entitled to credit when the clerk certifies that he has affixed the seal of the court, even though the wax is absent. Questions like this have often disturbed the peace of the Church, and in that case, too, it is those who interpret the laws who are persistent in requiring the observance of minute technicalities. Many successful preachers would have been silenced for this cause if the dignitaries of the Church could have had their way (Mark 9 : 38-40).

A Wife's Trusteeship was Discovered by her husband shortly after her decease in New York about two weeks ago. The lady died somewhat suddenly, and her husband had no opportunity of conversing with her after she became aware that her death was imminent. After the funeral, in examining the contents of her safe at the Safe Deposit Company, he found a United States bond for five thousand dollars indorsed with her name as "trustee." As he had never heard of his wife being trustee for any one he consulted her mother, and then learned for the first time that he was the person for whom his wife had constituted herself trustee. It appears that she had a fixed idea that some day misfortune would come upon her husband, whose income was precarious; she therefore saved from the money with which he lavishly supplied her sufficient to purchase the bond, intending to surprise him by giving it to him when his fortunes were at their lowest ebb. That day never came, and until he discovered the bond the husband did not know of this "provision for a rainy day." Anxious Christians will find when they enter into life that their forebodings were needless. They would not have dreaded poverty had they known of the inexhaustible provision from which God would have supplied all their wants (Phil. 4 : 19).

BRIEF NOTES.

MRS. KENDALL, a young widow who has studied at Vassar, is preparing to go as a missionary to Japan at her own expense.

The gift of a free circulating library to the city of New York is promised by Mr. George W. Vanderbilt. He expects to spend fifty thousand dollars.

The Rev. Justin D. Fulton left Brooklyn for California, to commence his Anti-Popery Crusade, last Thursday. The society which he has founded is appropriately designated "The Pauline Propaganda."

Mr. Moody's summer school for college students will be held this year at Northfield. Three hundred and fifty can be accommodated in the Seminary, about fifty in the town, and any others who may attend will occupy tents on the Seminary grounds. Fully five hundred are expected.

Dr. Summers, the well-known medical missionary, reports his safe arrival at Lueba, on the Congo. A letter from him has just been received by Dr. Dowkontt, the Director of the Medical Missionary Institute. The many friends of Dr. Summers in this country will be glad to learn that he is well.

Many colored Sunday-schools in the South have no lists of the International Lessons. Mr. George Farrar, a colporteur who has recently visited among them, asks Sunday-schools in the North to forward to him any they can spare, and he will distribute them. His address is South Lincoln, Mass.

Dr. George F. Pentecost held eighty-eight services in Cleveland, Ohio, during his mission there. The results, as described by Rev. George R. Leavitt, D.D., are unprecedented in the city. The churches are receiving large accessions, and the members have been wonderfully quickened. It will be remembered that some years ago Mr. Finney attempted to hold services there and retired through lack of support.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Cornell University numbers over three hundred members, and the Association is already so large that no room obtainable or, in fact, existing in the University buildings, is large enough to hold more than two thirds of its members, much less to accommodate the Association and its friends among the students. The members have raised $9000 toward a new building.

As Clerk or Compositor.—A Young Lady desires employment in either or both capacities in New York or Brooklyn. Is recommended by the manager of this journal. Address G. M., CHRISTIAN HERALD OFFICE, 63 Bible House, New York.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. FIVE PRIZES will be given on June 30th to the canvassers who have sold the largest number of copies each week between May 1st and that date. The two at the head of the list will receive ten dollars each and the next three five dollars each.

THE RISEN LORD WITH THE ELEVEN.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"And as they thus spake, Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. But they were terrified and affrighted, etc."—LUKE 24 : 36–44.

The Interviews of the First Day After the Resurrection—The Chief Confirmation—The Lessons of the Appearance—I. The Certainty of Christ's Resurrection—The Evidence of Hearing—Of Sight—Of Touch—The Identity of the Body Preserved—II. The Character of the Risen Lord—Anxious for Peace—Encouraging Faith—Wonderfully Patient—Tender of Scripture—III. Light on Our Own Resurrection—The Body to be Raised—A Nature Full of Peace—Friends Recognized—The Past Remembered—The Spirit of Service.

THIS, beloved friends, is one of the most memorable of our Lord's many visits to His disciples after He had risen from the dead. Each one of these appearances had its own peculiarity. I cannot at this time give you even an outline of the special colorings which distinguished each of the many manifestations of our risen Lord. The instance now before us may be considered to be the fullest and most deliberate of all the manifestations, abounding beyond every other in "infallible proofs." Remember, that it occurred on the same day in which our Lord had risen from the dead, and it was the close of a long day of gracious appearings. It was the summing-up of all of which were proofs of the Lord's resurrection. There was the empty tomb and the grave-clothes left therein ; in itself most impressive evidence. Moreover, the holy women had been there, and had seen a vision of angels, who said that Jesus was alive. Magdalene had enjoyed a special interview. Peter and John had been into the empty tomb and had seen for themselves. The report was current that "the Lord was risen indeed, and had appeared unto Simon." It was a special thing that He should appear unto Simon ; for the disciples painfully knew how Simon had denied his master, and His appearance unto Simon seemed to have struck them as peculiarly characteristic ; it was so like the manner of our Lord.

A Series of Interviews,

They met together in their bewilderment ; the eleven of them gathered, as I suppose, to for Mark tells us that the Lord appeared unto them "as they sat at meat." It must have been very late in the day, but they were loath to part, and so kept together till midnight. While they were sitting at meat two brethren came in who, even after the sun had set, had hastened back from Emmaus. These new-comers related how one who seemed a stranger had joined Himself to them as they were walking from Jerusalem, had talked with them in such a way that their hearts had been made to burn, and had made Himself known unto them in the breaking of bread at the journey's end. They declared that it was the Lord who had thus appeared unto them, and, though they had intended to spend the night at Emmaus, they had hurried back to tell the marvellous news to the eleven. Hence the witness accumulated with great rapidity ; it became more and more clear that Jesus had really risen from the dead. But as yet the doubters were not convinced, for Mark says : "After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country. And they went and told it unto the residue ; neither believed they them." At that moment the chief confirmation of all presented itself ; "for Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them."

A Social Meal,

Brethren, though you and I were not at that interview, yet we may derive much profit from it while we look at it in detail, anxiously desiring that we may in spirit see, and look upon, and handle the Word of Life manifested in the flesh. Oh to learn all that Jesus would teach us, as we now in spirit take our places at that midnight meeting of the chosen ones !

I. First, then, let us see here of our Lord's resurrection. When He appeared in the room, the first token that it was Jesus was His speech ; they were to have the evidence of hearing ; He used the same speech. What our Lord said was just like Him ; it was all of a piece with His former discourse. Among the last sounds which lingered in their ears was that word "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you : not as the world giveth, give I unto you ;" and now it must surely be the same person who introduces Himself with the cheering salutation, "Peace be unto you." Do you not think that they were almost persuaded to believe that it was Jesus when He proceeded to chide them in a manner more tender than any other chiding could have been ? How gentle the accents when He said, "Why are ye troubled ? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts ?" Our Lord's chidings were comforts in disguise. His upbraidings were consolations in an unusual shape. Did not His upbraiding on this occasion bring to their minds His question upon the sea of Galilee when He said to them, "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith ?"

The Certainty

I want you to notice that this evidence was all the better, because they themselves evidently remained the same men as they had been. "They were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit ;" and thus they did exactly what they had done long before when He came to them walking on the waters. The same men, then, are looking at the same person, and they are in their ordinary condition ; this argues strongly for the

Correctness of Their Identification

of their well-beloved Lord. They are not carried away by enthusiasm, nor wafted aloft by fanaticism ; they are not even as yet upborne by the Holy Spirit into an unusual state of mind, but they are as slow of heart and as fearful as ever they were. If they are convinced that Jesus has risen from the dead, depend upon it, it must be so. These apostles were in special manner to be witnesses of the resurrection, and it makes assurance doubly sure to us when we see them arrive at their conclusion with deliberate steps.

Thus far in the narrative they had received the evidence of their ears, and that is by no means weak evidence ; but now they are to have the evidence of sight ; for the Saviour says to them, "Behold My hands and My feet, that it is I Myself ;" "and when He had thus spoken, He shewed them His hands and His feet." John says also "His side," which he specially noted because he had seen the piercing of that side, and the outflow of blood and water. They were to see and identify that blessed body which had suffered death.

The Nail-Prints Were Visible,

both in His hands which were open before them, and also in His feet which their condescending Lord deigned to expose to their deliberate gaze. It was the same body, and they identified it, although a great change had doubtless come over it since it was taken down from the tree.

Furthermore, that they might be quite sure, the Lord invited them to receive the evidence of touch or feeling. He called them to a form of examination, from which, I doubt not, many of them shrank ; He said, "Handle Me. Handle Me, and see ; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see Me have." The Saviour had a reason, no doubt, other than some have imagined, for the use of the terms, "a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see Me have." The Saviour had not assumed a phantom body ; there was bone in it as well as flesh ; it was to the full as substantial as ever. Jesus cried, "Handle Me, and see."

Thus our Lord was establishing to the apostles, not only his identity, but also His Substantial Corporeal Existence:

He would make them see that He was a man of flesh and bones, and not a ghost, airy and unsubstantial. This should correct a certain form of teaching upon the resurrection which is all too common. I was present some years ago at the funeral of a man of God for whom I had much respect. In the chapel a certain excellent Doctor of Divinity gave us an address before the interment, in which he informed us as to the condition of his departed friend. He said that he was not in the coffin ; indeed, there was nothing of him there. This I was sorry to hear, for if so I was ignorantly mourning over a body which had no relation to my friend. The preacher went on to describe the way in which the man of God had ascended to heaven at the moment of death, his spirit fashioning for itself a body as it passed through the air. I believed in my friend's being in heaven, but not in his being there in a body. I knew that my friend's body was in the coffin, and I believed that it would be laid in the tomb, and I expected that it would rise again from the grave at the coming of the Lord. I did not believe that my friend would weave for himself a filmy frame, making a second body, nor do I believe it now, though I heard it so affirmed. I believe in the resurrection of the dead. I look to see which was buried raised again. It is true that as the seed develops into the flower, so the buried body is merely the germ out of which will come the spiritual body ; yet still it will not be a second body, but the same body, as to identity. I shall enter into no dispute about the atoms of the body, nor deny that the particles of our flesh, in the process of their decay, may be taken up by plants and absorbed into the bodies of animals, and all that ; I do not care one jot about identity of atoms ; there may not be a solitary ounce of the same matter, but yet identity can be preserved ; and it must be preserved if I read my Bible aright.

The Very Body

Still further to confirm the faith of the disciples, and to show them that their Lord had a real body, and not the mere form of one, He gave them evidence which Appealed to Their Common Sense.

He said, "Have ye any meat ? And they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb. And He took it, and did eat before them." This was an exceedingly convincing proof of His unquestionable resurrection. In very deed and fact, and not in vision and phantom, the man who had died upon the cross stood among them.

Note well that this is our grand hope concerning those that are asleep. You have buried them forever if Christ was not raised from the dead. They have passed out of your sight, and they shall never again have fellowship with you, unless Jesus rose again from the dead ; for the apostle makes the resurrection of all who are in Christ to hinge upon the resurrection of Christ. I do not feel it necessary, when I talk with the bereaved, to comfort them at all concerning those that are asleep in Christ, as to their souls : we know that they are forever with the Lord, and are supremely blessed, and, therefore, we need no further comfort. The only matter upon which we need consolation is that poor body, which once we loved so well, but which now we must leave in the cold clay. The resurrection comes in as an undoing of all that death has done.

II. Secondly, will you follow me while I very briefly set forth our Lord's

Character when Risen

from the dead ? What is He now that He hath quitted death, and all that belongs to it ? What is He now that He shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more ? He is much the same as He used to be ; indeed, He is altogether what He was, for He is "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever." Notice, first, that in this appearance of Christ we are taught that He is still anxious to create peace in the hearts of His people. No sooner did He make Himself visible than He said, "Peace be unto you." Note again, that He has not lost His habit of chiding unbelief and encouraging faith ; for as soon as He has risen, and speaks with His disciples, He asks them, "Why are ye troubled ? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts ?" He loves you to believe in Him, and be at rest. Find if you can, beloved, one occasion in which Jesus inculcated doubt, or bade men dwell in uncertainty. Oh, beloved, you that are troubled and vexed with thoughts, and therefore get no comfort out of your religion because of your mistrust, your Lord would have you come very near to Him, and put His Gospel to any test.

The next thing is that the risen Lord was even as He had always been. He bore with their folly and infirmity; for, "while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered," He did not chide them. He discerned between one unbelief and another, and He judged that the unbelief which grew out of wonder was not so blamable as that former unbelief which denied credible evidence. Instead of rebuke He gives confirmation. He says, "Have ye here any meat?" and He takes a piece of broiled fish, and of a honeycomb, and eats it. Eating was His own sweet way of showing them that if He could He would solve all their questions. He would do anything in His great patience that they might be cured of their mistrust. Just so to-day, beloved, Jesus doth not chide you, but He invites you to believe Him.

Still Wonderfully Patient,

Let me call your attention to the fact that when Jesus had risen from the dead He was just as tender of Scripture as He was before His decease. I have dwelt for two Sunday mornings upon the wonderful way in which our Lord always magnified the Scriptures; and here, as if to crown all, He told them that "all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms concerning Himself; and He opened their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures." The learned at this hour scoff at the Book, and accuse of Bibliolatry those of us who reverence the divine Word; but in this they derive no assistance from the teaching or example of Jesus.

Once, again, our Saviour, after He had risen from the dead, showed that He was anxious for the salvation of men; for it was at this interview that He breathed upon the apostles, and bade them receive the Holy Ghost, to fit them to go forth and preach the Gospel to every creature. The missionary spirit is the spirit of Christ—not only the spirit of Him that died to save, but the spirit of Him who has finished His work, and has gone into His rest. Let us cultivate that spirit, if we would be like the Jesus who has risen from the dead.

III. I can stay no longer, because I would draw your attention to the light which is thrown by this incident upon the nature of Our Own Resurrection.

First, I gather from this text that our nature, our whole humanity, will be perfected at the day of the appearing of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, when the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we that may then be alive shall be changed. Jesus has redeemed not only our souls, but our bodies. "Know ye not that your bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost?" When the Lord shall deliver His captive people out of the land of the enemy, He will not leave a bone of one of them in the adversary's power. The dominion of death shall be utterly broken. Our entire nature shall be redeemed unto the living God in the day of the resurrection. After death, until that day, we shall be disembodied spirits; in the resurrection, however, the body shall be quickened also, and the resurrection shall be to the body what regeneration has been to the soul.

I gather next that in the resurrection our nature will be full of peace. Jesus Christ would not have said, "Peace be unto you," if there had not been a deep peace within Himself. He was calm and undisturbed. There was much peace about His whole life; but after the resurrection His peace becomes very conspicuous. There is no striving with scribes and Pharisees, there is no battling with anybody after our Lord is risen. An infinite serenity shall keep our body, soul, and spirit throughout eternity.

When we rise again our nature will find its home amid the communion of saints. When the Lord Jesus Christ had risen again was the room where His disciples were gathered. His first evening was spent among the objects of His love. Even so, wherever we are we shall seek and find communion with the saints. I joyfully expect to meet many of you in heaven, and to know you, and commune with you. I should not like to float about in the future state without a personality in the midst of a company of undefined and unknown beings. That would be no heaven to me. No, brethren, we shall soon and we shall rejoice in them, and in our Lord. There could be no communion among unknown entities. You cannot have fellowship with people whom you do not recognize; and, therefore, it seems to me most clear that we shall in the future state have fellowship through recognition, and our heavenly bodies shall help the recognition and share in the fellowship.

His First Resort

Perceive Who Our Comrades Are,

Furthermore, I see that in that day our bodies will admirably serve our spirits. A thousand infirmities in this earthly life compass us about; but our risen body shall be helpful to our regenerated nature. It is only a natural body now, fit for our soul; but hereafter it shall be a spiritual body, adapted to all the desires and wishes of the heaven-born spirit; and no longer shall we have to cry out, "The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." We shall find in the risen body a power such as the spirit shall wish to employ for the noblest purposes. Will not this be well?

In that day, beloved, when we shall rise again from the dead,

We Shall Remember the Past.

Do you not notice how the risen Saviour says, "These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you." He had not forgotten His former state. It is rather a small subject, and probably we shall far more delight to dwell on the labors of our Redeemer's hands and feet; but still we shall remember all the way whereby the Lord our God led us, and we shall talk to one another concerning it. In heaven we shall remember our happy Sabbaths here below, when our hearts burned within us while Jesus Himself drew near. Since Jesus speaks after He has risen of the things that He said while He was with His disciples, we perceive that the river of death is not like the fabled Lethe, which caused all who drank thereof to forget their past.

Observe that our Lord, after He had risen from the dead, was still full of the spirit of service, and, therefore, He called others out to go and preach the Gospel, and He gave them the Spirit of God to help them. When you and I are risen from the dead, we shall rise full of the spirit of service.

What Engagements We May Have

throughout eternity we are not told, because we have enough to do to fulfil our engagements now; but assuredly we shall be honored with errands of mercy and tasks of love fitted for our heavenly being; and I doubt not it shall be one of our greatest delights while seeing the Lord's face to serve Him with all our perfected powers. He will use us in the grand economy of future manifestations of His divine glory. Possibly we may be to other dispensations what the angels have been to this. Be that as it may, we shall find a part of our bliss and joy in constantly serving Him who has raised us from the dead.

If any of my hearers have no share in our Lord's resurrection, I am truly sorry for them. Oh, my friend, what you are losing! If you have no share in the living Lord, may God have mercy upon you! If you have no share in Christ's rising from the dead, then you will not be raised up in the likeness of His glorified body. If you do not attain to that resurrection from among the dead, then you must abide in death, with no prospect but that of a certain fearful looking for of judgment, and of fiery indignation. Oh, look to Jesus, the Saviour! Only as you look to Him can there be a happy future for you. God help you to do so at once, for His dear name's sake! Amen.

[The prayers of the readers of this Journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its Editors, and those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of many sinners and the quickening of God's people. Dr. Talmage and Mr. Spurgeon especially request prayer every Sunday morning on behalf of their labors.]

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

AN OCEAN GRAVE-YARD.*

IT is little more than a mere dot of dry land in an immensity of ocean space, the restlessness of whose hissing surges is so incessant that here might Jeremiah have stood when he said, "there is sorrow on the sea; it cannot be quiet." (Jer. 49 : 23.) Sorrow there is, too, right often, and sorrow there has been ever since Sable Island first figured in human history. No other island on this globe can show so appalling a record of shipwreck and disaster.

Since the founding of the Humane Establishment, in 1802, a wreck register has been carefully kept, and on its pages may be read to-day the names of more than one hundred and fifty vessels that have come to their undoing on these fatal sands. Once entangled amid the shallows, once stranded upon the bars, and it was all over with the hapless craft, whether she were stately frigate, speedy steamer, clipper ship, or humble fisher's boat. Mr. Simon D Macdonald, F.G.S., of Halifax, N. S., some time ago prepared with great skill and care a most interesting chart of Sable Island, indicating so far as possible the exact locality and date of each disaster, as well as the character of the vessel wrecked; and looking at this chart the island is seen to be completely encircled by these grim proofs of its destructive powers.

It need hardly be said that even the tremendous total of one hundred and fifty-two wrecks falls short of representing the whole truth. On the contrary, for every wreck that is recorded, at least one other never to be known may be safely added. After many a storm do the waves cast up at the patrolman's feet the evidence of some fresh disaster—a shattered spar, an empty hen-coop, a fragment of cabin furniture, or, perchance, a bruised and battered corpse. And then, alas! there must be added the dread work done by the distant bars, from which not even such pathetic tokens as these find their way ashore. The following brief account of a disaster that occurred in December, 1884, will serve to convey some idea of what it means to be wrecked on Sable Island:

The A. S. H. was a French brigantine en route from St. Pierre to Boston with a cargo of fish. Toward evening of December 19th she was caught in a violent snow-storm and hurled upon the West End bar, beginning to break up almost immediately. The thermometer stood at twelve degrees below zero, and the sufferings of the unhappy men were so terrible that death assumed the guise of a welcome relief. Three were washed overboard when the ship struck, and although the water was strewn with floating débris, they made no effort to prolong their lives. The captain, the mate, and the remaining sailors succeeded in reaching the shore on a spar; but they only escaped the terrors of the deep to encounter the still more fearful terror of the frost-king. They could just discern through the blinding snow a faint glimmer from the lighthouse, three long miles away, and they set out toward it. The sand was being driven with tremendous force before the gale, and the grains dashed against the faces of the half-dozen men like tiny hail-stones. At length the captain could hold out no longer, and lying down, was speedily frozen to death. A little further on three sailors succumbed. Left alone in

---

* From Scribner's Magazine for May.

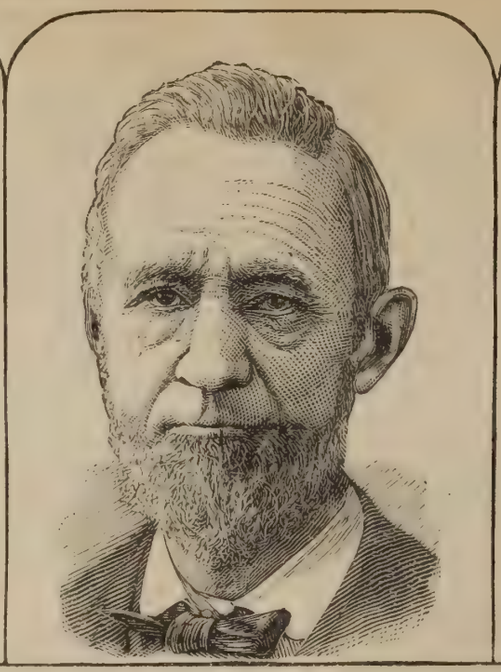
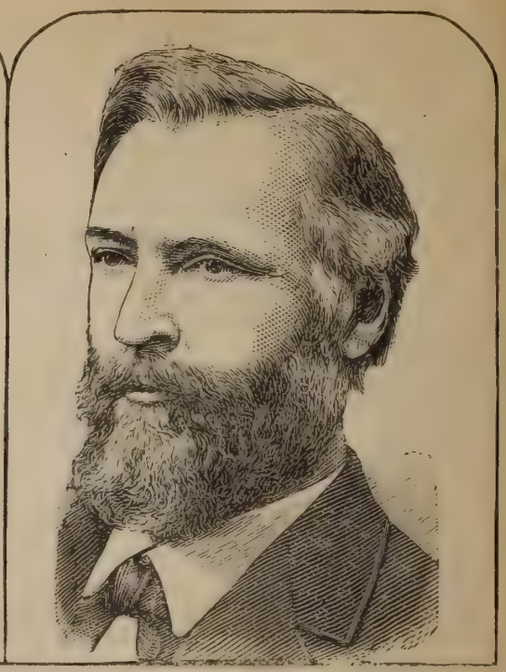
The Hon. William R. Morrison, of Illinois.



The Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan.



The Hon. Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York.

the struggle with death, the mate, fortunately a man of unusual strength, pushed desperately forward. Becoming too weak to stand upright, he took to his hands and knees, and in this fashion, after six hours of suffering such as human beings rarely endure, reached the lighthouse, at two o'clock in the morning, so bruised, bleeding, and frost-bitten that for a time his life hung trembling in the balance.

Another and much earlier wreck deserves attention because of its bearing upon a problem now deeply interesting seafarers the world over. It happened in 1846, and Superintendent Darby is our authority. A wild gale had suddenly sprung up, and he and his men were patrolling the beach, when they descried a large schooner running right down before the storm dead on to the lee shore. The sea was breaking everywhere as far as the eye could reach, and it seemed impossible for any vessel to live in it for a moment; yet, as if by a miracle, the sea became smooth ere it reached her, and she left a shining track behind. After some minutes of thrilling suspense, she was hurled high and dry upon the beach, and her crew rescued uninjured.

Then came the explanation of the strange phenomenon which had so mystified Superintendent Darby. Two large casks filled with fish-oil had been lashed in the fore-rigging, and, securely lashed beside them, two of the strongest sailors in the crew, with long wooden ladles in hand, had been throwing the oil high up in the air, where it was caught by the wind and carried far to leeward in advance of the vessel, spreading over the sea with such effect that, while it was raging, pitching, and breaking all about her, not a barrel of water fell upon the Arno's deck. I believe this may with safety be claimed as one of the earliest recorded instances of the application of oil to the troubled waters.

THREE INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSIONERS.

(See Illustration on this page.)

William R. Morrison,

of Illinois, one of the best-known members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, occupied prior to this appointment a prominent place on the Democratic side of the House of Representatives, being chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and the recognized leader of the section in favor of reducing the tariff. At the election of the Fiftieth Congress Mr. Morrison lost his seat. The President was therefore able to secure his services on the Commission without taking the responsibility of depriving the House of a conspicuous member.

Mr. Morrison was born in Monroe County, Ill., on September 14th, 1825; he is therefore in his sixty-second year. His education was received at the common school and at McKendree College of his native State. At the completion of his course in college he began the study of law, and soon after his admission to the bar he became clerk of the Circuit Court. He also was a politician of note, and was elected for four consecutive terms to the Illinois House of Representatives, serving one term as Speaker. His career in the State Legislature was such as to commend him to still higher honors, and retiring from that body he was elected to the Thirty-eighth Congress. He was re-elected to the Forty-third and to each succeeding Congress until the Fiftieth, his Congressional career terminating on March 4th last.

Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan, who is chairman of the Commission, is a Republican, and has attained high honors in his own State and a great reputation throughout the country. He was born on a farm in Attica, N. Y., on January 6th, 1824, and is therefore sixty-three years of age. His early years were spent in farm work, while he devoted every moment that could be saved from labor to improving his education. He early resolved that he would follow the legal profession, and he set himself with energy to the mastery of the lore necessary to qualify him for his work. So well did he succeed that in 1845, when he was twenty one years old, he was admitted to the bar. He first came to notice through the publication of a digest of decisions in the Michigan courts, which he made while he held the office of reporter of the Supreme Bench. This digest was remarkable for the lucidity of style which since then the public has always noticed in all Judge Cooley's literary work. In 1864 he was elected to the Supreme Court of the State and was subsequently re-elected until the last judicial election. Judge Cooley is a member of the Congregational Church and is highly esteemed, socially and professionally.

Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York, the third of the trio whose portraits are give here, was born in Ulster County, N. Y., in 1828, and is therefore fifty-nine years old. He became active in politics while still a minor, stumping his native county for Van Buren and Adams in 1848. During the two succeeding years he was a teacher in the district schools, and in 1851 was chosen Superintendent of Schools. Two years later he was admitted to the bar and served as a law clerk at Kingston, N. Y. He subsequently formed a partnership in the practice of law, which continued until 1872. In 1863 he was elected county Judge; in 1875 a member of the State Senate, and in 1877 Attorney-General. Mr. Schoonmaker was the Democratic candidate for Court of Appeals Judge in 1881, but was defeated. In May, 1883, he was appointed on the State Civil Service Commission. In politics he was the friend and political ally of the late Samuel J. Tilden.

LARRY'S PROMISE.

(See Illustration on page 301.)

"SURELY He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows." Larry O'Meara read as far as those words in the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah when his wife stopped him.

"Will you let Him carry yours, Larry?" she said, pleadingly.

Larry's lip quivered, and for a moment he did not speak. What a sorrow his was! No one knew its poignancy but himself. The wife whom he had courted when they were boy and girl together in Ireland was slowly dying, and the doctor had said there was no hope. Some men lose their wives and bear the loss easily, but that was not Larry's case; for not only did he differ from other men in having a softer heart, but his wife differed from some wives in what she was and in what she had done. Larry had come to America a year or two before Kate, and when she came and found her old sweetheart she was heart-broken at the change in him. Larry had not had as much money to spend in a year in Ireland as he had in a week in America, and he was drinking and going the wrong way rapidly. "There's good in him," Kate had said then, "and I'll have him, as he wants me still. Maybe it'll save him." And it had saved him. Larry had been a sober, industrious man for the last four years, and he knew whose influence it was that had rescued him. Love and gratitude and fear for a future without Kate to take care of him all lay heavily on his heart now as he sat beside his dying wife, with their only child on his knee.

"Lay the book down, Larry, darlin', and let me tell you what's in my mind," she said. "I may not have another chance."

Larry laid the book on the table by the lamp and came back.

"It's no use hoping any longer, is it, my love?" said Kate. "I've got to go. It'll be hard for you, Larry, without me. I know it. I'd like to ha' stayed, but this is the Lord's will. You won't forget me I know, but I want you not to forget what I'm going to say. You'll feel lonely and dull after I'm gone, and you'll be tempted to drink to keep your spirits up. Don't do it, Larry. Just wait, and the Lord'll help you bear it. There's yourself, Larry; how would I feel to know you were going wrong; and there's little Nell; she'll have no one to look to but you now. You won't neglect the little child, will you, dear Larry?"

Larry's face was hard set. He dared not trust himself to speak. He kept his teeth tightly clinched, his breath came heavily, and his throat throbbed as if it would burst. "I cannot bear it," he said at last. "What'll I do wi'out ye, Kate? Ye've saved me and kept me, and if you go I'll go all to pieces."

Larry Makes a Solemn Promise.

"I know, I know. You'll be sure to feel that way, and that's why I'm talking to you. But, Larry, it isn't I that has done it. It's the Lord, and He'll help you now without me. You'll get to know that after a bit. Doesn't He say He 'carries our sorrows'? Won't you trust Him, Larry?" And she added, sweetly, "For my sake, dear boy."

"There's naught I wouldn't do for your sake, Kate," said Larry, breaking down.

"Then do that for my sake. When you are tempted just think of me, and do as I want you: kneel down and ask God to help you and keep you. He'll do it, Larry. He'll put peace in your heart, and you'll get to love Him, Larry, as I do."

"I can't love anybody any more, 'less its little Nell, bless her!"

"You'll love God, Larry; He'll be your Almighty Friend if you'll let Him, and you'll need a friend, Larry. Time's getting short, and I can't die till you've promised, and then I'll die in peace. I can trust Him to keep you and Nell if I know you'll look to Him and pray."

Kate held out her hand, the hand that he had clasped at the altar, that had dragged him out of the mire, and that had toiled for him for four years. Larry put his broad palm in it, and she tried to clasp it with her old clasp, but her strength was gone. "Promise me, Larry," she said.

It was a solemn moment. Larry felt it to be more solemn than their marriage. "I will," he said simply. Kate looked her thanks. She closed her eyes and prayed. A few moments later she was gone, and the time for Larry to keep his promise had come.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 357.)

The Bag Lost and Found.

MANY a time on the day after the fire which had consumed a part of Ephraim Hartgold's mansion did the worthy Quaker look in upon Robert Atheling and spend a few minutes in encouraging talk. As a matter of fact, the young man did not need much cheering, for though he was suffering severe pain from his injuries the consciousness that he had saved Ruth from a terrible death compensated for all his agony. Besides this Mrs. Hartgold, full of gratitude and tender motherly solicitude, attended him, passing to and fro between her daughter's room and Robert's, and bringing messages from Ruth, charged with thankful regard. Ruth herself was not hurt, but the shock to her nerves and a contusion or two rendered rest necessary.

The household was in confusion, servants searching for articles mislaid in the panic or personal belongings which might or might not have been burned, and lamenting their losses.

Ephraim, however, had a source of anxiety which made him as near miserable as a man can be who knows that all events are in the hand of a loving Father. The trouble was that the black bag with the green string, containing the money which had been the occasion of Robert's visit, was missing. The Quaker remembered distinctly taking it from the cabinet when he and Robert were engaged in saving the valuables, just before the alarm about Ruth's peril was made. It was put on the lawn with a number of important legal documents, and one of the servants was placed in charge. The man had, however, run around to the rear when he heard that his dear young mistress was in danger, and when he returned the bag was gone. Mr. Hartgold searched everywhere about the house and grounds for it, but could not find it. He therefore concluded that it had been stolen, and knowing how precious it was, not only for its intrinsic value, but for the proof it furnished of Alfred Atheling's honesty, he sent to all the papers an advertisement, minutely describing the bag and offering a reward for its recovery. He also notified the police.

Mr. Hartgold was right. The fact was that the bag had indeed been stolen. A disreputable tramp prowling around the neighborhood no sooner heard the alarm of fire, and saw the engines arrive, than he entered the grounds of the burning house, to see if an opportunity occurred for getting some plunder more easily than by burglary. He marked the bag as one likely to contain money or valuables, and when he thought himself unseen he seized it and made his way by back streets back to his home in London.

The building he called "home" stood by the riverside. It was an old half tumble-down house which had formerly been an office in connection with an adjoining wharf. Thrusting open the creaking door, which was neither locked nor latched, he closed it carefully behind him, struck a match, which lighted him up the broken stairs to a higher floor.

The man stepped noiselessly to a candle which was inserted in the neck of a bottle and lighted it. Then he passed into a smaller room, knelt upon the floor, removed a loose and decaying skirting-board through which the nails that held it had been inserted into wooden wedges in the wall. Into a cavity previously made by the extraction of a few bricks he put the bag of gold, and having replaced the board, passed out into the other chamber, blew out the candle, laid himself down upon the floor, with only the edge of the mattress for a pillow, and disposed himself to sleep. But it was not to be.

Whether the policeman who was on that beat had seen him enter, or whether a spirit of exploration and inquiry had laid hold upon him, may not be known. Suffice it to say, that scarcely had the man on the floor sunk into his first "beauty sleep" than the constable's bull's-eye lantern was turned upon his face. "Hallo, Slinkey! Caught at last!" said the policeman, exultantly; for Slinkey was "wanted" at headquarters for a miscellaneous assortment of misdeeds, and had hitherto successfully eluded all pursuit. A shrill whistle was answered by another member of the force, who searched the house while the first-comer kept the prisoner secure. Slinkey, however, was an adept at hiding plunder, and the officers failed to discover the bag containing the money.

Slinkey congratulated himself on the safety of the bag, and thought what a splendid start it would be for him when he came out of prison at the end of the term to which he was pretty sure to be sentenced. He resolved to tell no one of it, not even his wife, for if she knew she might pay some of his debts with it or otherwise put it to a use of which he did not approve. What Slinkey did not know, however, or he would not have acted so, was that the owner of the house was tired of having it made the abode of thieves, and had secured a good tenant, for whom he was about to make repairs.

Now, it so happened that Ned Saltmer, who had been promoted by merit to be a foreman in his master's employ, was the man employed to put this same building into tenantable repair. Of course it was necessary to make a thorough examination of the place, and a few days after Slinkey's arrest Ned, taking his "two-foot rule," pencil, and note-book, repaired hither for that purpose. Robert Atheling's dog, Jess, was permitted to accompany him, and indeed would have gone without permission if his fancy or his sense of duty disposed him that way. While Ned was thus engaged Joss was making a close examination of the premises on his own account, probably with a view to the pleasures of an expected chase after a rat.

Joss had concluded a preliminary scamper round the building, and had taken a superficial glance into all the rooms and corners, and at length had brought himself to a temporary standstill in the room where the hidden money lay. Into that room Ned had come, and was jotting down certain measurements and memoranda for business use. Just as he was turning away Joss began to bark. He had been pawing and sniffing at the skirting-board for some time, but he could not manage to pull it away, although it was not held very tightly in its place. When Ned turned to leave the room, Joss thought it was time to appeal for help, and so he lay just in front of the suspected spot, stretched out his fore-feet, and barked as though he knew that there was a rat just there, and he meant to have it before he went away. Ned came back, and instantly Joss's paw was on the skirting-board, and his black nozzle sniffing at the point of junction with the floor.

"All right, all right, old fellow!" said Ned, and in a moment the skirting-board was pulled away. "Rats!" said Ned, content to stimulate his efforts now the hindrance was away. But for an answer Joss inserted his paw in the hole made by the withdrawal of the brick, and straightway scratched out the bag, seized it in his mouth, and dropped it at Ned's feet. The metallic chink that followed told Ned of the nature of its contents, and with much wonder and some fear he lifted up the prize, and silently discussed the question, not how it came there, but what he ought to do with it now that it had fallen into his hands. That it did not belong to the owner of the house he was sure, and he did not know who the tenants were, for Slinkey's wife and child had been ejected summarily, having no money to pay the long arrears of rent. Ned was quite clear of one thing, however, and that was that great credit was due to Joss. So the clever and sagacious dog was petted and patted to his doggish soul's delight. "Well done, Joss!" said Ned. "It isn't often that you hev a chance o' baggin' game o' that kind."

Matter-of-fact Ned quickly dropped the precious bag, more precious than he knew, into an inner pocket of his jacket, and finished his measurements and inspection. Then, as the shadows of the night were falling, he made his way to his own snug cottage, close followed by the faithful Joss, who felt staid and sober, as became a dog who had come into possession of a large fortune and of special thanks.

As usual, Ned Saltmer was met at the door by his buxom little wife, who seemed always as if she were on the watch for a sight of his honest face. He paused for a moment until Joss had passed in before him. "Honor to them that hez honor due to 'em," said Ned, with a smile on his face. "Joss is a good deal richer than I is, an' so I gives him preference, Nance."

"Whativer are yo' talkin' about, Ned?" said Madge.

"Why, the fact is," said her merry spouse, "Joss hez cum' in for a fortan, an' he's gi'en it into my hands for safe-keepin'." Ned led the way, not into the kitchen, but into the parlor, the little room which was nominally the special quarters of Robert Atheling, but which was used, at his own request, by Ned and his cheery spouse. Then Ned brought out the bag, and without a word dropped it on the mantelpiece, so that its sonorous and suggestive chink might tell its own story.

"There, lassie," said Ned, "that's Joss's private property. It lay behind an old skirtin'-board in a house that we're repairin' by the Thames' side. Joss smelt it, or summat, an' niver gav' me ony peace till I knocked off the board. Then he fishes it oot of a hole in the wall, and brings it to me."

"What a wonderful thing!" said Madge, looking at the bag with widely-opened eyes.

"That's just what I've been sayin' to myself all the way home," said Ned. "What made him know that there was onythin' there? Was it only what they call instink? Or did he smell it? Had somebody—somebody that he knows, handled it, and did he reco'nize the scent? Or was it just a Providence o' God, that nobody but Him can understand? I give it up. I'll be hanged if I know what to make of it. I'll warrant there's a matter o' two hundred an' fifty pounds i' that bag. Aye, three hundred, if there's a shillin'," he continued. "Now then, Madge, the question is, What is the next business? Can we find oot if onybody hez a better right to it? What next, Madge? Dear owd gell, you gen'rally manage to hit t' nail on the head. What shall we do with it? Say, gell, what next?" and Ned, feeling exultant, clapped his hands in merriment.

"Why, the next thing, Ned, is your supper. Let's go an' get that business settled. That'll give us a bit o' time to think o' this. I's as well not to be over-hasty in a matter o' this sort."

"Right again, bless her!" said Ned, first slapping his wife's broad back and then paying compensation for the liberty he had taken by giving her two kisses of such vigor that Joss was constrained to come from his resting-place in front of the kitchen fire to see what was the matter.

Madge did right to advise that they should take time to consider, for as they sat by the fire after supper had been disposed of, they were surprised, for the hour was getting late, by a vigorous rap-tap at the door. When Madge went to open it, a pleasant voice came from between a flourishing mustache and beard: "Well, Mrs. Saltmer, how are you? Ay, but I'm glad to cross your threshold again;" and so saying the speaker entered without another word.

"Why, Ned," Madge called out, with a little cry of satisfaction, "here's Mr. Alfred! I knew he would come some of these days."

"Yes," said Alfred, shaking hands with Ned. "I've come again for shelter, and I need your confidence as much as ever." Whereupon Ned looked at his wife and smiled an "aside." Alfred clearly did not know that this very room was rented by his brother Robert, with the express object of searching for him. Ned, however, was not going to tell Alfred about that, or the young man might take alarm and levant before any explanation could be given. Robert had notified them of his accident, and stated that he hoped to be well enough to return in a day or two, and both Ned and his wife thought it best to let the two brothers meet and settle things between themselves.

But how came Alfred back to London at this time? The reader will remember that we left him accompanying the suddenly sobered Tim Crouch to that worthy's house, and his subsequent proceedings have not been narrated.

Once in the cobbler's home Alfred saw that there was no need to doubt their good faith. Sallie felt herself honored in having an Atheling for a guest, for the family was held in high repute, and was accounted only a very little less aristocratic than the family at Aspen Towers. So she put an extra ribbon on her cap, and made a point of donning her best "bib and tucker," and quietly rejoiced in the thought that as a hostess she could now boast herself as being something out of the common.

Moreover, Tim had in him all the elements that were likely to favor an outlaw. His radicalism was of a very pronounced type indeed, and he was always willing to help to foil a bailiff, sheriff, constable, magistrate, or other legal official in their attempts to interfere with anybody's liberty. "One man's as good as another," was Tim's sweeping political creed, nor would he have hesitated to say, "and a great deal better," if the comparison lay between a "proud minion of the law" and an outlaw, from almost whatever cause. Besides, both Tim and Sallie were fully as kind-hearted as the Yorkshire peasantry are said to be, and they rank high, though I say it myself.

So Alfred Atheling's secret was quite safe; and any danger of discovery was far likelier to arise from their over-anxiety to prevent it than from any probability that they might be induced to betray their trust. Beneath the humble shelter of their roof Alfred recovered health and strength, was able to write for the replenishment of his purse, and under cover of the evening shadows and by the aid of sundry disguises could pay frequent visits to the Garth, and obtain fleeting but most welcome glimpses of those who dwelt within. He felt as though he could be content with such rude quarters for a lifetime rather than face continuous banishment from Aspendale and home.

But, as usual, there was to be no rest for his wandering feet. He wore the yoke of his own misdoings; and the goad of retribution seemed to be constantly pricking his sides, that he might be made to move on and feel the galling pressure of the yoke the more. Tim Crouch received occasionally a London newspaper from a relative in the great city, who took that method of reporting himself alive and well. These newspapers Alfred perused with much interest, always, however, with the dread of seeing some reference to his own past misdoing.

In one and the same paper Alfred read two paragraphs that greatly disturbed and alarmed him. The one was an items of news about the fire at Sharon Lodge; and by it Alfred was made acquainted with the fact that his brother Robert, who had saved Miss Hartgold at the peril of his life, was the guest of that very Ephraim Hartgold to whom belonged the Good Intent—the vessel that had saved him, and the captain, and Inez from the open boat. His eye lighted upon another paragraph, an advertisement, and the while he read it, his face became deathly white. It was placed in the same column and nearly in the same place in which some months before he had read beneath the ugly word "ABSCONDED!" his own name and shame. "Fifty pounds reward!—Lost or stolen, a canvas bag containing upward of three hundred pounds. The bag bears the letters H. H. stamped upon it, and is tied at the neck with green tape. The above reward will be paid to any one who shall bring the same to the chief of the police at Scotland Yard or to Ephraim Hartgold, Thames Side."

Alfred Atheling could not and did not for one moment doubt that this bag was that missing one to the absence of which all his troubles owed their origin. But how did Ephraim Hartgold come to be mixed up with it? It was clear to him that the search for himself as a thief, and for the money as his booty, still continued, or had been revived in connection with some fresh clue through which he might be arrested almost on the steps of his mother's door. That mention of the chief of the police and Scotland Yard left no doubt in Alfred's mind that prosecution and a prison were impending; that the search would be sure to extend again to Aspendale, and that for his safety's sake he must hide himself among the teeming millions of the modern Babylon.

"You seeam as if you've dropped on te sumthin' nut varry pleasant," said Tim Crouch, watching Alfred's changing countenance as he sat with the newspaper in his trembling hands. Alfred showed him the paragraphs, and declared his intention of going instantly to London, as search for him was certain to be made in Aspendale.

"Why," said Tim, "it isn't for me te set my opinion up afoore yours; but if ah was i' your shoes, ah wadn't leeave a seeaf corner, though its nobbut a lahtle 'un."

"I've been very thankful for the corner, Tim. But I can't help it," said Alfred, with a sigh. "The curse of the wandering Jew is on me, and I must go. But I should like to come back if it be possible. Will you keep the corner open?"

"You'll be allus welcum', Mr. Alfred, varry," said Sallie, who was scarcely able to command her voice, for here, as elsewhere, Alfred had made himself a favorite. "What Sal sezs ah sezs," added Tim, with as much sincerity as brevity. "An' until further orthers, mum's the wod at Crooch Cas'le."

Early the next morning, before most of the villagers were astir, Alfred walked to the railroad depot and bought a ticket for London, where he meant to make his home again with his old friends the Saltmers.

(To be continued.)

THE PASSOVER.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for May 22, Ex. 12 : 1-14. Golden Text, 1 Cor. 5 : 7.

The Empty Man a Fit Instrument—God Manifested to His People and to the Egyptians—The Education of the Worker—The God-appointed Difference—The Sprinkled Blood—The Bitter Herbs of Persecution—The Attitude of Readiness—The Inevitable Separation—The Worldling Eager for It.

MOSES was a man of faith; by faith his parents hid him when an infant, "by faith" he "refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter," "by faith" he afterward "forsook Egypt," and "by faith he kept the passover" (Heb. 11 : 23-28). All which God had foretold him when he was in the land of Midian (Ex. 3 : 16-22) came literally to pass.

The Resistance of Pharaoh to the demand of Moses that he should let the children of Israel go into the wilderness to worship God, only proved the occasion for God to stretch out His hand and to smite Egypt with all His wonders. Now that Moses had learned that he himself was nothing, God would use him without injury to Himself, and again and again He called upon him to stretch forth the rod in his hand, when plague after plague followed until Egypt was destroyed. The water supply had been turned into blood and the fish killed; a fearful plague of boils and blains had broken out upon the people, even upon the very magicians, who, in their daring pride attempted to imitate the work of God's judgment; the crops had all been ruined by hail or eaten by locusts, terror had seized upon the inhabitants of the land, while a darkness that could be felt had visited them; and at last death came into every house in Egypt, and carried away in one night the heir of every family.

God was dealing with Egypt, and making Himself known to His own people at the same time. In all He does,

God Has Different Purposes in View.

He was dealing simultaneously with the Egyptians, the children of Israel, and Moses. Egypt was responsible as a nation for her rejection of God, because God had dealt with her as a nation in blessing during the days of Joseph. Egypt, when she knew God, "glorified Him not as God, neither was thankful" (Rom. 1 : 21), and God must deal with it in judgment. The children of Israel, who had appealed to God, were learning that God keeps covenant with His people; and Moses' education in faith and in the knowledge of God was carried on step by step in all his intercourse with Pharaoh and with the children of Israel. Every Christian worker is being educated daily, and often the apparent hindrances to the work are the exercises by which he is instructed and brought on by his infallible Teacher.

The eve of Israel's departure out of Egypt had come. Though he was little in his own eyes, "the man Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people" (Ex. 11 : 3); they saw Moses, but Moses saw God. Before of Egypt's first-born sounded abroad in the land, Pharaoh and his servants knew that they were doomed, for by the express command of God, Moses had declared to them that none should escape, from the first-born of Pharaoh to the first-born of the lowest beast in the land. "And there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more. But against any of the children of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue against man or beast that ye may know how that between the Egyptians and Israel." God makes the distinction very strong between His children and the children of this world. Man tries to minimize this difference, but it is all the difference between death and life, darkness and light, danger and safety, sorrow and joy, despair and peace, hell and heaven!

The Death-Knell

The Lord Doth Put a Difference

The hour of death in Egypt was the hour of life for Israel; "The Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying, This month shall be unto you the beginning of months; it shall be the first month of the year to you." The beginning of all to the child of God is the life out of death which the passover typifies. By Moses God directed that every head of a household should take a lamb, "according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for an house." If the household was too little for the lamb, a man and his neighbor might divide the lamb. God would have us share Christ and His salvation, not only with our children, servants, and all the members of our own family, but with our neighbors also.

The lamb must be "without blemish;" faultless, perfect; so only could it be a type of Jesus, for He "did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth" (1 Pet. 2 : 22). It must be "a male of the first year," just in early strength, as Jesus in His manhood when He suffered. On the fourteenth day of the month each family must slay the lamb "between the two evenings" (margin). "And they shall take of the blood, and strike it on the two side-posts and on the upper door-post of the houses, wherein they shall eat it." "And the blood shall be to you for a token upon the houses where ye are: and

When I See the Blood,

I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt." Oh, the shelter of the blood of Jesus! Reader, is it between you and your past sins? Is it a token to you and a token to God that you are redeemed? Does it speak to God for you "better things than that of Abel" (Heb. 12 : 24)? Does it tell you, does it tell God, does it tell men and angels and devils that God has accepted for your soul the poured out life of the God-man who died for you? No man of Israel, no woman, no child might pass outside the blood-sprinkled door during that night of destruction in Egypt. No redeemed soul may leave for an instant the shelter of the blood of Jesus. "He that believeth not . . . the wrath of God abideth on him" (John 3 : 36).

Within the houses where the blood had been sprinkled, the flesh of the lamb must be eaten. It must be "roast with fire," literally, crucified (the eastern spits take the form of a cross), and every member of the family must eat his share. Not only did our beloved Lord shed His blood for us, but He gave Himself to be our very life. He became bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, that we might become "members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones." The lamb must be eaten with

"Unleavened Bread."

The Apostle Paul says: "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us: Therefore let us keep the feast, not with the old leaven; neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth" (1 Cor. 5 : 7, 8). Jesus said: "Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." It is utterly impossible to feed upon the life of Jesus so long as there is anything untrue, unreal, insincere in our spirit. God loves "truth in the inward parts" (Ps. 51 : 6). "And with bitter herbs shall ye eat it." Nothing provokes the world's enmity, scorn, and contempt so much as the spirit of Jesus. "Men will praise thee, when thou doest well to thyself" (Ps. 49 : 18). But, oh, how the world scorns those who are like Jesus!

We may not eat the Passover Lamb without the bitter herbs; "all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (II Tim. 3 : 12); we must count the cost as well as the gain. "And ye shall let nothing of it remain until the morning." God does not give us a supply of the life of Jesus which is to last us; we must be continually receiving. "And thus shall ye eat it; with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet; and your staff in your hand; and ye shall eat it in haste." We cannot take in the life of Christ unless we are willing, standing ready to do the will of God—not simply willing to think it over, and, perhaps, make up our minds to it by and by, but standing with our loins now girded to it, our shoes now on for the march, our staff now in our hand. To have and to live the life of Christ means a move now, if God shall so order it. It means that if He calls us to China or India we should go, even if it were to-morrow. It means that if He calls us to some work in the house which we have never done before, and, perhaps, may not like to do, we shall do it now without waiting. It means that if He calls us to confess a fault, we shall be ready at once, that if He would have us change the order of our day, we shall do it promptly, and that if He wants us to do nothing, we shall be just as ready.

The Passover feast was eaten, and every Israelite was within the blood-sprinkled doors. Were they asleep? Perhaps very few of them. Then there arose the Egyptian wailing. All Egypt was awake, all Egypt was in terror: "There was not a house where there was not one dead." Now the commandment of Pharaoh was reversed; he commanded the people to flee. It was

Well They Were Already Prepared, for the Egyptians were urgent upon them to depart, for they said, "We be all dead men." In their haste they took their dough before it was leavened, for they had prepared no food for their journey. "They borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver and jewels of gold and raiment." So eager were the Egyptians to see the last of them, that they denied them nothing, and "they spoiled the Egyptians." Sooner or later the life of Christ in His children leads to a separation from the worldlings. If they do not yield to God, they feel the presence of God's children intolerable to them, they feel God is too strong for them. Let us not fear, if it is so with some of our loved ones for whom we pray. If they cannot endure to have us near them, let us not fear, God is at work. It may be He is letting it be that they may learn to know themselves before they are brought to His feet.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD BINDER.

NUMEROUS applications have been received from readers of this journal for a case in which the copies of the paper, as they are received, may be placed and kept clean for binding, at the end of the year. To meet this demand, a stock of such covers has been prepared, and they are now on sale at this office. Each cover is made of strong cloth, with the name of the journal stamped in gilt letters on the outside. It is large enough to hold fifty-two copies, and is fitted with the new patent apparatus for holding the papers securely. A cover will be sent, postage paid, to any address in the United States on the receipt of one dollar. Applications should be made to THE MANAGER, 63 Bible House, N. Y.

ENTERING IN.

Why don't you enter in ?
Into the Heart that calls and calls for you,
Into the promises so grand and true,
Into the rich enheritance that waits;
Why will you stand and weep without the gates,
O sorrowing one ?

You say you cannot see
Why, If He loves, He wants to grieve you so,
Why thro' this dreade l path He made you go;
O if you would but enter in to-day
And let Him show you in His own sweet way,
Dear suffering one.

But you will enter in,
I am so sure you will some blissful day,
And then, and then you'll joy to hear Him say
Why you have suffered so and wept so sore,
And you will see your sorrow was your door
To let you in.

To let you in,—
O Alchemist divine, O wondrous sight!
Your counted tears all changed to jewels bright,
For you have entered in the secret place,
Where He reveals the wonders of His grace,
Where you can see the all things of His Word!
For you have entered the sweet Will of God.

—Amanda C. Scammell.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength, and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N.Y.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving a Premium to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE

A new book containing plans and specifications for 25 houses, all sizes, from 2 rooms up. Sent post paid on receipt of 25 cents, by J. S. OGILVIE & CO., 31 Rose Street, New York.

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.

It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.

In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.

WM. H. H. CHILDS, 70 Maiden Lane, N. Y.

For sale by W. H. SCHIEFFELIN & Co., 170 and 172 William St., N. Y., and the wholesale drug trade.

SILK LACE & JERSEY MITTS

"THE RETROGRADE"
TRADE MARK
ELASTIC LOCK STITCH
WARRANTED NOT TO RIP.

Buy Only those Labelled as herewith.

PATENTED
FULL FASHIONED
SEAMS

PERFECT FINISH!
PERFECT STYLE!
PERFECT FIT!

For Sale by all Leading Houses.

ZYLONITE

COLLARS AND CUFFS.

are as ECONOMICAL and DESIRABLE as represented, can always obtain the same,

FREE OF POSTAGE,

at the following prices:

Gents' Collars, 20c. 6 for - - - -z		$1.10—$2.00 Do
" Cuffs, 40c. 6 " - - - -		2.20— 4.00 "
Ladies Collars, 15c 6 " - - - -		.85— 1.50 "
" Cuffs, 30c. 6 " - - - -		1.70— 3.00 "

REMIT BY POSTAL ORDER.

For half a century this country has been trying to invent collars and cuffs that would be an improvement on linen. It is accomplished at last. Zylonite collars and cuffs are superseding linen, because they are better and will last for months, and will always look span clean.

Address GEORGE CLEMENT & CO.,
33 East 22d Street, New York.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

For INACTIVE LIVER, DISORDERED STOMACH, IRREGULAR HABIT.

When Biliousness comes like a foe,
To sap the strength of high and low;
By day the strongest nerves to shake,
By night to keep the brain awake;
Let no one pine away in grief,
For TARRANT'S SELTZER brings relief.

FOR GAS. BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.

FOR OIL.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

UNIVERSITY ORGANS.—They Lead the World. $85 to $500. Sold Direct to Families. No Middlemen. Solid Walnut 5 Octaves-Double Couplers. Guaranteed for Six Years and sent, with Stool and Book, for TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. ESTABLISHED 1859. $35

MARCHAL & SMITH,
285 East 21st Street, New York.

KEEP YOUR EGGS

for winter prices. One man has made $20,000 by buying and preserving summer eggs by this method. Best and cheapest process known. Large pay for farmers. Complete process 25 cents (stamps).

Address, J. H. SMITH, HEAD QUARTERS, Ky.

BLACK SILKS.

MESSRS.
JAMES McCREERY & CO.

Will offer during this week a large stock of rich

BLACK SILK NOVELTIES

from $1 to $2 per yard. They have been previously sold at from $1.50 to $3 yer yard.

Mail orders receive careful and prompt attention. Address

James McCreery & Co.,
BROADWAY, COR. ELEVENTH ST.,
New York.

Bridal Trousseaux.

Ladies who are unable to examine our stock of these goods personally would find it to their advantage t correspond with us. The most complete information furnished, and careful attention given to special orders.

Lord & Taylor,
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y.

Floral Praise
No. 5.

A BEAUTIFUL MUSICAL SERVICE FOR Children's Day & Flower Sunday,

BY HUBERT P. MAIN.

Price $4 per 100 copies; 5 cts. each by Mail.
Previous issues furnished at same price.

PALMER'S
Book of Gems.

For the Sunday School.

111 Song, many of them Entirely New. Music for every hymn. The old favorites are Gems of a high order, selected by H. R. PALMER, Mus. Doc., and by Superintendents representing 200 different Sunday Schools.

100 BOOKS FOR $10.
Copy by mail on receipt of 6 P.O. 2c. Stamps.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York and Chicago.

WEBSTER'S Unabridged Dictionary.

Invaluable in every School and at every Fireside.

A DICTIONARY,
118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings, a GAZETTEER OF THE WORLD, of 25,000 Titles, and a BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, of nearly 10,000 Noted Persons,
ALL IN ONE BOOK.

Contains 3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Illustrations than any other American Dictionary.

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

PANACEA SPRING WATER. Cures Dyspepsia, Debility, Loss of Appetite, Chronic Diarrhœa, Scrofula, Eczema, Skin Diseases. Pleasant, wonderful. Best reference. Send $4.00 for a case to JOHN A. WILLIAMS, Oxford, N. C.

WARNER BRO'S

9 Million worn during the past six years.

This marvelous success is due—

1st.—To the superiority of Coraline over all other materials, as a stiffener for Corsets.

2d.—To the superior quality, shape and workmanship of our Corsets, combined with their low prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kinds of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.

WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York City.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This Magazine portrays American thought and life from ocean to ocean, is filled with pure high-class literature, and can be safely welcomed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.

Sample Copy of current number mailed upon receipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.

Premium List with either.

Address:
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

GET UP CLUBS

Send for Circular.

WHY DO MOTHERS

Put stiff corsets on their growing Children? Don't do it, but

BUY FERRIS' PATENT GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS

Fit all ages. All Physicians recommend them.

LEADING RETAILERS

everywhere sell them. Take no other.

FERRIS BROS.
Manufacturers, 841 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.

I START MEN

and WOMEN of small means in Home Photography. It pays big with other business in stores or shops, or at home, or from house to house. The novel surprise of a man with complete apparatus, appearing at the door ready to photo, anything. Persons, Groups, Buildings, or Animals, secures profitable orders in nine out of ten homes. A good, healthful, paying business, suitable for either sex; no experience required. Send for a copy of the "New Process Illustrated" (free). Sample Photos, 10 cents. FRANKLIN PUTNAM, M'f'r & Dealer in Photo. Apparatus, 483,485 Canal St., N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF
HENRY WARD BEECHER

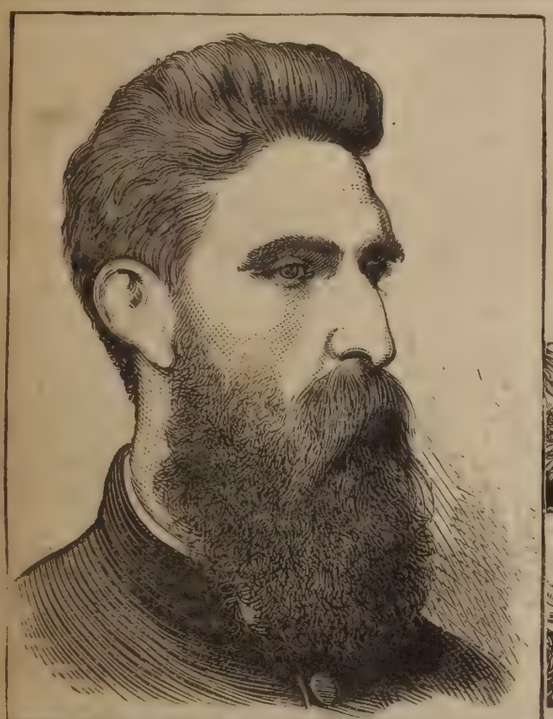
by Thos. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 23. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.



CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAIT AND LIFE OF REV. JOHN B. GRIBBLE, THE AUSTRALIAN EVANGELIST.

THE TEMPEST. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

THE CRIMEAN WAR TREATY OF PEACE ON APRIL 27, 1856—A PROPHETIC DATE.

A Paralyzed Man's Recovery—A Reprieve on the Scaffold—Prayer Answered by a Joke—A Reminder to an Undergraduate, etc.

WORK AMONG THE SANTHALS.

THE SEARCH FOR FAITH. A New Sermon by C. H. Spurgeon.

CURRENT EVENTS: A High License Vetoed by Governor Hill—The Speech of Senator Sherman—The Belgian Labor Troubles—The New French Cabinet—Earthquake in Mexico—A Panic Among Policemen—A Baby Security, etc.

DEACON ABRAHAM'S WORK IN PERSIA. (With Two Illustrations.)

THE BLACKSMITH'S LESSON. (Illustrated.)

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. A Serial Story. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

THE COMMANDMENTS II. By Mrs. M. Baxter.

Rev. JOHN B. GRIBBLE, the Australian Evangelist—Scenes in his Life.

REV. JOHN B. GRIBBLE,

Missionary Among Australian Aborigines.

Born in 1847—Emigration to Australia—Feasted by a Colored Woman—The Gold Diggings Conversion—Christian Service—Earnest Study Lay Reader and Preacher—Work in Melbourne, and as a Pioneer—A Call from Riverina—Mission Efforts among the Blacks—"Warangesda"—Difficulties, Hindrances and Successes—The Story of Louisa—A Wild Horseman—A Haul of Fish—Eliza Nelson's Death—Johanna's Baptism and Funeral.

JOHN B. GRIBBLE, the founder of the Warangesda Mission, New South Wales, Australia, whose portrait is given on our frontispiece this week, was born in the town of Redruth, Cornwall, England, on September 1st, 1847, and is therefore now forty years old. His parentage was very humble, his father being a miner.

John was the youngest of eight children, all the others being girls. When he was about nine months old his father conceived the idea of going to Australia, then a young and comparatively unknown colony. After a long and tedious voyage they reached Melbourne, and settled down in the t wn of Geelong, situated on the coast, about fifty miles south of Melbourne. There it was that the following incident occurred, which Mr. Gribble relates in his little book, "Black, but Comely." "My first is most intimately connected with the aborigines of Victoria. On the great separation day, when Victoria became a separate colony, the aborigines, then numerous, were feasted by the white settlers of Geelong. During the excitement and crush I got away from my mother's side, and was really lost, but while wandering on I was met by an old aboriginal woman, Biddy, to whom my mother had been always kind. She was so delighted at finding the white 'piccaninny,' that she at once led me away to the camp of her tribe, and feasted me the lifelong day on roast beef and damper." (See Illustration on first page No. 1.) "At sunset she took me safely home, to the joy of my mother, who was almost distracted in consequence of the non-success of the search-party, they never having dreamed that I was safely located in a black camp."

Childish Recollection

Mr. Gribble's father was a man of enterprising spirit, but of careless habits, much given to worldly amusement, and, unfortunately, very fond of "fast" company, which caused the family much trouble in their subsequent career. His mother, happily, was a godly woman, who sought to instil into the minds of her children the great principles of the religion of Jesus Christ, and it is doubtless through her example and precepts, under God, that her son John is what he is—a herald of salvation to-day.

On the discovery of gold at the now famous Ballarat, a fever of excitement occurred, and the Cornish settler made his way to the gold fields. Being fortunate, he was soon able to remove his family to the novel scenes of the early gold-digging days. Amid such scenes the childhood days of the future missionary were spent. The first school he attended was held in a tent. Before John had reached his eleventh birthday he was taken away from school, to engage in Gold Digging.

When he was about fifteen years of age the turning-point in his life was reached. He was powerfully wrought upon by the Holy Spirit, and led to trust in Christ as his own personal Saviour. With this radical change of heart came a strong and irresistible desire to do something for God. The youthful convert soon took up the work of tract distribution. Then he gathered a Sunday-school class, and all his spare moments were devoted to the earnest study of the Holy Scriptures and other good books which might throw light upon the sacred page.

John Gribble by this time cherished the hope of becoming a minister of the Gospel; college, alas! there was none; facilities for poor students there were none; and he very soon discovered that if the goal was ever reached by him it would be reached by self-reliance and earnest perseverance. And now the real work of study commenced. As he was able he purchased books and devoured their contents. But the Word of God he made his special study. It was his rule to take his Bible with him into the depths of the mine, and placing it in a convenient spot, he would snatch a few lines as he passed and re-passed with his truck of gold quartz (See Illustration No. 2.)

Soon Mr. Gribble was requested to present himself for examination for the office of lay reader and preacher. His examination gave almost unqualified satisfaction, and it was now to the joy of his heart that he was officially authorized to declare publicly the glorious Gospel of God. His progress during the next two or three years appears to have been very rapid. The services he rendered were received with universal favor, and much blessed of God. He also passed some severe preliminary examinations, and in every one of them his examiners gave him praise for extensive knowledge of Scripture, and eventually he was received as a candidate for

The Ministry.

Having gone through the curriculum with credit, he was appointed to labor first of all in the city of Melbourne. After spending a year, with some blessing, in that city, he was sent away to the interior of the colony of Victoria, to do pioneering missionary work among the settlers, who were taking up the reserves. Accordingly on the Great Murray River Mr. Gribble spent five years, during which time he built five churches, and travelled many thousands of miles, scattering the seed of Divine Truth.

And now the time came for a new line of Christian life and work. Riverina, on the New South Wales side of the Murray, was in a state of great spiritual destitution. He received from the settlers there a pressing invitation to become their minister, which invitation he accepted. He removed his family (for in the meantime he had married a devoted Christian young lady, Miss M. A. Bulwer, of Geelong, of good education and comfortable social position) to Jerilderie, which became the headquarters of seventy miles long and forty miles wide. While engaged in the ordinary work of the ministry there he was brought into frequent contact with the native tribes, and he soon saw that he must relinquish his comfortable position and undertake a mission on the Murrumbidgee. For six months a severe struggle was kept up between the flesh and spirit. The flesh said, "Stay where you are; why impoverish your wife and family, and isolate them from all society?" But the Spirit said, "Go and rescue the perishing! Go and build them a home in the wilderness!" At length he said to his wife, "I cannot bear this any longer; I must bring the matter to some issue. I have just been praying about it, and I seem directed to leave the whole matter with you. If you say No, I will not go; but if you say Yes, I will go." Her answer decided him. In her own quiet way she said, "If you think God is leading us among the blacks, go, and I will do what I can to help you; but if you think God is not leading us, don't go." (See Illustration No. 3.)

His Great Parish,

He at once set about arranging matters for the establishment of the native mission. He resigned his charge, a very comfortable and successful one, and early in March, 1880, to the utter amazement of his old friends, he and his family left the town of Jerilderie. After three days and nights spent on the road they arrived at their destination—a rough log cabin in the wild forest, which had been previously secured from the owner as a temporary home for Mrs. Gribble and the children and the few black girls they had brought from Jerilderie. After a day or two Mr. Gribble drove down the river, with his four black men, in search of a suitable spot for the proposed mission, and decided to commence operations on a reserve which had but recently been legally revoked from lease. "Here, then," says Mr. Gribble, "on the south bank of the Murrumbidgee, three miles from Darlington Point, and twelve from our temporary home, we knelt down amid the beautiful pine-trees, and gave ourselves to God for the work. We then began in real earnest, cutting down the trees and preparing timber for building." (See Illustration No. 4.) It was at that time that the poor black waifs and strays in the district, hearing that a home was prepared for them, began in considerable number to flock to for protection and food. Mr. Gribble says: "Our accommodation was small and our means were slender, but seeing so many unfortunate women and children in a state of hunger and nakedness touched our deepest sympathies, and we were compelled to admit them. We had no regular or certain income except my salary for teaching, so that we were frequently reduced to the deepest poverty. But in ways most wonderful God interposed for us in every season of want, and cheered our hearts with the assurances of His favor and guidance."

Warangesda, or "House of Mercy,"

Although the work during the first two years was hard, and privations many, these trials did not affect the servants of Christ nearly as much as did the cruel conduct of those around them who were nominally and professedly Christians. In different ways they sought to break up the mission and to scatter the blacks. On one occasion a man, who passed for a gentleman, brought a case of gin during Mr. Gribble's absence, sent it to the women's camp, at some distance from the mission, and made them all helplessly intoxicated. The scene which followed was indescribable.

On another occasion the keeper of a low bush hotel supplied the camp with drink, called in the white men around, and, as an eye-witness declared, "The scene was

A Little Hell."

"The following morning," writes the missionary, "I visited the native camp, and there I witnessed a most revolting sight—poor old women and quite young girls helplessly drunk. One poor young creature, with a half-caste babe upon her bosom, staggered toward me at my approach." (See Illustration No. 5.) "I said, 'What have you been doing, Louisa?' 'I have been drinking,' she replied hysterically. 'Who gave you the drink?' 'Mr. D.,' and then, with the big tears streaming down her black face, she cried, 'Oh, do take me away from this place! I don't want to be a bad girl. I did not want to take the drink, but they made me take it.' I said, 'If you will wait till to-morrow I will bring a conveyance of some sort and take you away,' which, of course, I did, to the exceeding joy of the poor creature."

One day an employé from a neighboring station rode deliberately into the mission square, and after tearing off the stirrup-iron from his saddle and flourishing it over his head, vowed that he would kill the first man, white or black, that ventured near him. (See Engraving No. 6.) After keeping everybody in a state of the utmost terror for about half an hour he gave the missionary a fortnight's notice to break up the mission, saying that if he did not abandon it he would have to stand to the consequences.

A Crisis.

The mission were once very badly off for food. The season was very dry, and the sheep were dying of starvation. Mr. Gribble was sorely exercised, not knowing what to do; so he prayed for help and direction, and direction and help came. "An old black fellow came home one evening, saying, 'Plenty of fish down long river.' At first," says the missionary, "I took no notice, but as he kept repeating it, I said, 'All right, I will send a horseman to-morrow.' Upon this he became very warm, and said, 'You no send horse, you send big dray; plenty fish.' I was struck with the old man's confidence, and thinking that in that way the Lord might provide, I arranged for a fishing expedition. The following morning I started for the place indicated by old Jackey, with four black men. He led us on mile after mile till we were ten miles from home. Suddenly reaching a steep slope to a back-water of the river, three of the black fellows bounded down the incline, and pulling off their clothes, plunged into the water, and began spearing the fish." (See Illustration No. 7.) "Such a sight I never before witnessed. The three spearmen kept Sambo and myself gathering up and bagging, and in the course of three hours we had secured about six hundred-weight. After thanking God, we returned home, and caused a general rejoicing throughout the settlement. On the following Friday I sent Mr. Carpenter, the schoolmaster, with another party of blacks, and they brought home more; so that our fishing expedition resulted in Half a Ton of Fish.

This timely supply helped us to tide over existing difficulties. Even the black fellows themselves were amazed at our success. We could only remember Galilee, and take courage."

We cannot better close this brief outline of the history of this useful though little known mission of Mr. Gribble than by referring to the experience of two or three of those who have already died in the faith of Christ. Eliza Nelson, was, when found in the camp by Mr. Gribble, a most pitiable object; but under Christian training she soon exhibited some most attractive traits of character. First of all, she was led to see herself a lost sinner, and then there followed a simple trust in Christ, which she never lost. It was seen from the first that she was very delicate. Consumption, the dead enemy of the blacks of Australia, claimed her, and she rapidly declined. A few days before she died her sister went to the Mission House to say that Eliza was very ill, and would like to see the minister. He found her surrounded by weeping friends. She was having a hard struggle for breath. He said: "You are very weak, Eliza. Have you any fear of death?" She replied, "No, because Jesus is with me." "The Lord Jesus," he said, "is always near those who put their trust in Him, and especially those who, like you, are passing through the dark valley." Clasping her hands, and with a look full of meaning, she said, "I know that, sir, I know that." Her boy stood by her side, and to him she had said just before Mr. Gribble arrived, "Harry, I am going away from you to Jesus; I want you to be a good boy. Give Jesus your heart; serve Him, and then when you die you will meet me in heaven." (See Illustration No. 8.) Thus Eliza Nelson, one of the first-fruits of the mission, was gathered to the eternal home.

A Pure Aboriginal,

Johanna, a Little Black Girl, about twelve years of age, accompanied Mr. Gribble to the mission station from a place called Cootamundra, about one hundred and fifty miles away. "Her heart seemed pure and tender, and soon yielded to the touch of the Saviour's love. Very earnestly she listened to 'the old, old story,' until the love of Jesus became to her a great reality. One evening after service I was walking to the Mission House, when I heard the familiar pattering of bare feet behind me. Looking round, I saw the little girl. 'Well, Johanna, what is it?' With a great deal of native shyness, she replied, 'I would like you to baptize me, sir.' 'Why would you like me to baptize you?' I said. 'Because I love the Lord Jesus, sir, and I want to show my love for Him for saving me before my friends.'" (See Illustration No. 9.) "Tears came to my eyes at these touching words, and I said, 'All right, Johanna, I will baptize you;' and one Sunday shortly afterward the dear girl came forward, in the presence of the whole of our mission community, and I baptized her in the name of the Holy Trinity on her profession of repentance, faith, and love. Only a few weeks afterward Johanna's pure and loving spirit passed away from 'our home of mercy' to join that 'great multitude' before the throne. It was my sad duty to prepare the coffin, and to place the little wasted black form therein; but amid my tears joy filled my heart to overflowing at the thought of this precious gem, the glorified spirit of our dear little Waradgeri girl, shining in the Saviour's crown."

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

A Wish to be a Finger Post.—Mr. Weaver remarked at a recent meeting: "One of my little boys said to me some time ago, 'Father, do you know what I would like to be?' 'No, my boy,' I replied; 'what would you like to be?' 'Well, father, I should like to be a finger-post, showing others the way to Jesus. I can't speak or work much for Him, but if I could only be a finger-post pointing the way!' Should we not all be so many finger-posts pointing the way to our blessed Saviour, showing whose we are by our daily walk and conversation, and never missing an opportunity to direct others to the cross of Jesus Christ?"

A Timely Message from the Lord.—A Devoted evangelist remarked: "I had this week a very convincing proof that God guides His children, even in seemingly trifling things. I was asked at the beginning of the week to address a meeting that night. I had no time to prepare, so went trusting the Lord to give me a message. I had no sooner entered the anteroom than I saw that there was some disagreement between the workers. I asked the chairman what subject he wished me to speak upon, and his reply was that he would leave it to myself. I rose, and before I had finished my address I saw that the Lord had given me a special message to those people. At the close of the meeting the gloomy faces had all vanished, and the workers were smiling at each other. I was asked by one of them, 'How did you know all about our business, and were able to give us that message?' My reply was, 'I did not know anything about your affairs, but the Lord did, and He it was who sent you the message which you received to-night.'"

The Military Substitute.—Mr. White said: "At the close of the late Franco-Prussian war a visitor, walking through a part of one of the cemeteries, in which so many of the gallant soldiers of France lie buried, was surprised to come across a man standing by one of the tombs, weeping bitterly. The visitor, thinking that it might be a son or brother over whom he was mourning, went up to him and tried to comfort him. But he sternly refused to be comforted, and as he still gave way to his excessive grief, he said, as he pointed to the stone upon which was written the inscription, 'He died for me.' 'He died for me.' He then related his story. The dead and buried man had been his substitute. When he had been drawn for the army his friend had taken his place, had fought, and bled, and died for him. So Christ became our substitute, and died for us that we might live forever. And have we less gratitude to Him than that Frenchman had for his friend? Shall we hear, without obeying, His loving command, 'Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest'?"

The Wreath on the Grave.—The Rev. Mr. Ross narrated: "A young man, who had lately lost a dear friend by death, on Sabbath morning set out to visit the grave. On entering the graveyard another young man, who was lounging about, spending the Sunday morning in idleness, observed the first comer's mournful expression, and determined to follow him. He walked slowly along one of the principal paths, until he came to a recently opened grave, and there, kneeling for some minutes, he prayed earnestly; then rising, he drew from his pocket a beautiful white wreath, and laying it tenderly on the grave, turned to depart. The other young man had, in the meantime, been viewing this scene from a short distance. There he stood with curled lip, scornfully supercilious, listlessly tapping his boot with his cane, as he thought of the foolishness of putting a wreath of flowers at the feet of the dead. When the mourner had gone a few yards he advanced to the grave, and lifting the wreath, looked at it curiously, then scattering the flowers to the wind, resumed his walk. Thus the world treats the offerings of love, either to a departed friend or to a buried, risen, and victorious Saviour, as evidence of sentimental weakness, unfit for the intelligent beings of the nineteenth century. Nor do sceptics and atheists scruple in their senseless infatuation to attack that which their fellow-creatures hold most sacred, scattering it to the wind, and leaving the mourner amid his bereavement with an aching void the world can never fill."

Sad Story of an Indian Chief. Mr. Simpson remarked: "Forty-five years ago there was converted, by the instrumentality of a faithful missionary, the chief of one of the Indian tribes of Canada. He joined the Church, and for some years labored there for the salvation of his brethren; but strong drink got introduced into the tribe. The fire-water did its usual deadly work. Many of the members of the little Christian community fell under its power, and, sad to relate, that chief, the first convert of his tribe for thirty years, became a slave to this cruel appetite, and consequently wandered far from God. But the Good Shepherd followed and brought him back. At the end of thirty years in the wilderness of sin God put forth His arm and brought the wanderer again to the fold. And now, at the advanced age of eighty, he bears witness of what the Lord has done for him. But what of our civilization that sends out ministers to preach the Gospel, and at the same time exports strong drink and opium, which degrade and debase? Who would raise up the savage, only to dash him down to a still greater depth than ever?"

A Bible-Class Trophy.—Mr. Oatts Observed: "I often think I do very little for the Lord when I see others doing so much more, going to the foreign mission field, facing dangers and overcoming difficulties, while I stay at home. There is a young man, a member of my Bible-class, whom I have often watched. How earnestly and constantly he works for his Divine Master. He carries little books and tracts, which he gives to his companions, and thus gets an opportunity of speaking to them. I remember once meeting him at the house of a friend, and there he was trying to persuade a young fellow to come to our Bible-class, and ultimately he consented. At the next Bible-class meeting I stood shaking hands with the members as they went away, and toward the end, having forgotten all about this young fellow's promised visit, I was surprised to hear a voice remark, 'Well, you see I did come, after all.' I turned round and recognized him, and asked him to wait a few minutes and have a talk. He did; and the result was that before he left the room he yielded himself to Jesus, and his life now testifies to his loving, earnest devotion to his Lord."

An Irresistible Story.—An Evangelist Remarked: "A day or two ago I met the greatest swearer in Glasgow. I was visiting a house, and was in one room speaking with a friend, while this man was in another. He did not know I was in the house, so spoke quite freely, and the oaths which he used made my very blood run cold. Unable to sit calmly and hear that fearful language, I went to him, and just as he had given utterance to a more than usually blasphemous expression, I said to him, 'Are you not afraid? Do you know you are in the hand of God?' 'In the hand of God!' he repeated. 'How do you make that out? I should like to hear you prove it.' 'All nature is in God's hand,' I replied. 'Does not your body belong to nature? and you are in your body. By your own way of reasoning you are in God's hand, and God's wrath and curse is now abiding upon you. But if that were all I had to tell you, it would be bad news indeed.' Then I told him of the love of God, and of the Lamb that was slain for sinners. 'You can't prove these things,' he half-mockingly interposed. I turned to the Scripture, and after I had read the story of the Prodigal Son, the poor blasphemer burst into tears, and was completely broken down. He said, 'It is years since I heard that story, and I have tried to put it from my memory.' There and then he was enabled, by God's grace, to give himself to Christ. A brand, indeed, snatched from the burning."

THE TEMPEST.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon Preached Last Sunday Morning, June 5, 1887.

"And there arose a great storm," etc.—MARK 4 : 36–39.

A Beautiful Gem in a Glorious Setting—The Flotilla on the Lake—The Master Asleep—The Hurricane—Stilled by a Word—I. The Importance of Having Christ with the Ship—Storms in Commercial Enterprises — II. Following Christ Not Always Smooth Sailing—Martyrs in the Tempest—Their Place Nearest the Throne—III. Good People Sometimes Frightened—Spiders Trying to Imprison a Lion—Infidels Causing Fear—Fears of Revivals—A Foolish Captain's Order—The Revival at Somerville, N. J.—IV. Jesus the Divine Man—Offers Sympathy and Power—V. Christ can Hush a Tempest—The Storms of Life—Surges of Death.

TIBERIAS, Galilee, Gennesaret—three names for the same lake. No other gem ever had so beautiful a setting. It lay in a scene of great luxuriance: the surrounding hills high, terraced, sloped, groved, so many hanging gardens of beauty, the waters rumbling down between rocks of gray and red limestone, flashing from the hills and bounding into the sea. On the shore were castles, armed towers, Roman baths, everything attractive and beautiful; all styles of vegetation in shorter space than in almost any other space in all the world, from the palm-tree of the forest to the trees of rigorous climate.

It seemed as if the Lord had launched one wave of Beauty on All the Scene,

and it hung and swung from rock and hill and oleander. Roman gentlemen in pleasure boats sailing the lake, and countrymen in fish-smacks coming down to drop their nets, pass each other with nod and shout and laughter, or swinging idly at their moorings. Oh, what a wonderful, what a beautiful lake!

It seems as if we shall have a quiet night. Not a leaf winked in the air; not a ripple disturbed the face of Gennesaret; but there seems to be a little and we hasten to see what it is, and we find it an embarkation. From the western shore a flotilla pushing out; not a squadron of deadly armament, nor clipper with valuable merchandise, nor piratic vessels ready to destroy everything they could seize; but a flotilla, bearing messengers of life and light and peace. Christ is in the front of the boat. His disciples are in a smaller boat. Jesus, weary with much speaking to large multitudes, is put into somnolence by the rocking of the waves. If there was any motion at all the ship was easily righted; if the wind passed from starboard to larboard, or from larboard to starboard, the boat would rock, and by the gentleness of the motion putting

Excitement Up the Beach,

The Master Asleep.

And they extemporized a pillow made out of a fisherman's coat. I think no sooner is Christ prostrate, and His head touched the pillow, than He is sound asleep. The breezes of the lake run their fingers through the locks of the worn sleeper, and the boat rises and falls like a sleeping child on the bosom of a sleeping mother. Calm night, starry night, beautiful night. Run up all the sails, ply all the oars, and let the large boat and the small boat glide over gentle Gennesaret. But the sailors say there is going to be a change of weather. And even the passengers can hear the moaning of the storm, as it comes on with great stride, and all the terrors of Hurricane and Darkness.

The large boat trembles like a deer at bay among the clangor of the hounds; great patches of foam are flung into the air; the sails of the vessel loosen, and the sharp winds crack like pistols; the smaller boats like petrels poise on the cliff of the waves and then plunge. Overboard go cargo, tackling, and masts, and the drenched disciples rush into the back part of the boat, and lay hold of Christ, and say unto Him, "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" That great Personage lifts His head from the pillow of the fisherman's coat, walks to the front of the vessel, and looks out into the storm. All around Him are the smaller boats, driven in the tempest, and through it comes the cry of drowning men. By the flash of the lightning I see the calm brow of Christ as the spray dropped from His beard. He has one word for the sky, and another for the waves. Looking upward, He cries, "Peace!" Looking downward, He says, "Be still."

The waves fall flat on their faces, the foam melts, the stars re-light their torches.

The Tempest Falls Dead, and Christ stands with His feet on the neck of the storm. And while the sailors are bailing out the boats, and while they are trying to untangle the cordage, the disciples stand in amazement, now looking into the calm sea, then into the calm sky, then into the calm Saviour's countenance, and they cry out, "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey Him?"

I. The subject in the first place impresses me with the fact that it is very important to have

Christ with the Ship;

for all those boats would have gone to the bottom of Gennesaret if Christ had not been present. Oh, what a lesson for you and for me to learn! We must always have Christ in the ship. Whatever voyage we undertake, into whatever enterprise we start, let us always have Christ in the ship. Many of you in these days of revived commerce are starting out in new financial enterprises. I bid you good cheer. Do all you can do. Do it on as high a plane as possible. You have no right to be a stoker in the ship, if you can be an admiral of the navy. You have no right to be a colonel of a regiment, if you can command a brigade; you have no right to be engineer of a boat on river banks, or near the coast, if you can take the ocean steamer from New York to Liverpool. All you can do with utmost tension of body, mind, and soul, you are bound to do; but, oh! have Christ in every enterprise, Christ in every voyage, Christ in every ship.

There are men who ask God to help them at

The Start of Great Enterprises.

He has been with them in the past: no trouble can overthrow them; the storms might come down from the top of Mount Hermon, and lash Gennesaret into foam and into agony, but it could not hurt them. But here is another man who starts out in worldly enterprise, and he depends upon the uncertainties of this life. He has no God to help him. After a while the storm comes, and tosses off the masts of the ship; he puts out his life-boat and the long-boat; the sheriff and the auctioneer try to help him off; they can't help him off; he must go down; no Christ in the ship. Here are young men just starting out in life. Your life will be made up of sunshine and shadow. There may be in it Arctic blasts, or tropical tornadoes; I know not what is before you, but I know if you have Christ with you all shall be well.

You may seem to get along without the religion of Christ while everything goes smoothly, but when sorrow hovers over the soul, when dash clear over the hurricane deck, and the decks are crowded with piratical disasters—oh, what would you do then without Christ in the ship? Young man, take God for your portion, God for your guide, God for your help; then all is well; all is well for time, all shall be well forever. Blessed is that man who puts in the Lord his trust. He shall never be confounded.

The Waves of Trial

II. But my subject also impresses me with the fact that when people start to follow Christ they Must Not Expect Smooth Sailing.

These disciples got into the small boats, and I have no doubt they said, "What a beautiful day this is! What a smooth sea! What a bright sky this is! How delightful is sailing in this boat! and as for the waves under the keel of the boat, why, they only make the motion of our little boat the more delightful." But when the winds swept down, and the sea was tossed into wrath, then they found that following Christ was not smooth sailing. So you have found it; so I have found it. Did you ever notice the end of the life of the apostles of Jesus Christ? You would say if ever men ought to have had a smooth life, a smooth departure, then the disciples of Jesus Christ ought to have had such a departure and such a life.

St. James lost his head. St. Philip was hung to death on a pillar. St. Matthew had his life dashed out with a halbert. St. Mark was dragged to death through the streets. St. James the Less was beaten to death with a fuller's club. St. Thomas was struck through with a spear. They did not find following Christ smooth sailing. Oh, how they were

All Tossed in the Tempest!

John Huss in the fire; Hugh McKail in the hour of martyrdom; the Albigenses, the Waldenses, the Scotch Covenanters—did they find it smooth sailing? But why go to history when I can come into this audience to-day and find a score of illustrations of the truth of this subject. That young man in the store trying to serve God, while his employer scoffs at Christianity, the young men in the same store antagonistic to the Christian religion, teasing him, tormenting him about his religion, trying to get him mad. They succeed in getting him mad, saying, "You're a pretty Christian." Does this young man find it smooth sailing when he tries to follow Christ? Here is a Christian girl. Her father despises the Christian religion; her mother despises the Christian religion; her brothers and sisters scoff at the Christian religion; she can hardly find a quiet place in which to say her prayers. Did she find it smooth sailing when she tried to follow Jesus Christ? Oh, no; all who would live the life of the Christian religion must suffer persecution; if you do not find it in one way, you will get it in another way.

The question was asked, "Who are those nearest the throne?" and the answer came back, "These are they who came up out of great tribulation"—great flailing, as the original has it; great flailing, great pounding—"and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb." Oh, do not be disheartened! Oh, child of God take courage! You are in glorious companionship. God will see you through all these trials, and He will deliver you.

III. My subject also impresses me with the fact that sometimes Good People Get Frightened.

In the tones of these disciples as they rushed into the back part of the boat, I find they are frightened almost to death. They say, "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" They had no reason to be frightened, for Christ was in the boat. I suppose if we had been there we would have been just as much affrighted. Perhaps more.

In all ages very good people get very much affrighted. It is often so in our day, and men say, "Why, look at the bad lectures; look at the spiritualistic societies; look at the various errors going over the Church of God; we are going to founder; the Church is going to perish; she is going down." Oh, how many good people are affrighted by iniquity in our day, and think the Church of Jesus Christ is going to be overthrown, and are just as much affrighted as were the disciples of my text. Don't worry, don't fret, as though iniquity were going to triumph over righteousness.

A lion goes into a cavern to sleep. He lies down, with his shaggy mane covering the paws. Meanwhile the spiders spin a web across the mouth of the cavern, and say, "We have captured him." Gossamer thread after gossamer thread is spun until the whole front of the cavern is covered with the spiders' web, and the spiders say, "The lion is done; the lion is fast." After a while the lion has got through sleeping; he rouses himself; he shakes his mane; he walks out into the sunlight; he does not even know the spiders' web is spun, and with his voice he shakes the mountain. So men come spinning their sophistries and scepticism about Jesus Christ;

He Seems to be Sleeping.

They say, "We have captured the Lord; He will never come forth again upon the nation; Christ is captured forever. His religion will never make any conquest among men." But after a while the Lion of the Tribe of Judah will rouse Himself and come forth to shake mightily the nations. What's a spider's web to the aroused lion? Give truth and error a fair grapple, and truth will come off victor.

But there are a great many good people who get affrighted in other respects; they are affrighted in our day about revivals. They say, "Oh, this is a strong religious gale; we are afraid the Church of God is going to be upset, and there are going to be a great many people brought into the Church that are going to be of no use to it!" and they are affrighted whenever they see a revival in the churches.

As though a ship captain with five thousand bushels of wheat for a cargo should say some day, coming upon deck, "Throw overboard all cargo;" and the sailors should say, "Why, captain, what do you mean? Throw over all the cargo?" "Oh," says the captain, "we have a peck of chaff that has got into this five thousand bushels of wheat, and the only way to get rid of the chaff is to throw all the wheat overboard!" Now, that is a great deal wiser than the talk of a great many Christians who want to throw overboard all the thousands and tens of thousands of souls who are the subjects of revivals. Throw all overboard because they are brought into the kingdom of God through great revivals, because there is a peck of chaff, a quart of chaff, a pint of chaff! I say, let them stay until the Last Day; the Lord will divide the chaff from the wheat.

Do not be afraid of a great revival. Oh, that these gales from heaven might sweep through all our churches! Oh, for such days as Richard Baxter saw in England and Robert McCheyne saw in Dundee! Oh, for such days as Jonathan Edwards saw in Northampton! I have often heard my father tell of the fact that in the early part of this century there broke out and some people were very much agitated about it. They said, "Oh, you are going to bring too many people into the Church at once;" and they sent down to New Brunswick to get John Livingston to stop the revival! Well, there was no better soul in all the world than John Livingston. He went and looked at the revival; they wanted him to stop it. He stood in the pulpit on the Sabbath, and looked over the solemn auditory, and he said, "This, brethren, is in reality the work of God; beware how you try to stop it." And he was an old man, leaning heavily on his staff—a very old man. And he lifted that staff, and took hold of the small end of the staff, and began to let it fall very slowly through between the finger and the thumb, and he said, "Oh, thou impenitent, thou art falling now—falling away from life, falling away from peace and heaven, falling as certainly as that cane is falling through my hand—falling certainly, though perhaps falling slowly." And the cane kept on falling through John Livingston's hand. The religious

A Revival at Somerville, N. J.,

Emotion in the Audience was overpowering, and men saw a type of their doom, as the cane kept falling and falling, until the knob of the cane struck Mr. Livingston's hand, and he clasped it stoutly, and said, "But the grace of God can stop you, as I stopped that cane;" and then there was gladness all through the house at the fact of pardon and peace and salvation. "Well," said the people after the service, "I guess you had better send Livingston home; he is making the revival worse." Oh, for the gales from heaven, and Christ on board the ship! The danger of the Church of God is not in revivals.

IV. Again my subject impresses me with the fact that in the same being. Here He is in the back part of the boat. Oh, how tired He looks; what sad dreams He must have! Look at His countenance; He must be thinking of the cross to come. Look at Him, He is a man—bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh. Tired, He falls asleep; He is a man! But then I find Christ at the prow of the boat; I hear Him say, "Peace, be still;" and I see the storm kneeling at His feet, and the tempests folding their wings in His presence; He is a God!

Jesus was God and Man

If I have sorrow and trouble and want sympathy, I go and kneel down at the back part of the boat, and say, "Oh, Christ! weary One of Gennesaret, sympathize with all my sorrows, Man of Nazareth, Man of the Cross." A man, a man! But if I want to conquer my spiritual foes, if I want to get the victory over sin, death, and hell, I come to the front of the boat, and I kneel down, and I say, "Oh, Lord Jesus Christ, Thou who dost hush the tempest, hush all my grief; hush all my temptation, hush all my sin!" A man, a man; a God, a God!

V. I learn once more from this subject that Christ can Hush a Tempest.

It did seem as if everything must go to ruin. The disciples had given up the idea of managing the ship; the crew were entirely demoralized; yet Christ rises, and He puts His foot on the storm, and it crouches at His feet. Oh, yes! Christ can hush the tempest.

You have had trouble. Perhaps it was the little child taken away from you—the sweetest child of the household, the one who asked the most curious questions, and stood around you with the greatest fondness, and the spade cut down through your bleeding heart. Perhaps it was an only son, and your heart has ever since been like a desolated castle, the owls of the night hooting among the falling arches and the crumbling stairways.

Perhaps it was an aged mother. You always went to her with Your Troubles.

She was in your home to welcome your children into life, and when they died she was there to pity you; that old hand will do you no more kindness; that white lock of hair you put away in the casket, or in the locket, didn't look as it usually did when she brushed it away from her wrinkled brow in the home circle, or in the country church. Or, your property gone, you said, "I have so much bank stock, I have so many Government securities, I have so many houses, I have so many farms"—all gone.

Why, sir, all the storms that ever trampled their thunders, all the shipwrecks have not been worse than this to you. Yet you have not been completely overthrown. Why? Christ hushed the tempest. Your little one was taken away. Christ says, "I have that little one in My keeping. I can care for him as well as you can, better than you can, oh bereaved mother!" Hushing the tempest. When your property went away, God said, "There are treasures in heaven, in banks that never break." Jesus hushing the tempest.

There is one storm into which we will all have to run. The moment when we let go of this life and try to take hold of the next, we will want all the grace possible. Yonder I see a Christian soul rocking all the powers of darkness seem let out against that soul—the swirling wave, the thunder of the sky, the shriek of the wind, all seem to unite together; but that soul is not troubled; there is no sighing, there are no tears; plenty of tears in the room at the departure, but he weeps no tears; calm, satisfied, peaceful; all is well. By the flash of the storm you see the harbor just ahead, and you are making for that harbor. All shall be well. Jesus hushing the tempest.

On the Surges of Death;

"Into the harbor of heaven now we glide;
We're home at last, home at last.
Softly we drift on its bright, silv'ry tide,
We're home at last.
Glory to God! all our dangers are o'er,
We stand secure on the glorified shore;
Glory to God! we will shout evermore,
We're home at last."

AN OLD TUNE WITH A NEW NAME.

(See Illustration on page 365.)

AN appetizing smell pervaded the blacksmith's dwelling, and, if you had watched the movements of the blacksmith's buxom wife you would not have been in any doubt as to the cause. It was nearing twelve o'clock, when the children would be home from school, and when Mark Brainerd would lay aside his tools, and come in from the adjoining shop with an appetite that was not easily satisfied. At present his hammer was going vigorously, as if cessation for dinner was nowhere in his mind. His wife could hear it, for it made the whole house vibrate, but she knew that when the children came home not another blow would be struck, Mark would come in and set to at his dinner with the same vigor as he displayed at his work, and when that was done he would rise and return to the anvil with his usual declaration, "I've eaten well and drunken well; now I'll go and worken well."

The shouts of the children trooping out of school fell on Emma's ear, as she laid the cloth for dinner, and in a few minutes little Luke and his sister Martha rushed in. The blacksmith heard them, and, without waiting to change his apron came into the kitchen, which served also as dining-room for the family.

"Look here, father," said little Luke, rushing up to the blacksmith with an open blank book. "And look at this, father," said little Martha, holding up her slate. These exhibitions always were submitted to Mark, for it was no use, as the children knew, showing them to mother while she had the dinner on her mind. And, besides, mother's tongue had always a sharp speech within reach, which father's never had.

Mark looked down at the two little ones with a glance full of genuine affection. "Ah! what's this?" he said, seizing Luke's book. "Music. Why, lad, thou'rt coming on. I'm the boy for music. Sooner you learned that than all the Latin in the world."

"Copied it myself, father," said Luke, proudly.

But Mark was not listening; he was staring intently at the manuscript score, as if he could not believe his own eyes. At last snapping his fingers in ecstatic glee, he cried, "Here's a joke, Emma. What do you think of a Yankee schoolmaster teaching his boys 'God Save the Queen.' Listen, Luke, boy, I'll sing it for you. Many's the time I've sung it in the old country." And Mark, in a rich bass voice, trolled "God Save Our Gracious Queen, Long—"

"Stop, father," said Luke, holding up a warning finger. "That's not it. You've got the tune, but there's no words like them to it. 'My Country 'tis of Thee—'"

"Nonsense, boy; this is the British National Anthem. You ask your mother."

"Yes; that's it," said Emma, promptly, agreeing for once with her husband.

The boy looked puzzled, but Mark was delighted. "Best joke I've had for months; I can't hardly wait till night till I put the laugh on the teacher. They've taken our tune and called it, "America," and put new words to it. Ha, ha, ha!" and the blacksmith fairly roared.

"Ain't it a good tune, father?"

"Oh, yes, it's good enough, but I never thought to hear it here! I'm glad, though, they've put new words to it. I should not care to hear 'em sing about gracious queens or kings in this country. The tune's enough to make Washington turn in his grave."

"Nonsense," said Emma, "don't put such ideas in the boy's mind. Don't set him against the Queen."

"Well, boy, I'll say no more about it now. You'll learn fast enough when you're older. You stick to the Stars and Stripes, though, and own no king but Jesus. He is my King now, thank the Lord. You stand up for Him, and He'll never treat you with scorn as the wretched creatures do as call themselves kings nowadays. I'll say nothing about queens as your mother's here."

"For shame, Mark," was Emma's comment.

A PARALYZED MAN'S RECOVERY.

THE following testimony by R. E. Jeanson, of Iowa, is from a statement published by Dr. A. B. Simpson in his Word, Work, and World:

"One day, four years ago, while speeding my horse on the prairie, it stepped into a wolf or badger hole, and fell with me. When I awoke —I do not know how long I was unconscious— I tried to rise, but my limbs would not assist me. They were paralyzed. The grass was two or three feet high. Evening was drawing near, and I feared the worst. If I did not die before dark, wolves would attack me during the night. I prayed, and got rest in Jesus. The horse returning home riderless alarmed them, and men started in search of me. As it was the spinal cord that was injured near the base of brain, I suffered the most intense agony. I was brought home, but my body was so sensitive that every particle of clothing was cut in pieces and removed.

"The pain in my arms was so intense that if a fly lit on them or on my hands, it would cause almost unendurable suffering. My lower limbs slowly regained their sensibility, but the arms and hands remained the same. Doctors came to take me to New York. They had me out several times, but were obliged to turn back, as I could not endure the movement. A stretcher was procured from Clear Lake, Iowa, and hung in rubber straps. It was thought I could be carried in this way; but no, they did not get me over forty rods before we had to turn back.

"One day I said to my wife, 'Do you believe this just as it reads: "If any is sick among you, call the elders, let them pray over you, anointing with oil in the name of Jesus"?' 'Yes,' she said, 'but now where are the elders that believe this?' They as well as myself had preached and taught that this part of the Word of God belonged to the apostolic time when the Word of God had to be established by signs and wonders. I turned to my wife, saying, 'Wife, as you are the only one that believes God in this promise at this place, I call you to act in accordance with the Word of God. Bring the oil.' She brought it, knelt by my bed, prayed and rubbed the suffering parts with the oil. We were feeling our way in the twilight, praying that Jesus would bless this means, as we had acted according to His Word, instead of taking Jesus as our Healer and the anointing as a seal of accepted healing. Still, the Lord blessed us as far as we could trust Him. My wife arose from her kneeling position, thanking the Lord that I should be healed, never from that moment doubting my recovery. From that moment life force was visible in the apparently lifeless parts, and the swelling of the hands commenced to go down. Still we had not learned that we must give up doctoring, so my wife, as soon as I was able, took me to New York.

"I now searched for and found such people as could rely on the Lord for the healing of the body as well as the soul. Finally, I was directed to the Tabernacle, and the Spirit assured me at once that I was in the right place.

"I was anointed by Mr. Simpson, went West with my heart full of Jesus, who now was to me all in all. I now looked no more to Jesus to patch up this poor miserable me, but took Him as mine, to will and to do in me according to His own good pleasure."

A REPRIEVE ON THE SCAFFOLD.

A DESPERATE race against time, with a man's life as the stake, was won by a few seconds in Georgia two weeks ago. In a prison at Reidsville, an out-of-the-way corner of that State, was a man named Jacob Leggett, who had been convicted of murder, and whose execution was fixed for May 13th. On the morning of May 12th the governor received a communication which satisfied him that the execution ought not to take place. He therefore signed a reprieve, and sent it to the prisoner's lawyer, asking him to deliver it to the sheriff. This was done, because Reidsville is separated from the nearest telegraph station by forty miles of very bad road, and a telegram to the sheriff would not be likely to arrive in time. The lawyer, realizing that he had not a minute to spare, set out immediately. The first twenty miles of his journey was through the swamps and lowlands of Liberty County, and the remaining twenty miles in Tattnall County lay through dense pine woods—a bad prospect for an all-night ride. On the swiftest horse to be had the lawyer rode at a furious speed, but the country was bad and there were many delays. He was still some miles from his destination when the sun rose, and the lawyer began to despair. He urged his tired horse to a final effort, and at last dashed into the crowd assembled to witness the execution. The noose was around the man's neck, his arms were pinioned, and the sheriff, axe in hand, had gone below to cut the rope. The lawyer gave a loud shout, and waved the reprieve. The sheriff dropped his axe and read the official order. When the condemned man heard the news he seemed paralyzed for a moment, unable to realize that his life was given to him. Then the noose being removed from his neck, he dropped on his knees and, with tears, poured out his thanks to God. He did not hear the news with indifference or incredulity, as men do who, in danger of an infinitely worse fate, listen to the message of pardon and eternal life which ministers of the Gospel deliver to them (Rom. 5 : 18).

PRAYER ANSWERED BY A JOKE.

TWO dollars found in an old man's shoes was recognized as an answer to prayer recently. A Southern journal states that a short time ago a professor was walking in the country with one of his students, a wealthy young man, when they saw an old man hoeing in a corn-field. He was advancing with his work toward the road, by the side of which lay his shoes. As it was near sunset, the student proposed to play the old man a joke. "I will hide his shoes." "No," said the professor; "it would not be right. You have money enough, just put a dollar in the old man's shoes, then we will hide behind the bushes and see what he will do." The student agreed to the proposal, and they concealed themselves accordingly. When the laborer had finished his row of corn he came out of the field to go home. He put on one shoe, felt something hard, took it off, and found the dollar. He then put on the other shoe, and found another dollar. He looked at it, and looked all around him, but saw no one. He then knelt upon the ground, and returned thanks to God for the blessings which had been conferred upon him. The listeners learned from the prayer that the old man's wife and one of his children were sick, and that they were very poor, and that the old man had been praying to God to help him in his trouble. His thanksgiving showed that he knew who had sent the dollars, though he might have been surprised had he known that God had overruled a spirit of mischief to fulfil His promise (Ps. 91 : 15).

A REMINDER TO AN UNDERGRADUATE.

AN incident which shows how much good is sometimes done through a word of earnest admonition was related recently at a meeting when the subject of tract distribution was under consideration. A clergyman said:

"Some fifteen years ago a young Cambridge undergraduate was travelling during his holiday in the Lake country. He was separated from his companions, and happened to get a seat in the corner of a railway carriage which was filled with young men. The train drew up at a railway station, and a gentleman opened the door, and handed him a tract. This young Cambridge undergraduate was not altogether thoughtless with regard to religious things, but, alas! he was content merely with going once or twice to the house of God upon the Sunday, and striving to live as far as possible, so he thought, a moral life. But if there was one thing which he despised it was the giving of tracts. So he refused the tract, and, of course, when it was offered to the next man in the carriage, he likewise refused, because you know young men are very like sheep, and where one leads, the others are pretty sure to follow. The tract was offered all the way round the railway carriage, and every man refused. The gentleman who offered the tract shut the door with a sigh, saying to the undergraduate, 'Remember, sir, you have a soul,' and went away. Those simple words fell like a stone in the stagnant pool of that young man's heart. 'Remember, sir, you have a soul.' At first he got angry. 'Why did the man tell me that I had got a soul? I know I have got a soul as well as he does.' Still the word sank, driven in by the power of God's Holy Spirit. The very thud of the engine seemed to him to say, 'Remember, you have a soul.' The words stuck and went home, and when he returned to Cambridge he allied himself to some other Christian men, who taught him the way of God more perfectly. He entered the ministry, and that young Cambridge undergraduate is the speaker who is addressing you to-night."

A NERVOUS MAN'S REQUEST.

THAT religion inspires confidence even among unbelievers was proved by an incident related by the Rev. E. Mackenzie Cobham, who has recently returned from India. He says:

"Christianity in South India has won the respect and esteem of the whole community. Not very long ago one of my evangelists met in the street a Hindoo with a troubled countenance —a man who had a great deal of money with him. He had gone to the town to collect a debt, and he had got it. He had tied the money round his waist. Then came anxiety about its safety. He was afraid, since he was in a strange town, that it might be stolen, and that he might be murdered. He met my evangelist, and saw by his dress that he was a Christian; he saw, too, by his face that he was a Christian; for God puts a bit of sunshine beneath a brown skin, you know. He said, 'Sir, I should like to stay at your house, if you please, to-night.' 'Oh, but,' said the evangelist, 'my dear sir, I am a Christian, you are a Hindoo; there are thousands of Hindoos here!' 'Yes, it is just because you are a Christian I want to stay with you. I can trust a Christian, but I cannot trust a Hindoo.' And he stayed. Yet another: one of our vakeels, or lawyers, was struck down with paralysis just before I came away from India. A Maharajah, one of the best-known princes in India, heard of his illness, and sent to invite him to stay at one of his palaces, knowing all the time he was a native Christian. These things show that the intelligent Hindoos in the country feel that Christianity is a power."

INCIDENTS OF WORK AMONG THE SANTHALS.

ONE of the regions in which Christianity has been preached with signal tokens of success is Santhalistan, a district in the Province of Bengal, India. It has a population of a million and a half, and gross spiritual darkness lay upon the land until American and English missionaries, taking their lives in their hands, went there and preached Christ to the people. The results, morally as well as spiritually, have been most blessed. The following interesting incidents of the work are related by Mr. Stephenson, who has labored in that country for many years:

The Solitary Christian.

One of the first-fruits to Christ was the chief of a village. Soon after the mission was opened he made his appearance, announcing that he wished to be taught Christianity. In the course of conversation we found that some time ago a missionary had passed through his district, scattering the seed of Divine truth as he went, and this young chief had heard enough of the Gospel to make him ardently thirst for more. As soon as he heard that there was a Christian missionary in the neighborhood, he hastened to learn what more he was able of the way of eternal life through Jesus Christ. He became deeply interested and anxious concerning his soul's salvation, but he soon found in the Lord Jesus his Saviour. For seventeen years he was the only Christian in the district; but he remained steadfast, and to-day his testimony bears abundant fruit. He is now no longer alone, but is surrounded by a large Christian community.

A Devotees' Fair.

I was once at a religious fair in Santhal, and the people came to it in thousands. It was held upon a vacant piece of ground, upon which numerous booths had been erected. The whole ceremony consisted in the devotees bringing their offerings. One might be seen carrying a bunch of grapes, perhaps others would approach with a little Indian corn, which they threw at an idol, then salaaming, went away. The offerings then given were divided into two portions, the one for the priests, and the other for the landlord, on whose ground the booths were erected. As I stood looking upon this scene, I noticed, in one part of the ground, a woman kneeling before a stone on which was some moistened rice, and on the top some large fruit. She was praying for something, and the sign was, if the fruit fell toward her, then her prayer was granted, but if it fell from her, her request was refused. How sorely do people so given over to superstition need the light and liberty of the Gospel!

A Boycotted Head-Man.

A Santhal villager came into the hospital to be treated, and while there he heard the Word of God proclaimed. When he was cured and ready to return to his home, he asked to be allowed to stay in the school. He was a man considerably over thirty years of age, but he sat down among the others and became a disciple of the Lord Jesus. After his conversion he said, "I want to serve Jesus; let me go that I may tell my friends of Him." He was the headman of the village, and he called his friends together, and told them of the way of salvation. They tried in many ways to dissuade him from his loyalty to Christ, but it was of no use, he remained firm and came back to us, and was baptized, and then he returned to his village again, determined to live quietly as before. But that was not to be; he was cast out from among his people, and even those who ate with him had to pay a heavy fine. But he thought that if he let them pay their own fines it would prejudice them against Christianity, so he paid their fines himself, and became a common laborer for the sake of the Lord. His sacrifice has not been in vain, for now his wife, his brother, and his nephew have all, through his example and preaching, been brought to accept and publicly acknowledge the Lord.

A Santhal Convention.

About two years ago there was a short time when there was very little of God's blessing evident on our work, and it was resolved that we should have a three days' conference for Christian fellowship and prayer to the Lord. It was a most interesting meeting, and to hear the simple remarks made by the Christian natives as they read the Bible, and made their whole-hearted utterances in prayer as they laid their requests before God, was most interesting and solemn. At that meeting I got a letter from a young man, who had been prayed for six weeks before, stating that he had given himself to the Lord. And what joy was reflected upon the faces of all present, when they saw that God was answering their prayer, even while they were asking. The last meeting of that conference was held in the open air, and one young fellow asked us to pray for him, as he was to be left there all alone to stand up for Christ. We prayed for him, then the others jumped up, one after another, to be especially prayed for, until at last the meeting was closed.

Native Preaching at Home.

A young man, eighteen years of age, once came to the mission, and after a short time gave himself up to the Lord. He was married, and his first efforts were toward the bringing in of his wife to Christ. This was most difficult, as upon his conversion she was taken from him by her friends; but, through God's blessing, he succeeded, and now they both live most happily together. Then his brothers and his sisters were converted to Christ, and eventually his old heathen mother. When last I saw him he said to me, "Now I am very hopeful of my grandmother." "Why?" I asked. "Because first she would not stay in the room at family worship, but now she stays in, and kneels down." And then he added, "Oh, please pray for me!"

DEACON ABRAHAM'S WORK IN PERSIA.

(See Pictures on page 364.)

DEACON ABRAHAM, of Oroomiah, Persia, is well known throughout that country as an earnest devoted worker for Christ. He belongs to the Nestorians, about whom some particulars were given in this journal on December 23d, 1886, in connection with Mr. Yaroo M. Neesan, whose portrait was then given. Oroomiah, where Deacon Abraham is laboring, is in a locality famous for its historical associations. It is in the neighborhood of ancient Assyria and the old city of Nineveh. It is not far from Mount Ararat and the city of Shushan. At one time the region was beautiful, but now it is wasted and spoiled, and presents a picture of desolation. The roads are bad, and robberies are very frequent. The people, for the most part, are miserably poor and densely ignorant. The peculiar nature of the Deacon's work among the people thus situated is of a very remarkable and interesting nature.

Deacon Abraham is about fifty years old, and had the privilege of being born of Christian parents, both of whom were members of the Nestorian Church. He cherishes the tradition that his ancestors went to China as missionaries as early as the seventh century, and there they continued to labor in the service of Christ until the twelfth century. He himself is a most enlightened and enthusiastic follower of the Saviour, and has been a preacher and teacher of the religion of Jesus ever since he was fifteen years of age.

Second only to his devotion to the cause of Christ is his patriotic love for his native land and fellow-countrymen. Twice has he left his home, and travelled to England, in the hope of enlisting the sympathy of the British Government and people for his race. Subject alike to the depredations of the Kurds and to the oppression of the Persian Government, the Nestorians are between the upper and nether millstones. On the occasion of his last visit, in 1884, he gave a sketch of his labors, his efforts, and his hopes. In the course of it he said:

"It was about ten years ago, after looking at the condition of my own people, and the darkness in which they were living, especially in the mountains of Kurdistan, for there were only one or two people in some villages who could read, and while seeing them under Mohammedan rule, as the Israelites of old were under the Egyptians, that I resolved to come to England. Accordingly, with three members of my own people, I took of Kurdistan, and started for England in November, 1874. Coming over the mountains and crossing the Tigris and the Euphrates on our way, we went down to Jerusalem by caravan, and visited one place after another. It took us a long time to do all this, but at last we came to those spots we desired most to see. We went to the Garden of Gethsemane, and while there we thought of Christ's agony and bloody sweat. We went to where stood the temple, to the sepulchre, and to the various places of interest in the Holy Land.

My Journey Through the Mountains

"After visiting the Holy Land, we made our way to London. On arriving we found that the course which we had thought good could not be taken, although the Archbishop of Canterbury was kind enough to receive us and to hear our petition. We also had an interview with the Earl of Shaftesbury.

"Still, what we had come for was to work for the good of our own people, and to get right done for them through the influence of the English people. This, however, we found was rather difficult, although in some way something was done. But I am very thankful that we had the opportunity of stating the case to so many good men. At last I saw Lord Salisbury, and I told him all about the political wants of my people. His lordship kindly promised to assist us as much as he could.

"After my return home, in addition to the work of peaching the Gospel, I intended to open

A School for Poor Boys, who could not afford to pay for going to school. So in 1879 I opened one school, then two, and then four, and five schools. I gave those who came everything except their food. But in that summer of 1879 there came a great drought, and my country lost its crops of corn. Then the autumn of that year brought with it unusually heavy rains, which destroyed the vineyards, and so we lost our vine crops. A severe famine sprung up, until bread became twenty times dearer than it was before or than it is now. The consequence was that about twenty thousand people perished in our neighborhood alone, and many corpses were eaten by dogs. Neither Mohammedans nor the Government would help in this dreadful state of things. They used to say, 'It is a judgment from the Lord that they should die in this way—so let them die.'

"Then I myself saw that, probably, we should be under very great difficulties. I could not clearly see my way out of them, but I gave myself to prayer, and began to write to friends in England. One day I was visiting my schools, in which I had one hundred and ten children and three teachers, and I saw it was impossible for them to go on—they could not prosper, and were not prospering. I asked if there was any reason for this. 'Oh,' was the answer, 'many of them come here without any breakfast!' On this I closed the school. But I kept on praying to the Lord, and writing to my friends in England. And in the great hour of need help came over, and I was enabled to do some good to those around me. This went on till April of 1880. I saw that we were going to have a very severe season, and that unless something was done at once for the children, who were quite destitute, that to-morrow they would be dead. Thus it was that I found myself becoming

The Director of an Orphanage.

"After a little while the famine was over and gone, and we had a good harvest. But then the Kurds came and invaded us, and as we Christians believed that we should be trodden down under their feet I sought an interview with the Sheik Obeidola. I was granted the privilege of seeing him because I had an English dress; and I told him that it would be far better for him if he did not persecute the Christians. He promised that he would no longer do so. We were thenceforth well preserved in one way, although four or five of our villages were burned, our people killed, and their property taken. After that help came to us from the Persians, and the Kurds could not remain.

"Then it became necessary to keep on with the Orphanage, and I built premises for it, and the blessing of the Lord came to us and to our schools, and the name of the Lord was glorified, and the condition of the children was changed temporally and spiritually, and the Holy Ghost appeared to rest on them. My great wish is that they should work and get their own living. We may make farmers of them, teachers, and of course preachers of the Gospel. We want to see as many of these as the Lord will help to make, for the people around us, Persians and Kurds, although Mohammedans, will, I believe, in time receive the Gospel of Christ Jesus."

The pictures on page 364 give first of all the portraits of four young men whom the Deacon saved from the devastating famine in 1880, and who are now students in the American College, in Oroomiah, hoping shortly to go forth among the Kurds and Mohammedans as evangelists of Christ. The photograph from which the engraving has been made was taken by the Deacon's son, Simon. The second picture shows a threshing instrument drawn by a yoke of oxen, with two men belonging to Deacon Abraham's institution directing operations.

Five Cents, Postage Free.

END OF THIS AGE ABOUT THE END OF THIS CENTURY,

and its Last Week Passover Week, Ending on Thursday, April 11, 1901,

As shown by Daniel's 2300 and 1335 and 1290 Years this being the termination also of the 6000 Years from the Creation of Man, and the 2520 Years from Nebuchadnezzar, and the 360 Years from Luther's Reformation, according to the Bible periods—a pamphlet of 29 pages—by Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal Clergyman and one of the Editors of the "Christian Herald;" Author of "Forty Coming Wonders," "Coming Wars," etc. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Present Condition of the Fishery Difficulty with Canada is more hopeful. In the course of a despatch received by the New York Tribune, and published on Saturday last, purporting to give the opinions of Secretary Bayard, he says: "There has been a proposition made by Lord Salisbury, and another by myself. No settlement, however, has been arrived at. The official correspondence will be made public at the proper time. At present I cannot say anything regarding that correspondence. Lord Salisbury has throughout shown a spirit of moderation, fairness, and a desire to arrive at an honorable and satisfactory settlement of the case, honorable and satisfactory to both countries alike. Since the fishery season opened our fishermen have been treated with courtesy, and have been met in a spirit far different from that which they encountered last year. The whole controversy at present turns upon the interpretation of the article in the existing treaty referring to the fisheries in Canadian waters. The Canadians claim that that article allows our vessels to enter their ports for three purposes only, to obtain shelter, water, or make repairs, and for no other purpose. We claim that they can enter for any purpose, except fishing."

A Remarkable Speech by Senator Sherman, delivered at Springfield, Ill., on June 1st, shows that the announcement was premature which represented him as laboring to remove sectional animosity, and anxious to promote amity and kindly feeling. The following extract from his speech shows Mr. Sherman's present attitude: "There is not an intelligent man in this broad land of either party who does not know that Mr. Cleveland is now President of the United States by virtue of crimes against the elective franchise, including murder, arson, ballot-box stuffing, forgery, and perjury, but for which James G. Blaine would now be in his place. There has not been a moment since the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment when, if there could have been a fair election for President, a majority of the Constitutional voters of at least five of the Southern States would not have voted for the Republican nominee. One duty I think the Republican Party has not yet performed, and that is that in States where it is ascertained that free and orderly elections for Senators and Representatives in Congress cannot be had, Congress should assert and exercise its unquestioned power to regulate the times, places, and manner of holding such elections."

The Advocates of High License Have Met with another repulse in New York. The "Vedder" Bill, passed by the Legislature, was vetoed by Governor Hill on May 30th. The Governor's objections to the bill are twofold. First, that it would be unequal and unjust in its operation, and it would tax the interests of localities for the benefit of the State at large. Thus, the Governor argues, it was flagrantly unjust, levying a tax upon certain cities eight times as great as that upon others, and thirteen times as great as upon towns and villages. Secondly, that while the bill proposed to put the main burden of the tax upon the large cities, it deprived them of its benefit. A double share and more of the revenue was to be drawn from those cities, but it was all to go into the State Treasury for the relief of communities which paid the smallest part, or none at all. There might be no licenses granted in a city or town, and hence it might pay no tax on liquor sales, and yet it would enjoy the benefit of a reduction of taxes at the expense of New York and Brooklyn. These arguments had been dealt with in the Legislature before the Governor sent his veto message. Our high license friends will be driven to despair by them—or to Prohibition.

The Application of the New Interstate Commerce law to the old question of the conveyance of colored persons is to be tested. In spite of the Civil Rights Act colored travellers are on many railroads refused admission to first-class cars. A colored preacher of Alabama proposes to test this question under the new law, and has sent his complaint to the commission, having been forcibly ejected from a car after paying the fare which would entitle a white man to travel in it. The third section of the law makes it unlawful to "give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person," or to subject any particular person to "any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever." It is under this clause that the question is raised.

An Earthquake in Mexico Caused General alarm on May 29th. A despatch from the city of Mexico describes the convulsion as being general throughout the country, and doing much damage to property, though attended by little loss of life. It says that at ten minutes to three o'clock in the morning the first shock passed through the city. The oscillation movement was from north to south and its duration thirty-five seconds. At five minutes past three another shock was felt, the movement being from east to west. It was accompanied by an oscillatory motion which lasted five seconds. The first shock aroused the city, causing a perfect panic in some neighborhoods. Men, women and children rushed into the street. The shock rung bells in the church towers, threw articles from shelves, and damaged some buildings. During the shock houses swayed like ships at sea, and persons arising from their beds were in many cases thrown with force to the floor. Many doors were forced open. A scene of general confusion then ensued, dogs barking, and horses neighing and stamping in their stables.

A Protestant Episcopal Cathedral for New York is projected. In a letter published in the daily journals on Thursday last Bishop Potter advocates its erection, explains the reasons which make it desirable, and points out the valuable practical purposes it may be expected to serve. A board of trustees has been organized, and the nucleus of a building fund formed. Among the subscribers is a well-known wealthy Presbyterian gentleman, who has given a hundred thousand dollars. The cost of the edifice, with the land, is variously estimated, but it is expected to be over five and under ten million dollars. The project was broached some years ago, but was abandoned for the time, owing to the time of financial stringency which came on. At that time the late Miss Catherine Wolfe promised a contribution of a million dollars, but afterward it was revoked.

The French Political Crisis has been Terminated for the time by the formation of a Cabinet under M. Rouvier. Its most important feature is the exclusion of General Boulanger, which has caused general excitement in Paris. When it was known that the popular soldier was to quit his office as Secretary of War there was a popular demonstration, thousands of persons gathered in the vicinity of the Opera House, shouting "Resignation! Resignation!" "Long live Boulanger!" "We will have him!" etc. In a short time the crowd greatly increased in numbers, and became so turbulent that the Republican Guard, which was held in readiness, was ordered out to disperse them, which task was accomplished amid volleys of hisses from the assembled people. The new Cabinet is said to be respectable rather than brilliant, and moderate in its republicanism. This is confirmed by the attitude of the press. One press correspondent says that the moderate republican papers cordially welcome the new Ministry. The monarchist press receives it rather favorably, but the radical and independent papers are decidedly hostile.

A Revival of the Anglo-Russian Hostility in the Afghan affair loomed up in the Transatlantic cable despatches last week. It was stated that the English were helping to fortify Herat, and an ominous warning was published by the Russian Novoe Vremya newspaper. It said: "We can only suppose that England cherishes an intention to profit by the present disorders in Afghanistan, and to become mistress of the country. In that case Russia would demand serious guarantees that England's proximity would not embarrass Russia's position in Central Asia, and if England refused to give the guarantees, Russia would take such measures regarding the Afghan frontier provinces as she deemed expedient, and would not be concerned whether they were agreeable to England or not."

The Members of the Liberal Party in England who have seceded from Mr. Gladstone's leadership held a grand conference in Birmingham on June 1st. The conference was attended by two thousand delegates, representing all parts of Great Britain. The tone of the speeches was bitterly anti-Gladstonian. It was the first representative unionist meeting where irreconcilable hostility to the Gladstonians has been the rallying cry. Mr. Chamberlain declared his belief that conciliation would be mere deception. Lord Hartington's letter described the Gladstonians as absorbed in the Parnellites, their only object being to retain at any cost the support of the Parnellites by their policy of following unreservedly the leadership and adopting the parliamentary methods of their Irish allies.

A Plot to Blow up the City of Vienna with dynamite has been discovered according to a despatch to the New York Herald from that city. The correspondent of that journal in the Austrian capital states that much excitement had been caused there by the revelation of the plot. The conspirators were arrested at a suburb called Sechshaus. A quantity of explosives were seized, and several letters—two of which had been written by Belgian agitators—savagely inciting the Viennese workingmen to follow the example of their Charleroi brethren. The police believe that they now have all the clues to the conspiracy in their hands, and know of every move made by the Viennese anarchists. Eighty detectives are engaged in watching their movements. Fresh arrests are expected.

The Labor Troubles in Belgium Appear to be tending toward a crisis. A universal strike is contemplated, and is only postponed until the workingmen are sufficiently organized and united to overthrow the middle classes, as the latter tried to overthrow the aristocracy in 1789. This implies that danger will remain hanging over Belgium, this agitation being, as it were, a rehearsal for a future general onslaught on its institutions and society. The general upheaval seems only postponed because all the preparations necessary are not yet completed. There was rioting during the week at several places where strikes are in progress. The programme of the workmen was formulated at the Radical Congress which was in session last week. The prominent demands are for limitation of the hours of labor by the State, the establishment of State pension funds for old or disabled workingmen, the separation of Church and State, compulsory education, regulation of employment of children in factories, the enactment of a law holding employers liable for accidents to workmen, the equality of the French and Flemish languages in Belgium, and a free pardon for the authors of last year's outrages.

The Rev. M. Baxter has Returned to England. He sailed on Saturday last on the steamship Werra of the North German Lloyds Line. We pray that he may have a safe voyage and that God may bless the words of warning that he has spoken in various parts of our land during his visit here, to the awakening of the Church on the important subject of prophecy.

The Fight for Prohibition in Texas has the best wishes of this journal and its readers. A friend who has the cause much at heart writes us, suggesting how help may be rendered. Any reader having back numbers of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD on hand who will send them to Miss Lizzie L. Bridges, Box 158, Pilot Point, Tex., may be sure of having them distributed. Numbers of persons who have votes, and have very little religious or temperance literature at hand, are glad to accept it when it is offered them. Parcels of back numbers of this journal may be had from this office at nominal rates for this purpose.

A Quartette of Christian Workers are Laboring among non-church-goers in Boston and other cities in Massachusetts. Their past experience fits them specially to deal with the indifferent as well as the sceptic and the outspoken infidel. Under the style of "The Christian Brothers" they hold meetings in halls, theatres, etc., inviting the co-operation of evangelical Christians of the cities they visit. They are anxious to hold meetings in a tent during the summer and fall, and will rejoice to do so if God sends them the means to purchase one. Any of our readers who may be moved to assist them in this effort may send contributions to Mr. E. Eben Bayliss, 744 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.

A Death Caused by an Orange Seed, a Death from the bite of a spider, and a death from the bite of a rat have all been recorded recently. The first was that of a well-known citizen of Brooklyn, N. Y., who died on May 29th. He had been suffering for some weeks from an abscess in a small intestine, which is only the sixteenth of an inch in diameter. He underwent several operations for the cure of the abscess without success, and he died in great agony. After his death the autopsy revealed the cause of the abscess to be an orange pippin, which he must have swallowed in eating an orange recently. The second death was that of an infant. It was heard to scream, and the mother on hastening to its side saw an immense spider crawl off its arm. Soon afterward the limb began to swell, and was soon double its natural size. The child died the next day, and the physicians believe its death was caused by the bite of the spider. The third case was that of a young lady in Massachusetts, who, on going into the cellar of her father's house, was attacked by a rat. Her arm was bitten by the ferocious creature, who it is supposed was maddened by having eaten rat-poison. The young lady expired after a few hours of intense suffering. As life is menaced by causes so apparently trivial, as well as by disease and accident, it is marvellous that the offer of eternal life through Christ, which is made in the Gospel, should be slighted, and its acceptance postponed by any sane person (1 Samuel 20 : 3).

Objections to Unmarried Men as Jurors were expressed by a lawyer who defends the accused man in a trial for murder, commenced in New York last Thursday. The prisoner is charged with having murdered his wife, and the evidence is based mainly on the frequent quarrels and mutual antipathy known to exist between the couple. Beside this there is a quantity of circumstantial evidence which is worth little by itself, but becomes weighty when taken in connection with the angry feelings manifested by the husband for some months before the crime was committed. At the opening of the trial it was noticed that the prisoner's counsel used his right to challenge the jurors with less regard to their intelligence or station than is usual, and at last the criterion of his action was found to be whether the jurors presented were married or not. The entire panel was exhausted, and an additional panel of fifty was summoned before the counsel obtained twelve married men, with whom he was content to trust his client's life. "Only married men,' he said, "are competent to try this case impartially." It may be inferred that the lawyer will try to convince the jury that a husband may be angry with his wife and often quarrel with her without harboring murderous feelings, and that he thinks married men will be more readily convinced of this than bachelors. However that may be, it is certain that none are so fitted to discharge the duty of judging their fellows as they who have undergone similar temptations. It is well for the human race that at the last great judgment such a Being will preside (Heb. 4 : 15).

The Amputation of a Lady's Ink-Stained finger in New York was rendered necessary last week, by the poisonous nature of the ink she was using. Information reached Dr. Cyrus Edson, of the Health Department, on Thursday that a lady, whose name was withheld, had lost her right index finger under peculiar circumstances. He made an investigation, and found that the lady soiled her fingers with a few drops of a patent ink which is used to make impressions on glass. It poisoned and inflamed the finger to such an alarming extent that amputation became necessary. An analysis showed that the liquid was composed of fluor-spar dissolved in sulphuric acid. Dr. Edson warned the venders that as it did not contain the word "poison" on the label, as required by the statute, any further sale of the stuff would be followed by arrest and prosecution. The lady's misfortune will be a warning to persons using this ink, that as it penetrates glass, it can penetrate the flesh, too. It would be well if a similar warning as to the deadly power of sin could also be heeded. That, too, leaves an indelible mark on the world, and works injury on the wrong-doer (Prov. 8 : 36).

A Panic Among Policemen Occurred in Jersey City, N. J., last Thursday night. On the previous day the county physician sent a notice to Police Headquarters that a small-pox patient had escaped from under his care, and the police were instructed to search for him. Not long afterward the afflicted man made his appearance at his previous home, and demanded admission. The tenants told him the police wanted him, and slammed the door in his face. He marched to the police station, where the sergeant told him he was wanted at Police Headquarters. When the man reached Headquarters and told who he was the officers rushed away in all directions. The inspector retreated to his private room and shut the door. The Building Inspector ran out of the door and two reporters leaped through the windows, and in a few seconds the sick man was in full possession of the building. He waited there patiently till the ambulance, driven by a colored man who had survived an attack of the disease, carried him to the pest-house at Snake Hill. Persons who have had this dreadful disease or who have seen the sufferings of others in it will not ridicule the policemen who were afraid of contracting it by coming in contact with the man. Their fear was natural, for the contagious nature of the disease is well known. It is much to be wished that there was the same dread of the malady of sin, which, as Scripture warns us, may be contracted by intimate association with sinners (II Peter 2 : 17).

A Disappointment for American Ladies is prepared in a circular recently issued by the Secretary of the United States Legation in London. An English journal says: "There has been such a rush of American ladies lately, all panting to be presented to the Queen, that a most uncompromising circular has been issued from the American Legation, in which Mr. Henry White announces that there can be presentations from the diplomatic circle only under special circumstances—i.e., when the lady is a person of genuine distinction, whose position in the United States justifies her attending the drawing-room under the auspices of her minister. The feverish yearning to 'bend the knee' at Buckingham Palace which possesses so many American ladies arises from an extravagant notion that attendance at a drawing room will inevitably produce an invitation to the jubilee entertainments; but it is one thing to attend a drawing-room, but quite another to get an invitation to the Palace." So it appears that it is to be more difficult than formerly to secure an introduction to the Queen, and that even those who obtain it are not sure of being received as guests by Her Majesty. If these ladies who so yearn to become acquainted with an earthly monarch would accept the invitation of the King of kings, they would show more wisdom and be saved from disappointment (John 14 : 23).

A Baby Held as Security for Debt was the subject of an action at law in New York last week. A woman whose husband had deserted her obtained employment about a year ago as a cook. Being unable while so engaged to give her infant the care and attention it required, she made arrangements with another woman to keep it, and undertook to pay ten dollars a month for the child's board. After paying twenty dollars she was unable to pay more, and the other woman kept the child for eight months. Last week the mother went to fetch her child away, but was informed that she could not have it until she had paid the eighty dollars then due, and until she did so the child would be held as security for the debt. Thereupon the mother appealed to the courts. Justice Ford told the nurse that a child could not be held in that way, and ordered it to be handed back to its mother. The foster-mother did not want to part with the babe, but was compelled to do so, after being told that she must sue for any money due to her. It is matter for thanksgiving when through God's mercy Satan also is compelled to release from his bondage sons or daughters whom careless parents, intent only on securing worldly advantages for them, have placed within his reach (Ezek. 23 : 39).

BRIEF NOTES.

REV. DR. BRGADUS, of Louisville, Ky., is to assist Mr. Moody in his Bible school, beginning at Northfield, June 30th.

Special mission services, conducted by the Rev. H. H. Waters and the Rev. Dr. R. H. McKim, have been held with much success in Grace Church, New Orleans.

Seven young men recently graduated from Mr. Moody's School for Christian Workers, at Springfield, Mass., have been offered positions as secretaries of Young Men's Christian Associations.

In the annual parade of the Brooklyn Western District Sunday-schools this year, about 60,000 scholars and teachers marched through the streets in ten divisions, the largest of which numbered 15,000.

The money given by the women of the Presbyterian Church in the United States during the past sixteen years was $2,150,000—supporting 200 women missionaries, 200 native Bibles readers, and 150 schools.

A suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boyd, of Grand Rapids, Mich., has resulted in a verdict of $9500 damages from a rumseller who sold her husband liquor, under the influence of which he killed a man and was sentenced to prison for life.

The services conducted by Dr. George F. Pentecost at Winsted, Conn., were carried on after his departure by the resident ministers. It is now announced that there have been three hundred and twenty-five conversions and one hundred and twenty-five of them were in fifty families no member of which was a Christian.

At the annual commencement of the New York Young Women's Christian Association on May 31st, the first held in its new building, there were graduated 51 stenographers, thirty-three book-keepers, and a number of pupils in photography. Since the occupancy of the new quarters 688 young women have received instruction. The course includes type-writing, designing, sewing, and other practical branches. Next year the scope of the work will be increased.

The International Convention of Young Men's Christian Associations, at its recent session at San Francisco, reported the present number of associations as 1145, with a membership of 152,000; net value of property, $5,540 000, against $11,000 eleven years ago. The report covered a comparison of seventeen years, showing the marvellous growth of this arm of the Church. The association now employs more than 600 paid secretaries, those in the international work alone numbering nine.

Clergymen and Evangelists who will Allow Copies of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD to be placed in the seats of churches, or will have them distributed at the doors, will be supplied with assorted parcels of back numbers if they will write to the Manager, 63 Bible House, New York.

THE SEARCH FOR FAITH.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"Nevertheless when the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?"—Luke 18 : 8.

The Coming of the Lord Absolutely Sure—The "Speedily" of Celestial Time—The Faithfulness of God Assured—The Faithfulness of Men in Question—I. The Person Searching for Faith—The Object of Christ's Quest—Will Seek it when He Comes—The Time of the Scrutiny—The World Growing Worse—II. The Kind of Faith Sought—A Faith that Prays Importunately—III. An Unanswered Question—Suggests Self-Examination—Processes Tending to Extinction of Faith—IV. Personal Duty.

It is absolutely certain that God will hear the prayers of His people. From beneath the altar souls cry unto Him day and night to vindicate the cause of Christ, the cause of truth and righteousness, and to cast down His adversary : these shall be answered speedily. Here on earth, scant though the supplication may be, yet there is a remnant according to the election of grace, who cease not to importune the Almighty God to make bare His arm, and display the majesty of His Word. Though for wise and gracious purposes the answer to those prayers may be delayed, yet it is absolutely certain. Long suffering keeps back for a while ; for the Lord is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance ; but He will not forever delay the long-expected end. The Lord Jesus Himself gives us this personal assurance, "I tell you that He will avenge them speedily." No doubt remains when Jesus says, "I tell you." The Lord will come, and, according to His own reckoning, He will come quickly. His reckoning is according to the chronology of heaven, and this the heirs of heaven ought gladly to accept : it is meet that we keep celestial time even now.

The Advent and the Judgment

The matter to be questioned is not what God will do, but what men will do. Faithfulness is established in the very heavens ; but what of faithfulness upon the earth? The part that God allots to us is that we believe His Word, for so shall we be established : it is the child's part to trust his father, it is the disciple's part to accept the teaching of his Master. Alas! how little there is of it at this moment! Knowing the feebleness of the faith of those around Him, and foreseeing that future generations would partake of the same folly, the Saviour gave utterance to this memorable question, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" God is faithful ; but are men faithful? God is true ; but do we believe Him? This is the point : and it is upon this that I shall speak this morning as the Holy Ghost shall help me.

I. I notice with regard to our text, first, that it is remarkable if we consider the person mentioned as searching : "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?"

When Jesus Comes

He will look for precious faith. He has more regard for faith than for all else that earth can yield Him. Our returning Lord will care nothing for the treasures of the rich or the honors of the great. He will not look for the abilities we have manifested, nor the influence we have acquired ; but He will look for our faith. It is His glory that He is "believed on in the world," and to that He will have respect. This is the jewel for which He is searching. This heavenly merchantman counts faith to be the pearl of great price—faith is precious to Jesus as well as to us. The last day will be occupied with a great scrutiny, and that scrutiny will be made upon the essential point—where is there faith, and where is there no faith? He that believeth is saved ; he that believeth not is condemned. A search-warrant will be issued for our houses and our hearts, and the inquiry will be, Where is your faith? This is the object of His royal quest—"Dost thou believe in the Lord Jesus?"

When our Lord comes and looks for faith, He will do so in His most sympathetic character. Our text saith not, When the Son of God cometh, but "When the Son of Man cometh, will He find faith on the earth?" It is peculiarly as the Son of Man that Jesus will sit as a refiner, to discover whether we have true faith or not. He also as the Son of Man displayed faith in God. In the Epistle to the Hebrews, it is mentioned as one of the points in which He is made like unto His brethren, that He said, "I will put my trust in Him." The life of Jesus was a life of faith—faith which cried, "My God, my God," even when He was forsaken. His was, on a grander scale than ours, in the great Father, waged against all the rebellious influences which were in array against Him. He knows what fierce temptations men experience, for He has felt the same. He knows how want tries the faithful, and what faith is needed to be able to say, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God shall man live." He knows how elevation tests the soul ; for He once stood on the pinnacle of the temple, and heard the infernal whisper, "Cast thyself down : for He shall give His angels charge over thee." He knows what faith means in contradistinction to a false confidence which misreads the promise, and forgets the precept altogether. He will not err in judgment, and accept brass for gold. He knows what it is to be tempted with the proffer of honor and gain : "All these things will I give thee," said the fiend, "if thou wilt fall down and worship me." He knows how faith puts all the glory of the world away with its one brave and prompt utterance, "Get thee hence, Satan : for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

The Battle of Faith

Beloved, when Jesus comes as the Son of Man He will recognize our weaknesses, He will remember our trials ; He will know the struggle of our hearts, and the sorrow which an honest faith has cost us. He is best qualified to put the true price upon tried faith, self-denying faith, long-enduring faith. He will discern between the men who presume and the men who believe ; the men who dote upon vain delusions and those who follow the plain path of God's own Word.

The Son of Man will give a wise and generous judgment in the matter. Some brethren judge so harshly that they would tread out the sparks of faith ; but it is never so with our gracious Lord ; He does not quench the smoking flax, nor despise the most trembling faith. The question becomes most emphatic when it is put thus. The tender and gentle Saviour, who never judges too severely, when He comes, shall even He find faith on the earth? What a sad and humbling question it is! When even He shall come to make a kindly search, will He be able to find faith on the earth? Unbelief is rampant indeed, when He who is omniscient can scarce find a grain of faith amid the mass of doubt and denial!

Once more : I want to put this question into a striking light by dwelling on

The Time of the Scrutiny,

"When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" I know not how long this dispensation of longsuffering will last ; but certainly the longer it continues the more wantonly wicked does unbelief become. The more God reveals Himself to man in ways of providence, the more base is it on man's part to belie His solemn witness. But yet, my brethren, at the winding-up of all things, when revelation shall have received its utmost confirmation, even then faith will be such a rarity on the earth that it is a question if the Lord Himself will find it. You have, perhaps, a notion that faith will go on increasing in the world ; that the Church will grow purer and brighter, and that there will be a wonderful degree of faith among men in the day of our Lord's appearing. Our Saviour does not tell us so ; but He puts the question of our text about it. Even concerning the dawn of the golden age He asks, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?"

I want you to notice the breadth of the region of search. He does not say, shall He find faith among philosophers? When had they any? He does not confine His scrutiny to an ordained ministry or a visible Church ; but He takes a wider sweep—"Shall He find faith on the earth?" As if He would search from throne to cottage, among the learned and among the ignorant, among public men and obscure individuals ; and, after all, it would be a question whether among them all, from the pole to the equator, and again from the equator to the other pole, He would find faith at all. Alas, poor earth, to be so void of faith! Is there none in her vast continents or on the lone islets of the sea? May it not be found in some of the countless ships upon the deep? What! not upon the earth? Not with Jesus Himself to look for it?

The Kind of Faith Sought.

II. Let us somewhat change the run of our thoughts : having introduced the question as a remarkable one, we will next notice that it is exceedingly instructive in connection with the parable of which it is part. Let us carefully note that this passage occurs in connection with the parable of the importunate widow pleading with the unjust judge ; for it is to be interpreted in connection with it. Hence, it means, first, of all : When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find upon the earth the faith which prays importunately, as this widow did? Now, the meaning is dawning upon us. We have many upon the earth who pray ; but where are those whose continual coming is sure to prevail? In the olden days there was a John Knox, whose prayers were more terrible to the adversary than whole armies, because he pleaded in faith ; but where shall we find a Knox at this hour? Every age of revival has had its men mighty in prayer—where are ours? Where is the Elias on the top of Carmel who will bring down the rain upon these parched fields? Where is the Church that will pray down a Pentecost? If the Son of Man cometh, will He find much of such praying faith among our own churches? Ah me! that I should have to ask such a question ; but I do ask it, hanging my head for shame.

The importunate widow waited with strong resolve, and never ceased through sullen doubt. If the judge had not yet heard her, she was sure he must hear her, for she had made up her mind that she would plead until he did. A waiting faith is rare. Men can believe for a time, but to hold out through is another matter. Some soldiers are good at a rush, but they cannot form a square, and stand fast hour after hour. When the Son of Man cometh, will He find many who can believe in a delaying God, and plead a long-dated promise—waiting, but never wearying? Go, learn to plead on when no answer comes, and to press on when repulsed : this is the test of faith.

The Long Darkness

"When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth," such as He deserves at our hands? Do we believe in Jesus practically, in matter-of-fact style? Is our faith fact, and not fiction? If we have the truth of faith, have we the degree of faith which we might have? Just think of this : "If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove." What does this mean? Brethren, are we not off the rails? Do we even know what faith means? Is not the question an instructive one when set in connection with the parable which teaches us the power of importunate prayer?

III. In the next place, our text seems to me to be suggestive in view of its very form. It is put as a question, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" I think it warns us not to dogmatize about What the Latter Days will be.

Jesus puts it as a question. Shall He find faith on the earth? When our Lord was here before, He found little enough of faith ; and He has distinctly told us that when He shall come the second time, men will be as they were in the days of Noah: "they did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark." I am inclined to take neither side. Let it remain a question, as our Lord has put it. This question leads us to much holy fear as to the matter of faith. If our gracious Lord raises the question, the question ought to be raised. They say that some of us are old fogies, because we are jealous for the Lord of hosts. They say that we are nervous and fidgety, and that our fears are the result of advancing age. Yes, at fifty-three I am supposed to be semi-imbecile with years. If I were of their way of thinking, I do not suppose that this would occur to them. We fall into a

Pessimism

—I think that is the word they use: I do not know much about such terms. Surely the Saviour was not nervous. None will dare to accuse Him of foolish anxiety; but yet He puts it, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" As far as my observation goes, it is a question which might suggest itself to the most hopeful persons at this time; for many processes are in vigorous action which tend to destroy faith. The Scriptures are being criticised with a familiarity which shocks all reverence, and their very foundation is being assailed by persons who call themselves Christians. A chilling criticism has taken the place of a warm, childlike, loving confidence. If this continues we may well say, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" In some places the greatest fountain of infidelity is the Christian pulpit. If this is the case—and I am sure it is so—what must become of the Churches, and what must come to the outlying world? Will Jesus find faith in the earth when He comes?

In addition to many processes which are in action to exterminate faith, are there not influences which dwarf and stunt it? Where do you find great faith? It seemed almost when it was stated some years ago that Mr. George Müller walked by faith in regard to temporal things. To feed children by faith in God was looked upon as a pious freak. We have come to a pretty pass, have we not, when God is not to be trusted about common things? Abraham walked with God about daily life; but, nowadays, if you meet with a man who walks with God as to his business, trusts God as to every item and detail of his domestic affairs, persons look at him with a degree of suspicious wonder. They think he has grace in his heart, but they also suspect that he has a bee in his bonnet, or he would not act in that sort of way. Oh, yes, we have a fancied faith; but when it comes to the realities of life where is our faith?

A Novelty in the Church

Do you not think that this, put in a question as it is, invites us to intense watchfulness over ourselves? My fear is that when Christ comes, if He delays much longer, He will find many of us faint because of and because of the disappointments which arise out of the slow spread of the Gospel. The nations continue in unbelief. O Lord, how long! Because we have not accomplished all that we hoped to have done, we are apt to grow weary. Or perhaps when He comes He will find us sleeping for sorrow, like the disciples in the garden when He came to them thrice and found them very heavy. We may get to feel so sad that the Gospel does not conquer all mankind, that we may fall into a swoon of sadness, a torpor of despair, and so be asleep when the Bridegroom cometh. I fear, most of all, that when Jesus comes He may find that the love of many has waxed cold because iniquity abounds. Warm-hearted saints keep each other warm, but cold also is contagious. If the Master comes and finds us lukewarm, it will be a calamity indeed. The question stirs a bitter anguish in my soul. I trust it moves you also.

Our Long Waiting,

It is a question. I cannot answer it, but I open wide the doors of my heart to let it enter and try me. It acts like a fan in the Lord's hand to purge the floor. It sweeps away my self-confidence and leads me to watch and pray, that I enter not into the temptation of giving up my faith. I pray that we may stand fast when others slide, so that when the Lord cometh we may be found accepted of Him.

IV. I will close with this remark: my text is very impressive in respect to Personal Duty.

"When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" Let faith have a home in our hearts, if it is denied a lodging everywhere else. If we do not trust our Lord, and trust Him much more than we have ever done, we shall deserve His gravest displeasure. Wherefore do we doubt? Since conversion some of us have been led in a strange way, and every step of it has shown us that the Lord is good and true, and ought to be trusted without stint. We have been sore sick, and full of pain, and anguish, and depression of spirit, and yet we have been upheld, and sustained, and brought through. In great labors we have been strengthened, in great undertakings we have been supported. Some of you have been very poor, or your business has been declining, and emergencies have been frequent, and yet all these have proved the truth of God. Do not these things make it the more incumbent upon you to trust Him? Others of you have suffered sad bereavements: you have lost, one after another, the props of your comfort; but when you have gone to God He has heard your prayers, and been better to you than father, husband, or friend. It is down in your diary in black and white that His mercy endureth forever; and you have said to yourself many times, "I shall never doubt again after this." Brethren, it ought to us to be impossible to mistrust, and natural to confide; and yet I fear it is not so. If after all this watering we grow so little faith, we may not wonder that our Lord said, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?"

I think I hear you say, "We are resolved upon it; we are called to have faith in our Lord, even if none else believe Him." Then look to it that you do not fail in these evil times. If you do believe, Believe Up to the Hilt.

Plunge into this sea of holy confidence in God, and you shall find waters to swim in. He that believes what he believes shall see what he shall see. No man was ever yet found guilty of believing in God too much. Among the high intelligences of heaven no creature was ever censured for being too credulous when dealing with the Word of the Most High. Let us believe implicitly and explicitly. Let us believe without measure and without reserve. Let us hang our all upon the truth of God. Let us aspire also to walk with God in the heavenlies, and become the King's Remembrancers. Let us seek grace to become importunate pleaders of a sort that cannot be denied, since their faith overcomes heaven by prayer. Oh, that I might have in my church many a prevailing Israel!

Some here know what it is to be up early in the morning to besiege the throne of grace with all the power of believing prayer. How much I owe to these dear ones, eternity alone will declare! Oh, that we had many who would bear poor sinners on their hearts day and night, before the Lord, and, like their Saviour, would never rest till the Lord built up His church! Alas, for the rarity of such conquering faith! I question whether there are not Christian people here who have never heard a certain text which I am about to quote; and I am sure there are others who will shudder when they hear it. "Thus saith the Lord, concerning the work of My hands command ye Me." "Surely that cannot be Scripture!" cries one. But it is so. Turn to Isaiah 45: 11, and read it both in the Authorized and the Revised Versions. Can a man command the Lord? Yes, to believing men He puts Himself at their call; He bids them command His help, and use it as they will. Oh, that we could rise to this! Is there such faith among us? If there be not, may our Lord Jesus, by His Spirit, work it in us for His own glory! Amen.

More Intercessors,

[The prayers of the readers of this Journal are requested for the blessing of God upon its Editors, and those whose sermons, articles, or labors for Christ are printed in it; and that its circulation may be used by the Holy Spirit for the conversion of many sinners and the quickening of God's people. Dr. Talmage and Mr. Spurgeon especially request prayer every Sunday morning on behalf of their labors.]

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

THE DEATH OF OLE 'STRACTED.*

"Ole 'Stracted's advent in the neighborhood a few years after the war had been mysterious. The first that was known of him was one summer morning, when he was found sitting on the bench beside the door of this cabin, which had long been unoccupied and left to decay. He was unable to give any account of himself, except that he always declared that he had been sold by some one other than his master from that plantation, that his wife and boy had been sold to some other person at the same time for twelve hundred dollars. He was particular as to the amount and that his master was coming in the summer to buy him back and take him home, and would bring him his wife and child when he came. Everything since that day was a blank to him, and as he could not tell the name of his master or wife, or even his own name, and as no one was left old enough to remember him, the neighborhood having been entirely deserted after the war, he simply passed as a harmless old lunatic laboring under a delusion. He was devoted to children, and Ephraim's small brood were his chief delight. They were not at all afraid of him, and whenever they got a chance they would slip off and steal down to his house, where they might be found at any time squatting about his feet, listening to his accounts of his expected visit from his master, and what he was going to do afterward. It was all of a great plantation, and fine carriages and horses, and a house with his wife and boy."

"Is you gwine in there, Eph?" asked his wife, as they approached the old man's hut.

"Hi! Yes; dat ole man oon hu't nobody; he jes' as tame as a ole tom-cat."

"I wonder he ain' feared to live in dat lonesome ole house by hisself. I jes' lieve stay in a graveyard at once. I wonder he don' go home?"

"Whar he got any home to go, sep heaven?" said Ephraim.

"What was your mammy name, Ephum?"

"Mymy," said he simply.

They were at the cabin now, and a brief pause of doubt ensued. It was perfectly dark inside the door, and there was not a sound.

"Who dat?" was called in sharp inquiry.

"'Tain' nobody but me an' Polly, Ole 'Stracted," said Ephraim, pushing the door slightly wider open, and stepping in. They had an indistinct idea that the poor deluded creature had fancied them his longed-for loved ones, yet it was a relief to see him bodily.

"Who you say you is?" inquired the old man, feebly.

"Me an' Polly."

"How is you, Ole 'Stracted?" asked the woman.

"Dat ain' my name," answered the old man, promptly. It was the first time he had ever disowned the name.

"Well, how is you, Ole—what I gwine to call you?" asked she, with feeble finesse.

"I don' know—he kin tell you."

"Who?"

"Who? marster. He know it Ole 'Stracted ain' know it; but dat ain' nuttin'. He know it—got it set down in the book. I jes' waitin' for 'em now."

* From "In Ole Virginia." By Thomas Nelson Page, whose graphic descriptions of life in the South have delighted this generation of readers. Pp. 230. Price, $1.25. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 745 Broadway, New York.

Deacon Abraham's Students. (See page 359.)

Deacon Abraham's Farming Operations in Persia. (See page 359.)

A hush fell on the little audience—they were in full sympathy with him, and knowing no way of expressing it, kept silence. Only the breathing of the old man was audible in the room. He was evidently nearing the end. "I mighty tired of waitin'," he said pathetically.

"What did you say my name was?" he said.

"Ole 'Str—" she paused at the look of pain on his face, shifted uneasily from one foot to the other, and relapsed into embarrassed silence.

"Nem min'! Dee'll know it—dee'll know me 'dout any name, oon dee?"

He appealed wistfully to them both. The woman for answer unfolded the shirt. He moved feebly, as if in assent.

"Hit gittin' mighty dark," he whispered faintly. "You reckon dee'll git heah 'fo' dark?"

The light was dying from his eyes.

"Ephum," said the woman to her husband.

The effect was electrical.

"Heish! You heah dat?" exclaimed the dying man, eagerly.

"Ephum—" she repeated. The rest was drowned by Ole 'Stracted's joyous exclamation.

"There! I knowed it!" he cried, suddenly rising upright, and with beaming face stretching both arms toward the door. "Dyah dee come! Now watch 'em smile. All y' all jes' stand back. Heah de one you lookin' for. Marster—Mymy—heah's little Ephum!" and with a smile he sank back into his son's arms.

The evening sun dropping on the instant to his setting flooded the room with light; but as Ephraim gently eased him down and drew his arm from around him, it was the light of the unending morning that was on his face. His Master had at last come for him, and after his long waiting Ole 'Stracted had gone home.

A COLD RIDE IN RUSSIA.

In the north of Russia a carriage was slowly toiling through a steep pass. The cold was intense, and the three men who occupied the carriage were wrapped in the thickest furs, but the cold pierced even through them, and one of the gentlemen felt he must soon succumb to its intensity. In a faint voice he told his comrades. One of them proposed at once to stop the coach and try every means to restore him, but the other would not move, and advised that they should all heap more furs upon themselves. But the first gentleman grew colder and colder until his sympathetic companion, unable longer to listen to his moans, stopped the carriage and lifted him out, and took handfuls of snow and rubbed him until the blood began to circulate freely in his veins once more. In spite of the screams of his patient, he persisted in this rough but efficacious restorative, until both were glowing with heat, and he himself streaming with perspiration. After dressing they reentered their carriage, and were surprised at the heavy way in which their companion, who had remained in the carriage, lay, and on closer examination he proved to be dead. Afraid to move, too much taken up with himself to help his friend, his own selfishness had killed him. So it is only those who use the grace God has given them, to help others, that they grow in grace.

THE CRIMEAN WAR TREATY OF PEACE ON APRIL 27, 1856, A PROPHETIC DATE.

By Rev. M. Baxter.

The Sultan's Momentous Concession in 1856—The Death-Blow to the Mohammedan Abomination—The Prophetic Significance of the Crimean War—The Treaty of Peace—The Crucial Fourth Clause — The Sultan's Firman — Its Solemn Promulgation.

The Treaty of Paris closing the Crimean War, which was ratified on April 27, 1856 (the 22d day of Nisan, and last day of the Passover Week), contained in its 9th Article a moral engagement on the part of the Turkish Sultan to give to all his subjects civil and religious liberty and freedom of worship, which up to that time had practically been withheld to a great extent from Christians and Jews in Palestine and elsewhere in Turkey. This momentous liberal concession of the Sultan constituted measurably in the year-day fulfilment "the cleansing of the sanctuary" of the Holy Land with which the 2,300 years were predicted in Daniel viii. 14, to end. Thus the Mohammedan abomination of desolation or false religion which with the Koran as its sacred book, Mahomet had fabricated and set up A.D. 604–6, terminated its predicted 1,290 lunar years, i.e., 1,252 solar years, 1856, and thenceforth ceased to be a persecuting desolation to the Holy Land, as it had formerly been. And 1,260 lunar years, i.e., 1,222 solar years, from the Mohammedan conquest of the Holy Land in 634–5, likewise ended in 1856.

The CRIMEAN WAR was a prophetical war associated in a remarkable manner with the close of this Great Period of 2,300 years. It commenced in the autumn of 1853 by Russia's invasion of Turkey. Then in the summer of 1854 the Allied Powers, Britain, France and Sardinia, engaged in active operations for the defence of Turkey, and at the battle of Alma in September they defeated the Russians. The battle of Balaclava in October, when 600 English cavalry soldiers, through a mistaken order, rode to certain death, was indecisive, and severe sufferings and mortality were experienced by the Allied armies in the winter of 1854–5. They successfully repulsed an assault of the Russians in great force at the battle of Inkerman in November, 1854, and they besieged Sebastopol for 11 months, from October, 1854, until their capture of it in September, 1855. This, with the death of the Russian Czar, the same autumn, opened the way for Austria, as a neutral intermediary, after conferring with the Allied Powers, to present to Russia Peace Propositions embracing Five Conditions. These were accepted by Russia on January 16, 1856, as bases of negotiations for a Treaty of Peace. They were: 1. The Russians to relinquish all claim to the right of protection over the Danubian Principalities. 2. The southern part of Bessarabia to be ceded by Russia to Turkey. 3. Neutralization of the Black Sea. 4. All the Powers to protect the non-Mussulman subjects of Turkey —i.e., Christians and Jews. 5. Consuls to be admitted to all the ports of the Black Sea.

On January 16, 1856, Russia accepted these propositions. Three conferences were subsequently held at Constantinople between the representatives of Turkey and of England, France, and Austria upon the Fourth Proposition—viz., that all the Powers should protect the Christian and Jew subjects of Turkey: and as the result, those Powers presented to Turkey on January 22, 1856, a long statement of the Reforms they desired in consideration of the services rendered to Turkey in helping her to repel Russia.

These Reforms, as stated in the London Times of February 8, 1856, required the security of the persons and property of Christian and Jew subjects of Turkey, and their equality with Mohammedans and their right to possess property, along with the same right for foreigners; the right likewise to be admitted as witnesses in courts and the reform of their tribunal of justice and of the police; their right of admission to civil and military offices and duties; the development of the agricultural, industrial, and commercial resources of Turkey, etc.

On January 30, 1856, the Sultan of Turkey agreed to these Reforms, and on January 31 was present for the first time in the history of the Sultans, at a Ball at the British Ambassador's mansion, to show his desire to break down the barriers of Mohammedan exclusiveness and to mingle freely with foreigners. He even partook of supper with them, although the Sultan's custom is always to eat alone. Subsequently the Sultan framed and caused to be recited before the chief dignitaries of his Empire, and the heads of the Mohammedan religion and law, and of the non-Mohammedan sects assembled at Constantinople, a Firman of considerable length and numerous clauses granting civil and religious liberty and equality and freedom of worship throughout all the Turkish Empire. The Allied Powers were desirous of making the Firman as binding as possible upon the Turkish government by incorporating it textually in the Treaty of Peace or appending it so as to make it part of the Treaty. The Sultan objected to this as an infringement of his independence and dignity which would afford a constant excuse to the Contracting Parties, Russia, Austria, France and England, to interfere in the local affairs of Turkey. Hence the matter was compromised by the Firman being only adverted to and recorded in Article 9 of the Treaty, but still this is held to be equivalent to a solemn pledge from Turkey to carry out the provisions of the Firman because it underlays and forms part of the groundwork of the Treaty.

The Blacksmith's Lesson. (See page 357.)

On March 30 the Treaty of Peace was preliminarily signed at Paris by the Ambassadors of the Powers, who, however, held further conferences during April regarding the Danubian Principalities and other matters. The conditions and articles of the Treaty were not published until after its full Ratification by the Ambassadors in Paris on April 27. Its articles were then communicated to the French and English Parliaments. A Proclamation of Peace was made in London on April 29, and a Day of Thanksgiving observed on May 6.

The 9th Article of the Treaty Read as Follows:

"Article 9. His Imperial Majesty the Sultan of Turkey, having in his constant solicitude for the welfare of his subjects issued a Firman which, while ameliorating their condition without distinction of religion or race, records his generous intention toward the Christian population of his empire, and wishing to give further proof of his sentiments in that respect has resolved to communicate to the Contracting Parties the said Firman, emanating spontaneously from his sovereign will. The contracting parties recognize the high value of this communication."

Thus it will be perceived that the Sultan hit upon the expedient of framing and publishing, professedly, of his own free will, a Firman granting civil and religious freedom and equality to all his subjects; and then the record and declaration of his having done this spontaneously was embodied as the 9th Article in the Treaty. For he realized that if he gave such guarantees in the Treaty alone, he would appear to be yielding to coercion, and would suffer loss of dignity and respect among Mohammedans. Moreover each of the Treaty Powers would thus be empowered on any occasion of complaint by a Jew or Christian to go beyond mere remonstrances, and to interfere by force of arms to compel the performance of this Article of the Treaty, which thus instead of being a Treaty of Peace would soon issue in further strife.

The London Times, May 5, 1856, commenting on this Treaty of April 27, said, "Turkey is now bound by its own Firman mentioned in Article 9 to give its Christian subjects entire political rights and equality with its Mohammedan subjects." Lord Palmerston, then Prime Minister, said in Parliament on May 6, "This Treaty having recorded in Article 9 that the Firman has been issued by the Sultan, I hold that it is almost as impossible for the Firman to be revoked as for the sun to go backward. The fact of the Firman having been adverted to in the Treaty and the issuing of it having been recorded in the Treaty, gives to all the Powers the right of watching whether the Firman is carried into effect, and of remonstrance in case of its violation. I am convinced that this right will in course of time cause the Firman not only to be looked upon as law, but also to be carried into practice throughout the Turkish Empire. Its value cannot be overrated. It gives to one half of the subjects of the Sultan of Turkey, who are Christians and Jews, equal rights with the other half who are Mohammedans, and admits them to serve as soldiers in the army of the Turkish Empire from which they have hitherto been precluded." The London Times of May 15 said, "The Sultan's Firman recorded in the Treaty of April 27 gives general dissatisfaction in Turkey, for the bigoted Mohammedans are not willing that the Christians should be put on the same footing as themselves, and the Christians would rather pay an additional tax than be made to serve in the army."

The ceremony of the public reading of the Firman in the great Council Hall of the Porte in Constantinople, before a crowd of notables, among whom copies were then distributed, was most impressive. The Sheik-ul-Islam offered up a prayer at the close of the reading. The London Times commented on it thus: "If the will of the Sultan be supreme, then the greatest revolution of any age has been accomplished before our eyes. His Firman establishing absolute equality between all his subjects has been read before the assembled dignitaries of his Empire, including the Grand Vizier, and the Sheik-ul-Islam clad in the green robes of his office—the Patriarch of Constantinople, and the Chief Rabbi of the Jews, who came to receive for his oppressed race the promise of equality in their own Holy Land, from the lips of a Mussulman Sultan. This event must always remain one of the most interesting in the history of mankind. Religious freedom has been proclaimed for the first time to the followers of churches persecuted by Sultans and Emperors. It is like a vision of dry bones called to life. All persons, irrespective of their religion, can now be admitted into the public service, civil and military. The testimony of Christians is permitted in courts. Christians and foreigners may now legally hold property in land within the Turkish Empire." The chiefs of non-Mohammedan communities (Jews and Christians) were then convoked to confer as to the admission of their delegates to the Council of State.

The Rev. W. G. Schauffler, American missionary in Constantinople, wrote in 1857 of this Firman or Hatti Scheriff, "Although for some time after its promulgation this Firman seemed destined rather to arouse the slumbering fanaticism of bigoted Moslems, still it is pouring light upon the minds of millions. Translated into all the languages of Turkey and read to its various nations publicly, it has created a ferment never before witnessed in Turkey."

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 351.)

Inez's Father.

THE meeting between Ephraim Hartgold and his old friend, Señor Bonanza, was one of a most cordial character. It was, indeed, one of Señor Bonanza's first acts after arriving in London with Ethel and Harold Spofforth, attended by the honest gamekeeper, Jacob Benson, to write to Mr. Hartgold.

"You will like to know this gentleman, Miss Ethel," he said. "He is a man of eminent piety, a shrewd practical business man, too, but one who lives continually in the fear of God."

Ephraim entered the room just as Señor Bonanza pronounced this deserved encomium upon him. He was introduced to Ethel and her brother Harold, and listened to the story of their adventures among the Spanish brigands.

"I would never have ransomed my life," said the Señor. "I was resolved about that. All my treasures are divided from me by death—my beloved wife is gone and my sweet little daughter; death would have united me with them, so I did not dread it. Though I should think it wrong to seek death, I would make no desperate effort to avoid it. If those miserable cutthroats had decided to kill me, as I suppose they would in default of ransom, they would have done me a service."

Ephraim noticed this reference to Señor Bonanza's daughter, which was the first intimation he had received of such a personage having existed, but he postponed his questions for the present. Turning to Harold, he said, "I suppose life was of more importance to thee. Thou, with thy opportunities for distinguishing thyself and doing service in the world, wouldst not be so philosophical and resigned as our friend?"

"No," said Harold Spofforth; "but I, too, looked forward to death without much regret. It seemed that I could not be ransomed without impoverishing my father and sister, and looking back over my life, it did not really seem that the remainder of it was worth the sum those fellows demanded. I am ashamed to say that I had wasted it, and though I resolved that, if I did escape, my future should be better than my past, yet I had made too many good resolutions and broken them to have much confidence in my ability to keep that one. Nor should I now if my sister had not pointed me to the Source of strength. Now I have hope, and am humbly thankful that my life has been saved."

"Put thy confidence in the Lord, my young friend; none who do so ever find themselves worsted in the struggle. I am an old man now, and in my long life I have seen many persons commence life under varied circumstances, but my invariable observation has been that the issue does not depend on the circumstances, but on that one rule alone. The young man who puts his trust in the Lord will prosper, though in business ability, in capital, and in connections he may be less advantageously circumstanced than others."

Señor Bonanza, with a meaning glance at his friends, said, "We were speaking of that matter when you came in. My impression of you was that you served God with your whole heart, but that in business you formed your plans and decided doubtful matters, such as the probability of the rise or fall of markets as all of us do, according to your business judgment. Is it not so?"

"Well, friend," said Mr. Hartgold, "thou art partly right and partly wrong. In all my transactions I look to the Lord for guidance, but I do not ask Him if I shall make this or that purchase or sale. I ask Him to bless me and lead me, and then I go to business assured that He will do so. When a difficulty arises, or I have to make a decision, I examine the facts, and use my judgment as thou wouldst do. God gave us our faculties to be used, I think. That is my rule, and God has blessed me. But I am no judge of others. 'Acknowledge Him in all thy ways, and He will direct thy paths.' That is the promise; let every godly man do his part as his conscience directs, and God will do His part."

"You surprise me, old friend," said the Señor; "I told my young friends that I thought you kept your religion and your business distinct. This young lady has more in common with you than I had supposed. I would like you to hear the story of her life. You would be interested. Miss Ethel, if you have no objection to tell our friend of your illness and wonderful recovery as you told it to me, I am sure he would be glad to hear it."

With a listener so thoroughly in harmony with herself in principle and practice, Ethel delighted to tell the thrilling story, with its grand climax, "Talitha Cumi." Ephraim listened with rapt attention, and added but the one comment, "Truly this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes."

"That Simon Holmes, of whom my sister has spoken," said Harold, "is a strange man. I remember him well, though I have not seen him for a long time. A common workingman, with no pretension to culture, scarcely able to read, yet quite a philosopher. I used to think him a fanatical, semi-crazy fellow, but I believe now that he has grasped the grandest truths within human capacity, and I shall be glad to learn of him."

"Very likely he will prove thy best teacher. None know so much of God as those who trust Him and go to Him as a child. An illustration from my own experience will show thee what I mean. I remember when I began business with a small capital that I was often in a sore strait for money, through the neglect of my customers to pay on time. On one occasion the manager of the bank at which I kept my account spoke sympathetically to me, and expressed his interest in my prosperity. He indirectly intimated that I should do well to go to him in an emergency, but I made inquiries from other friends, and learned that it was the rule of the bank never to lend money to tradesmen without actual security, so I did not think much of his suggestion, because it was money that I needed, not advice nor sympathy. Well, a crisis came, and I worried and applied for help to this and that friend without avail. I wasted time and incurred humiliation all to no purpose. At last, in despair, I went to the bank manager, and telling him my situation, asked his advice. 'You have been to all your friends, Mr. Hartgold,' he said. 'Yes,' I said, every one.' 'You should have come to me at first,' he said; 'I shall be pleased to advance all that you need; why did you not come to me before?' I told him that I did not because I had heard that the bank's rule was opposed to advances in such cases. 'Ah!' he said, 'that is quite true, but not all the truth. The manager is empowered to set aside the rule whenever in his discretion he deems it advisable. Now you see you would have saved yourself much anxiety and trouble if you had trusted me, instead of pursuing your own inquiries about the bank's rules.' I have often thought of that incident since then. God governs the world by laws, and we can find out many of them, but I would sooner trust to His promises than what I can learn about His laws. Miss Ethel here ought to have died according to law, but God raised her to life because she trusted Him. My experience convinces me that nothing is impossible to those who trust in God."

"It seems so, indeed," said Harold.

"Now," continued Mr. Hartgold, "since I have been in this room I have begun to think that we may all of us witness a most wonderful illustration of this fact. It concerns thee, friend Bonanza. Thou hast mentioned a matter that is new to me. Didst thou not but now refer to thy loss of a daughter? Tell us the circumstances of her death. Who knows but that if thou wilt trust God, light may come on that trial of thine."

"I fear not," said the Señor. "But I will tell you. She was a beautiful little creature but delicate, and it became necessary to send her to Spain to save her life. The physicians assured us that only in the climate in which her mother was born could the child recover her drooping vitality. Her mother was sick, too, and being unable to make the voyage myself, I sent my wife and child, with a faithful colored servant to wait upon them, across the Atlantic. The vessel was lost at sea, and all on board perished. I have never been able to speak much of it. The calamity broke my heart. Even now, though many years have elapsed, the mention of it is torture."

"I see that," said the Quaker; "but believe me, friend Bonanza, I have not pressed thee for the facts in idle curiosity. A strange circumstance has occurred which leads me to hope that thy daughter may be restored to thee."

"No, no," said the Señor; "I shall go to her, she cannot return to me. Sailors who could swim and could have saved themselves had it been possible were lost; I have made diligent inquiry, and not one has ever been heard of since the wreck. How, then, could a child, a helpless infant, have lived? Never shall I see her until the sea gives up its dead."

"It may be so, but listen, friend," and Ephraim related the story he had heard from Captain Lanyon of the rescue of Inez.

"I fear it cannot be my daughter," old friend," said Señor Bonanza, "but I would see the child; her story interests me. Why did you think of my loss in connection with her?"

"That is the strongest part of the connection, friend," said Mr. Hartgold. "I did not know of thy loss, nor, indeed, that thou hadst a daughter, yet the maiden's extraordinary resemblance to thee prompted me to ask thee about her. I was on the point of writing thee when thy letter announcing thy presence in London arrived. Come and see her."

"That will I, but I am without hope."

"There is nothing too hard for the Lord," said Ethel. "You have not learned that yet, Señor Bonanza, though you were delivered out of the brigands' hands."

"True," he said. "Oh, that I had your faith, Miss Ethel! But let us go at once. Did I understand you, friend Hartgold, that the maiden is at your home?"

"Yes; let us go. Who can tell but God has this gift for thee, and is better than thy fears?"

On the way to Sharon Lodge Mr. Hartgold suggested to Señor Bonanza that, considering the trials Inez had already undergone, it might be well that she should have some preparation before being subjected to the strain that would try her nerves, if it should turn out that Señor Bonanza was indeed her father. To this he consented, urging his friend, however, to be cautious not to raise hopes which must in all probability end in disappointment. On their arrival, therefore, Mrs. Hartgold entertained the Cuban merchant, while Ephraim went to Ruth's room to talk with Inez. He found them both with tear-stained cheeks talking of Ralph Ravensworth and his little published sketch.

"Thou hast a strange way of entertaining a friend, my daughter," he said. "I see that you have both been weeping. Tears, unless indeed they are tears of joy and thankfulness, I should not have expected to see on the faces of maidens who have both been saved from peril by the mercy of God."

"We are not sad, dear father," said Ruth, "though we must plead guilty to the tears. We have found in a periodical a story of the shipwreck and the rescue, written by one who was there and who was a comfort to Inez in her trouble, but who has since her arrival unaccountably disappeared. It was in speaking of him that the tears where shed."

Ruth would have had her father read the sketch, but he said no, he would rather that Inez told him the story in her own way that he had already heard from Captain Lanyon, and which would be new to Ruth, too. So Inez repeated it, but as she evidently knew nothing of the circumstances of her rescue but what Captain Lanyon had told her, Mr. Hartgold gained no new light from the recital.

"Hast thou ever wondered who thy parents might be?" Ephraim asked.

"At times," said Inez, "the thought has crossed my mind, but it has never disturbed me or occupied my attention for any period. God has given me so good a father in Captain Lanyon, so loving and wise a father, that I have not sought further or craved more at His hands."

Clearly there was no need, as Ephraim saw, to dread the agitation that Señor Bonanza might cause, even if it proved that he was her father, for Inez in her present mood seemed to think but lightly of the tie of nature which she had never known. He felt, therefore, that he might go directly to the point, without danger of distressing her.

"Miss Inez," he said, "I have heard a story to-day that has deeply interested me, and I think it possible that thou mayest have an interest in it, too, of a closer character. I have been talking with an old friend whose features thine resemble, and I learn that he lost his daughter in her infancy. The vessel on which she sailed for Europe was lost, and he has mourned her since then as dead, as indeed there was good reason that he should, from a mortal standpoint. There is an aching void in his heart still, though many years have passed, and I would fain bring him to thee, that he may look upon thy face and see if there be any ground for my hope that thou art his long-lost daughter whom he has so long mourned as dead. Couldst thou bear to meet him?"

"Oh, yes; I will see him with pleasure," said Inez. "I should not know him, though he might be my father, for I have not the slightest recollection even of the circumstances of my rescue, much less of any earlier time."

"Then come, my dear, thou shalt see him; he is below with my wife. I would not bring him to thee without speaking to thee first, lest the shock of a recognition, though it might be a joyful one, should distress thee."

(To be continued.)

THE COMMANDMENTS, II.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for June 19. Exod. 20 : 12-18. Golden Text, Matt. 22 : 39.

The Pith and Centre of the Commandments—Love Fulfils the Law—Duty of Children of Ungodly Parents—Angry Thoughts Prohibited—The Solemn Warning to Transgressors—The Command Against Stealing—How it May be Broken—Incurring Debt—Improvident Purchases on Credit—Violations of the Law Against Lying—The Covetous Man—Selfishness in Churches and Families.

"THOU shalt love." This is the pith and centre of all God's commandments. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. 6 : 5). "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Lev. 19 : 18). Moses gave this as God's epitome of the law. Jesus said, "There is none other commandment greater than these" (Mark 12 : 30, 31). The apostle John, who is the apostle of love, and who spoke more about the commandments than any of the writers in the New Testament, says, "This is love, that we keep His commandments" (1 John 5 : 3). Paul says, "Love is the fulfilling of the law," and "he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law" (Rom. 13 : 10, 8). God is love; He upon the world of lost souls in the face of His only-begotten Son, and beams forth love and pardon upon all who will receive Jesus. His commands are calculated to place men in the same position of shining forth love upon their fellowmen. It is our privilege to meet not only love, but hatred, injustice, unkindness, malice, envy, and evil of every kind, with love.

Shines Down, Like the Sun.

The old saying that charity [or love] should begin at home is fully endorsed by the Word of God; the first commandment from Sinai regarding our duty to man concerns home life and Filial Obedience.

Honor thy father and thy mother that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. When Moses repeats this command (Deut. 5 : 16) he adds: "That it may go well with thee in the land," etc., and Paul quotes this when he enforces this fifth commandment on the Christians of his day (Eph. 6 : 1-3). Our Lord Himself repeatedly insists on this command (Matt. 19 : 19; Mark 7 : 10), and He cites the breaking of it as "making void the law of God by your tradition which ye have delivered" (Mark 7 : 13, R. V.). God had ordained family life on earth to typify the family and household of God. If we cannot obey those whom God has set over us, how shall we obey God? Again, obedience to parents ought to spring not only from duty but chiefly from love. But an age of "disobedience to parents" (II Tim. 3 : 2) has set in, it is part of the lawlessness which will characterize the last days, and which will bring about the final struggle before Christ comes to reign. Parents have had much to do in bringing this about. The numerous exhortations to filial obedience in the Book of Proverbs and elsewhere in the Word of God presuppose that the parents are worthy of obedience. Alas! this is not always so. But God, in His love, has made His will plain. In placing the four commandments which teach our duty to Him first, He has shown us beforehand that we are to "seek first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness." Thus if a command from a parent is contrary to the revealed will of God in His Word, God must take precedence, God must be obeyed. But wherever a parent can be obeyed at a cost to us, and not at a cost to His own Word, we are to sacrifice self, and obey.

Thou shalt do no murder has been explained by Jesus Himself in its spiritual significance to include a prohibition against angry thoughts and angry words (Matt. 5 : 21-24). "Whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother" (1 John 3 : 10). Surely evil speaking comes under the head of this command. There are many who would not do bodily harm to any one who yet go hither and thither, and say all they know against another; sowing the poison of want of confidence broadcast and doing irreparable injury. While we are bound to answer direct questions which are asked us as witnesses, we are not bound to volunteer what we may know against another. God is love, He breathes out goodness, He is kind even to the unthankful and the evil. Satan is the exact reverse; when he comes there comes sin, trouble, sorrow, wounded feelings, bitterness, envy, spite, and all evil things. When we scatter abroad evil about another which is uncalled for, are we not doing Satan's work? As God's Levites, it is our privilege to "bless in the name of the Lord" (Deut. 10 : 8); if we curse by evil speaking, in whose name do we do it? Are we ministers of love, light, hope, joy, peace wherever we go? Or are we ministers of discomfort, distrust, suspicion? Whose work are we doing? God's or Satan's?

Whom are we Representing?

"Thou shalt not commit adultery." Were the veil to be lifted in every town, in every city, in every congregation, and all the adulterers were brought to light, what an awful, hideous revelation we should have! The way in which the English Government is regulating and patronizing vice in all her colonies, and at the same time forcing the liquor traffic on unwilling peoples, shows that in high quarters in the land there must be the most horrible moral rottenness! and that we have to look to our workingmen and the small shopkeepers for the chief witnesses against impurity; certainly not to the aristocracy, not to the Government. But however much the guilty Government of England may introduce vice and drunkenness they cannot take out from God's Word the solemn declaration. "Fornicators and adulterers

God will Judge"

(Heb. 13 : 4). They may be patronized at court, but "Neither fornicators . . . nor adulterers . . . shall inherit the kingdom of heaven" (1 Cor. 6 : 9, 10). We thank God for the noble exertions of Mrs. Josephine Butler and many others in our day against this horrible evil, and we thank God that the national conscience is aroused in our land. But let those of us who are parents claim the Lord's succor very specially that our children, introduced into such an atmosphere of impurity as obtains in our day, may be "kept by the power of God" from its taint.

"Thou shalt not steal." Many Christians would think it superfluous that such a command should be mentioned to converted people, but here again the conscience is often at fault. When a man who has but enough money to buy a loaf with, and then buys a pound of bacon, because he does not like dry bread, though he knows he has not a penny wherewith to pay for it, is he not stealing? The bacon is his if he pays for it, otherwise it belongs, by right, to the shopkeeper, and not to him. If a lady whose income suffices only to provide just rent, food, education, and the plainest clothing for her children buys a handsome silk dress, because she has always been accustomed to have one, and yet she does not know how to pay for it, is she not stealing? Either the landlord, the butcher, baker, draper, or milkman will have to do without his money. Is this honest? Is it not breaking this command, "Thou shalt not steal?"

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Oh, the power of the tongue! The tongue and the temper are the most ungovernable of things! The man who conquers his tongue is "a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body" (James 3 : 2). A man who is perfect in patience is "perfect and entire, wanting nothing" (James 1 : 4). To bear false witness includes all lying, the sin which is so often and so specially named in Scripture. There shall enter [the heavenly Jerusalem] "nothing that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination or maketh a lie." All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, and are shut out of the new Jerusalem (Rev. 21 : 8; 22 : 15). But there are many who would not willingly be liars, and yet border on lying. If we willingly give a false impression we are at heart lying even though our words would not convey anything contrary to truth. Jesus is Truth, and Jesus dwelling in us makes us transparent. If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the Blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin (1 John 1 : 7).

"Thou shalt not covet."

"Be Content with such Things as ye Have."

"Godliness with contentment is great gain." "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." Oh, how these words of God cut at the root of the selfishness which reigns throughout the world! The policy of government is selfish in its iniquitous sacrificing of the morals of the people we conquer for the sake of increasing the revenue. The Church is selfish; each denomination is for its own; "our church" is the word with some, 'our cause" is the word with others. Christian home missions are often selfish; every man for himself is the ruling principle with many of them. Business is selfish. If a man can do a good stroke of business, although he knows that in doing it he will ruin some dozens of other men, he will not scruple. He keeps within the law because it is to his interest, but he covets the extra income which encroaching on another man's line of business will bring him, and he knows not the royal law,

"Thou Shalt Love."

From the first command to the last, the spirit of the law is transgressed in the ordinary walks of life. In the early days of Christianity it was remarked, See how these Christians love one another. It might be said of our day, "See how these Christians swindle one another, and hate one another, and despise one another." Even among converted people this anti-Christian spirit obtains. "Love is the fulfilling of the law," and unless a man is converted from selfishness to love, which is unselfish, he is certainly not converted to Jesus. He has only changed from an irreligious to a religious selfishness; he lives for himself still. This is His commandment that we love one another. Wrong nobody by word or deed, as you would not be wronged. Live always putting yourself in the place of others. But Christ goes farther when He says that all which is done to one of His little ones for good or bad is done unto Him. He says, "See Me in everybody, deal with everybody as though it were Myself." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these My brethren, ye have done it unto Me" (Matt. 25 : 40).

MRS. M. BAXTER'S WORKS.

THE following works by Mrs. M. Baxter, and others, may be had from the office of the CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York:

"Words for Daily Life," "Practical Lessons," "Life Lessons," "Leaves from Genesis," "Trials and Teachings of Paul." By Mrs. M. Baxter. Each, paper, 25 cts.; cloth, 35 cts. "Record of International Conference on Divine Healing, London, 1885." Paper, 25 cts. "Living Word in the Gospel of St. John." Paper, 25 cts.; cloth, 50 cts. "God's Prophets." Paper, 35 cts.; cloth, 50 cts. "Lessons from St. Matthew's Gospel." Paper, 35 cts.; cloth, 50 cts. "Teachings from St. Mark's Gospel." Paper, 35 cts.; cloth, 50 cts. "Sunday-School Lessons, 1877 and 1878." By Mrs. M. Baxter. Each, cloth, 50 cts.

Any of Mrs. M. Baxter's tracts in the following list may also be had at one cent each or ten cents the dozen: "If it be Thy Will," "Does Sickness Sanctify," "Casting All Your Care," "God's Purpose in Sickness," "The Great Physician," "Job's Sickness," "God's Side of Prayer," "Pastor Rein." Also at the same price the following tracts by the late Rev. W. E. Boardman: "He Careth for You," "A Perfected Self," "Paul's Thorn," "The Law of Liberty." Also at the same price Mrs. Boardman's tract entitled "Simple Truths About Faith;" Miss C. C. Murray's tracts, "Repeating Prayer," and "Thou Art Loosed;" and Miss Sisson's tracts, "What About the Use of Means," and "The Apostolic Attitude."

All tracts in the following list are two cents each or twenty cents the dozen: "The Body for the Lord." By Mrs. M. Baxter. "Bethshan, a House for Healing," and "Enduement with Power. By the Late Rev. W. E. Boardman. "Redeemed from all Evil" and "Anointing Him with Oil." By C. C. Murray. "Asking and Receiving." By Miss Sisson. "Health by Grace." By T. Kirkman. "The Lord hath done it." By H. W. S. "Pastor Blumhardt." By C. C. Murray.

"GOD KNOWS."

Through all my little daily cares there is
One thought that comfort brings whene'er it comes;
'Tis this—"God knows." He knows
Each struggle that my hard heart makes to bring
My will to His. Often when nighttime comes
My heart is full of tears, because the good
That seemed, at morn, so easy to be done,
Has proved so hard; but then remembering
That a kind Father is my Judge, I say,
"He knows." And so I lay me down with trust
That His good hand will give me needed strength
To better do His work in coming days.

—Selected

J. F. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution, at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

MEXICO.

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are most pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of

J. P. HEATH,
43 Bible House, New York.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

This most fatal disease of infancy,
PREVENTED, CONTROLLED and CURED by

Lactated Food

It has been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

FOR INFANTS,

of any age, it may be used with confidence, as a safe and complete substitute for mother's milk.

FOR INVALIDS,

it is a Perfect Nutrient in either chronic or acute cases. Weak stomachs always retain and relish it. Physicians and mothers concede its superiority. The most palatable, nourishing and economical of Foods.

150 MEALS for an INFANT for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists—25c., 50c., $1. Valuable circulars and pamphlets, sent free.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1887-BABIES-1887

To the mother of any baby born this year we will send on application a Cabinet Photo, of the "Sweetest, fattest, healthiest baby in the country." It is a beautiful picture, and will do any mother's heart good. It shows the good effects of using Lactated Food as a substitute for mothers milk. Much valuable information for the mother given. Give date of birth.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

SONGS FOR THE TIMES!

The Prohibition Bugle Call.

BY H. H. HAWLEY.

Just what is needed for these days of activity in the Temperance cause.

Price $15 per 100 copies; single copies by mail 18c.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York and Chicago

WARNER BRO'S

9 Million worn during the past six years.

This marvelous success is due—

1st.—To the superiority of Coraline over all other materials, as a stiffener for Corsets.

2d.—To the superior quality, shape and workmanship of our Corsets, combined with their low prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kinds of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.

WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York City.

FOR GAS.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

FOR OIL.

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.
It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.
In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county. For sale by all druggists.
WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LANE, N.Y.

DRESS GOODS.

Messrs. JAMES M'CREERY & CO.

Offer 750 China Pongee Robes at prices ranging from $8.50 to $25, formerly $18.50 to $40; each Robe contains 9 yards of embroidery and 20 yards of plain Pongee. Also an extensive assortment of plain and mixed goods from 60c. to $1.25, suitable for country or sea-side wear.

James M'Creery & Co.,
BROADWAY, AND ELEVENTH ST.,
New York.

SILK LACE & JERSEY MITTS

"THE RETROGRADE"
TRADE MARK
ELASTIC LOCK STITCH
WARRANTED NOT TO RIP.

Buy Only those Labelled as herewith.

PATENTED
FULL FASHIONED
SEAMS

PERFECT FINISH!
PERFECT STYLE!
PERFECT FIT!

For Sale by all Leading Houses.

Infant Wardrobes

Ladies who are unable to examine our stock of these goods personally, would find it to their advantage to correspond with us. The most complete information furnished, and careful attention given to special orders.

Lord & Taylor,
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE

A new book containing plans and specifications for 25 houses, all sizes, from 2 rooms up. Sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents, by J. S. OGILVIE & CO., 31 Rose Street, New York.

Its leading position is due to it TONE, the MATERIAL use in its construction, and the CAR given to every detail.
Illustrated Catalogue sent fre
ESTEY ORGAN
BRATTLEBORO, V

THE AMERICA MAGAZINE

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This Magazine portrays Ame can thought and life from ocean ocean, is filled with pure high-cl literature, and can be safely w comed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.

Sample Copy of current number mailed upon ceipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.

Premium List with either.

Address:
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N.

GET UP CLUBS

TRAIN UP A CHIL
To wear the perfect-fitting
GOOD SENS CORDED
CORSET WAI and when she becom
A BEAUTIFUL WOM
enjoying good health, she will then sure to wear them.
FITS ALL AGES—Infants to Adu
Every one recommends the
SOLD BY LEADING RETAILER
Everywhere. Be sure your corse stamped "GOOD SENSE." Ta no other. Send for descriptive circul
FERRIS BROS., Manufacture
341 Broadway, NEW YOR

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE O
HENRY WARD BEECHE
by THOS. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete Hist of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. sells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Spl didly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindra for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for c culars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO., Hartford, Co

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

For Imperfect Digestion, Disordered Stomach

Let Travelers round this world of care
Without delay themselves prepare,
Against the ills that may arise
From ill-cooked meals and lengthy rides.
A sure defence is at their call,
For TARRANT'S SELTZER conquers all

UNIVERSITY ORGANS.
They Lead the World.—$35 to $500
Sold Direct to Families. No Middlemen
Solid Walnut 5 Octaves Double Couplers
Guaranteed for Six Years and sent, $35 with Stool and Book, FOR TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. ESTABLISHED 1859. MARCHAL & SMITH, 285 East 21st Street, New York

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 24. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAIT AND LIFE OF REV. JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

THE HEAVENS OPENED. Dr. Talmage's Sermon Last Sunday Morning.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING? By Rev. Henry Varley.

A Child's Song in a Railroad Car—Incidents of the Revival in Sweden—An Enlarged Neck Healed—The Solitary Missionary in Uganda, etc.

CHRISTENDOM IN THE LAST AGE.

NOTES OF A PROPHETIC LECTURE TOUR. By Rev. M. Baxter.

WHY IS FAITH SO FEEBLE. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's New Sermon.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Apache Outbreak—The Naval Court's Censure—A Circus Disaster in Germany—The Irish Evictions—A Man Dedicating his Own Tomb—A Lady's Thrilling Escape from the Mormons, etc.

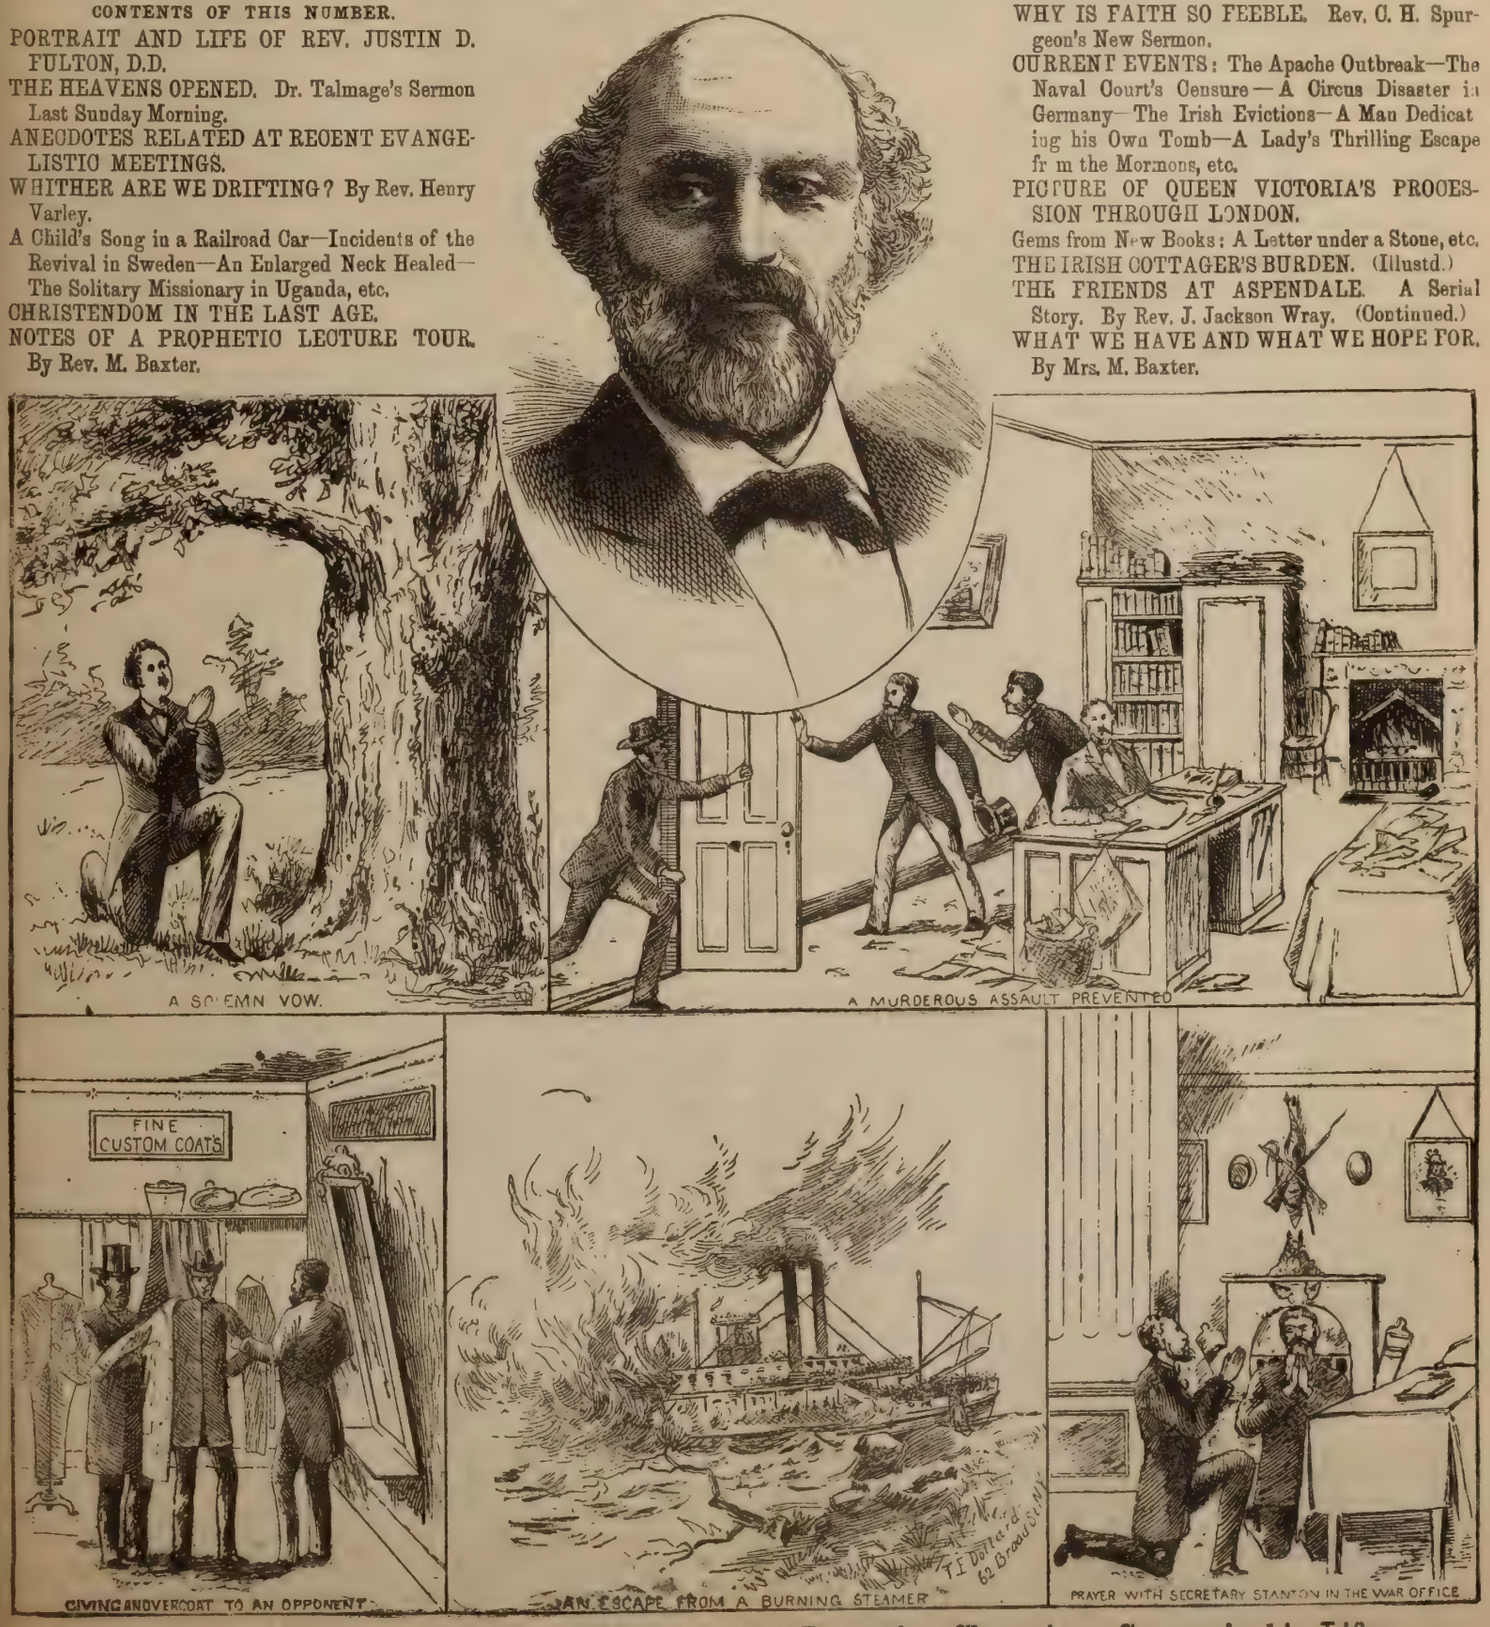
PICTURE OF QUEEN VICTORIA'S PROCESSION THROUGH LONDON.

Gems from New Books: A Letter under a Stone, etc.

THE IRISH COTTAGER'S BURDEN. (Illustd.)

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. A Serial Story. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

WHAT WE HAVE AND WHAT WE HOPE FOR. By Mrs. M. Baxter.



The Rev. JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D., the Anti-Romanist Champion—Scenes in his Life.

REV. JUSTIN D. FULTON, D.D.

Personal Characteristics—Birth and Early Life—A Solemn Vow Under an Oak—Self-Support in College—Editorial Labor—An Attack by an Infuriated Man—A Time of Peril on a Burning Steamer—Resignation of his Editorial Chair Removal to Boston—Giving an Opponent an Overcoat—Removal to Brooklyn—Enters on a Crusade—The Pauline Propaganda.

THE well-known clergyman whose portrait appears on the first page of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD this week, has achieved fame chiefly through his prowess as a member of the Church militant. That aspect of Christ's kingdom is the one ever-present to his view, and in that department of duty he is ever ready to engage. Christ has need of such men. When He called to His side the twelve men who were to carry on His work after His departure, He summoned the bold and impulsive Peter as well as the gentle and affectionate John. In our day, too, as in all ages, there is as well as for John. The Church would recognize this more generally than it does were it not that sometimes the one drifts into the position which ought to be occupied by the other.

Work for Peter to Do

Doubtless it would be pleasant, as a sage of the last generation remarked, if the world could move along always in the way of music, or, failing that, could move equably with a minimum of friction and fighting; whether it would be better for the world is another question. There is always some restless, highly inconvenient man who cannot be persuaded to rest content with things as they are, but must go out tilting against abuses and stirring up strife. Very often these men might have quiet lives, and the abuses they go out to attack would never inconvenience them if the men did not attack the abuses. Luther need not have denounced Tetzel and brought upon himself the quarrel with the Pope if he had been content to go his own way leaving the scandal alone. Tetzel would not have troubled him, and as he had not bought and was not compelled to buy an indulgence it is probable that many good easy people thought him quixotic in going out of his way to expose the pious fraud. So it has been in every age. Some men cannot be content to hold their own opinions quietly and let the world go its own way, but must be

Continually Reforming and Battling with abuses. Probably few men in the Christian Church in America to-day have done more of this kind of fighting than Dr. Fulton. It is in the nature of the man to be frequently in hot water. Five minutes' conversation with him—the very look of the man, prepares one to expect this of him. He is so desperately in earnest, so full of life and energy, so absolutely certain that he is right, so forcible of speech, and so aggressive in manner, that where he is, one realizes that it will not be safe to predict "quarrels will never come." Yet, as often happens with men of pugnacious temperament, stories abound of his kindness, generosity, and magnanimity. A hard hitter, an undaunted adversary, a man ready to lead a forlorn hope, one who is not deterred from entering a conflict by the strength of the enemy, or the weakness of the side he espouses, he is, nevertheless, free from malice and vindictiveness, and is warm-hearted and compassionate beyond the majority of men.

Birth and Early Life.

Justin D. Fulton was born in Earlville, Madison County, N. Y., March 1st, 1828, he is therefore now fifty-nine years old. His father, Rev. John J. Fulton, was descended from North of Ireland stock, and his mother, Clarissa Dewey Fulton, had her birthplace at Great Barrington, Berkshire County, Mass., and was heir to many of the shining qualities of the Puritan element. In 1836 he removed with his parents to Brooklyn, Mich., and at the age of eleven united with the Baptist Church.

Ministers in Michigan, as a rule, were poor, and Mr. Fulton, senior, was not an exception. He offered his son his time, but could not promise him other help. When eighteen years of age, the son, who up to this time had studied as best he could when not employed on the farm, after long and prayerful thought decided to consecrate his future life entirely to the Lord's service. He was out in the fields when he came definitely to this decision. He immediately by kneeling down under the shadow of an oak (see illustration), and solemnly giving himself into the Lord's hands for His exclusive use. At once he began preparations, and in the fall of 1847 entered the University of Michigan and remained there three years, paying his way by working for his board during term-time and by selling books in vacation.

Registered his Vow

At once he took a foremost position. In his Junior year he was elected president of the college literary society, an honor generally reserved for students of the Senior Class. In his fourth year he entered the University of Rochester, that he might take Hebrew and be ready to enter the Theological Seminary in advance. He was graduated from the University of Rochester in 1851, and, entering the Theological Seminary, he remained through a part of the second year, when, urged by the Rev. Spencer H. Cone, D.D., and W. H. Wyckoff, LL.D., to become in St. Louis, Mo., he went there in December, 1853. The paper under his charge sprang into a large circulation. In St. Louis he found a city permeated with the false teaching of Rome. A description of its condition is given in "The Way Out," a book published by The American Baptist Publication Society, descriptive of the life he led, and of some of the work achieved. It is not difficult to see in the Edward Hervey of the book the Justin D. Fulton of the world. His "Roman Catholic Element in American History" at once arrested attention and excited opposition. Its ringing words called attention to the man, and twenty-four men and women meeting in Biddle Market Hall, having had their attention directed to him, invited him to preach.

Editor of a Bible Paper

It was to him a providential call. Up to this time he was not known as a preacher. In college and in the Theological Seminary he was seldom asked to supply a pulpit, and when he did so his efforts gave little promise of his subsequent career. He loved to preach. He tried to preach, but the characteristics which made him a success as an editor interfered with his success as a minister. He was bold, radical, and outspoken. The young editor had given himself to the ministry years before, providing God opened the way. Now that the door was opened he entered it with eagerness. The committee in charge of the paper objected to the arrangement. The editor replied, "I believe that I am called to preach the Gospel. If editing your paper interferes with this duty, I can give up the paper, but I will not give up the ministry." He began to preach with great acceptance to the people and with unalloyed pleasure for himself. At once he struck Romanism hard blows in the pulpit. It cost him dear. In 1854 the Know-Nothing riot came. His life was threatened. On one occasion a violent man, exasperated almost to insanity by Dr. Fulton's denunciations, made his way to the editorial-room intent on killing the enemy of his Church. Happily two of Dr. Fulton's friends were in the room at the time and interposed to save his life (see illustration).

One other narrow escape from death may be mentioned in this place, as an illustration of the way in which Dr. Fulton has enjoyed the Divine protection. He was when every one on board gave up hope of life. Passengers and crew were alike panic-stricken. They crowded to the forward part of the boat and stood there huddled together, waiting the moment when the flames must reach them. Some were shrieking and wringing their hands, others were cursing, and all were in terror. Dr. Fulton's stentorian voice resounded over the throng with the words, "Let us pray." Kneeling there with the flames at his back he besought the Lord for deliverance. Meanwhile the captain of the boat was heading for the shore at full speed. The burning boat was beached and every one on board was saved (see illustration).

On a Burning Steamer

Dr. Fulton's position on Romanism, which he pictured as an intolerable despotism, gave him the sympathy of very many of the people. The true and the tried stood together in the town. He had enemies, however, and from another cause. Dr. Fulton was at heart and as usual made no secret of his opinions, though he knew that they were unpopular both with the readers and the proprietors of the paper. A meeting of the stockholders was held at Palmyra, Mo., and it was resolved that slavery must be defended in the columns of the paper. Dr. Fulton promptly resigned his editorial chair, and his successor was appointed.

An Abolitionist

The turning-point in the life of the editor was reached. Years before he had vowed that he would preach if God would open the way. Now invitations to enter one of the most successful law firms of St. Louis, and to become the literary editor of one of the brightest daily papers in the city, were received. For six hours, while stripped of property, this young man kept in his room questioning what he should do. The vow made years before under the shade of the oak came to his memory. He declined the offers, and, almost penniless, turned his back on this city of his love, accepted the invitation of his brother, Dr. S. J. Fulton, then residing in Toledo, O., to make his house his home until he had prepared for the press "The Roman Catholic Element in American History," and while engaged in this work received to supply the pulpit in Sandusky, O. The result was a call to the church and the securing of a helpmeet in the person of Miss Sarah E. Norcross, who for twenty-seven years was the companion of his life and the mother of his four children. In Ohio he worked zealously; six churches in the Huron Association were revived under his leadership, and the church in Sandusky passed from feebleness to strength. Exposure to the lake winds enfeebled his voice, and this compelled his removal to Albany, N. Y., where in 1859 he became pastor of the Tabernacle Church and spent the ensuing four years in a very successful ministry.

An Invitation

A Prayer in the War Office, which is the subject of one of the illustrations on the first page, was an incident of momentous import in Dr. Fulton's career. During the progress of the war Dr. Fulton, while on a visit to Washington had occasion to visit the War Office. There he conversed with Mr. Secretary Stanton, and, as his habit is, he took the opportunity to present the claims of religion. So earnestly did he plead with the Secretary that, at Mr. Stanton's own suggestion, he knelt down with him there and then in the office and prayed for his conversion. In after years Mr. Stanton referred to this incident as one that God had blessed to him.

In 1863 he was for the third time invited to the charge of the Tremont Temple congregation in Boston, Mass., and the church having complied with his conditions, he accepted their invitation, and labored in this field nearly ten years. During his residence in Boston was performed by the preacher, which is so thoroughly characteristic of the man that it deserves special mention. A Southern clergyman, who believed that the attitude of the Southern churches on the slavery question had been misrepresented, came North to present his views to the people. In Boston the abolition excitement was at its height, and the people would have none of him. He tried in vain to get a hearing. The doors of every church and public building in the city were shut against him. Dr. Fulton heard of it, and the spirit of fairness and honor within him rose against that way of treating an opponent. He offered him the use of his own pulpit which was gratefully accepted. Nor did Dr. Fulton's kindness end there. Noticing that the Southern gentleman had come North unprepared for the bitter weather which had set in, he took him to his tailor (see illustration), and there spent seventy-five dollars out of his small savings in purchasing a good overcoat for the man who had come to the city to denounce him and his teachings. At a later date his magnanimity bore fruit. Being himself in a Southern city and unable to find accommodation, owing to his unpopularity, he was surprised to receive an invitation from the Governor of the State, and, on his expressing his astonishment, the Governor said that he was drawn toward him by the story he had heard of the Boston episode, from the lips of his friend, to whom years before Dr. Fulton had given the overcoat.

An Act of Kindness

In 1873 Dr. Fulton removed to Brooklyn, N. Y., to build a People's Church, and to carry out the scheme he cherished in his heart, of preaching the Gospel to the people without regard to class or condition. Dr. Fulton entered upon it with all the force and vigor of a healthy manhood, a strong will, and a heart warmly responding to the popular need.

As our readers are doubtless aware Dr. Fulton has now relinquished his work in Brooklyn to devote himself exclusively to against Romanism. His motives and plans will be best understood from the following extract from the manifesto he issued early this year: "Beloved in Christ: For years the woe has been unto me, if I preach not the Gospel to the people in America, who are deluded by the errors of Rome. There are more than seven million Catholics in the Republic, ruled by a cardinal, 12 archbishops, 61 bishops, 8000 priests, and an army of 40,000 monks and nuns.

A Crusade

"The American and Foreign Christian Union has abandoned the field. No organization of Christian men is in existence that seeks as a specialty to turn Romanists to Christ. There are leagues and alliances that deal with Romanism as a political power. My mission is to the souls of Romanists. For them Christ died.

"It is not my purpose to thrust myself upon the churches, but to respond to such invitations as may come to me, and to enter, as far as it is in my power, the doors which shall be opened. And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto this work, which few are willing either to undertake or become identified with. I am to separate myself from the fellowship of my Church, go without patronage, dependent upon the covenanted promises of my heavenly Father for an effectual door to be opened to me to the hearts of this people, and for the aid necessary to scatter books and tracts, which shall help to refute the errors of Romanism, and preach Christ to millions who are tiring of the bondage of Rome."

The Pauline Propaganda

is the name given to the society which has been organized to promote the work which Dr. Fulton has taken up. Its object is thus stated in its articles of incorporation: The object of this society shall be the conversion to Christ of Roman Catholics and others.

We pledge ourselves to pray for the conversion of this people, and work for it by speaking in love to those whom we meet, by seeing that they are supplied with a copy of God's Word, and with such literature as shall be helpful in building them up in the knowledge and grace of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

We will strive to gather children into Sabbath-schools, promote the observance of God's holy day, and secure places of worship (such as tents, halls and meeting-houses), as shall be best suited to the necessities of the people among whom we are to work, encouraging them when converted to unite with Gospel churches.

The Offices of the Society are at 62 Liberty Street, New York, where Dr. Herbert G. Lyttle, the Secretary, will be pleased to receive the names of all persons who sympathize with Dr. Fulton's self-denying work, and the contributions of all who are ready to prove their sympathy by helping the funds of the Society.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

Saved from the Wreck.—"A Vessel when nearing the land struck upon a sunken reef, and as the water rushed into it, it was soon evident that there was but little hope; but the shore was near, and although the sea was rough, there were numerous boats putting off to their rescue. The vessel soon sank, and then the passengers and crew were left struggling in the angry waters. A boat reached one of the swimmers, and he was helped in. What would you think of that man if, as soon as he was safe himself, he sat back in the boat with folded arms, and refused to give his assistance in helping to rescue his late companions in distress? Such a man, I hear you say, ought to be tossed back into the sea and left to perish. But that is exactly what hundreds of so-called Christians are doing. They are rescued from the sea of sin, but now, being free and safe themselves, they sit with folded arms, and see around them hundreds of their fellow-creatures struggling and sinking for want of a helping hand to guide them into the sure haven, Jesus."

From an Infirmary Ward to Glory.—The Rev. Mr. Campbell, chaplain of a Royal Infirmary, said: "In one of the wards of the infirmary where I labor for Christ, there lay a little girl. Her case was a hopeless one. Her only chance of life had been an operation, but although everything possible had been done, she lay there slowly but surely dying. She herself knew her state, and was greatly distressed. 'No, I cannot, will not die!' she would cry; 'I am not ready.' The hideous thought of death seemed ever present with her; but a Christian friend came to see her, and spoke to her about Christ and His great love. She was led to put her trust in Him; then her sorrow and fear were changed to joy and anticipation. She was no longer afraid to die, but looked eagerly forward to the time when she should meet her Saviour. When any one spoke to her on the subject she would say, with a sweet smile, 'Oh, I'm not afraid to die now, for I have come to Jesus. It used to be so dark before, but now all is light and joy.' Soon she passed away, and went to meet the Saviour, whose pardoning love and grace had taken away the sting and the darkness of death, and who has welcomed her into the glorious home He has prepared for her.

A Right Royal Wife.—The Same Friend Remarked: "When Alexander the Great was on his eastward march, and conquered so many countries, he carried their kings and queens captives in his train. It is related that, on one occasion, he had an interview with the sovereigns of a country which he had just conquered, and said to the King, 'You wish to be free. Now, I will restore you to liberty.' The regal prisoner looked proudly into Alexander's face, and said, 'True, Alexander, I should wish to be at liberty, for I love it well, but keep me forever a prisoner; take all my wealth and my kingdom, but only let my queen go free.' But the loving wife would not, even for the bribe of personal liberty, be separated from her beloved husband. Throwing her arms around him, she said, 'Wherever he is, let me be also; I would not be separated from him, for without him life would be void. Is not that the answer which the Bride—the betrothed of Christ, her Divine Husband—should give when tempted, for worldly advancement or any temporal gain, to forsake Christ? 'I will never leave Him, nor be separated from Him. Wherever He is, let me be also, for life without Him is void.'"

A Lot of Lazy Shepherds.—Mr. J. G. Forbes remarked: "Once a severe snow-storm came on in Argyleshire, and the owner of a large sheep-farm became alarmed for the safety of his flocks. Summoning the shepherds, he told them to set out at once and bring the sheep into the fold. The shepherds went away as if to get their dogs and staffs, but, being indolent in their habits, they came to the conclusion that they might be lost in the dangerous parts of the mountains, and therefore left the sheep to care for themselves. They would be sure to find them safe when the storm was over. So, instead of doing their duty, they went to one of the outhouses, and there spent the day in smoking and talking. As evening approached the farmer became anxious about the shepherds, the more so that he saw the dogs about the place. Could it be possible that some harm had happened to them, and the dogs had returned themselves. He determined to set out and look for them, but before going he came upon the men sitting comfortably together. He refused to let them accompany him, and set out for the mountains in search of the flocks himself, and returned late that night with almost the whole of the sheep; only a few had died. Oh, how like these indolent and selfish shepherds are some of those whom the Great Shepherd sends out to gather in His sheep."

The Plea of an Advocate-Brother.—Mr. White observed: "In the days of ancient Greece, a citizen was arrested for a crime against the State, the punishment for which was death. Though there was no doubt of his guilt, he was allowed a trial, and his brother was appointed his advocate. The day of judgment came. The hall was crowded when the judges took their seats, and all was hushed to hear what defence the advocate-brother should make for the prisoner. Slowly he advanced toward the judges, and when he was just at the foot of the dais he stopped, and rolling up the sleeve of his tunic he said, 'Often has that arm fought for Greece. It was broken for Greece. My body is covered with wounds, all for Greece, and once did I almost die for my country. Will you not take my blood so freely shed for my fatherland, and for the sake of it forgive my brother? 'Tis true he is guilty, and deserving of death, but, for the sake of the blood which I shed, the sufferings and trials which I endured, will ye not forgive him?' The judges were touched with that appeal, and pardoned the prisoner. Are not sinners in exactly the same state as that prisoner? guilty of sin against God and deserving punishment, with no plea to advance that mercy should be shown to them. But Jesus, our Advocate, our Elder Brother, pleads for us, pleads the virtue of His blood shed for us, of God's law kept for us, of His life given for us, and God the Father is glad to pardon us for Christ's sake."

A Girl's Plea for a Drunken Father.—Mr. Richard Weaver observed: "Once when I was preaching in Scotland I had retired after a hard day's work for a quiet rest, when a knock came to the door. It was a little girl asking for me. 'Oh, please, sir,' she exclaimed as she entered the room, 'is it true that God is willing to save every person, no matter how bad?' 'Surely,' I replied, 'it was for that purpose that Christ came into the world and died.' 'Then there is hope for my poor drunken father,' she cried. 'You'll come home with me and pray for him?' I was much fatigued, but I knew what Jesus would have done had He been in my place, so I went with her to her home—such a home! A low-roofed apartment, with a broken chair and two old boxes, and on a bundle of straw in one corner lay a woman. As I entered she slowly raised her head, which was roughly bandaged. She removed the bandage and disclosed a fearful sight. Her hair was matted and tangled with blood, while in several places about her face were deep wounds, and on her left side was a stab with a knife, which had evidently been inflicted with a deadly intent. And this was all done by her husband. When I was about to leave, he came in, and I said, 'How are you going to answer God for the treatment of your poor wife?' 'When I treat her like that,' he replied, evidently under deep remorse, 'I feel like putting this knife into myself; and I will do it some of these mornings.' I did not try to argue with him, but said, 'Let us both pray that God may take away this craving for strong drink, and give you a new heart!' He rose from his knees a saved man, saved from the power of strong drink, and, through faith in the atoning blood of Christ, saved for eternity."

THE HEAVENS OPENED.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, June 12, 1887.

"Behold, I see the heavens opened."—Acts 7 : 56-60.

The Murder of Stephen — Five Pictures — I. Stephen Looking into Heaven—The Art Gallery of God's Palace—Many Friends there—Gazing After them—II. Stephen Looking at Christ—How to See Him now — Scales Removed from the Eyes—A Wonderful Invitation —III. Stephen Stoned—All Good Men Pelted—Cannot be Killed —IV. Stephen's Prayer—Concern about his Spirit—His Desire—Does the Spirit Travel?—Where it Will Land—John Quincy Adams's Dying Prayer — V. Stephen Asleep—An Infinite Calm.

Stephen had been preaching a rousing sermon, and the people could not stand it. They resolved to do as men sometimes would like to do in this day, if they dared, with some plain preacher of righteousness—kill him. The only way to silence this man was to knock the breath out of him. So they rushed Stephen out of the gates of the city, and with curse, and whoop, and bellow they brought him to the cliff, as was the custom when they wanted to take away life by stoning. Having brought him to the edge of the cliff, they pushed him off. After he had fallen they came and looked down, and seeing that he was not yet dead, they began to drop stones upon him, stone after stone. Amid this

Horrible Rain of Missiles,

Stephen clambers up on his knees and folds his hands, while the blood drips from his temples to his cheeks, from his cheeks to his garments, from his garments to the ground ; and then, looking up, he makes two prayers—one for himself and one for his murderers. "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit ;" that was for himself. "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge ;" that was for his assailants. Then, from pain and loss of blood, he swooned away and fell asleep.

I want to show you to-day five pictures. Stephen gazing into heaven. Stephen looking at Christ. Stephen stoned. Stephen in his dying prayer. Stephen asleep.

I. First, look at Stephen

Gazing into Heaven.

Before you take a leap you want to know where you are going to land. Before you climb a ladder you want to know to what point the ladder reaches. And it was right that Stephen, within a few moments of heaven, should be gazing into it. We would all do well to be found in the same posture. There is enough in heaven to keep us gazing. A man of large wealth may have statuary in the hall, and paintings in the sitting-room, and works of art in all parts of the house, but he has the chief pictures in the art gallery, and there hour after hour you walk with catalogue and glass and ever-increasing admiration. Well, heaven is the gallery where God has gathered the chief treasures of His realm. The whole universe is His palace. In this lower room where we stop there are many adornments : tessellated floor of amethyst, and on are stretched out canvas on which commingle azure, and purple, and saffron, and gold. But heaven is the gallery in which the chief glories are gathered. There are the brightest robes. There are the richest crowns. There are the highest exhilarations. John says of it : "The kings of the earth shall bring their honor and glory into it." And I see the procession forming, and in the line come all empires, and the stars spring up into an arch for the hosts to march under. They keep step to the sound of earthquake and the pitch of avalanche from the mountains, and the flag they bear is the flame of a consuming world, and all heaven turns out with harps and trumpets and myriad-voiced acclamation of angelic dominion to welcome them in, and so the kings of the earth bring their honor and glory into it. Do you wonder that good people often stand, like Stephen, looking into heaven? We have many friends there.

The Winding Cloud-stairs

There is not a man in this house to-day so isolated in life but there is some one in heaven with whom he once shook hands. As a man gets older, the number of his celestial acquaintances very rapidly multiplies. We have not had one glimpse of them since the night we kissed them good-by, and they went away ; but still we stand gazing at heaven. As when some of our friends go across the sea, we stand on the dock, or on the steam-tug, and watch them, and after awhile the hulk of the vessel disappears, and then there is only a patch of sail on the sky, and soon that is gone, and they are all out of sight, and yet we stand looking in the same direction ; so when our friends go away from us into the future world we keep looking down through the Narrows, and gazing and gazing, as though we expected that they would come out and stand on some cloud, and give us one glimpse of their Blissful and Transfigured Faces.

While you long to join their companionship, and the years and the days go with such tedium that they break your heart, and the viper of pain, and sorrow, and bereavement keeps gnawing at your vitals, you still stand, like Stephen, gazing into heaven. You wonder if they have changed since you saw them last. You wonder if they would recognize your face now, so changed has it been with trouble. You wonder if, amid the myriad delights they have, they care as much for you as they used to when they gave you a helping hand and put their shoulder under your burdens. You wonder if they look any older ; and sometimes, in the evening-tide, when the house is all quiet, you wonder if you should call them by their first name if they would not answer ; and perhaps sometimes you do make the experiment, and when no one but God and yourself are there you distinctly call their names, and listen, and sit gazing into heaven.

II. Pass on now, and see Stephen

Looking upon Christ.

My text says he saw the Son of man at the right hand of God. Just how Christ looked in this world, just how He looks in heaven, we cannot say. A writer in the time of Christ says, describing the Saviour's personal appearance, that He had blue eyes and light complexion, and a very graceful structure ; but I suppose it was all guess-work. The painters of the different ages have tried to imagine the features of Christ, and put them upon canvas ; but we will have to wait until with our own eyes we see Him and with our own ears we can hear Him. And yet there is a way of seeing and hearing Him now. I have to tell you that unless you see and hear Christ on earth, you will never see and hear Him in heaven.

Look! There He Is.

Behold the Lamb of God. Can you not see Him? Then pray to God to take the scales off your eyes. Look that way—try to look that way. His voice comes down to you this day—comes down to the blindest, to the deafest soul, saying : "Look unto Me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved, for I am God, and there is none else." Proclamation of universal emancipation for all slaves. Proclamation of universal amnesty for all rebels. Belshazzar gathered the Babylonish nobles to his table ; George I. entertained the lords of England at a banquet ; Napoleon III. welcomed the Czar of Russia and the Sultan of Turkey to his feast ; the Emperor of Germany was glad to have our minister, George Bancroft, sit down with him at his table ; but tell me, ye who know most of the world's history, what other king ever asked the abandoned, and the forlorn, and the wretched, and the outcast, to come and sit beside him?

Oh, Wonderful Invitation!

You can take it to-day, and stand at the head of the darkest alley in all this city, and say : "Come! Clothes for your rags, salve for your sores, a throne for your eternal reigning." A Christ that talks like that, and acts like that, and pardons like that—do you wonder that Stephen stood looking at Him? I hope to spend eternity doing the same thing. I must see Him ; I must look upon that face once clouded with my sin, but now radiant with my pardon. I want to touch that hand that knocked off my shackles. I want to hear that voice which pronounced my deliverance. Behold Him, little children, for if you live to threescore years and ten, you will see none so fair. Behold Him, ye aged ones, for He only can shine through the dimness of your failing eyesight. Behold Him, earth. Behold Him, heaven! What a moment when all the nations of the saved shall gather around Christ! All faces that way. All thrones that way, gazing on Jesus.

"His worth if all the nations knew,
Sure the whole earth would love Him, too."

III. I pass on now, and look at Stephen Stoned.

The world has always wanted to get rid of good men. Their very life is an assault upon wickedness. Out with Stephen through the gates of the city. Down with him over the precipices. Let every man come up and drop a stone upon his head. But these men did not so much kill Stephen as they killed themselves. Every stone rebounded upon them. While these murderers were transfixed by the scorn of all good men, Stephen lives in the admiration of all Christendom. Stephen stoned, but Stephen alive. So

All Good Men Must be Pelted.

All who will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution. It is no eulogy of a man to say that everybody likes him. Show me any one who is doing all his duty to State or Church, and I will show you scores of men who utterly abhor him.

If all men speak well of you, it is because you are either a laggard or a dolt. If a steamer makes rapid progress through the waves, the water will boil and foam all around it. Brave soldiers of Jesus Christ will hear the carbines click. When I see a man with voice, and money, and influence all on the right side, and some caricature him, and some sneer at him, and some denounce him, and men who pretend to be actuated by right motives conspire to cripple him, to cast him out, to destroy him, I say : "Stephen stoned."

When I see a man in some great moral or religious reform battling against grog-shops, exposing wickedness in high places, by active means trying to purify the Church and better the world's estate, and I find that the newspapers anathematize him, and men, even good men, oppose him and denounce him, because, though he does good, he does not do it in their way, I say : "Stephen stoned." The world, with infinite spite, took after John Frederick Oberlin, and Paul, and Stephen of the text. But you notice, my friends, that while they assaulted him they did not succeed really in killing him. You may assault a good man, but

You Cannot Kill him.

On the day of his death, Stephen spoke before a few people in the Sanhedrim ; this Sabbath morning he addresses all Christendom. Paul the Apostle stood on Mars Hill addressing a handful of philosophers who knew not so much about science as a modern school-girl. To-day he talks to all the millions of Christendom about the wonders of justification and the glories of resurrection. John Wesley was howled down by the mob to whom he preached, and they threw bricks at him, and they denounced him, and they jostled him, and they spat upon him, and yet to-day, in all lands, he is admitted to be the great father of Methodism. Booth's bullet vacated the Presidential chair ; but from that spot of coagulated blood on the floor in the box of Ford's Theatre, there sprang up the new life of a nation. Stephen stoned, but Stephen alive.

IV. Pass on now, and see Stephen in His Dying Prayer.

His first thought was not how the stones hurt his head, nor what would become of his body. His first thought was about his spirit. "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." The murderer standing on the trap-door, the black cap being drawn over his head before the execution, may grimace about the future ; but you and I have no shame in confessing some anxiety about where we are going to come out. You are not all body. There is within you a soul. I see it gleam from your eyes to-day, and I see it irradiating your countenance. Sometimes I am abashed before an audience not because I come under your physical eyesight, but because I realize the truth that I stand before so many immortal spirits. The probability is that your body will at last find a sepulchre in some of the cemeteries that surround this city. There is no doubt but that will be decent and respectful, and you will be able to pillow your head under the maple, or the Norway spruce, or the cypress, or the blossoming fir; but this spirit about which Stephen prayed, what direction will that take? What guide will escort it? What gate will open to receive it? What cloud will be cleft for its pathway? After it has got beyond the light of our sun, will there be torches lighted for it the rest of the way?

Your Obsequies

Will the Soul Have to Travel through long deserts before it reaches the good land? If we should lose our pathway, will there be a castle at whose gate we may ask the way to the city? Oh, this mysterious spirit within us! It has two wings, but it is in a cage now. It is locked fast to keep it; but let the door of this cage open the least, and that soul is off. Eagle's wing could not catch it. The lightnings are not swift enough to take up with it. When the soul leaves the body it takes fifty worlds at a bound. And have I no anxiety about it? Have you no anxiety about it?

I do not care what you do with my body when my soul is gone, or whether you believe in cremation or inhumation. I shall sleep just as well in a wrapping of sackcloth as in satin lined with eagle's down. But my soul—before I leave this house this morning I will find out

Where It will Land.

Thank God for the intimation of my text, that when we die Jesus takes us. That answers all questions for me. What though there were massive bars between here and the city of light, Jesus could remove them. What though there were great Saharas of darkness, Jesus could illume them. What though I get weary on the way, Christ could lift me on His omnipotent shoulder. What though there were chasms to cross, His hand could transport me. Then let Stephen's prayer be my dying litany: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." It may be in that hour we will be too feeble to say a long prayer. It may be in that hour we will not be able to say the "Lord's Prayer," for it has seven petitions. Perhaps we may be too feeble even to say the infant prayer our mothers taught us, which John Quincy Adams, seventy years of age, said every night when he put his head upon his pillow:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep."

We may be too feeble to employ either of these familiar forms; but this prayer of Stephen is so short, is so concise, is so earnest, is so comprehensive, we surely will be able to say that: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Oh, if that prayer is answered,

How Sweet It Will Be to die! This world is clever enough to us. Perhaps it has treated us a great deal better than we deserved to be treated; but if on the dying pillow there shall break the light of that better world, we shall have no more regret about leaving a small, dark, damp house for one large, beautiful, and capacious. That dying minister in Philadelphia, some years ago, beautifully depicted it when, in the last moment, he threw up his hands and cried out: "I move into the light!"

V. Pass on now, and I will show you one more picture, and that is Stephen Asleep.

With a pathos and simplicity peculiar to the Scriptures, the text says of Stephen: "He fell asleep." "Oh," you say, "what a place that was to sleep! A hard rock under him, stones falling down upon him, the blood streaming, the mob howling. What a place it was to sleep!" And yet my text takes that symbol of slumber to describe his departure, so sweet was it, so contented was it, so peaceful was it. Stephen had lived a very laborious life.

His Chief Work

had been to care for the poor. How many loaves of bread he distributed, how many bare feet he had sandaled, how many cots of sickness and distress he blessed with ministries of kindness and love, I do not know; but from the way he lived, and the way he preached, and the way he died, I know he was a laborious Christian. But that is all over now. He has pressed the cup to the last fainting lip. He has taken the last insult from his enemies. The last stone to whose crushing weight he is susceptible has been hurled. Stephen is dead! The disciples come. They take him up. They wash away the blood from the wounds. They straighten out the bruised limbs. They brush back the tangled hair from the brow, and then they pass around to look upon the calm countenance of him who had lived for the poor and died for the truth. Stephen asleep!

I have seen the sea driven with the hurricane until the tangled foam caught in the rigging, and wave rising above wave seemed as if about to storm the heavens, and then I have seen the tempest drop, and the waves crouch, and everything become smooth and burnished as though a camping place for the glories of heaven. So I have seen a man, whose life has been tossed and driven, coming down at last to in which there was the hush of heaven's lullaby. Stephen asleep! I saw such an one. He fought all his days against poverty and against abuse. They traduced his name. They rattled at the door knob while he was dying, with duns for debts he could not pay; yet the peace of God brooded over his pillow, and while the world faded, heaven dawned, and the deepening twilight of earth's night was only the opening twilight of heaven's morn. Not a sigh. Not a tear. Not a struggle. Hush! Stephen asleep!

An Infinite Calm,

I have not the faculty to tell the weather. I can never tell by the setting sun whether there will be a drought or not. I cannot tell by the blowing of the wind whether it will be fair weather or foul on the morrow. But I can prophesy, and I will prophesy what weather it will be when you, the Christian, come to die. You may have it very rough now. It may be this week one annoyance, the next another annoyance. It may be this year one bereavement, the next another bereavement. Before this year has passed you may have to beg for bread, or ask for a scuttle of coal or a pair of shoes; but spread your death couch amid the leaves of the forest, or make it out of the straw of a pauper's hut, the wolf in the jungle howling close by, or inexorable creditors jerking the pillow from under your dying head.

Christ Will Come In

and darkness will go out. And though there may be no hand to close your eyes, and no breast on which to rest your dying head, and no candle to lift the night, the odors of God's hanging garden will regale your soul, and at your bedside will halt the chariots of the king. No more rents to pay, no more agony because flour has gone up, no more struggle with "the world, the flesh, and the devil;" but peace—long, deep, everlasting peace. Stephen asleep!

"Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Uninjured by the last of foes.

"Asleep in Jesus, far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be;
But there is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

You have seen enough for one morning. No one can successfully examine more than five pictures in a day. Therefore we stop, having seen this cluster of Divine Raphaels—Stephen gazing into heaven; Stephen looking at Christ; Stephen stoned; Stephen in his dying prayer; Stephen asleep.

THE ROYAL PROCESSION IN LONDON.

(See Illustration on page 380.)

ON January 13th a picture appeared in this journal of the new People's Palace which was being erected in London. It has now been completed, and on May 14th Queen Victoria went in state to take part in the opening ceremonies. Of late years she has very seldom appeared publicly in the poorer districts of her capital, so her advent was made the occasion of a general holiday. The procession, a picture of which is given on page 380, was greeted everywhere with shouts of welcome and the demonstrations of delight with which the dwellers in the slums greet a free show. But few hisses and groans were heard, and those were speedily drowned by Her Majesty's loyal subjects.

The Queen was driven through the dark and crowded streets lined with the tenement-houses in which poor creatures live on the borders of starvation and without the common decencies of life. At the magnificent edifice which has been erected by private munificence in the hope that some of those poverty-stricken people may, through the free education to be there given, rise to better things, she was received by the officials. After the customary fulsome flattery had been spoken in her presence, she formally declared the institution open, and returned to her palace far away from the sights and scenes of misery and want which abound at the East End of London.

SPECULATION IN FUTURES.

THE phrase is familiar in the stock exchanges of our great cities, but the practice is in China extended to a future far beyond that recognized by stock speculators. A lady missionary in that country writes: "About sixteen miles east of Ningpo, China, lies a noted mountain, Ling Fong, to which tens of thousands, from all parts of Chekiang, go up yearly to worship. The first day of the ceremonies few besides women attend. Although the path up the mountain was paved, and the steeper ascents were furnished with steps, still it was a tedious climb, even for one with natural feet. The wonder grew upon us how the women, with their little bandaged stubs, could not only climb the mountain, but walk miles to reach it. As we neared the place we were beset by vendors of incense-sticks urging us to buy. Arriving at a level space, about half-way up the mountain, we found rows of wretched straw huts on either side of the path leading to a building scarcely more than a shed, containing one large room. In it were a few small, dilapidated idols, before which the people burned incense-sticks and made prostrations. A desire to worship was by no means the only motive that brought these eager throngs hither. These multitudes had left their homes and busy pursuits to come hither for the special purpose of buying bills of credit to be burned at death in order to secure a large sum of money in the next world. These bills of credit, costing twenty-four cash, or about two cents, are small strips of yellow paper, upon which are roughly printed a few characters. These are supposed to be good for about $1500 after death. Behind tables stood men selling these bills. Others busy stamping with red paint pieces of cotton cloth, which were carried away as evidence that they had been to the sacred spot. The more years they make this pilgrimage, and the more bills of credit they get, the greater will be their merit and wealth in the next life.

Volume IX. of the Christian Herald, Containing the Numbers for 1886, with complete index, bound in cloth, may be had from this office; price, $2.50, including postage. A few volumes of 1883, 1884, and 1885 are also for sale. We have none prior to 1883.

Thy Healer and Faith Witness, a Monthly Magazine, edited by Mrs. M. Baxter, contains original articles on Holiness and Healing, Authentic Testimonies of Divine Healing, and Items of Intelligence from Heathen Lands where Missionaries are laboring in faith, soliciting no help from man but relying solely on God for support. Annual Subscription, 75 cents, may be sent to Mrs. M. Baxter, 10 Drayton Park, Highbury, London, England, or to the manager of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, N.Y.

A CHILD'S SONG IN A RAILROAD CAR.

An evangelist was making a long journey on a northern railroad recently, when, as the train stopped late at night at a city station, a gang of hilarious revellers entered the car. There was a delay of some minutes, but no one got out. Many of the travellers were half asleep. Others were settling themselves comfortably in their wraps and rugs, preparing for their long night journey before them. Suddenly the silence was most painfully broken by a loud, harsh voice from one of the carriages beginning to roar out a profane and ribald song. What the words were I am thankful to say I do not know, but they were bad enough to horrify every one who heard them. All the passengers were shocked and indignant. They would gladly have silenced the vile and insolent singer, but how was this to be done?

Hark! another voice is heard, sweet, clear, and childlike—the voice of a little girl, singing the words,

> "Glory to Thee, my God, this night,
> For all the blessings of the light;
> Keep me, oh, keep me, King of kings,
> Beneath Thine own Almighty wings."

Only a few notes were sung, when the hint was taken, and another voice joined, then another and another. Manly basses and tenors threw in their deep tones with all their strength, and soon a full and powerful volume of song to the glory of God—"the voice of a great multitude"—poured forth, and the voice of the profane singer was heard no more.

INCIDENTS OF THE REVIVAL IN SWEDEN.

In a letter to Rev. A. B. Simpson, published in his Word, Work and World, from Miss Nellie Hall, whose portrait and life appeared in this journal on the 25th of June, 1885, she gives a vivid sketch of the revival now going on in Sweden. The following are some of the incidents she mentions:

A young man rose in a praise-meeting to tell that the Lord had saved him. He had been a Rationalist. Directly his mother also rose, telling us that she had for years been very anxious, especially for this son, and almost despaired of his salvation on account of his ungodliness. Last morning, however, when seeing old men and women kneel, seeking salvation, she thought God will save my children also. I need not be anxious. When the son, in the evening, prepared for going to the meeting (even the unconverted could not stay away), she said quite loud, "Now go for the last time from home as an ungodly person." That evening he was saved.

A rather unmanageable man, and a disputer, began going to the meetings. His little boy, when seeing his father preparing to go to the meetings regularly, said, "Father, are you going to be saved now?" And when seeing him back, "Father, are you saved now?" This at last became more than the father well could bear, so he fled to the Saviour and got saved.

A very ungodly soldier abused his wife for having been at one of our meetings, where she professed to have been saved. He even threatened her with divorce for her "madness." After this, however, he could not sleep the next night, and soon began to cry aloud for mercy, and that same night he got saved. The next morning he came to our meeting to tell us this, and was then very glad.

Five young men, rather bad characters, called once, at midnight, at a Christian brother's home, wanting him to cry to God with them for mercy. They all found peace.

An old hunter, Blom, a confirmed drunkard and swearer, had long been freely fed and lodged by a farmer family, all the members of which have now been saved. The three young sons in this family were alone at home, and singing their new glad songs, when old Blom came as usual and sat down. They went on singing, and at last asked him about his own condition.

"I'm afraid the evil one takes me alive," answered the old man, bursting into tears. They told him that Jesus was very willing to save him if he were in full earnest. "I should be very glad if there be any possibility for me," was his answer. They then all knelt down and prayed, Blom also praying, whereupon the young men read to him out of the New Testament, asking him if he had got the matter clear. He answered "yes," and went to another Christian family to tell what the Lord had done with him.

Another young convert told us he had lately just been afraid of darkness, feeling as if Satan himself were hanging about him. He is now blessedly saved.

There is every probability that this glorious revival will spread widely in Wermband. In one place especially many sick ones have been healed almost instantaneously in connection with this great work of God.

A SEARCH FOR THE DOOR.

A pathetic confession was made in China recently to the Rev. Jonathan Lees, a missionary at Tientsin. He says: "During a journey I took into the interior one day, near the close of the afternoon, my carter was pushing on to reach our halting-place for the night, when, on passing through a village, my eye was suddenly caught by what was evidently an extemporized temple mat-shed. Though pressed for time, curiosity led me to enter. Yes, there was the idol—a large picture hanging at the end opposite the door, and there was the familiar altar-table, with its incense-pot and candlesticks and various offerings, while the sides of the enclosure were made gay with pictures. A few old men were at the moment the only visitors. As I stood there one man came to burn incense and to perform his prostrations. Then we talked. You can imagine it easy enough. They told me that their worship was to secure good crops. I spoke of the great loving Father in heaven who supplies all our wants, and then I spoke of Jesus. Rising to go, they begged me to retell the story, and when at length I must leave, sad at heart that we might almost certainly never meet again on earth, one old, white-haired patriarch cried out, 'Oh, do stay and teach us. We did not know this was wrong. Our fathers worshipped thus; we cannot find the door.' Those words haunted me for many a day; they haunt me still. There are myriads who, consciously or unconsciously, are feeling for some one or something, they know not what. They cannot find the door. Shall we not show it them?"

AN ENLARGED NECK HEALED.

Sceptical persons in reading testimonies to Divine healing in cases like spinal disease, where there are no outward and visible proofs of the malady, are disposed to doubt whether the disease and the cure are not alike the work of the imagination alone. To such persons the following incident reported in Thy Healer for June, may be commended:

Mr. John Potter, of 28 Bennerley Road, London, writes: The glands of my son's neck had been overgrowing, enlarging and hardening for about three years. A severe cold in November last greatly increased the complaint, rendering his breathing hard and difficult, the glands pressing on the windpipe; his neck also was much swollen. Our physician said: "I am afraid it is serious, and he will have to go into a hospital and undergo an operation;" but we kept him at home. He became much worse, and on Monday, December 20th, 1886, Miss E. A. Hopwood came and anointed him. He believed, and his faith did not fail, though he got much worse, as Miss Hopwood said before she anointed him he might. That evening, two doctors came to see him, and said, "It is impossible for him to remain long in this state, and if a spasm should come on, he would be gone in two minutes; no medicine will do him any good, and you must be prepared for the worst." When the doctor saw him in the morning, he said, "As he is at present, he is not in danger, but his throat is still the same, and the spasm may return at any moment, to save his life you must take him to the hospital to be operated upon, and what is done must be done at once." My wife and I did not consent. We decided to trust the Lord, whether it were for life or for death, and our lad should not leave home, or go under any operation, let the consequences be what they might. My son retained calm faith and trust in God. The next day (Christmas) he was up to dinner with the family. On that day the doctor examined him, and said, "I will call again to-morrow, for I should like to see how he goes on." He continued his visits, but did not give him any medicine. To satisfy him (the doctor) I took my son to Charing Cross Hospital; he was there examined by three doctors and two students, neither of whom could find anything serious the matter with him, but said, "It appears that he has been very seriously ill, but he is going on all right now."

On February 14th, 1887, they again examined his neck, and found it much smaller than it was last summer, and nearer to its proper size; there is no hard substance, but all is soft and comfortable, the Lord has healed him; he is gone to his employment.

THE SOLITARY MISSIONARY IN UGANDA.

Since the murder of Bishop Hannington much anxiety has been felt about Mr. Mackay, who is still in Uganda. How long the savage young King Mwanga will suffer him to live none can say. After a long silence a telegram has been sent from Zanzibar, which is the nearest point of civilization to Mr. Mackay's location, stating that letters have been received there for despatch to England, and have been sent on. It also states that at that time (January 24th) Mr. Mackay was alive and well. Prior to that no news from him had been received since a letter arrived dated September 28th, in which he said:

"About a week ago, on Sunday evening, there was a fresh arrest. All and sundry found in the neighborhood of our station and the Frenchmen's were tied up and taken to the King's palace. Some had just left this, after reading with me; but fortunately, next morning, when all the prisoners were brought out for examination, none was known to be a Christian or to be a 'reader,' and all were let free. That shows, however, how the wind blows yet.

"I have not seen the King since Ashe left. I went to court a few days ago, and his Majesty sent out to tell me that he had given no instructions to guard our place: hence, I 'need not be annoyed'! He presented me with three cows as evidence of his good-will! To you that may seem very encouraging, but not much so to me, because it is, unfortunately, just as true that he had given the most strict orders to arrest any natives coming about the mission, as that he now affects to have never done anything of the sort. But Baganda are the veriest adepts at deception. I have seen the katikiro lately, and had a long talk with him. He has been ill of rheumatism, and has consented to take my medicine and even send for more. I am thankful to say that he has recovered under the influence of salicine. The Lord may touch his heart yet; no other power can. He has been giving good presents to old Isaya, whose boys he was bent on burning last June! Let us have patience. We shall yet see the salvation of God.

"That the tide will soon turn I believe and know. The sun will rise to-morrow morning. How do we know? By no great process of faith or reason. We will not hasten the sunrise by rushing eastward to help it; the chances are that we shall stumble in the dark. When the light begins to dawn we can see where we are going. Night has its value, but we all laugh at a cock beginning to crow at midnight. Our midnight will, however, soon be morn, and all our dark be light. Some teaching is going on. I have visitors every day, and with some I have read and reread in the past month two or three of the stiffest books in the New Testament. The Word of God is living and powerful. Now and then I have a fair number collected in the library, and we have a prayer-meeting."

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?

By Rev. Henry Varley.

The Value of Inspired Prophecy, Fulfilled and Unfulfilled—How Men Treat the Divine Testimony Concerning Christ's Advent—Reasons Why Men Dislike the Doctrine—The Closing Days of the Gentiles—The Drift of the Time.

PROPHECY rightly understood is a most important safeguard against false views concerning the future, and means the plan of the Divine purpose graciously disclosed by God to His people, in order to their establishment in the faith. Fulfilled prophecy is a sheet-anchor to the soul in these days of sceptical unrest and doubt. It is a brilliant light shining out from the past, clear and bright.

Unfulfilled prophecy also, is a light projected into the future. By the knowledge which it imparts we know practically where we are. We are confident as to that which shall be, and are preserved alike, on the one hand, from undue haste, and from false statements concerning the future of the world on the other. The prophetic testimonies of God's Word are invaluable as and for this conclusive reason: neither jot nor tittle has failed in the past, or shall fail in the future.

The Guide to the Church of God,

In regard to the subject of the Lord's pre-Millennial Advent, men are constantly asking of the plainest testimonies of the Word of God: "Cannot these passages be made to mean something else? And are you sure that the words teach what they seem to import?" Into this loose and corrupt habit of mind multitudes have drifted, until the Scriptures are made to mean anything or nothing. Nor this only: the ministry of the Holy Spirit, the purpose of the Gospel during the course of this age, the perfecting of the Body of Christ, the breaking off of Israel, the times of the Gentiles, the election of God in regard to Israel, the Coming Kingdom of Christ on earth, the first, as distinguished from the final resurrection—these diverse and weighty factors in the economy of God are either ignored or mixed up in hopeless confusion.

The solemn truth of the Lord's second, pre-Millennial, and personal appearing in power and great glory carries with it so much that abases man, that we need not be astonished at its limited acceptance among men. It cuts up, root and branch, of the world's progress; and is altogether out of touch with men's views and ideas concerning the future. It denies in toto, from God's point of view, the asserted improvement and upward evolution of man. The faith of God is not in man, because man is a sinner. That man, as a sinner, should have confidence in his future is not surprising, though it certainly is in direct violation of all legitimate and philosophic thought and reasoning. Men cannot understand why God (if such a being exists) should not be satisfied with the growth of big cities, vast populations, and great men. So little have they in common with the thoughts of God, that they are surprised that He should not forego His own claims in order that the praises of national greatness, of great men, and the glory of war, should be chanted to the ends of the earth.

The Popular View

I am far from denying that some of the dusky sons of Eastern countries have been brought to Christ, and to the knowledge of the living God by Christian influence. My position, however, is that for every heathen which our western Christianity has saved and blessed, at least fifty, through our have been blasted and slain. If the design of the existence of these heathen nations was that they might be corrupted and cursed by the English people, the United Kingdom has scored a splendid success. If, however, God intended England to be the pioneer of right and good and truth to the nations sitting in darkness, she has unutterably and miserably failed.

Social and Commercial Intercourse,

I for one distinctly refuse to be dazzled or blinded by the glamor and tinsel of this corrupt age. Our Lord described it as both "wicked and adulterous." He was right. Our experience is the proof and justification of His words. Some of us are fully prepared to be accounted fools and madmen by our fellows. The prophet made no mistake when, sketching the closing days of "the times of the Gentiles," he said, "Yea, truth faileth! and he that departeth from evil is accounted mad, and the Lord saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment."

The Drift of the Present Time has three prominent tendencies. First, a feeble and sluggish religious current distinctly favoring the ecclesiastical supremacy of the Papacy, and a consequent ignoring of the mighty forces of truth which were identified with the Protestant Reformation. The second, a stronger current, drifting toward intellectual scepticism, the ripe fruit of which will be the avowed antichristianism of the last days. Under the attractive guise of modern Liberalism this force is rapidly gathering strength. The third, and by far the strongest, is the common selfish lawlessness which is prepared to sweep away the restraints of human and Divine laws, in order to give free course to licentiousness, blasphemy, intemperance, and corrupt commercial freedom. The desire which is increasing in ever-widening circles, finds its parallel in the worst days of Israel's democratic era, for is it not written there was no king in Israel; every man did that which was right in his own eyes (Judges 21 : 25)?

LECTURING TOUR IN THE FAR WEST OF AMERICA.

By Rev. M Baxter.

ST. PAUL, in Minnesota State, is a city of 150,000 inhabitants, about the population of Nottingham, in England, but spread out over a much larger extent of ground, for, excepting the business part of the city, the houses generally stand detached with an interval of space between each other. This is unfavorable to large audiences at meetings, because people have such a great distance to go to reach any given point.

St. Paul has grown from 5000 inhabitants in 1855 to 150,000 in 1886, and is rapidly increasing. Two million pounds sterling of new buildings have been erected in it during 1886. Like Minneapolis, it possesses very fine buildings, wide and well laid-out streets, with numerous street tram-cars and hansom cabs and carriages, just the same as in London, plying for hire. A stranger will notice the quantities of telegraph-poles along the streets, as lofty "as an Admiral's mast," and sometimes supporting nearly one have hundred wires.

St. Paul is ten miles distant from Minneapolis, another city of much the same size but of more rectangular and modern streets, and which has grown from 13,000 population in 1870 to about 150,000 in 1886. It is considered to be a moderate computation that each of these cities will have 300,000 population in several years' time.

They are situated more than four hundred miles west of Chicago (the distance from Edinburgh to London), and, therefore, about fifteen hundred miles from New York. This immense distance is traversed by the mail-train in thirty-six hours, at a cost of six or seven pounds—being about forty miles an hour. As it is three thousand miles across the American continent from New York to San Francisco, it follows that St. Paul and Minneapolis stand in the position of a half-way house in the journey across America. being midway between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

A considerable number of Germans, Swedes, Bohemians, and other foreigners are found in these cities the same as in Chicago; and this leads to halls being used by them on Sundays for balls and concerts. Thus, at St. Paul, two large halls, Turner's and Pfeiffer's, are occupied for this purpose on Sundays, and the Market Hall every other Sunday. I occupied Market Hall one Sunday (costing £6), and Pfeiffer's Hall on Monday and Tuesday (£3 each evening). Halls, partly owing to the expense of heating and lighting them, cost twice or three times in the Western American States more than in England. But the collections at religious meetings certainly do not much exceed the average amount given in England. The audiences were a thoughtful, intelligent part of the community, but on no occasion exceeded three hundred persons.

CHRISTENDOM IN THE LAST AGE.

By Rev. John Storie.

As to the spirit and faith of Christendom in this closing age there is distinct prediction. "A time will come when they will not endure the sound—health-giving teaching" *—the doctrine provided by God for healing the soul of man; "but after their own lusts," i.e., predilections, "will they with ears itching" for something new, ingenious, startling, "procure for themselves teachers in abundance; avert their hearing from the truth; and be turned aside to fables—to myths;" and thus they lose with the Gospel faith, the Divine impulse and its saving power. With this declension there will be a self-righteous and dead formalism that moves the Saviour's heart to indignation. "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot, . . . so, then, because thou art neither cold nor hot I will spue thee out of My mouth. . . . Thou sayest, I am rich and increased with goods and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art the wretched one, and miserable and poor and blind and naked." When these features stamp the time, the Advent is nigh, and faithful men must lift their voice: "I charge thee in sight of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ who is coming to judge the living and the dead at His appearing (His Epiphany) and His Kingdom, proclaim the Word; be instant in season, out of season: convict, i.e., bring conviction home; rebuke, exhort in all possible longsuffering and teaching" (II Tim. 3 : 13; 4 : 1-5; Rev. 3 : 15, 17).

As to the future morale of Christendom, domestic and social, the prediction is dark and sad. With a wide religious profession it will fail, as the age is drawing to its close, even in what passes as Christian society, to regulate the life. In the family, disobedience to parents, want of a natural affection, intense self-love; in personal and social life, a spirit of covetousness, a pride of boasting; a failure of truth and honor; a refusing to submit to authority; in respect to duty, an accepting only of what commends itself to each man's judgment—a love of pleasure and indulgence; and amid all this a maintaining of churches, and over it all a religious varnish. "Know this," is the inspired warning, "that in the last days grievous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, implacable, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasures rather than lovers of God; holding a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" (II Tim. 3 : 1-5).

And what of the spiritual life; is it to be an increasing communion with God? Here, too, there is prediction and warning. The most striking and plainest, perhaps, this: "And confessedly great is the mystery of godliness. God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached among the nations, believed on in the world, received up into glory." Nevertheless, the Spirit declares that "some shall fall away—apostatize—from the faith, giving heed to deceiving spirits and teachings of demons, who, branded in their own conscience as with a hot iron, speak lies in hypocrisy, prevent, i.e., hinder or check marriage, and advise to abstain from foods, which God created to be received with thanksgiving of them that believe and know the truth" (I Tim. 3 : 16; 4 : 1-5).

* Dr. Gerhard Uhlthorn, Member of the Consistory in Hanover, writes thus of Germany and Protestant Europe: "Even to-day we are in the midst of the conflict; for stronger almost than ever, the heathen spirit in modern guise is wrestling against Christian thought and life; and it almost seems as if the questions of the time should be gathered up into the question: 'Shall we remain Christians, or become heathen again?'"

Five Cents, Postage Free.

END OF THIS AGE ABOUT THE END OF THIS CENTURY,

and its Last Week Passover Week, Ending on Thursday, April 11, 1901,

As shown by Daniel's 2300 and 1335 and 1290 Years—this being the termination also of the 6000 Years from the Creation of Man, and the 2520 Years from Nebuchadnezzar, and the 360 Years from Luther's Reformation, according to the Bible periods—a pamphlet of 29 pages—by Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal Clergyman and one of the Editors of the "Christian Herald;" Author of "Forty Coming Wonders," "Coming Wars," etc. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Revocation of the Indemnity Withdrawals of public lands is likely to take place. Secretary Lamar, in the course of an interview published by the New York Herald, said that the time had arrived when the great corporations ought to select the lands to which they lay claim under the indemnity privilege if they do so at all. The vast tracts now reserved for them must be opened to the people. As the corporations have not obtained all the land absolutely granted to them by Congress, they are entitled to select other pieces within the indemnity limits, but they cannot expect that the entire tract of indemnity land shall be reserved from settlement indefinitely while they make up their minds which portions they will take. The lands would soon be opened for settlement, and the corporations after that time would be allowed to select only such lands as no settler had chosen. An order to show cause why the revocation should not take place has accordingly been issued, and it is expected that nearly thirty million acres will thus be restored to the public domain. This is good news for settlers, but it must astonish the corporations, who hitherto have been very tenderly and liberally dealt with.

The Interior Department is Preparing to Put n operation the law enacted by the last Congress breaking up the tribal relations of the Indians. The complete execution of the law will necessarily be a work occupying a long time, but it is one that ought not to be hurried. The change it will effect in the situation of the Indians is radical, and though at first sight it would appear to be a wrong to them, there can be no doubt that if they adapt themselves to the new order of things they will be in a better position than they now are. Instead of dealing with them as tribes and supplying their wants, treating them, in fact, as paupers or imbeciles, farms are to be allotted to them as individuals, which they cannot sell or give away, and they will have the rights of citizens and be expected to maintain themselves. The best friends of the Indians have long advocated the change, not only as an immediate advantage to them, but as a means of promoting their independence and development. The first reservations to be thus divided and allotted will be in Northern and Eastern Dakota and Northern Oregon. Representatives of the Indian Rights Association are to assist the Department in the allotments.

Mr. O'Brien, the Irish Editor, was Denounced more vigorously and encountered more opposition in New York than he did in Canada. He offended the Labor Party, which polled sixty-eight thousand votes last November. There was an immense demonstration of the party arranged in his honor on June 4th, but Mr. O'Brien refused to attend it, and in consequence the speakers at the meeting castigated him, and advised their friends to refrain from contributing to the funds of the Land League. One of O'Brien's reasons for not attending was that the chairman of the meeting had recently acted as chairman for Tynan, who is supposed to have been the leader of the Phœnix Park murderers, and the recent accusations of the London Times render it most important just now that Parnellites should not in any way be connected with them. A second reason was that Mr. George's theories of land reform were to be endorsed, and O'Brien and the Parnellites do not believe in nationalizing the land, even if they get rid of English landlords, but intend to keep up the landowning and rent systems. His third reason was that the Pope was to be denounced for threatening Dr. McGlynn with excommunication, and O'Brien could not afford to offend Roman Catholics by countenancing the proceeding with his presence. In the very city, therefore, in which O'Brien might justly have expected the warmest welcome he was most ruthlessly attacked. It seems probable that in choosing the least evil by staying away from the meeting, the cause O'Brien came to advocate will suffer a heavy loss in subscriptions. His visit has certainly injured the Parnellite cause more than it has injured Lord Lansdowne.

New Trouble with the Apaches is Apprehended. A despatch from Nogales, Ariz., dated June 7th, stated that seventeen Indians had left the reservation and gone on the war-path. Two days later news came in of murders and depredations so extensive as to indicate that a much larger band than at first reported were marauding. Three citizens of Crittenden were attacked by them on June 8th, and one was killed. Appeals for aid are being received from various quarters between Nogales and the Mexican frontier, which indicates that the Apaches are making for the Sierra Madre Mountains. Captain Lee, with a strong force, is on their track, but unless the Apaches are intercepted before reaching the mountains it will be very difficult to capture them.

The Captains of the Two White Star Steamers which were in collision on May 19th were both censured by the Naval Court of Inquiry which was convened in New York to investigate the fatal disaster. The court listened carefully to voluminous evidence, and gave this decision on Thursday last: "Taking into consideration all the circumstances, the court orders that Captain Perry, of the Brittanic, be very severely censured for his non-observance of regulations, and that Captain Irving, of the Celtic, be severely censured for not moderating the speed of his vessel. The court takes into consideration the excellent previous record of both masters, and thinks it due to Captain Perry to record its opinion that in ordering the fullest speed on the Britannic after he had sighted the Celtic he exercised the best judgment and probably averted a much more serious disaster to his own vessel as well as the Celtic." Both captains were blamed for going so fast as fifteen knots in a fog, and the captain of the Britannic was deemed the more blameworthy because he did not slacken speed after hearing the Celtic's whistle, and for not indicating by signal the course he was taking. It may be hoped that this censure will be a warning to other captains, some of whom are much in need of it.

Threats of Dynamite Attacks are again Being made by Irishmen in this country. The extent of the preparations being made for the celebration of the Queen's jubilee has prompted them to a new demonstration of their antipathy to Her Majesty and the English Government. An Irishman in New York, who is acquainted, though he does not sympathize with the movement, told a reporter of the Times last week that Irishmen meant to make the celebration a reign of terror. Meetings of the dynamiters are being held, he said, and at one of them recently it was announced that arrangements were perfected for opening of the dynamite campaign in a few days. Special efforts are being made to have an extensive explosion on the day appointed for celebrating the jubilee. A party of English detectives has been sent here to investigate.

The Exposure of Vice in London by Mr. Stead, the editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, for making which he was imprisoned for three months, received ghastly confirmation last week. A man and three women were arraigned for carrying on a vile traffic in girls, between the ages of ten and fourteen, whom they procured and sold to abandoned men for vicious purposes. The detective who arrested the prisoners stated that during the past four years he has rescued four hundred girls, between the ages of four and a half and fourteen years, from lives of crime. The prisoners, being of humble rank, will be prosecuted. Nothing has yet been said about prosecuting the detective. Possibly as his revelations inculpate only the humble classes, while Mr. Stead's affected the aristocracy, the detective may escape.

Organized Resistance to Eviction was Continued in Ireland last week. The signal was given by Michael Davitt, who addressed large meetings in the districts in which the evictions are taking place, and advised the tenants to resist the officers of the law. The advice was taken, and the tenants barricaded themselves in the upper parts of their dwellings, and when the sheriff and the police came to take possession boiling water and whitewash was poured upon them. Many of the officers were seriously injured. In some cases it took several hours to turn a family out, and then if the house was not razed to the ground they would return as soon as the sheriff had left and resume occupation. The reports of the struggle cabled to this country have aroused a very bitter feeling against the British aristocracy and the Conservative Government.

Another Disaster from Fire and Panic was reported by cable last week. A despatch from Berlin states that during a circus performance at Neschen, on Sunday, June 5th, a storm arose and a portion of the roof of the circus structure was blown off. The pendent lamps hanging from the roof were broken, and the blazing petroleum poured down upon the heads of the people below. There were two thousand spectators, and a fearful panic arose. In the midst of the tumult one of the lightly built walls of the structure fell in, and the whole building immediately collapsed. A large number of persons were burned, many were trampled to death, and three hundred others were more or less injured.

Mr. Stanley's Expedition for the Relief of Emin Pasha is reported to be making slow progress, as is inevitable from the nature of the country. A despatch from St. Paul de Loando, received June 8th, says: "The latest Congo advices are to the effect that Stanley's expedition was making a successful but slow progress up the river, owing to the fact that the vessels were heavily laden. The expedition passed the confluence of the Kassi River on May 6th, and Stanley expected to arrive at Bolobo on May 8th. A slight accident had happened to the engines of the steamer Peace, which was soon rectified. Otherwise all was well."

France and Russia Unite in Protesting against the Anglo-Turkish arrangements for the evacuation of Egypt by the British troops. The Russian Ambassador at the Turkish capital, in communicating his Government's objections, hinted that if the Sultan ratified the Convention such action might cost him his throne. He also indirectly charged England with bribing the Grand Vizier with £600,000 sterling, and other palace officials with large amounts, in order to secure their approval of the Convention. This, however, the English Ambassador indignantly denies. England appears determined to have her own way, and presses the Sultan to ratify the Convention. It is proposed to invite the concurrence of the other European Powers, but the British Government intimate that if such concurrence is refused they will regard the refusal as a menace to Egypt, and will postpone evacuation under the clause of the Convention empowering them to do so if at the time fixed Egypt is in danger from external foes or internal commotion.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, care of Manager, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

The Prohibition Mass-Meeting Held in Cooper Union, New York, on June 7th was one of the most enthusiastic meetings the city has seen. The large building was densely crowded, and the audience manifested the utmost enthusiasm. Mr. John P. St. John, the Hon. John B. Finch, General Clinton B. Fisk, and the Rev. J. H. Hector, of Washington, familiarly known as "The Black Knight," were among the speakers. Every one present was convinced that the Prohibition movement in the State has made rapid progress.

The Remarkable Revival Services at Toledo, Ohio, which have been continued for four weeks by Dr. L. W. Munhall and Professor and Mrs. Towner, have closed with an enthusiastic jubilee meeting. The capacious First Congregational Church was crowded, and large numbers were unable to gain admission. Dr. Munhall gave an address to the converts on the beginning of Christian life. His text was, "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong" (I Cor. 16 : 13). The Toledo Bee, a secular daily journal, which has published full reports of the services, states that the number of conversions during the revival exceeds nine hundred.

An Effort to Put the Saturday Half Holiday, which is now a legal institution in New York State, to its legitimate use, is being made by the Young Men's Christian Association. The managers, realizing that the holiday involves temptation, have organized a series of summer rambles, which cost from fifty cents to a dollar a head. The party take the train to some pleasant place near the city, and thence go on a pedestrian ramble, returning in time to take the evening train home. This hint may be useful to Associations in other cities.

The Eruption of an Immense New Volcano in Mexico has followed the destructive earthquake of May 3d. On June 7th, the explorers whom Governor Torres sent out after the earthquake returned to Hermosillo. They state that they discovered an active volcano fourteen miles south-east of Bavispe, in the Sierre Madre Mountains. The party could not approach nearer than four miles of the mountain. The crater was pouring forth an immense volume of smoke, fire, and lava, and boiling water was issuing from the side of the mountain. Boulders weighing tons are hurled down from the crater. The noise proceeding from the mountain was most terrific—like a number of vast engines at work accompanied by sounds of thunder. The air was dense with smoke and cinders. The entire surface of the earth presents a woebegone appearance, and not a bird or living thing could be seen within ten miles of the volcano. The town of Bavispe is a complete ruin. The people have all moved out on the high plains, and are living in tents in mortal fear. Such appalling convulsions would strike terror into the bravest. In a few years they will become general all over the world. Happy are they who now discern the signs of the times and seek Christ, the only safe Refuge (Rev. 6 : 14–17).

A Lady who Escaped from a Harem in Utah arrived in New York on June 8th. A policeman on duty at the railroad depot noticed an attractive young lady apparently in a state of bewilderment. He accosted her, and found that she had just come from Salt Lake and wanted to get to the Eastern District of Brooklyn. She stated that her name was Eleanor Paston, and about three months ago she was living in Cornwall, England, when, deceived by a Mormon emissary's glowing accounts of the prosperity to be enjoyed in Utah, she and a number of other girls accompanied him to this country. They were taken to Salt Lake City, where she and another girl were assigned as wives to an elder who had three other wives already. Rather than become his wives they resolved to risk their lives in an effort to escape. They tied the bedclothes together and lowered themselves from the window. They ran away as fast as they could, and eventually were found by a resident of the city, who sympathized with them, and provided them with a suit of men's clothing each. So disguised he helped them to get on board an East-bound train. They told their story to the passengers and found help. Some ladies gave them proper clothes, and the gentlemen made up a purse for them. They were thus enabled to come East, and Miss Paston, having a relative in Brooklyn, came to seek a temporary refuge with her until she could find employment or return to England. One cannot but admire the courage of the girls in making their escape from the clutches of these fiendish seducers. If the victims of Satan, whom he holds captive at his will, exercised similar determination and looked to Christ for deliverance, they, too, might escape (II Tim. 2 : 26).

The Romantic Story of a Foundling Came to light last week. The Girls' Lodging House in St. Mark's Place, New York, was thrown into a state of panic on Thursday night last by the sudden dementia of one of the inmates. In the silence of the night she uttered piercing shrieks and maniacal cries. She was at length sent to the insane asylum, and the matron of the home related her history. She was left on the street by her parents when less than a year old, and was cared for by the city for two years. Then she was adopted by a wealthy merchant and his wife, who were childless, who treated her as their own daughter. After some years the merchant's wife died, and he married again and had several children. Then the adopted daughter did not fare so well, and she ran away. She was possessed by the hope of finding her natural parents, and as fast as she earned money she spent it in following clues which ended only in disappointment. The hope had been frustrated so often that her mind became affected, and last week her reason was wholly dethroned. It is a pity that, instead of harassing herself in searching for the worthless parents who had deserted her, she was not led to seek her heavenly Father, whom to seek is surely to find (I Chron. 28 : 9).

A Man Dedicated His Own Tomb in Cypress Hills Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., on June 5th. The people who happened to be in the cemetery saw a curious procession advancing up its beautiful avenue. At the head was a venerable, well-dressed gentleman, and after him came a group of friends. They were followed by a number of little girls, with tracts in their hands. The procession halted at one of the lots on which was erected a tall granite shaft, surmounted by a model of the Bartholdi Statue of Liberty Enlightening the World, and bearing an inscription recording the name of the old gentleman at the head of the procession with the date of his birth, and a vacant space in which the date of his death is to be inserted when that event occurs. Another inscription on the shaft records his scheme for reforming the world, and getting rid of poverty by dividing the earth up into equal sections, giving to every man his share to hold as an inalienable possession for life. The old gentleman then proceeded to dedicate the monument by giving a short address on the merits of his scheme and the benefit the world would derive from adopting it. The little girls then distributed the tracts, which were on the same subject, and the ceremony was at an end. The monument cost three thousand dollars, and it may be supposed that the man thinks it will perpetuate his memory after his death. It will do but little of that ; his scheme, if it had been adopted, might have done more ; but the only immortality which is worth aspiring after is that promised ages ago by the prophet to those who labor for the spiritual, not the material, good of their race (Daniel 12 : 3).

A Dog's Revenge on a Sheep-Dealer is Described in a despatch from Washington, Pa. The farmers in Washington County keep very large flocks of sheep and have a very intelligent breed of collie dogs, who show almost human sagacity in looking after them. A few days ago a farmer sold a flock of sheep to a dealer who lived thirty miles distant from the place of purchase. The seller of the sheep loaned the man who bought them his dog to assist him in driving them home. The man was instructed simply to feed the dog when he arrived at his destination, and then tell him to go home, which the collie would do. The dog showed such great intelligence in managing the sheep on the way that the dealer made up his mind to keep him instead of sending him home. He locked the collie in his barn. The dog became sulky and cross and refused to eat. After keeping the animal locked up nearly two days the sheep-dealer concluded that the dog was determined to be of no service to him, and he let him out and told him to go home. The dog appears to have thought that, as the man had been keeping him wrongfully, he was also keeping the sheep in the same way, and so the collie went to the field where the sheep had been put and drove them back the entire distance to their former owner's farm. The dealer tried to drive the dog away from the sheep, but the collie met every attempt with such fierce attacks that the man finally let the drove go, and went over the next day and got them again. The dog was mistaken, but his fidelity and sagacity teach a lesson. The first duty of a man released from Satan's bondage is to work for the liberation of other captives (Ps. 51 : 13).

BRIEF NOTES.

THE Rev. George F. Pentecost, D.D., has commenced a series of revival services at Burlington, Vt.

Class prayer-meetings have been established at Harvard College for students who feel an interest in religion without regard to sectarian views.

Mr. Charles Herald is conducting services in South Chicago with much success. His meetings at Orange, N. J., in April, have resulted in permanent good to the churches of that city.

The corner-stone of the new library building of Mr. Moody's schools at Northfield, Mass., the gift of Mr. James Talcott, of New York, was laid on June 4th. It will cost $25,000, will have a capacity of forty thousand volumes, and will be fire-proof.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor has sent another party of one hundred boys and girls to Western homes through the Children's Aid Society, making fourteen hundred and thirteen of the homeless children of this city to whom she has given a start for respectability and usefulness.

Any persons having religious books or papers which they do not need would help in a good work by sending them to J. B. Mitchell, Corporteur American Tract Society, Defiance, O. He informs us that in visiting among the poor he finds many who are glad to get such reading and have been benefited thereby.

The ladies of Evanston, Ill., gave an entertainment on June 2d, in honor of Mrs. C. B. Buell, Corresponding Secretary of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, who has recently taken up her residence there. Miss Frances E. Willard, the President of the Union, took part in the proceedings. Five hundred guests were present.

The King of Siam has given $1440 to the Presbyterian Hospital at Bangkok, and the Queen has given $960 to the schools and the Old Ladies' Home established by those missionaries. The King has also instructed his Minister of Education to place the missionary schools on the same plane and to furnish them the same aid with the Government schools.

Dr. Oscar Lenz, the eminent scientist, has lately returned to Europe, after travelling on foot across the African Continent, through regions literally reeking with marsh fevers, agues, and small-pox. During the entire journey he enjoyed robust health, and not once felt the need of medicine. Not a drop of alcoholic liquor passed his lips. Rice, chicken, and tea formed his fare, and he dressed entirely in flannel.

The International Missionary Union of returned missionaries of all denominations in the United States and Canada will hold its annual meeting this year at Thousand Island Park, St. Lawrence River, August 10th–17th. Returned missionaries will be entertained free of cost. All persons interested in missionary work are cordially invited. Further information may be obtained from the President of the Union, Rev. J. T. Gracey, D.D., 202 Eagle Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager, 63 Bible House, N. Y.

WHY IS FAITH SO FEEBLE?

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?"—MARK 4 : 40.

Faith Tested in the Storm—Its True Proportions Revealed—Trouble in the Path of Duty—In Spite of Christ's Presence—Christ's Reproach—I. An Exclamation of Pity—That that were so Unlike Him—So Unhappy—So Unkind—Oranges for a Horrible Deacon—II. The Censure of Love — For Unreasonableness — For Lack of Common-Sense—III. An Inquiry of Wisdom—A Letter to a Preacher.

LAST Lord's-day morning our music was pitched upon a high key. We sought after great faith in the Master's name. It struck me that I might, perhaps, have discouraged some of the feebler sort, and that, therefore, it would be meet this morning to follow up that sermon by endeavoring to encourage those of weak faith to exercise it until it becomes stronger, and also to invite those who as yet have no faith to venture in the direction of childlike trust. With this brief introduction, let us come at once to our subject.

I should not wonder if the disciples considered that they had much faith in Jesus, their Master and Lord. I do not question that they each one of them esteemed himself a firm believer in Jesus. How could He tolerate a doubt? But, my brethren, we have none of us any idea how scanty our faith really is. When trial comes, the heap from the threshing-floor becomes very small beneath the influence of the winnowing fan. After a day of calm service with Jesus a storm came on, and and left so little of it, that Jesus said to them, "Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?" Remember that we have no more faith at any time than we have in the hour of trial. All that which will not bear to be tested is mere carnal confidence. Fair-weather faith is no faith; only that is real faith in Jesus Christ which can trust Him when it cannot trace Him, and believe Him when it cannot see Him.

That Storm Tested their Faith,

This storm was a special trial to the disciples, because it was so exceedingly severe, and because it came upon them when they were

In the Path of Duty.

Their master had bidden them cross the sea; they were not upon a holiday trip. They had not even followed the suggestion of a brother who had said, "I go a-fishing;" but they were steering under their great Captain's orders. They were doing right, and suffering trouble in consequence. This has often perplexed good men. I have heard a believer say, "I prospered more before I was a Christian than I have done since. Things went smoothly with me before I knew the Lord. How can these things be? The very fact of my endeavoring to do what is right, and laboring to maintain my integrity, has become the cause of my severest trial." This is no new thing upon the earth. The living child of God will have to swim against the stream. Not without fighting will he win his crown.

Moreover, it was an item which helped to try their faith, that the storm assailed them when Jesus was in the ship. Had the Lord been absent, they could have understood it; but He was in the vessel with them! How could the sea be so boisterous with Christ in the vessel? If I am out of communion with Christ, I can understand why I am chastened; but if I am walking in conscious nearness and fellowship with Him, and I am even then tried and perplexed, how can I account for it? Herein is the test of faith. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." This we forget, and fancy that trials must mean anger, when, indeed, they may be tokens and tests of love.

See, my brethren, how these disciples came out of the tempest! They went into the trial well enough, but they were in an evil plight before long. Such are we, as a rule, after severe trial. We make a fair show in the flesh till we are tried, and then our feathers cling around us, and we droop and hide away, till our Master has to say to us, "Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?"

I. We will first use the questions as

The Exclamation of Pity.

The dear Master waking up from His sleep, calm as if it were a bright summer's morning, though it was the dead of night and the midst of a storm, looks upon them with wonder, finding them so strangely different from Himself; and He asks in all the calmness of His own brave spirit, "Why are ye so fearful?" He pitied them, and He pitied them, I think, for several reasons. First, that their fears had made them so unlike Himself. They were His servants, and they should have been as their Master; they were learning of Him, and they should have put in practice the lessons of His example. He was delightfully quiet, and the contagion of His peace ought to have affected them. Our blessed Master must often look upon us, dear friends, with much pity, and grieve over us, that after being with Him so long—for some of us are getting gray in His service—we still fall so far short of His glory. We are predestinated to be conformed to His image; but the process is a slow one. After copying His handwriting our own writing is still greatly marred with crooks and turns. Each page of the copybook of life is marred with errors and blots; therefore the great Teacher pities His poor scholars.

Jesus pitied them again, because their fears made them so unhappy. The apostles were made wretched by their fears. I know some Christian people who suffer greatly from the same cause. I know a man who lives where I live, and stands in this pulpit where I stand, who has to confess his own faults this day; for he might enjoy unbroken peace were it not that in the care and labor of this great church, and all its various agencies, he looks to the difficulties and the necessities of the case, and to his own weakness, and then fears rush in. Beloved, we must not forever be thus childishly timorous. Our sorrows are mostly manufactured at home, beaten out upon the anvil of unbelief with the hammer of our foreboding. The Lord pardon us! Jesus pities us that we should lacerate ourselves by our needless fears, and miss the joy of faith.

Again, the Master felt pity for them because their fears made them so unkind. Does unbelief make the timid unkind? I am sure it does.

The Disciples were Ungenerous to their sleeping Master. If they must needs wake Him, might they not have addressed Him in fitter words? To say, "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" was fretful and wicked. It was enough to wound their Lord's tender heart to be thus spoken to. Our unbelief has a tendency to make us unkind also. We are not tender of others when we are disturbed about ourselves.

Here let me digress to teach a lesson of pitying love. It is well to recognize that sour speeches often proceed from a sad heart. It is wise to view ungenerous language as one of the symptoms of disease, and rather pity the sufferer than become irritated with the offensive speech. It is a pity to take much notice of what some sufferers say, for they will be sorry for it soon. If we knew the real reason for many a harsh word, our sympathy would prevent even momentary anger. Our Lord did overlook the petulance of the apostles; for He did not say, "Why are ye so unkind?" but He inquired, "Why are ye so fearful?" In every case let us cure unkindness with double love. I heard yesterday of a wise old Welsh minister of a generous spirit, who was afflicted with and if a deacon is unkind, he can wound terribly. This deacon was most perverse and cruel, and tormented the old gentleman in all sorts of ways. At last he fell sick, after having said certain dreadful things which were more bitter than even his usual gall and wormwood. The patient pastor soon went to see him, and on the road he bought some of the best oranges, and took them with him. "Brother Jones," he said, "I am sorry you are so ill; I have come to see you, and I have brought you a few oranges." Brother Jones was very much astonished at this kind act, and had not much to say on the matter. The minister gently talked on, and said, "I think it would refresh you to eat one of these. I will peel you one." So he went on with peeling the orange, and talked with him pleasantly. Then he divided the fruit very neatly, and handed the sick man a nice tempting piece in the gentlest possible manner. The bitter-spirited man ate it, and began to melt a little; the conversation became hearty, and the prayer was pleasant. Brother Jones was getting Better in More Ways than One.

A Horrible Deacon:

An outsider, who knew all about brother Jones and his ill-humor, could hardly believe that the minister had acted thus to one who had opposed him constantly, and slandered him foully, and so he asked, "Did you really go and see that cruel old Jones?" "Oh, yes," he said, "I went to see him; I was bound to do so." "And did you take him some oranges?" "Oh, yes, I took him some oranges; I was glad to do so." "And did you sit down by his bedside, and peel him an orange?" "Yes, I peeled him an orange, and I was pleased to see him enjoy it; for I have learned, brother, that when a man is afflicted with a very bad temper, an orange is a good thing for him to take. At any rate, it is a good thing for me to give."

The lesson is—if you wish to cure a man of ill-feeling, be very kind to him. View unkind and petulant speeches as symptoms of a disease for which the best medicine is not a dose of bitters, but an orange. Yet, beloved, if you have used such speeches yourself, do not repeat them. Cease from being so fearful, that you may cease from being so ill-humored. Our blessed Master did not find fault with the unkindness of His disciples, but He went to the root of the evil by silencing their fears. He said to them, "Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?"

II. But now, secondly, these words were

The Censure of Love.

They were intended to convey a measure of gentle rebuke to their mistrustful hearts. Their unbelief was grievous to the Lord Jesus. They ought to have believed Him, and it was an injury to His perfect love that they should so readily mistrust Him, or even mistrust Him at all. How could they think that He would let them sink? He was in the vessel with them; did they suppose that, after all, He was a mere pretender to Deity, and that the ship would go down with Him on board? Beloved, let us smite upon our breasts to think that we should ever have caused a pang of heart to that dear Lord who yielded up His life for our salvation. He must not be doubted any more; it is wanton cruelty. Our Lord questioned His apostles thus, not only because their unbelief grieved Him, but because it was most unreasonable. The most unreasonable thing in the world is to doubt God. Faith is pure reason. That may seem a strange paradox, but it is literally true; nothing is so reasonable as to believe the Word of God, which cannot err or lie. Moreover, their unbelief was

Contrary to Their Common-sense.

Some people make a great deal of common-sense; and well they may, for it is the most uncommon of all the senses. Was it reasonable for these men to think that He, who could foresee the future, would take them on board a ship when He foreknew that a storm would wreck them? Would so kind a leader have taken them to sea to drown them? Our unbelief, my brethren, seldom deserves to be reasoned with. Our fears are often intensely silly, and when we get over them, and ourselves look back upon them, we are full of shame that we should have been so foolish. Our Lord kindly censured their unbelief because it was unreasonable.

Jesus censured His friends because He foresaw that such unbelief as theirs would unfit them for their future lives. That ship was the symbol of the Church of Christ, and the crew of the ship were the apostles of Christ. The storm represented in parable the persecutions which the Church would have to endure; and they, if they were cast down as cowards in a storm on the paltry lake of Galilee, would be proving themselves altogether unfit for those more tremendous spiritual storms which in after years tossed the Church, and mingled earth and hell in dire confusion. Brethren, our present trials may be a training-ground for more serious conflicts. We do not know what we have yet to endure; the adversities of to-day are a preparatory school for the higher learning. If we do not play the man now, what shall we do by and by? Oh, for calm hope, and a childlike repose on the love which cannot fail! I have hurried over ground where I might profitably have tarried, because I want to have an earnest word with you upon the third point.

III. We may now regard these words as An Inquiry of Wisdom.

It is always good to probe a sorrow to the bottom, if there is any hope of finding out its cause, and putting it away. If you are in fear you may rise above it by removing its cause. If there be clearly no reason for fear, you will cease to fear; and if there be a cause of fearfulness, you can deal with it. My utterances will be as short as telegrams; please enlarge on them at your leisure. "How is it that ye have no faith?" This is the inquiry.

Is it want of knowledge? If the disciples had known Jesus better they would have had no fear, but would have exhibited firm faith. Is it so with any of you? Are you badly taught in the Gospel? If it be so, your quickest way to faith will be to read your Bible more, to study it with greater attention, and to hear the Gospel oftener. Spend three, four, five times the amount of time you now do in devotion, and so draw nearer to your Lord, entreating the Holy Spirit to lead you into all truth. Next, is it want of thought? Did these good people know and yet forget? Did they fail to consider? Were they superficial in their thinking? Is that the reason why you, also, are so fearful and have so little faith? If so, mend your ways, my brethren. Mend them at once. Have more thought more prayer—much more prayer, more praise—much more praise, more meditation, more calm investigation of your own heart, and more acquaintance with the things of God.

The inquiry as to why we are so fearful may be helped by another question: is it that our Trials Take Us by Surprise?

Perhaps the disciples reckoned that everything must be right, since they had Christ on board. Let us not indulge such a notion. Never let any affliction surprise you; for your Lord has told you, "In the world ye shall have tribulation." If your children die, do not be surprised; shall mortal parents bring forth immortal offspring? If your riches disappear, do not be surprised—they always had wings; what wonder if they fly! If any other adversity happeneth to you, be not surprised; for "man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward." The Lord has told you before it come to pass, that when it is come to pass you may believe. Reckon upon tribulation, and then you will not be overtaken by surprise, nor fret as though some strange thing had happened unto you.

Have I hit the nail on the head? If you have not found out the cause of your fearfulness I must leave you to look for it yourselves, and I trust you may discover it and destroy it at once. We must not continue to be of little faith. We must glorify our Lord by a believing confidence in Him, such as neither storm of sorrow nor tempest of temptation can shake.

I shall conclude by carrying this inquiry into another region for another purpose. In this congregation there are a considerable number of friends who are not yet believers in Jesus Christ, and I want to know from them this morning why they have no faith. I entreat them to help me in the inquiry. Why it is that they are still so fearful, still so undecided? My dear friend, you will want faith soon, for you will have to die. Whether you live in Christ or not, you will have to die; and dying is hard work to those who have no Saviour. Perhaps before another Sabbath day you may be in the swellings of Jordan, and what will you do if you have no faith in Christ? Do you say that you desire to have faith? I am glad to hear it, but I should like to press this matter home, and to ascertain whether this desire is earnest, thorough, and hearty.

Do you know what it is that you desire? are you in earnest to be saved? I do not mean, are you in earnest to escape from hell? That I should think is very likely, if you are in your senses; but are you in earnest to escape from sin? Do you want to be saved from the power of evil? Do you desire to be made good and obedient and true and pure in life? If you do, then I would remind you that faith in Jesus is the only way of salvation; and I would press upon you eagerly to desire immediate faith. Yes, I would urge you now to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ with all your heart. Trust Him, because of what He is, what He has done, and what He is doing for sinners. Remember that this is as far as you are concerned. You are to accept what the Lord Jesus presents to you. Accept Him. Yes, take Him to be your own. Look you here. I turn to this friend behind me, and I say, "Will you take my hand?"* See! he takes it freely. Jesus Christ is as free to every sinner that feels his need of Him as my hand was to my friend. He took my hand at once without question—will you not take Jesus? Take Him now. If you take Him, He is yours forever. Take His hand, and He will not withdraw it from your grasp. Oh that you would cry out, Lord, I accept Thee!

The Whole of the Business,

If you are not believing in Christ, I should like to know why not. Is it that you are believing in yourself? If so, give up such folly. You cannot trust yourself and trust Christ too; away with all notion of such a conjunction. Hang up self-confidence on a gallows high as that whereon Haman was suspended, for it is an abominable thing.

Perhaps it is your great sin that leads you to despair of pardon. There is no occasion for such unbelief, for God is abundant in mercy, and the blood of Jesus cleanses us from all sin. Instead of doubting, I pray you to glorify God by believing in the greatness of His salvation. It was a pleasure to me in years past to enjoy the friendship of

Mr. Brownlow North.

Before conversion he was a thorough man of the world, and, I suppose, about as frivolous and dissipated as men of his station and character often are. After his conversion he began to preach the Gospel with great fervor, and certain of his old companions were full of spite against him, considering him to be a hypocrite.

One day when he was about to address a large congregation, a stranger passed him a letter, saying, "Read that before you preach." This letter contained a statement of certain irregularities of conduct committed by Brownlow North, and it ended with words to this effect, "How dare you, being conscious of the truth of all the above, pray and speak to the people this evening, when you are such a vile sinner?" The preacher put the letter into his pocket, entered the pulpit, and after prayer and praise, commenced his address to a very crowded congregation; but before speaking on his text, he produced the letter, and informed the people of its contents, and then added, "All that is here said is true, and it is a correct picture of the degraded sinner that I once was; and oh, how wonderful must the grace be that could quicken and raise me up from such a death in trespasses and sins, and make me what I appear before you tonight, a vessel of mercy, one who knows that all his past sins have been cleansed away through the atoning blood of the Lamb of God! It is of His redeeming love that I have now to tell you, and to entreat any here who are not yet reconciled to God, to come this night in faith to Jesus, that He may take their sins away and heal them." Thus, instead of closing the preacher's mouth by this letter, the enemy's attempt only opened the hearts of the people, and the Word was with power. Oh that you, my dear hearers, would believe the Lord Jesus to be a real Saviour of real sinners, and come to Him with all your sins about you! God bless you, for Christ's sake! Amen.

* The preacher suited the action to the word, and his hand was readily grasped by one of the deacons.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

AN INFIDEL'S ADMISSION.*

WHEN David Hume was in Paris doing the duties of Secretary to the Embassy, it happened one evening at the table of Baron D'Holbach that the conversation turned on natural religion, and Mr. Hume declared that in all his life he had never met an atheist. The baron replied, "You now encounter seventeen all in one bunch." Hume did not ask to be counted as the eighteenth. He had never seen an atheist in Great Britain. But at that time atheism was spreading in France; and it is a common impression that a few years later, in the Revolution, all France was atheistic. Yet probably in the highest frenzy of the Revolution the atheists were a small minority of the population of that country. Some years before this incident Mr. Hume's mother died. His friend Boyle, finding him in the deepest affliction and in a flood of tears, expressed regret that he had not the consolations of the Christian faith. Mr. Hume replied: "Ah, my friend, I throw out my speculations to entertain the learned and the metaphysical world; yet, in other things, I do not think so differently from the rest of the world as you imagine."

A DEAF MUTE'S ECSTASY.

The Abbé Sicard, speaking of his celebrated pupil Massieu, relates that when after preparing his mind in the way already adverted to, he announced to him God, the Author of the beings that he saw and the object of our worship, Massieu, awed and trembling, "prostrated himself and thus offered to this great Being the first homage of his worship and adoration. When recovered from this sort of ecstasy he said to me by signs these beautiful words, which I shall not forget while I have life: 'Ah, let me go to my father, to my mother, to my brothers, to tell them there is a God; they know it not.'"

A LETTER UNDER A STONE.

A missionary to a savage people sent a boy with fruits to another missionary's family in the neighborhood, with a letter specifying the number. The boy had learned that a letter communicated information. Therefore in a retired spot on the way he hid the letter under a stone and ate some of the fruits. He then took out the letter and delivered it with the remainder. When asked for what was missing, he was astonished, and wondered how the letter hidden under the stone could have known what he was doing. So the savage regards the transcendent and incomprehensible powers, before which he is awed, as intelligent like himself. In the sense of his dependence he cries to them for help, and considers by what offerings or service he can avert their displeasure and gain their favor.

HUGH MILLER'S NIGHT IN A CAVE.

The very thought of a spiritual presence, when vivid, produces a sense of awe. Experiences in thoughts and visions of the night analogous to those recorded ages ago in the Book of Job, are not uncommon now. One wakes from a deep sleep; in the darkness, the loneliness, the silence he thinks of the world of spirits, its reality, its nearness, his own inevitable approach to it; he things of the great God looking on him out of the dark; he imagines spirits of the dead near him. Who has not felt at that hour the peculiar and thrilling awe of the unseen and spiritual world?

This is why proximity to the dead inspires man with fear, and a corpse, silent and still,

* These incidents are used as illustrations in an exhaustive treatise entitled "The Self-Revelation of God," by Samuel Harris, D.D., LL.D., a book designed to meet the difficulties which students and men of learning find in accepting the doctrines of Evangelical religion. Pp. 570; price, $3.50. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 745 Broadway, New York.

Queen Victoria Going in State to Open the New People's Palace. (See page 373.)

daunts the soul that never feared the living. Hugh Miller in his boyhood was one night shut up by the rising tide in a cave. He says: "The corpse of a drowned man had been found on the beach about a month previous, some forty yards from where we lay. I had examined the body, as young people are apt to do, a great deal too curiously for my peace; and though I had never done the poor nameless seaman any harm, I could not have suffered more from him during that melancholy night, had I been his murderer. Sleeping or waking he was constantly before me. The near neighborhood of a score of living bandits would have inspired less horror than the recollection of that one seaman."

DANIEL WEBSTER'S EPITAPH.

It is said that since science has revealed the vastness of the universe, it is unreasonable to suppose that God would have done so great a work to redeem from sin men on this earth, when the earth itself is but a speck in the immensity of space and amid innumerable planets, suns, and systems. This is now one of the common objections of unbelief. Daniel Webster had been troubled with this objection. About two weeks before his death he dictated, and afterward revised with his own hand, copied and signed, the following declaration, which he said was to be engraved on his tombstone: "Lord, I believe, help Thou mine unbelief. Philosophical argument, especially that from the vastness of the universe as compared with the comparative insignificance of this globe, has sometimes shaken my reason for the faith that is in me; but my heart has assured and reassured me that the Gospel of Jesus Christ must be a divine reality. The Sermon on the Mount cannot be a merely human production. The belief enters into the very depth of my conscience. The whole history of man proves it."

Bishop Riley's Mission in Mexico, which We fully described in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD for April 7th, is in a most critical position for want of funds. A gentleman in Mexico writes to him: "If you become obliged to sell the church in the city of Mexico, it will be a great blow to the missionary work here. Is it possible that American Christians can find it in their heart to abandon you and your mission after so many years of sacrifice and anxiety on your part? To see your work here crumble to pieces is too sad to contemplate." Contributions should be sent to Bishop Riley, Bible House, New York.

THE IRISH COTTAGER'S BURDEN.

(See Illustration on page 381.)

EVERY year got worse with Patrick O'Brien. He was an old man, quite seventy, and all the time since he was married, fifty years back, things had been going badly. The little plot of land in Ireland which he rented was miserably poor. Pat had promised himself every year that next year he would improve it sure; but when next year came it had to be planted as before, and the land was further impoverished. At first he had paid his rent pretty regularly, but after the children began to come he drifted into arrears, and the arrears grew.

The agent who collected the rents of the estate was a kind man. Pat always admitted so much. Indeed, he had been heard to say that if all Protestants were as good as he, he would not care how many Protestants there were. The agent, on his side, too, liked Pat, and once, though Pat never knew it, when he received peremptory orders from the landlord to evict Pat if no money was forthcoming on next rent day, he had paid out of his own pocket a small sum to Pat's credit to keep the old man on his land. That, however, could not be done more than once, and at last the order came for Pat to be turned out.

He moaned and lamented about it for some weeks, for he had nowhere to go, and he grieved at leaving the place where he had lived all his life. Only two daughters were with him, the sons having gone to America long ago, and his wife having been laid in the old church-yard fully seven years. One of the daughters sent the news to America unknown to him, and that was all that was done in preparation for the day when they must quit. The old man had no heart to prepare, and, indeed, as he had no money, and not much strength for work, it was not easy to see what he could do.

"Put your trust in the Lord, Pat," the agent had said to him when he gave him the notice to leave. "I am sorry for you, but I cannot help you. God can; go to Him;" and he told him of One who had come to bear his burden for him, and had died to redeem him; but Pat left all those matters to the priest, and could not realize the blessing described to him.

It wanted but a few days to the fatal day, and nothing had been done. It seemed as if the old man and his two daughters would be turned out to die on the roadside. One morning, however, the postman, who seldom paid a visit to Pat's cottage, made his way thither and handed in a good-sized package. It was opened under the inspection of the three pairs of anxious eyes, and was found to contain three passage tickets for America and a fifty-dollar bill. Pat's sons, it seemed, were going to stand by the old man and their sisters.

How suddenly the house of mourning was changed to a house of joy! The few things they were going to take with them were quickly packed, and the little furniture that was left was sold or given away. One basket of peat for fuel remained, and this Pat resolved to give to an old widow who lived across the hill about two miles away. She and Pat were old friends, and she would grieve when she heard of the approaching voyage. Well, this peat would keep her fire going on winter nights, and Pat liked the thought of giving it to her. He fastened a bit of rope to it, and, slinging it over his shoulder, was about to set out for the old widow's house when the agent drove up. He was told the good news, and was pleased for Pat's sake, though he would have been better pleased if the boys in America had spent the money in paying Pat's debts.

"Where are you going with that peat?" he asked. "Oh, put it on my cart," he said, when he had been told where it was to go. "I'll take it for you. You are too old, Pat, to carry such a load over the hill."

Pat accepted gladly, and when it was safely fixed he thanked his friend.

"You would have found it a heavy load to carry, Pat," said the agent, "and I am glad you accepted my offer. I wish you would accept another offer with that heavier burden you are carrying. Christ is asking you to let Him bear the burden of your sins. Will you not do it?"

But Pat could not see it, and, sad as it was, continued to put his trust in the priest.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 366.)

The Quaker Surprised.

WITH a light heart Inez tripped down-stairs, and entered the room in which Señor Bonanza was. Interest in the romantic possibility before her sat upon her face, but the thrilling suspense which would have filled her heart had she known aught of a father's love was entirely absent. It was, therefore, almost with unconcern that she passed into the stranger's presence. Not so, however, did Señor Bonanza feel as he looked up and saw her in the doorway. No explanation, no effort of memory was necessary for identification with him. He looked at her at first with startled surprise, then springing from his chair he clasped her in his arms, and covered her brow with kisses. And here was a strange thing. It was the likeness to him which had led Mr. Hartgold to suspect the relationship, but it was the likeness which he saw in Inez to his dear dead wife that convinced Señor Bonanza of her identity. Of her resemblance to himself he saw nothing.

"My daughter," he exclaimed, kissing her again and again, and stroking back her hair, "my beloved daughter! Mourned as dead, lost to your father, a gift from heaven! I can never let you go from my side again."

"Father," said Inez, timidly, and almost shrinking from the utterance of the sacred name to a stranger, "do you know that I have another father who has been so kind and true, and whom I love dearly?"

"I know all about it, sweetheart," said her father. "Be very sure that I shall never grudge good Captain Lanyon your love for him. He deserves it all. Indeed, I hope that he may be willing to give up the perils of the sea and be content to dwell with us on shore. I have more than enough for all. Is there any other in whom my darling takes an interest? I should like to celebrate this happy day and show my gratitude to heaven, by owning and aiding every one who has acted kindly to my child."

At this point Ruth, who had come in unobserved, and had been a delighted listener, looked with meaning eyes into Inez's dark orbs. That fair maiden's olive cheeks were suffused with blushes as she bent her head in an agitation that she could not control. Taking advantage of the silence, Ruth handed the magazine they had been reading to the happy and kindly Señor, saying with a smile, "I think there is, sir. If you will read that it will tell you all about it."

So saying she pointed out to him the touching and thrilling story, "Cast Adrift: An Episode of the Sea," by Ralph Ravensworth. "That," she said, "will tell you of one whom your daughter has learned to love."

Señor Bonanza, with his arm clasped around his daughter's waist, as if he feared that they might again be separated, read the story. As he proceeded, Ruth could see the tear coursing down his cheek.

"May Heaven bless thee, my daughter!" he said at length, "and Captain Lanyon, too, who has proved so true and good a teacher of trust in God. As for this young man Ravensworth, tell me where to find him, and it shall go hard with me if I do not prove the depth of my indebtedness to him for the succor and comfort he rendered, and for his fidelity to my child."

The Old Cottager Relieved of his Burden.

Then Inez found her voice. "Alas! dear papa, I know not where he is; but this I know—that Ralph Ravensworth is worthy of all your thanks, and of—of—your esteem."

"I shall find him," said the Señor, confidently. "Providence will not deprive me of the opportunity to do my duty, nor him of his reward."

Rightly judging that the father and daughter would like to have some time alone, Mr. Hartgold signalled to his wife, and said to Señor Bonanza, "Thou hast probably much to tell thy daughter after all these years, and she will have many things to ask thee; Keturah and I will pay a visit to an invalid guest whom this joyful reunion has caused us to leave to himself more than is seemly. Come, Keturah, let us see how Mr. Robert fares."

Robert was faring very well, and was making progress of a kind neither his host nor hostess suspected. Ruth, observing that all the family were in the room with Inez and her father, and, therefore, that Robert Atheling must be alone, had stolen from the room to pay him a visit. She had not seen him since the day of the fire, and she went therefore with a heart brimming over with gratitude to thank him for the self-forgetful effort he had made to save her life. In such a matter words are but a poor expression of the heart's emotion. How can one person thank another for life preserved? Ruth feared that she could not do it, and as she entered the room where Robert sat she realized that she could not. Words altogether failed her, but her agitation and the vain effort she was making to tell her preserver all that she felt were revealed in her flushed face and her sparkling eyes. Robert read that face aright, and, grasping the hand held out to him gazed lovingly into her eyes. His look, too, was eloquent, and doubtless Ruth, too, could read what it expressed. It is an old language—old as the world itself, and there is no speech in which its voice is not heard.

It was scarcely a minute that the two stood so, hand locked in hand and eyes asking and answering questions in the silence, but in that minute the story was told which was to decide their future lives. "Dear Ruth," said Robert, but Ruth would not wait to hear. With her face suffused with blushes, she loosed his hand, and turning quickly vanished from his side and fled to her retreat in her own room. There, trembling and quivering with the nervous joy which comes but once in the life of any of us, she threw herself on her knees and poured out her soul in prayer and thanksgiving for—as yet she knew not what.

Robert, too, was profoundly moved. There was no mistaking the meaning of that glance which had shot from Ruth's eyes in response to the question, which as he knew his own gaze must have asked. She loved him, and her heart was surely his whatever might betide. It was for him now to make the path straight for their union. He therefore set himself with the concentrated powers of his mind to solve the problem how best to ingratiate himself with the good Quaker and his wife, and induce them to give a favorable answer to his petition. Not many minutes elapsed before Mr. and Mrs. Hartgold entered the room, and briefly told him of the relations which had been discovered between Señor Bonanza and his daughter.

Robert gave to the marvellous story such attention as he could command, but all the time that Ephraim occupied in relating it the one thought was thrusting itself prominent how best to introduce to the worthy couple the desire of his heart. He felt that there was no time likely to be so favorable as the present opportunity.

"I feel," he said, suddenly changing the current and ordinary topics of conversation, "that I shall never be able to express my deep sense of your kindness to me while—"

"Then thee had better leave it untold," said Ephraim, promptly. "Keturah and I feel exactly like thee on that point. Our debt to thee would put thine to us so far into the shade, that it will be a real relief to us both if thou wilt be good enough not to challenge the comparison."

Here Ephraim Hartgold, the hard-headed merchant, came to a full stop by reason of a certain difficulty of speech that was greater than he could well manage. Keturah would fain have come to the help of her husband as in duty bound, but all that she could do was to take off her glasses and rub them carefully, though why she should do that I cannot tell; for the dimness was certainly not on them, but on the gentle and kindly gray eyes behind them, which were just then so blurred as to make clear vision quite an impossibility.

"Don't," said Robert, waving down with his hand all attempt to continue in that groove. "You make it harder for me to say what I want to say; for, indeed, indeed, I do not ask it by the way of reward."

Then prosecuting his enterprise in what is ever the best and weightiest fashion, he simply went direct to the point with his heart upon his lips: "The simple fact is, dear friends, that I love your daughter Ruth as my life. Will you spare her to me for my wife?"

We may be quite sure that Robert Atheling had no intention just then of making poetry. But from the beginning until now, love is supposed to be strong in the poetic element, and so his odd way of putting it may be taken as a token that he had the genuine afflatus. The calm and sedate Keturah did not seem to be astonished by this frank avowal. Mothers as a rule seem to have intuitions on such subjects that far out-travel the duller minds of their spouses. Ephraim, on the other hand, was taken by surprise, which shows that, like Mary in the sacred story, Keturah had been content to ponder these things in her heart.

"Thy wife, Robert Atheling!" said the Quaker. "Nay, that cannot be. The maiden has been as good as promised to her cousin Paul, who is at this time in Chicago, where he is transacting business for our firm, and he is eventually to be my partner and successor. He is a good youth and a clever and hath a comely countenance."

By this time the blur had passed away from Keturah's eyes, at least so much so as to enable her to see the look of blank distress which sat on Robert's pallid face. It was not in her woman's heart to sit unmoved. She had long since divined Robert's passionate love for the maiden whose life he had saved. She had seen, too, not without some dismay, Ruth's evident tenderness for him, and for the life of her she cou'd not help taking sides with them both. She glanced at her worthy husband, who was looking at her with disturbed and anxious eyes, stroking his white hair down upon his forehead as he always did when stirred and much troubled.

"It hath troubled me greatly," Keturah said, quietly, "that our daughter hath never taken kindly to her cousin Paul's wooing, and for that matter the youth himself hath displayed but very little eagerness. Perhaps, however, it may not be from coldness toward her, but it may be because he hath learned to become quite assured of her."

That last limb of the sentence was a wonderfully clever diplomatic stroke. Its effect on Ephraim was to make him open his eyes and his mouth, as he felt a suspicion that a mere family arrangement might not be sufficient to settle so important a matter to everybody's satisfaction, and that the little heart that beat so strongly under Ruth's bodice might prove a protesting party.

Robert fixed his eyes on Keturah, looked the thanks he could not speak, and said: "Eagerness! Oh, Mrs. Hartgold, I could die for her!"

"Thou hast proved the truth of thy words beforehand, friend Robert. Very nearly thou didst do so," said Keturah, in strong agitation. "Verily thou didst redeem her from death at great cost, and at the risk of a still greater one! Hadst thou valued thine own life as against hers in the moment of her peril, verily it would not have been in our power to give her either to thee or to her cousin. Even now should we have been mourning over her in loneliness and desolation."

Ephraim Hartgold was a strong man as well as a good one; he had a strong will as well as a kind one; but he felt that in the presence of such a combination "his strength was as tow."

"Wife! it must not be well," said Keturah, to her husband, "that as this question concerns our daughter so nearly that we consulted her. She hath a good and an obedient disposition, and would do whatsoever her parents required of her, but neither thou nor I would be right in requiring her to give her hand to one if her heart is given to another. Let us hear her and after that let us pray to be guided aright."

"Thou art right, my wife," said Ephraim, falling, as men generally do when dealing with women, into a trap where victory becomes impossible, "thou art right. Send for Ruth. Let us hear how she hath been led in this momentous matter."

He was still stroking his hair as if he was trying to force inspiration on the knotty point by means of friction, when the fair young Quakeress herself, in answer to the summons, entered the room. At one glance the clever maiden took in the whole scene and read its meaning clearly without need of words. First, she blushed red as any poppy with which her namesake might have adorned her hair in the cornfields of Boaz in the olden time. Then there came a pallor on her cheeks that told how greatly she was concerned as to the possible issues of that conversation; and then, with one keen, searching, and appealing look into her honored and beloved father's eyes, she turned and silently left the room.

In that glance of Ruth's, which went right into the secret chambers of his soul, honest and tender-hearted Ephraim read a whole volume of information on a subject to which he had given not much more than a passing thought. He could not resist it. He followed his darling out of the room and found her in the drawing-room looking steadily at nothing through the window, and doubtless seeing nothing—nothing, that is to say, with her eyes; but still looking steadily with her mental vision at that suggestive picture in the parlor—mother, father, Robert—which she had just seen.

"Dear Ruth," said her father, quietly and tenderly, "answer thy father two questions directly from thy heart." The first question had to do with her cousin Paul, and the answer was a decided "No." The second question had to do with Robert Atheling, and the answer was a soft-whispered "Yes," which made Ruth's pale cheeks to assume the rosiest red. What the questions were may be fairly understood.

In a few minutes he returned, and Keturah had no difficulty as she looked at his discomfited face in learning the result of her stratagem. Ephraim had allowed his opponents to be reinforced, and Ruth had joined her mother and Robert, while he alone in the absence of the suitor Paul, was left to do battle for the prize. He saw that he was beaten, but he tried to console himself with the thought which Keturah had thrown out that Paul would not be greatly distressed, not having been as she had said, not without a touch of disdain, by no means an eager wooer.

"Let us pray," said Ephraim, and kneeling down silence fell on the little company of three. After a few minutes of silent prayer Ephraim's voice was uplifted—the voice of a man who had been accustomed through the years of a long and eventful life to go to the same Source of wisdom for guidance, and to invariably receive an answer. The rectitude of the man, the respect for the sanctity of a promise was struggling within him as he told God the difficulty in which he was placed by this new love which had revealed itself, and he begged for light on his way. Robert respected him as he listened to that earnest pleading, and felt that he should continue to respect him though the issue might be adverse to his hopes.

They knelt in silence for a few minutes after Ephraim had ceased. When they rose Ephraim took Robert by the hand and said to him, with much solemnity: "My son, I see not how this has happened, I know not how it is that this arrangement for our daughter's marriage hath been thus disturbed, but it is so, and who am I that my promise should stand when the Lord who ruleth all hearts hath put in both of yours a desire opposed to it. I have committed the whole matter to Him, and I see that it is my duty to concede thy request." He shook Robert's hand cordially and added: "The Lord bless thee, my son, and fill thy heart with His grace."

Loosing Robert's hand he went in search of Ruth, leaving Keturah to hear the young man's broken but eloquent thanks. He soon returned leading in his blushing daughter, and, placing her hand in Robert's he and his wife left the two lovers to themselves.

> "Love is master of all arts,
> And puts it into human hearts
> The strangest things to say and do," says the poet Longfellow, and no doubt it was as well they were left alone.

When Robert Atheling stood by the bedside of his dying father, and had given his solemn promise to fulfil his last request, the dying saint had said with almost prophetic ardor: "God bless thee, my son. The God of thy fathers bless thee. Now, Robert, I die content. As for thee, thine shall be the best of blessings from the hand of God."

The best of blessings! Robert Atheling looked upon the upturned face of the sweet maiden at his side, his plighted love, and knew that his aged father's prediction had come true. He was in the cue to quote the "poet of all time" and say,

> "Why, man, she is mine own!
> And I as rich in having such a jewel,
> As twenty seas, if all their sands were pearl,
> The water nectar, and the rocks pure gold."

(To be continued.)

WHAT WE HAVE AND WHAT WE HOPE FOR.

By Mrs. M. Baxter. Rom. 8: 14-28.

Various Opinions on the Subject — What the Scriptures Teach—Present Possessions—Jesus the First Possession—Power to Become Sons of God—God as a Father—The Spirit of Adoption—The Firstfruits of the Spirit—Victory Over Temptation—Not Immunity—Not Resurrection Bodies—Full Possession when Jesus Comes.

THIS is a subject of great perplexity among many dear children of God. They say: "How shall we discover what of the blessings of God we may at present lay claim to as ours, and what we have still to wait for?" There are some who assert that they have their resurrection bodies and that they never expect to die. There are some who affirm that they have reached a condition in which they can no longer sin, and who claim immunity from all temptation. Let us search the Scriptures to see what God shall teach us on all these subjects.

First, we will investigate what we have in John 3: 16. We read: "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Thank God we have not to wait for, not to hope for, God's only begotten Son. What God has given we may receive, and having received Him we can now say before men and angels and devils: "I know that

I Have Jesus,

God's only begotten Son." In John 1: 12, we see that in this possession of God's Son we have power to become the sons of God. "As many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name: Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." The throbbings of everlasting life are ours now. We have not to wait until the future for divine quickening, the very life of God is an ever-blessed, glorious reality within us now. We can see in God's light now. We can think God's thoughts now. We can reciprocate God's love now. We can know and do the will of God now. This privilege of being the sons of God is ours now. Blessed be God, we have not to wait for this. "He that believeth hath everlasting life." "He that hath the Son hath life." And again (John 3: 18), "He that believeth on Him is not condemned." Although our sins may be twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, or even sixty years old, yet in that Jesus who died for us, who bore those sins upon the cross, we have a perfect freedom from all condemnation. We can look forward to the Judgment-seat without one throb of fear. We could stand there to-day and face those judgment books with calmness, for we know that "He that believeth on Him is not condemned." Many of us can remember the time when we dreaded death, and, "after death the judgment." We saw ourselves exposed to the wrath of an angry God. We saw the shame that would come upon us as one after another of our secret sins were dragged to light and we saw ourselves lost. But all this is a thing of the past. We have the "no condemnation" which belongs to those who are "in Christ Jesus." This, thank God, is our present possession. "He that heareth My Word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation: but is passed from death unto life" (John 5 : 24).

But this is not all: we have in God a Father. 'For [we] have not received the Spirit of bondage again to fear; but [we] have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." That awful Being to whom we used to pray, whom we used to dread—feeling as though in the presence of some awful, terrible Presence—is now our Father. We have made acquaintance with Him. It is no longer the terrors of Sinai, the shaking rocks, the clanging trumpet, and the fearful thought of a God who knows all our sins; all we have thought, or spoken, or done; but when we look up to God now, it is to One with whom we are well acquainted; our loving Father. One who is nearer and dearer to our hearts than all we know upon earth. The spirit of bondage is gone. The Spirit of adoption is

Our Present Possession.

But this, again, is not all. "If children, then heirs;" heirs of what? "Of God, and joint-heirs with Christ!" We are heirs now, but we are coming into possession of what God Himself is. Is God love? Then you and I inherit the very love of God. We know we have it not in its fulness, but this is what we know, that we have love of God now, and we will have the fulness by and by. Is God holy? Then you and I are heirs to the perfections and holiness of God. This is the heritage we are to come to in proportion as we know God. We are heirs of the wisdom and power of God. We are heirs of God's very self. We are heirs now.

Again we read "we have the firstfruits of the Spirit." Some will say: "But are we not then filled with the Spirit?" Yes, surely, if we receive the fulness, that is only the measure of a very small vessel, and this is but the firstfruits of what we shall know by and by, when the vessel shall be enlarged in the consummation. Then the firstfruits of the Spirit shall give way to the very fulness. Then when we have our resurrection bodies, when we are changed into His glorious likeness, the vessel will expand, and be other than it now is. And if we have already so much for salvation, so we shall find we have for sanctification and for healing. But if we are possessors of God's only begotten Son—if we know the present breathings of everlasting life; if the Spirit of adoption reigns in our hearts; if we have the firstfruits of the Spirit—can we then be subject to temptation? Let us look for a moment. Who spent forty days and forty nights alone in the desert tempted by the devil? Who "suffered being tempted?" Who was "tempted in all points like as we are?" If we are to have no temptation, then we are superior to our Lord; and the creature takes a place higher than the Creator. The Scriptures tell us to "count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations" (James 1 : 2). "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love Him" (James 1 : 12). "Behold, we count them happy which endure" (James 5 : 11). "Now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations: That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ" (1 Pet. 1 : 6, 7). "No temptation hath taken us but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it" (1 Cor. 10 : 13). There is no promise of immunity from temptation but every promise for victory over it. Jesus tells us (John 16 : 33) that "In the world we shall have tribulation," but He says also: "Fear not, I have overcome the world." There is in the blood of the Lamb. There is overcoming power in the word of our testimony, when we "love not our lives unto the death" (Rev. 12 : 11). God is He who fights our battles for us, and our fight is but the fight of faith. It is not the fight of effort, or struggling, or striving, but of faith in the living God who is the Conqueror of Satan for us. There is no promise that we shall be brought into a state in which it is impossible to sin, but the promise is that we may be kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, and therefore kept from sinning.

Overcoming Power

Now what does the Scripture say with regard to our sanctification? First, we find that as Jesus Christ was made unto us Redemption, so He is made unto us Sanctification (1 Cor. 1 : 30). He Himself stands between us and condemnation, between us and the Judgment-seat, so as our Sanctification He stands between us and the power of sin in the present. The same Jesus who stands at God's right hand and who ever liveth to make intercession for us (Heb. 7 : 25), lives also in my heart to keep me from sinning. As He is my Guarantee against condemnation, so He is my Guarantee against the present power of the wicked one. Thank God, "For this is the will of God, even

Our Sanctification"

(1 Thess. 4 : 3). He wills that we should be holy, for He says: "Be ye holy; for I am holy" (1 Pet. 1 : 16). But we never find any promise in Scripture that we shall be put in such a position that it is impossible for us to sin. In order to be holy, we must needs be cleansed from sin. We are told in Scripture of a clean heart and the blood of Jesus Christ which cleanseth us from all sin; but in order to be cleansed, it is absolutely necessary that we should present our bodies, through which we sin, as living sacrifices to God that He might cleanse and use them for Himself, and that He should bring them wholly under His control, and that He should be our Keeper as well as the Cleanser moment by moment. And so with our souls and spirits; and thus we see how moment by moment we have to be dependent upon Him. He puts us into no position in which we can go on of ourselves without His constant help. If for a moment we cease believing for Salvation we are practically in the same position as the unsaved sinner. If for a moment we leave off believing for Sanctification, we are in the same position practically as though we had never accepted Christ for our Sanctification. And so it is with the Holy Spirit. We have, thank God, of the Spirit. We may, if we will, be filled with the Holy Spirit; but it is only as moment by moment we recognize the indwelling of the Spirit by faith that we live under His power. No man was ever created to master the Holy Ghost, or to dispose of Him as he willed, but by faith we may be filled with the Spirit and led by the Spirit day by day and hour by hour.

The Firstfruits

It is just the same with healing. We have no promise in the Word of God that we shall be placed in such a condition that sickness can never touch us and that we shall never die, but the same Lord who manifested Himself as our Salvation, our Sanctification, said also: "I am the Lord that healeth thee." He has provided healing for the sick ones, and, consequently, we see that sickness is presupposed. It is healing which is offered to us, and we are never to suppose ourselves in such a condition as a marble statue, which can feel neither heat nor cold, or be subject to any exterior influences. The Lord would have the body brought to the same relation as the soul—a relation in which He saves from sickness and sin; in which He keeps from sickness as from sin; in which He fills with His own life to counteract the evil of disease, but in which there is no possibility of being independent of Him.

Those who imagine we have

Our Resurrection Bodies

now can surely never have studied the Scriptures regarding the resurrection, for we read in 1 Cor. 15 how in sowing the seed we sow not "That body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain. But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him, and to every seed his own body" (37, 38). "So" we read in verse 42, "also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body." Except the seed is sown, the plant cannot spring forth; and so, for the resurrection there needs be the actual death of the body. Some will say: "But I have given over my body to death by faith, and I have my resurrection body by faith." But here we see that a change, such as the resurrection implies, can never take place without the actual death of the material body except when the Lord Jesus shall come; then "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory" (51–54). So that we see that what we have is present salvation, present sanctification, present filling with the firstfruits of the Spirit, present healing, and all this we hold by faith, in which moment by moment there is dependence upon Jesus.

When Jesus Comes.

What we hope for is perfect immunity from sin, but only when Jesus comes again; perfect immunity from temptation, perfect immunity from sickness, perfect immunity from death, but all this will be when Jesus comes again. And this is what we read of in Rom. 8 : 23, "And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body. For we are saved by hope: but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it."

Let us praise and glorify God for all that we have, but do not let us antedate that which we hope for or get confused and desponding because we have not in possession that which God has taught us only to hope for. All that we have by faith, God has the keeping of it in trust until Jesus comes. We have Him and in Him all we claim by faith.

The Prophetic News and Israel's Watchman (London), edited by the Rev. M. Baxter, may be had from the office of this journal, 63 Bible House, New York, price, six cents, including postage. Annual subscription, seventy cents. The following articles among others are contained in the number for June:

The Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria.
The Available War Strength of the Chief Nations of Europe.
Military Forecast of the Near Future.
The Last Days of this Dispensation.
Probable End of Mohammedanism at the End of this Century. By Rev. A. B. Simpson, of New York.
The Shadow of Evil Things to Come. By G. W. Houghton.
The Rev. M. Baxter's American Tour.
Prophetic Conference in London.
Joseph Rabinowitz and the Jewish Movement in Eastern Europe.
Passing Events Viewed from a Prophetic Standpoint.

[Bound volumes containing the monthly numbers for 1884 or 1883 may be had, price, $1.]

[For The Christian Herald.]

"WHITHER HE HIMSELF WOULD COME."—Luke x. 1.

BY LILLA M. ALEXANDER.

See the glorious morning sunlight
Flash o'er fields begemmed with dew,
Where the harvest standeth waiting,
For the laborers are few.
Christian! doth the Master bid thee
Leave thy friends and leave thy home?
Shrink thou not; He'll only send thee
"Whither He himself would come."

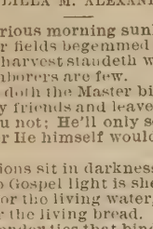
Lo, the nations sit in darkness,
Where no Gospel light is shed,
Thirsting for the living water,
Dying for the living bread.
Are there tender ties that bind thee?
Dost thou love thy land and home?
Yet stay not; the Master sends thee
"Whither He himself would come."

Dost thou fear, thine heart within thee
Trembling, faint, and sore dismayed?
Bend thine ear! the Ma ter cometh:
"It is I; be not afraid."
Go thou forth in faith triumphant
Everywhere 'neath heaven's high dome
Waits the work; the Master sends thee
"Whither He himself would come."

Rend the veil of midnight darkness,
Lift the crimsoned cross on high,
Herald forth the glorious tidings
Of a Christ who came to die.
While for Jesus thou art working,
He prepares for thee a home,
Endless rest and joy eternal,
"Whither He himself would come."

J. F. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL



BAKING POWDER

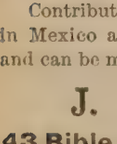
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

MEXICO.

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are most pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of

J. P. HEATH,
43 Bible House, New York.



CLUB ORDERS

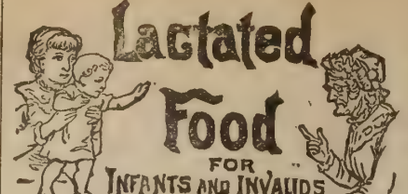
We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving as Premiums to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Set, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

AGENTS WANTED for the LIFE OF HENRY WARD BEECHER

by THOS. W. KNOX. An Authentic and Complete History of his Life and Work from the Cradle to the Grave. Outsells all others 10 to 1. The Best and Cheapest. Splendidly illustrated. Sells like wildfire. Distance no hindrance for we pay the Freight and give Extra Terms. Send for circulars. Address HARTFORD PUB. CO. Hartford, Conn.

Lactated Food



A PERFECT FOOD FOR INFANTS.
THE MOTHER'S FAVORITE.

It has been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

FOR INVALIDS AND DYSPEPTICS.
The Most Nourishing, Most Palatable, Most Economical,
OF ALL PREPARED FOODS.
EASILY AND QUICKLY PREPARED.

Send for circulars and pamphlets giving testimony of Physicians and Mothers, which will amply prove every statement we make.
For sale by Druggists 25c., 50c, $1.00.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1887-BABIES-1887

To the mother of any baby born this year we will send on application a Cabinet Photo, of the "Sweetest, fattest, healthiest baby in the country." It is a beautiful picture, and will do any mother's heart good. It shows the good effects of using Lactated Food as a substitute for mothers milk. Much valuable information for the mother given. Give date of birth.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

SEDGWICK STEEL WIRE FENCE.

The best Farm, Garden, Poultry Yard, Lawn, School Lot, Park and Cemetery Fences and Gates. Perfect Automatic Gate. Cheapest and Neatest Iron Fences. Iron and wire Summer Houses, Lawn Furniture, and other wire work. Best Wire Stretcher and Plier. Ask dealers in hardware, or address, SEDGWICK BROS., RICHMOND, IND.

Palmer's Book of Gems.
FOR THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

111 Songs, with music, many of them new. The old favorites are gems of a high order, select d by H. R. PALMER, Mus. Doc., and 200 S. S. Superintendents.
Price $10 per 100 Copies. Single Copies by Mail, 12c.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York & Chicago.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.
It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.
In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.
For sale by all druggists.
WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LANE, N.Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES—(avoid Agents and Dealers whose profits and expenses double the cost on every Piano they sell) and send this First-Class UPRIGHT Cabinet GEM 7¾ Octave Rosewood Piano, Warranted 6 years, for $193? We send it—with Beautiful Cover and Stool—for Trial in your own Home before you buy. Send for circulars to Marchal & Smith, 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.
THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free.
EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

James M'Creery & Co.

offer during the remaining days of June several special lines of SUMMER SILKS and DRESS GOODS at greatly reduced prices. Customers residing at a distance from the city can buy as cheaply and to as good advantage as if they called in person. Samples, with prices, of any desired color or pattern in above goods will be sent free by mail on request. Address

James M'Creery & Co.,
BROADWAY, AND ELEVENTH ST.,
New York.

Bargains
IN Summer Shawls

Cashmere, Chudda, Honeycomb, Challies and Fancy—in all colors.

$7.00	Shawls for		$3.25
5.00	"	"	2.35
3.00	"	"	1.45

Lord & Taylor,

UP-TOWN STORE, Broadway & 20th St.
DOWN-TOWN STORE, Grand & Chrystie Sts.
New York.

WARNER BRO'S

9 Million worn during the past six years.

This marvelous success is due—

1st.—To the superiority of Coraline over all other materials, as a stiffener for Corsets.

2d.—To the superior quality, shape and workmanship of our Corsets, combined with their low prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kinds of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.
WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York City.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

For Imperfect Digestion, Disordered Stomach.

Let Travelers round this world of care
Without delay themselves prepare,
Against the ills that may arise
From ill-cooked meals and lengthy rides.
A sure defence is at their call.
For TARRANT'S SELTZER conquers all.

AGENTS WANTED (Samples Free) for DR. SCOTT'S beautiful Electric Corsets, Brushes, Belts, Etc. No risk, quick sales. Territory given. Satisfaction guaranteed
DR. SCOTT, 843 Broadway, New York.

HARPER'S PERIODICALS.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE.

"THE GIANT OF THE MONTHLIES."

Subscription per Year, $4.00.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE during 1887 will contain a novel of intense political, social, and romantic interest, entitled "Nark"—a story of Russian life—by KATHLEEN O'MEARA; a new novel, entitled "April Hope," by W. D. HOWELLS; "Southern Sketches," by CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER and REBECCA HARDING DAVIS, illustrated by WILLIAM HAMILTON GIBSON; "Great American Industries"—continued; "Social Studies," by Dr. R. T. ELY; further articles on the Railway Problem by competent writers; new series of Illustrations by E. A. ABBEY and ALFRED PARSONS; articles by E. P. ROE; and other attractions.

HARPER'S WEEKLY.

"A PICTURE HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES."

Subscription per Year, $4.00.

HARPER'S WEEKLY maintains its position as the leading illustrated newspaper in America; and its hold upon public esteem and confidence was never stronger than at the present time. Besides the pictures, HARPER'S WEEKLY always contains instalments of one, occasionally of two, of the best novels of the day, superbly illustrated, with short stories, poems, sketches, and papers on important live topics by the most popular writers. The care that has been successfully exercised in the past to make HARPER'S WEEKLY a safe as well as a welcome visitor to every household will not be relaxed in the future.

HARPER'S BAZAR.

"NO FAMILY SHOULD BE WITHOUT IT."

Subscription per Year, $4.00.

HARPER'S BAZAR combines the choicest literature and the finest art illustrations with the latest fashion and the most useful family reading. Its stories, poems and essays are by the best writers, and its humorous sketches are unsurpassed. Its papers on social etiquette, decorative art, housekeeping in all its branches, cookery, etc. make it indispensable in every household. Its beautiful fashion-plates and pattern-sheet supplements enable ladies to save many times the cost of subscription by being their own dressmakers. Not a line is admitted to its columns that could shock the most fastidious taste.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.

"The Best Periodical for Juvenile Readers."

Subscription per Year, $2.00.

HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE has been called "the model of what a periodical for young readers ought to be," and the justice of this commendation is amply sustained by the large circulation it has attained both at home and in Great Britain. This success has been reached by methods that must commend themselves to the judgment of parents, no less than to the tastes of children—namely, by an earnest and well-sustained effort to provide the best and most attractive reading for young people at a low price. The illustrations are copious and of a conspicuously high standard of excellence.

Remittances should be made by Postoffice Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

When no time is specified, subscriptions will begin with the current number.

☞HARPER'S CATALOGUE, comprising the titles of between three and four thousand volumes, will be sent by mail on receipt of Ten Cents for postage.

Published by HARPER & BROS., New York

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This Magazine portrays American thought and life from ocean to ocean, is filled with pure high-class literature, and can be safely welcomed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.

Sample Copy of current number mailed upon receipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.

Premium List with either.

Address:
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

GET UP CLUBS

To Christian Workers.

Send your address and we will mail to you our new Catalogue of Tracts, selected by careful examination from the publications of more than twenty American and foreign publishers, and arranged according to subjects. You will be glad if you send. Address

EVANGELICAL BOOK AND TRACT REPOSITORY,
No. 901 8TH STREET, WASHINGTON, D. C.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 5 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 25. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAITS OF QUEEN VICTORIA AND PRINCE ALBERT, AND PICTURE OF A COUNCIL IN 1837.

THE SALVATION OF THE CITIES, Dr. Talmage's Sermon last Sunday Morning.

THE REMOVAL OF THE VAIL.

Mr. Moody's Summer School—Jews Flocking to Palestine An Idol Beheaded A Highwayman's Conversion A Commission in a Dream—The Revival on the Congo—A Night in a Shiekh's Home, etc

PICTURE OF THE WEDDING OF THE QUEEN IN 1840 AND PORTRAITS of Four Generations of the Royal Family.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Surrender of the Flags—Gen. Sherman's Letter The Trouble with the Jurors—A Revolution in Hawaii—The Crown Prince of Germany—Fatal Earthquake in Turkestan.

THE WAY AND THE EXPECTED END. A New Sermon, by C. H. Spurgeon.

Gems from New Books: A Change of Front.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

THE INFANT JESUS. By Mrs. M. Baxter.

QUEEN VICTORIA AND PRINCE ALBERT in 1837—The Queen's First Council.

HER MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA.

The Jubilee Celebrations this Week—Fifty Years of Prosperity—The Queen's Personal Life—Born in 1819—Her Early Training—Accession to the Throne in 1837—Her Reception of the State Messengers—Opens Her First Parliament—Her Coronation in 1838—Marriage to Prince Albert in 1840—Death of the Prince Consort in 1861—The Queen's Children—A Curious Prophecy.

The most prominent topic in the public affairs of Europe this week is the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the day on which Queen Victoria began her reign over the British Empire. Interest in this celebration is not confined to Great Britain, for every Royal Family in Europe has sent representatives to present congratulations, and even the dusky Queen of the Sandwich Islands felt it incumbent upon her to travel in person to London to participate in the festivities. The loyal British people have been preparing for months to make the day a memorable one, and scarcely a city, town or village in Great Britain, and some parts of Ireland, has neglected to organize a fund for the cost of a proper demonstration of joy. It must be eminently gratifying to the Queen after to see that so large a proportion of the people are ready to join her in celebrating the day. It is not every ruler who, fifty years after his accession to office, would find his people rejoicing that his sway had continued so long, and wishing that it might continue longer. We have known cases in which even four years of one man's rule have seemed too long to a people, and in which they have given unequivocal intimations that a change was desired. Altogether it is very creditable, both to monarch and people, that the fiftieth anniversary of the commencement of the reign is being celebrated with so much unanimity and cordiality as the people of Great Britain are manifesting.

Half a Century's Rule

The Past Fifty Years have been a period of natural growth and development, which must also be gratifying, both to Queen and people, and which render the service of thanksgiving in the Abbey on Tuesday, no unmeaning ceremony. The growth of the realm in extent alone has been enormous. During the Queen's reign there has been added to the area she governs no less than 7,260,000 square miles, with a total population of 168,900,000, of whom nearly eight millions are whites.

By extension and annexation, the area of the Queen's dominion has grown until now her flag floats over nine million square miles—one fifth of the habitable globe, and four times the size of the Roman Empire in its palmiest days. But in population, and in wealth and enterprise, the growth of the empire during the half century has been prodigious, and though, of course, the Queen has had little to do with promoting the prosperity, her people do not forget the negative consideration that, had she chosen, she might have materially retarded it, as other potentates have done, by stirring up ruinous and desolating wars. She has been content to accept the situation which new ideas of liberty and self-government have brought about, and has gracefully permitted her parliament and people to encroach on the ancient prerogatives of the crown, and while she has taken an active and intelligent interest in public affairs, she has made no attempt to resist the popular will, although at times it has been opposed to her own inclinations. The English people are aware of the fact, and they appreciate the good sense and sound wisdom which the Queen has displayed. They also, having on occasion known what it is to have the social standard of morality lowered by the example of a profligate monarch, are grateful for the purity and domestic virtue which have characterized

The Queen's Personal Life.

Her Majesty Victoria, Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and Empress of India, is the daughter of Edward, Duke of Kent, the fourth son of George III. She is now over sixty-eight years of age, having been born at Kensington Palace, on the 24th May, 1819. Her mother, Victoria Mary Louisa, was the fourth daughter of Francis, reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld. The Duke of Kent died on January 23, 1820, and the Duchess was thus left in charge of the princess when the latter was only eight months old. The training of the future Queen was, however, superintended with admirable wisdom and care. Her mother was often blamed for the seclusion in which she kept her young charge. It was so close that even the King, her uncle, and her nearest relatives seldom saw her. But those who knew most of court life approved the course taken by the Duchess of Kent. No one could have seen without apprehension and regret the young princess a frequent visitor at the court over which her Uncle George IV., and subsequently his brother William IV. presided. Both men were vile, sensual, wicked men, without principle or sense, debased, depraved, and brutish. Their example was closely followed by those about the court, and it is stated by a contemporary historian that the ordinary manners of society about the royal palace were "worse than those of a decent taproom of the present day." It was then with good reason that, remembering her responsibility, the Duchess of Kent kept her daughter, the future Queen, away from such a cesspool of vice.

The Duchess of Kent had a valuable coadjutor in the lady appointed governess to the future Queen, the Duchess of Northumberland, who selected the teachers under whom she studied and from whom she acquired many accomplishments, including drawing, music, and a knowledge of the continental languages. She also made proficiency in science, especially in botany, for which she showed a marked taste. The year 1837 was a momentous year in the life of Victoria. Her uncle William IV. expired on June 19. He was the third son of King George III. The eldest son was George IV. who died in 1830; the second was Prince Frederick, who died in 1827. As not one of the three left any legitimate children, the crown passed by law of succession to Victoria as heiress of the fourth son, Edward, Duke of Kent.

Victoria was residing at Kensington Palace with her mother, when early in the morning of the 20th the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord Chamberlain arrived from Windsor Castle. The circumstances under which the Princess Victoria was made aware of her may be recalled with interest. The Archbishop and the Lord Chamberlain reached the palace at about five o'clock in the morning. They knocked and rang for some time before they could arouse the porter at the gate. Finally they were admitted into one of the lower rooms, but seemed forgotten by everybody. They then rang the bell, and desired that the attendant of the princess might be sent to inform her royal highness that they requested an audience on business of importance. The answer came that she was in such a sweet sleep that the attendant could not disturb her. The messengers then stated that they were come on State business of so great importance that it was necessary to arouse her.

Accession to the Throne

Shortly after she came into the room, dressed in a loose white dressing-gown and shawl, her hair falling upon her shoulders, and her feet in slippers. She had guessed the significance of the message. Tears rose in her eyes, but she was perfectly collected and dignified. The princess was now Queen of England, and the news was received with becoming dignity. Though young in years, she showed that she felt the solemn responsibility, and was resolved to do her duty to the best of her ability. On the 21st of June her accession to the throne was proclaimed under circumstances of great interest. At St. James's Palace awaited her. She was received most enthusiastically; and, subsequently, in response to the cheers of the crowd, she appeared at a window to acknowledge the welcome of her subjects. Her unaffected manner and her charming simplicity won the hearts of all. She also presided at a Privy Council (See Illustration on first page), and the venerable nobles who composed it were as delighted with her charming manners as the people had been.

A Brilliant Reception

In virtue of the law excluding females from the throne of Hanover, the Duke of Cumberland became king of that country, so that the connection between the crowns of England and Hanover was severed, after having existed one hundred and twenty-three years. This was not regarded as a misfortune by the English people, who were glad to be thus relieved of a connection with German politics, and also to be relieved of the presence of the Duke of Cumberland, who, like his elder brothers, was a most abandoned profligate, who did fearful harm in English society. We may here notice parenthetically that this was a fulfillment of prophecy, which shows that Britain must be separated from every portion of its territory which, like Hanover, lies outside the Roman Empire.

On the 20th of November, the Queen, for the first time, opened Parliament, declaring her confidence in the loyalty and wisdom of her people; and asking that, under Divine Providence, she might, at so early an age, have their cordial co-operation in discharging her duties.

The next great event of the Queen's life was which took place at Westminster on the 28th of June, 1838. On the route from Buckingham Palace to the Abbey, her Majesty was received with the greatest enthusiasm. The streets through which the procession passed were lined with crowds of spectators, all eager to gain even a passing glimpse of the youthful sovereign. The scene at the ceremony was most imposing.

Her Coronation,

The most prominent topic of national curiosity was as to the man who would be the husband of the Queen. It was to Francis Albert Augustus Charles Emmanuel, Duke of Saxony, Prince of Coburg and Gotha (whose portrait accompanies that of the Queen on the first page), that she gave her affections, and the result proved the wisdom of her choice. The of the Queen and Prince Albert was celebrated with great splendor on the 10th of February, 1840 (a picture of the scene copied from the painting by Sir George Hayter, R. A., appears on page 396). As on the occasion of the coronation, the people of London testified how delighted they were with their new sovereign. There can be no doubt that the Queen's subjects evinced the highest interest in this union. Rejoicings throughout the country were universal. From the largest cities and towns down to the smallest hamlet the event was celebrated with enthusiasm. The marriage was a singularly happy one. Prince Albert won completely the Queen's affections, and she sought his advice with confidence on all occasions. This advice was not always wise and prudent, for the Prince was by nature and education opposed to popular rule, but happily he possessed a well-balanced mind, and the English statesmen were able to convince him that too much interference with State affairs would be mischievous. He accordingly turned his attention to amateur farming, in which he was very successful.

Marriage

Nine Children

were the issue of this union. On November 21, 1840, was born the Princess Royal, who was married in 1858 to the Prince Imperial of Germany. On November 9, 1841, was born the heir apparent to the throne, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales. The dates of birth of the other children are as follows: Princess Alice, April 25, 1843, who died December 14, 1878; Prince Alfred, now called the Duke of Edinburgh, August 6, 1844; Princess Helena, May 25, 1846, married July 5, 1866, to Prince Christian; Princess Louise, March 18, 1848, married March 21, 1871, to the Marquis of Lorne; Prince Arthur, now called the Duke of Connaught, May 1, 1850; Prince Leopold, April 7, 1853, who ed March 27, 1884; and Princess Beatrice, April 1857, married July 23, 1885, to Prince Henry Battenberg.

The personal life of the Queen was a singularly happy one, for the cares of government lling chiefly upon her advisers, she was at isure to devote herself more to the society of er husband and family than are most monarchs, id their affection seemed to be the joy of her fe. But in December, 1861, this delightful mily picture was broken up by the Death of Prince Albert, a event which has clouded all her subsequent fe. The news of the Prince's decease produced national shock. The Queen, the Prince Wales, Princess Alice, and Princess Helena ere present at the last moment. To the peoe of London the event was made known at idnight by the tolling of the heavy bell of St. aul's. The Queen's grief was intense. She ut herself up in seclusion for several years, id, though now twenty-six years have passed way, she has never laid aside her mourning ress or resumed the prominent part she used take in public and court festivities.

During the years immediately following the eath of the Prince Consort the ceremonies and stivities of the court were suspended. The gular balls and receptions, which, in court hrase, are called drawing-rooms, were not held, id the Queen gave herself up to grief. But by egrees, as the Prince of Wales grew to years of aturity, and especially after his marriage, he id the Princess, by the Queen's wish, took her ajesty's place as leaders of society. Latterly, long intervals, she has appeared in public, but it as always been evident that her duties were istasteful to her, and she has never seemed ntent, except when staying at Balmoral, her at in Scotland, or in the Isle of Wight.

The Marriages of Her Children

ave been the only occasions on which the ueen has come prominently before the people f late years and reminded them of the existnce of royalty. The most important of these as the marriage of the Prince of Wales to the rincess Alexandra, daughter of the King of enmark. The Princess arrived in England on arch 7, 1863, and her singular beauty, sweetess of manner, and dignified, graceful bearing on the hearts of the people. They gave her eir sincere affection, and since her marriage, hich took place on March 10, 1863, have ever wavered in their regard for her.

The marriages of the other sons and daughrs followed, and were each celebrated with the tmost magnificence. The one that caused e greatest sensation was that of the Princess ouise. Her brothers and sisters had married reigners, but the Princess Louise was united a British subject, the Marquis of Lorne, who as for a time Governor-General of Canada. It as hailed with pleasure by the people, but it as been productive of some little unpleasantess to the parties concerned. The absurd and diculous prejudices of royalty have inflicted ights on the husband of the Princess which ust have been hard to bear. He has been xcluded from privileges reserved for royalty, to hich his wife was welcomed, and he has had e mortification of seeing petty German princets, the bulk of whose income is extracted from e pockets of English taxpayers, greeted and ntertained in places where his presence would ave been resented as an intrusion.

There is a rather singular story told of one of e Georges—we believe George I. It is that e had his fortune told by a woman who preended to be a prophetess, and that she told im "the House of Guelph should never want a an to stand before the Lord for ever," using he words of the Hebrew prophet to Jonathan, he son of Recab. This pretended prophecy eally seems one of those which chance to be lfilled, for Her Majesty's throne is surrounded y children, grandchildren, and latterly greatrandchildren. A picture on page 397 is from photograph of a group in which representaives of the four generations are shown.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

Lighting Up a Dark Office.—Mr. Campbell remarked: "In myplace of business, the room in which I sit is very dark during the greater part of the day; but sometimes in the afternoon, the sun shining upon a window on the other side of the street is reflected in a perfect blaze of light over into my office, giving me the rays of the sun, though not direct. So the Christian should receive light from Christ the Divine Sun only to transmit it to those around who are in darkness; as the moon having no heat or light of its own, is irradiated by the glory of the sun, and reflects to us, not her own light, but the solar light which shines upon her."

A Negro Lad's Resolution.—A Christian worker says: "I heard of a little colored lad who was dying, and a gentleman, much affected by the boy's condition, asked him about his soul. The boy answered with more brightness than he had shown for a long time, and said: 'I am resting in Jesus.' 'And where are you going when you die?' the gentleman inquired. 'I am going home to Jesus,' the lad confidently replied. 'But what if Jesus should leave heaven, what will you do then?' queried his friend. 'I will follow Him,' answered the boy. 'But if He should enter into the blackness of darkness, will you follow Him there?' 'That is impossible,' said the little negro lad, 'for there can be no hell or darkness where Jesus is.' It was not long ere the dear lad entered into glory."

Tears Turned Into Joy.—The Rev. Peter Leys, the Scottish clergyman who, in the true spirit of martyrdom, recently went to prison rather than deliver his two grandchildren to the Roman Catholic Church, says: "The other day I visited the house of a woman, given to notoriously evil ways. I spoke to her about her soul, but she did not seem much impressed until I said, 'Suppose you were to die now, just as you are, where do you think you would go?' 'Oh, sir,' she answered, 'do not speak of that; it is bad enough here, but of the hereafter I dare not think of it,' and she bowed her head in her hands. I continued to speak in a kindly manner to her, showing her the evil of her ways, and the danger in which she placed her immortal soul. A day or two afterwards I met her; she was evidently under deep conviction of sin. With the tears streaming down her face she exclaimed, 'I am not worthy to be saved.' 'I know that,' I replied; 'but Christ did not come to save those who deserve salvation. He came, not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance; and down on to the sinner's platform we all have to go before we can be saved.' She was just then on that platform, but very soon was led by the Holy Spirit to accept Jesus as her Saviour, and now is full of rejoicing in His perfect and all-sufficient redemption."

A Hard Battle Well Ended.—Mr. M'Kay says: "In a country village one stormy night, a man, under the influence of strong drink, was walking along the high road with unsteady steps. He presently came to a building that was lighted up, and which looked warm and comfortable. A meeting of a Bible Society was being held there. He entered, and took his seat, scarcely conscious of what he was doing. At the close of the meeting every one was presented with a Bible. The man tried to make his way home, but at length unable to go any further, he dropped down by the roadside, fell fast asleep, and did not wake until the morning sun was streaming down upon him. He roused himself up, and putting his hand into his pocket, he took out the Bible which he had received the previous night. It sent his thoughts back to the time when he used to read and love that Book. But he drew from another pocket a bottle of whisky. There he sat, holding in one hand the symbol that called up in man much that was vile and base, and in the other the symbol of all that was pure and holy. He raised his hand to dash the bottle from him, but drew it back; the temptation was strong. The struggle was a fearful one; no one knows but those who have been similarly tempted, what it is. Finding that in his own strength he could not resist, he cried for Divine help, and as the power of God is equal to any sin, the man dashed the bottle and its contents to the ground, and went home praising God."

The Roots Seeking the Water.—Mr. Smith, an evangelist observed: "Travelers tell of a tree that grows in the desert which has long fibrous roots, that push their way through the sand, until they come to water, and then through those tubular roots enough water is conveyed to feed the tree, and enable it to defy the drought, or even the fierce tornado. The traveler coming upon this is naturally surprised, and often looks in vain for the cause of this luxuriance in the desert; he knows not of the hidden connection with the fountain of life. So it should be with the Christian; to be rooted and grounded in Christ, and from Him draw strength daily and hourly for his requirements, so that he may be enabled to overcome tornadoes of temptation, or the drought of the wicked age in which he lives."

A Very Narrow Escape.—Mr. Minto related: "One summer evening, just as the darkness was coming on, I was walking by the river side, when suddenly there arose a cry for help. I strained my eyes across the water, but no one could I see; again the piercing cry arose, and a third time more feebly, 'Help! help!' came sounding across the water. At last I saw a small boat put off from a vessel moored in the neighboring harbor, and swiftly go in the direction from which the sound came. In a short time they returned to shore, bringing with them the almost lifeless body of a young man. He was carried to my house, and for days he lay in an unconscious state. One morning he slowly opened his eyes, and said, 'Where am I? Where is my mother?' After he was able to speak, this was his story. 'The evening on which I fell into the water, I was induced by some companions to accompany them into a saloon a few miles from my home. When I had spent all my money the men left me alone, utterly helpless with drink, and when I was staggering home by the bank of the river I slipped my footing, and fell into the water. I cried for help, and then I knew nothing until I opened my eyes in your comfortable room, for which, and the tender care you have bestowed upon me, I sincerely thank you.' Some time afterwards I called at his home and found him a changed man, for he had turned from his evil ways and accepted Jesus Christ as his Saviour."

The Judge and the Culprit.—The same speaker remarked: "Two boys, who belonged to honorable and wealthy families, were brought up at the same school. They were close companions, and after leaving school they went to college together to complete their education. When they left college their paths in life separated, and they saw nothing more of each other for more than thirty years. Robert, the elder, became a highly honored and eminent judge, while the other, Thomas, became a wretched, debased criminal. At last, Thomas was convicted of an offence for which he was brought before the judge. As the poor trembling culprit stood there, he recognized the face of his judge, who was looking down upon him with tears of pity in his eyes. 'Can that really be Robert, my once dear friend?' he thought, 'if so he will not be hard upon me.' The sentence was pronounced by the judge, and it was the full penalty of the law. He was to pay a heavy fine and be imprisoned until it was paid. The culprit's heart sank. He thought he would have to lie in prison for years, for how could he, a penniless and friendless man, pay so large a sum. That night the judge visited him in his cell, spoke to him of old times, and finding him penitent, not only paid his fine but promised to give him employment. He went out a free man, his penalty paid by the judge. He is now a Christian man, and he is saved from endless punishment because his sin was borne by the Judge of all the earth.

THE SALVATION OF THE CITIES.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached last Sunday Morning, June 19, 1887.

"And the men of the city said unto Elisha, Behold, we pray thee the situation of this city is pleasant, as my Lord seeth; but the water is naught and the ground barren. And he said, bring me a new cruse, and put salt therein," etc.—2 Kings 2: 19–22.

The Impure Water of Jericho—Miraculously Purified by Salt—Corruption in Modern Cities—Cleansing Needed—Dirty Brooklyn—Christianity for the Printing Press—The Potent Publishers—Efficient Schools—Criminals Generally Ignorant—Awful Statistics—The Policeman and the Lost Child—Reformatory and Benevolent Societies—The Great Remedy—A Homeless Child's Answer—Orphans and Neglected Children—The Rise of an Elm Street Boy—Lending Five Dollars to a Boy—A Letter from the West—Mary Lost and Found.

IT is difficult to estimate how much of the prosperity and health of a city are dependent upon good water. The time when, through well-laid pipes, and from safe reservoir, an abundance of water, from Croton or Ridgewood or Schuylkill, is brought into the city, is appropriately celebrated with oration and pyrotechnic display. Thank God every day for clear, bright, beautiful, sparkling water, as it drops in the shower, or tosses up in the fountain, or rushes out at the hydrant.

The city of Jericho, notwithstanding all its physical and commercial advantages, was lacking in this important element. There was enough water, but it was diseased, and the people were crying out by reason thereof. Elisha, the prophet, comes to the rescue. He says, "Get me a new cruse, fill it with salt, and bring it to me." So was brought to the prophet, and I see him walking out to the general reservoir, and he takes that salt and throws it into the reservoir, and lo! all the impurities depart through a supernatural and divine influence, and the waters are good and fresh and clear.

The Cruse of Salt

At different times I have pointed out to you the fountains of municipal corruption, and this morning I propose to show you what are the means for the rectification of those fountains There are four or five kinds of salt that have a cleansing tendency. So far as God may help me, I shall bring a cruse of salt to the work, and empty it into the great reservoir of municipal crime, sin, shame, ignorance and abomination.

In this work of cleansing our cities, I have first to remark that there is a and the shovel that nothing else can do. There always has been an intimate connection between iniquity and dirt. The filthy parts of the great cities are always the most iniquitous parts. The gutters and the pavements of the Fourth Ward, New York, illustrate and symbolize the character of the people in the Fourth Ward. The first thing that a bad man does when he is converted, is thoroughly to wash himself. There were this morning, on the way to the different churches, thousands of men in proper apparel, who, before their conversion, were unfit to don their Sabbath dress. When on the Sabbath I see a man uncleanly in his dress, my suspicions in regard to his moral character are aroused, and they are sometimes well-founded. So as to allow no excuse for lack of ablution, God has cleft the continents with rivers and lakes, and has sunk five great oceans, and all the world ought to be clean. Away, then, with the dirt from our cities, not only because the physical health needs an ablution, but because all the great moral and religious interests of the cities demand it as a positive necessity. A filthy city always is, and always will be, a wicked city.

Work for the Broom

Through the upturning of the earth for great improvement, our city could not be expected to be clean as usual, but for

The Illimitable Dirt of Brooklyn

for the last six months there is no excuse. It is not merely a matter of dust in the eyes, and mud for the shoes, and of stench for the nostrils, but of morals for the soul.

Another corrective influence that we would bring to bear upon the evils of our great cities is a Christian printing-press. The newspapers of any place are the test of its morality or immorality. The newsboy who runs along the street with a roll of papers under his arm is a tremendous force that cannot be turned aside, nor resisted, and, at his every step, the city is elevated or degraded. This hungry, all-devouring American mind must have something to read, and upon and book publishers, and parents and teachers rests the responsibility of what they should read. Almost every man you meet has a book in his hand or a newspaper in his pocket. What book is it you have in your hand? What newspaper is it you have in your pocket? Ministers may preach, reformers may plan, philanthropists may toil for the elevation of the suffering and the criminal, but until all the newspapers of the land, and all the booksellers of the land, set themselves against an iniquitous literature—until then we shall be fighting against fearful odds. Every time the cylinders of our great publishing houses turn, they make the earth quake. From them goes forth a thought like an angel of light to feed and bless the world, or, like an angel of darkness, to smite it with corruption and sin and shame and death. May God, by His omnipotent Spirit, purify and elevate the American printing-press!

Editors and Authors

I go on further, and say we must depend upon for a great deal of correcting influence. A community can no more afford to have ignorant men in its midst than it can afford to have uncaged hyenas. Ignorance is the mother of hydra-headed crime. Thirty-one per cent. of all the criminals of New York State can neither read nor write. Intellectual darkness is generally the precursor of moral darkness. I know there are educated outlaws—men who, through their sharpness of intellect, are made more dangerous. They use their fine penmanship in signing other people's names, and their science in ingenious burglaries, and their fine manners in adroit libertinism. They go their round of sin with well-cut apparel, and dangling jewelry, and watches of eighteen carats, and kid gloves. They are refined, educated, magnificent villains. But that is the exception. Generally are as ignorant as they are wicked. For the proof of what I say, go into the prisons and the penitentiaries, and look upon the men and women incarcerated. The dishonesty in the eye, the low passion in the lip, are not more conspicuous than the ignorance in the forehead. The ignorant classes are always the dangerous classes. Demagogues marshal them. They are helmless, and are driven before the gale.

The School

The Criminal Classes

It is high time that all city and State authority, and the Federal Government, appreciate that while years ago in this country there was set apart forty-eight millions of acres of land for school purposes, there are now in New England one hundred and ninety-one thousand people who can neither read nor write, and in the State of Pennsylvania, two hundred and twenty-two thousand who can neither read nor write, and in the State of New York two hundred and forty-one thousand who can neither read nor write, while in the United States there are nearly six millions who can neither read nor write—statistics enough to stagger and confound any man who loves God and his country.

The Awful Statistics,

Now, in view of this fact, I am in favor of compulsory education. When parents are so bestial as to neglect this duty to the child, I say the law, with a strong hand, at the same time with a gentle hand, ought to lead these little ones into the light of intelligence and good morals. It was a beautiful tableau when in our city having picked up a lost child in the street, was found appeasing its cries with a stick of candy he had bought at the applestand. That was well done, and beautifully done. But, oh! thes thousands of little ones through our streets, wh are crying for the bread of knowledge and intel ligence. Shall we not give it to them?

A Swarthy Policeman

The officers of the law ought to go down int the cellars, and up into the garrets, and brin out these benighted little ones, and put then under educational influences; after they hav passed through the bath and under the comb putting before them the spelling-book, an teaching them to read the Lord's Prayer an the Sermon on the Mount: "Blessed are th poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom o heaven." Our city ought to be father an mother both to these outcast little ones. As a recipe for the cure of much of the woe and want and crime of our city, I give the word which Thorwaldsen had chiseled on the open scroll in the statue of John Gutenberg the inventor of printing, "Let there be light!"

Reformatory Societies

are an important element in the rectification of the public fountains. Without calling any of them by name, I refer more especially to those which recognize the physical as well as the moral woes of the world. There was pathos and a great deal of common sense in what the poor woman said to Dr. Guthrie when he was telling her what a very good woman she ought to be. "Oh," said she, "if you were as hungry and cold as I am, you would think of nothing else." I believe the great want of our city is the Gospel and something to eat. Faith and repentance are of infinite importance; but they cannot satisfy an empty stomach! You have to go forth in this work with the bread of eternal life in your right hand, and the bread of this life in your left hand, and then you can touch them, imitating the Lord Jesus Christ, who first broke the bread and fed the multitude in the wilderness, and then began to preach, recognizing the fact that while people are hungry they will not listen, and they will not repent. We want more common sense in the distribution of our charities; fewer magnificent theories, and more hard work.

The Great Remedial Influence,

however, is the Gospel of Christ. Take that down through the lanes of suffering. Take that down amid the hovels of sin. Take that up amid the mansions and palaces of your city. That is the salt that can cure all the poisoned fountains of public iniquity. Do you know that in this cluster of three cities, New York, Jersey City and Brooklyn, there are a great multitude of homeless children? You see I speak more in regard to the youth and the children of the country, because old villains are seldom reformed, and therefore I talk more about the little ones. They sleep under the stoops, in the burned-out safe, in the wagons in the streets, on the barges, wherever they can get a board to cover them. And in the summer they sleep all night long in the parks. Their destitution is well set forth by an incident. A city missionary asked one of them, "Where is your home?" Said he,

"I Don't Have no Home, Sir!"

"Well, where are your father and mother?" "They are dead, sir." "Did you ever hear of Jesus Christ?" "No, I don't think I ever heard of Him." "Did you ever hear of God?" "Yes, I've heard of God. Some of the poor people think it kind of lucky at night to say something over about that before they go to sleep. Yes, sir, I've heard of Him." Think of a conversation like that in a Christian city!

How many are waiting for you to come out in the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ and rescue them from the wretchedness here? Oh, that the Church of God had arms long enough and hearts warm enough to take them up! How many of them there are! As I was thinking of the subject this morning, it seemed to me as though there was a great brink, and that these little ones, with cut and torn feet, were coming on toward it. And here is a group of orphans. Oh, fathers and mothers, what do you think of little ones? No hand at home to take care of their apparel, no heart to pity them. Said one ttle one, when the mother died, "Who will ake care of my clothes now?" The little ones re thrown out in this great, cold world. They re shivering on the brink like lambs on the erge of a precipice. Does not your blood run old as they go over it?

Fatherless and Motherless

And here is another group that come on to-ard the precipice. They are the children of Besotted Parents.

hey are worse off than orphans. Look at that ale cheek; woe bleached it. Look at that ash across the forehead; the father struck it. Hear that heart-piercing cry; a drunken moth-r's blasphemy compelled it. And we come out nd we say, "Oh, ye suffering, peeled and blis-ered ones, we come to help you." "Too late," ry thousands of voices, "The path we travel is teep down, and we can't stop; too late." And e catch our breath and we make a terrific utcry. "Too late!" is echoed from the garret o the cellar, from the ginshop and the brothel. Too late!" It is too late, and they go over.

Here is another group, an army of Neglected Children.

hey come on toward the brink, and every time hey step ten thousand hearts break. The ground s red with the blood of their feet. The air is eavy with their groans. Their ranks are being filed up from all the houses of iniquity and hame. Skeleton Despair pushes them on to-ard the brink. The death-knell has already egun to toll, and the angels of God hover like irds over the plunge of a cataract. While hese children are on the brink they halt, and hrow out their hands, and cry, "Help! help!" Oh, Church of God! will you help? Men and omen bought by the blood of the Son of God, ill you help, while Christ cries from the heav-ns, "Save them from going down; I am the ansom."

I stopped on the street and just looked at the ace of one of those little ones. Have you ever xamined the faces of the neglected children of he poor? Other children have gladness in their aces. When a group of them rush across the oad, it seems as though a spring gust had un-oosened an orchard of apple-blossoms. But the Children of the Poor!

here is but little ring in their laughter, and it tops quick, as though some bitter memory ripped it. They have an old walk. They do ot skip or run up on the lumber just for the leasure of leaping down. They never bathed n the mountain stream. They never waded in he brook for pebbles. They never chased the utterfly across the lawn, putting their hat ight down where it was just before. Childhood as been dashed out of them. Want waved its izard wand above the manger of their birth, nd withered leaves are lying where God in-ended a budding giant of battle.

Once in a while one of these children gets out. Here is one, for instance. At ten years of age he is sent out by his parents, who say to him: "Here is a basket—now go off and beg and steal." The boy says, "I can't steal." They kick him into a corner. That night he puts his swollen head into the straw; but a voice comes from heaven, saying:

"Courage, Poor Boy, courage!" Covering up his head from the bestiality, and stopping his ears from the curs-ing, he gets on up better and better. He washes his face clean at the public hydrant. With a few pennies got at running errands, he gets a better coat. Rough men, knowing that he comes from a low street, say, "Back with you, you little villain, to the place where you came from!" But that night the boy says: "God help me! I can't go back;" and quicker than ever mother flew at the cry of a child's pain, the Lord responds from the heavens, "Courage, poor boy, courage!"

His bright face gets him a position. After a while he is second clerk. Years pass on, and he is first clerk. Years pass on. The glory of young manhood is on him. He comes into the firm. He goes on from one business success to another. He has achieved great fortune. He is the friend of the church of God, the friend of all good institutions, and one day he stands talking to the Board of Trade, or to the Chamber of Commerce. People say: "Do you know who that is? Why, that is a merchant prince, and he was born on Elm Street." But God says in regard to him something better than that: "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and had their robes washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb."

O, for some one to write the history of boy heroes and girl heroines who have triumphed over want and starvation, and filth and rags. Yea, the record has already been made—made by the hand of God; and when these shall come at last with songs and rejoicing, it will take a very broad banner to hold the names of the battle-fields on which they got the victory.

Some years ago a roughly clad, ragged boy came into my brother's office, in New York, and said: "Mr. Talmage, lend me five dollars." My brother said: "Who are you?" The boy replied, "I am nobody.

Lend me Five Dollars."

"What do you want to do with five dollars?" "Well," the boy replied, "My mother is sick and poor, and I want to go into the newspaper business, and I shall get a home for her, and I will pay you back." My brother gave him the five dollars, of course never expecting to see it again; but he said, "When will you pay it?" The boy said, "I will pay it in six months, sir."

Time went by, and one day a lad came into my brother's office, and said, "There's your five dollars." "What do you mean? What five dollars?" inquired my brother. "Don't you remember that a boy came in here six months ago, and wanted to borrow five dollars to go into the newspaper business?" "O yes, I remember; are you the lad?" "Yes," he replied; "I have got along nicely. I have got a nice home for my mother (she is sick yet), and I am as well clothed as you are, and there's your five dollars." O, was he not Worth Saving?

Why, that lad is worth fifty such boys as I have sometimes seen moving in elegant circles, never put to any use for God or man. Worth saving! I go further than that, and tell you they are not only worth saving, but they are being saved. One of these lads picked up from our streets, and sent West by a benevolent society, wrote East, saying: "I am getting along first-rate. I am on probation in the Methodist church. I shall be entered as a member the first of next month. I now teach a Sunday-school class of eleven boys. I get along first rate with it. This is a splendid country to make a living in. If the boys running around the street with a blacking-box on their shoulder, or a bundle of papers under their arms, only knew what high old times we boys have out here, they wouldn't hesitate about coming West, but come the first chance they got."

So some by one humane and Christian visitation, and some by another, are being rescued. In one reform school, through which two thousand of the little ones passed, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-five turned out well. In other words, only five of the two thousand turned out badly. There are thousands of them who, through Christian societies, have been transplanted to beautiful homes all over this land, and there are many who, through the rich grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, have already won the crown.

A Little Girl

was found in the streets of Baltimore and taken into one of the reform societies, and they said to her: "What is your name?" She said: "My name is Mary?" "What is your other name?" She said: "I don't know." So they took her into the reform society, and as they did not know her last name, they always called her "Mary Lost," since she had been picked up out of the street. But she grew on, and after awhile the Holy Spirit came to her heart, and she became a Christian child, and she changed her name; and when anybody asked her what her name was, she said: "It used to be Mary Lost; but now, since I have become a Christian, it is Mary Found."

For this vast multitude are we willing to go forth from this morning's service and see what we can do, employing all the agencies I have spoken of for the rectification of

The Poisoned Fountains?

We live in a beautiful city. The lines have fallen to us in pleasant places, and we have a goodly heritage; and any man who does not like a residence in Brooklyn must be a most uncomfortable and unreasonable man. But, my friends, the material prosperity of a city is not its chief glory. There may be fine houses and beautiful streets, and that all be the garniture of a sepulchre. Some of the most prosperous cities of the world have gone down, not one stone left upon another. But a city may be in ruins long before a tower has fallen, or a column has crumbled, or a tomb has been defaced. When in a city the churches of God are full of cold formalities and when the houses of commerce are the abode of fraud and unholy traffic; when the streets are filled with crime unarrested and sin unenlightened and helplessness unpitied—that city is in ruins, though every church were a St. Peter's, and every monied institution were a Bank of England, and every library were a British Museum, and every house had a porch like that of Rheims, and a roof like that of Amiens, and a tower like that of Antwerp, and traceried windows like those of Freiburg.

Inanimate Religion;

My brethren, our pulses beat rapidly the time away, and soon we shall be gone; and what we have to do for the city in which we live we must do right speedily, or never do it at all. In that day when those who have wrapped themselves in luxuries and despised the poor, shall come to shame and everlasting contempt, I hope it may be said of you and me that we gave bread to the hungry, and wiped away the tear of the orphan, and upon the wanderer of the street we opened the brightness and benediction of a Christian home; and then, through our instrumentality, it shall be known on earth and in heaven, that Mary Lost became Mary Found!

A BANK NOTE FOUND IN A WALL.

THE curiosity of the loungers about the old State House at Little Rock, Ark., was aroused one morning, says the Gazette of that city, by the spectacle of a poor old man who was walking about the corridors minutely examining the walls. He conducted his search with considerable patience, and though no one could understand what the old fellow could find to interest him in the masonry, nothing was said to him. At last he was observed to insert his knife in one of the cracks in the wall, and presently, after much effort, he brought out a piece of paper, which, being unrolled, proved to be a hundred dollar bill. It seems that during the war, when General Steele was commander of the post at Little Rock, a Missourian named Robert H. Crowley, of Price's command, was made prisoner of war, and confined temporarily in the State House. From there Crowley was taken to Camp Chase, where he remained until the close of the war. When taken prisoner he had on his person the one hundred dollar note, and fearing it would be taken from him, he took the opportunity, while waiting in the State House, to roll it up and push it into this crack in the wall, where it lay undiscovered for more than twenty years. The events of his imprisonment and the absorbing occupations that followed his release caused the incident to pass from the old man's mind, but a short time ago it was recalled to his mind when he was pressed for money. He then resolved to visit the State House at Little Rock, and look for the bill. It is probable that he would have remembered it earlier had he been in dire poverty. It was with him as it is with many people in the concerns of the soul: the hidden treasure of promise is unsought until a time of trouble comes (Hos. 13:6).

MR. MOODY'S SUMMER SCHOOL.

WE cheerfully comply with a request from Mr. Moody to publish the following in THE CHRISTIAN HERALD:

"A great many letters are coming to me concerning the College Students' Summer School for Bible study at Northfield, June 30 to July 12, asking if any besides college students may attend.

"While the accommodations in the school buildings are reserved for young men, especially college students, there will be abundant room in the large hall for as many as wish to attend the meetings. Table board and meals can also be secured in the dining-halls at a moderate price. Many parties of young men are arranging to bring tents and camp on the Seminary grounds, which are well suited to that purpose. A limited number of young ministers and other Christian young men can doubtless secure entertainment in the school buildings at $1.00 per day.

"Ladies are welcome to attend the meetings, and can also secure meals at the dining-hall, if they can procure rooms in the village.

"Among those who have consented to aid in the conduct of the meeting are the following: Prof. Henry Drummond, of Edinburgh University, Scotland; Ex-President Mark Hopkins, of Williams College; A. T. Pierson, D. D., of Philadelphia; Rev. W. H. Marquess, of Fulton, Mo.; John A. Broadus, D. D., of Louisville; Prof. L. T. Towhsend, of Boston University; and Messrs. R. P. Wilder and John N. Forman, who have been visiting colleges during the past year in the interest of foreign missions.

"All who wish to attend will please write at once to C. K. Ober, 52 East Twenty-third Street, New York City. "D. L. MOODY,

"Northfield, Mass."

THE JEWS FLOCKING TO PALESTINE.

A PRIVATE letter from Jerusalem, recently published in the Watchword, contains the following remarks, which show that the views of students of prophecy are receiving confirmation from events:

"Many striking changes have taken place, during the last four years, in Jerusalem and through the land. Each day sees an increase in the Jewish inhabitants of Palestine. No matter what port or other regulations are made for their exclusion, or temporary stay, still they come and remain. Houses are being built up by hundreds. Last spring I made a visiting tour to their eight or nine agricultural colonies, scattered through the land, and was delighted at what I saw in many of them. Several of them are soundly prosperous in material things. They have taken hold, with brave hearts, of the task of making the land bloom again, and God is acknowledging and blessing their labor. It is a glorious time. The plans of God are hastening to an end. The outward signs keep pace with the work He is doing in the hearts of His children. The change will come suddenly, for that is what compels men to acknowledge that the hand at work is God's."

AN IDOL BEHEADED.

A TEST of an idol's power was recently applied by the consent of its worshippers. The Rev. Edward Greaves, who lately visited an idol temple about twelve miles from Mirzapore says: "The idol, an ugly image of the warrior-god Mahabir, had been brought from some old temple and built into the wall of a house, and was in a dilapidated condition—one hand had been broken off, nearly the whole of both legs was wanting, and the head also was missing. A head, however, had been manufactured of mud, with a couple of small shells for eyes, and there stood the stone and mud image. One would have laughed at its ridiculous appearance, were it not for the thought that men and women for whom Christ died, worshipped this miserable thing. I asked the people how they could think that a crippled, maimed stone could help them in their troubles. They acknowledged that it was somewhat battered about, but still maintained that, if they only had faith in it, it would help them. I suggested that they should break it down, but they said they could not do that. I asked them if they would let me do so, as I stood in no fear of it, but they did not like to have their god damaged. 'But,' said I, 'if it be a god, it will not let me injure it, and, seeing that it is the warrior-god, it will conquer me.' After a great deal of talk, they said, 'Well, sahib, we will not give you permission to do it exactly, because it is a god, and not in our power; but we will not prevent you doing what you like.' Enough; I took two good pokes at the head with my umbrella, and down came tumbling the mud; and poor old Mahabir, for the second time, found himself headless. The people did not take the demolition of their god much to heart, and were not cross with me at all for what I had done. I entreated them not to put another head on, but to turn with their whole hearts unto the one living and true God and Jesus our Saviour, and to serve Him."

A HIGHWAYMAN'S CONVERSION.

THE following is an extract from a letter recently received by the Rev. R. W. McAll, the founder of the famous Paris Missions: "Lately I was present (not for the first time) at your meeting, 37 Rue de Rivoli. The preacher explained the Word of God with such deep conviction that I was moved by it. He recounted several instances of Christian heroism. I listened with great attention. On leaving the room a lady (I would rather say an angel) who stood at the door put into my hand a little tract, named 'The Prisoner.' I took it and thrust it into my pocket, intending to cast it to the winds. A few days ago (having forgotten the book) I put my hand in my pocket without thought. The little book was there; it had followed me. So, to drown dull care, I read it. It was the story of a brigand—a history like my own, in fact. As I turned over its precious leaves, a crowd of thoughts, each darker than the other, flitted across my mind. I felt crushed beneath the weight of my sins, and said within myself, 'What can I do to enter the kingdom of Heaven, with such a burden of guilt and so many stains? Unless some one cleanses me from my sins, and removes my burden, I cannot be saved. Why attempt the impossible?' When I read that the prisoner spoken of fell on his knees to confess his sins and ask forgiveness in the name of Jesus crucified, I could not hold back my tears, as I perceived that a sinner like me could be saved in turning to the cross of Calvary. I pray God, through Jesus Christ, to give me grace, for I am resolved to walk in the narrow path which He marked out for us in dying on the cross. Pray for me, sir, that I may persevere in the faith of Christ; for I can do nothing of myself."

A COMMISSION IN A DREAM.

THE following incident, which occurred in the experience of an eminent Christian, is related in Dr. Gordon's Watchword: I will give an incident, in which I thought I saw a mark of divine interposition in some small degree. I owed a man a sum of money, which came due on a certain day specified, on which I was particularly anxious not to disappoint my friend. When the day arrived, notwithstanding all my care, I lacked twenty dollars to meet the amount I owed. This was rather strange to me, as I thought I had done my best. On the morning of that day I arose early and meditated on the matter. Some might think twenty dollars a small matter to meditate upon; but I wished to see where, if at all, I had erred. True, I had given away some money to the poor. I had not kept account how much. Had I displeased God in this? Or why was Providence seemingly suffering me to feel the regret of a broken promise made to my neighbor? I took no breakfast, but went from home fasting, to see what God was about to unfold to me. In a secluded place I bowed to God in mighty prayer. Before I rose from my knees, I was impressed with a strong assurance that the twenty dollars would be in my possession by the hour I needed it. I had not gone far before I was accosted by a man—a good Methodist—with these words: "My brother, just stop; I have something for you. I had a dream last night. In it I was told to let you have twenty dollars, the extra profits of my business last week." Saying which, he took from his pocket-book four five-dollar notes and laid them down before me on a full sack that stood on the sidewalk. I took the money and paid my debt, with an increased confidence in the Providence of God, not regretting that I had given a few shillings to the poor.

THE REVIVAL ON THE CONGO.

IN the last letter sent from the Congo by Mr. Stephen J. White, who has, since writing it, gone to his reward, are the following remarks which show that God graciously permitted him to see the fruit of his labors before he died: "During the last month nearly 700 people have been blessedly converted to God, and one who saw these people five years ago, as I did, and sees them now, can see the great change, and cannot but praise God for his wonderful grace, which has brought them salvation. Their faces tell the story, and their lives confirm their profession. This evening two of the converts returned from a preaching tour, and they have visited several villages. They report five conversions. They met with a good deal of opposition, and some of the people threatened to shoot them, but they replied that they were not afraid of death now, for it was not death to them, but only going to be with Jesus. One man got up and defended them, and said he would kill anyone who killed them. From this same town a man and his family have been driven away, because he tried to teach his fellow-townsmen what he himself has learned. He is rejoicing in his new-found love. I wish those who take an interest in the work out here could just peep in at the morning and evening services, and see with what vigor the people sing the hymns of praise, the eagerness with which they drink in the Word, and the simple, child-like faith they show in their prayers. They would pray and give more liberally to forward the glorious work of 'Congo for Christ.'"

A NIGHT IN A SHEIKH'S HOME.

TWO tired missionaries asked hospitality a short time ago of a sheikh in a village in Syria. The sheikh received them cordially, and promised to make them comfortable. Dr. Ira Harris, one of the two missionaries, sends to the Church the following description of how the night was spent:

"Soon our baggage was unloaded and taken into the house. When we entered we were almost blinded by the smoke from a large fire burning in the middle of the room, such a room as probably you never saw used as a dwelling-place for human beings—thirty feet by twenty, and ten feet high. On the right side of the door there was a raised room, eight feet square, elevated on sticks driven in the floor, which was mother-earth. The sides of this room were covered with reeds and dry twigs. This is the sleeping-room of the young sheikh, his wife and two little ones. Back of this is the stable for cows, goats and sheep. The remaining half of the large room is raised about three feet, so that the animals cannot intrude. At the end is a large platform of small logs, about ten feet square, with a two-foot railing around the edge to keep the children from falling out, and a resting-place for the arms of the women folk. This is used at night as a common bedroom for the old sheikh, his two wives, three little boys, and a daughter about seventeen years old. Along the front wall were a number of small bins for stores.

"We were invited to take a seat near the fire, which we did with pleasure. Our wet clothes were removed, and, held by various members of the family, were soon steaming by the fire. When the time came for us to retire, the cows, the goats with their kids, sheep and lambs and my horse were brought into the room. The young man and his family retired to their room, our beds were put up, our three men lying on the floor by the fire. The old man and his family went to rest on the platform, making in all seventeen persons, besides the animals, sleeping in this small room, with no window, the only ventilation being from the cracks in the rickety door. The room filled with smoke so dense near the ceiling that one could not stand up without suffering. Gladly we greeted the morning, having passed a most wretched night. This is about the worst experience I have had since I came to Syria."

A JEWISH CONVERT'S TESTIMONY.

ON Sunday, June 12, the Rev. Jacob Freshman, whose work among the Jews of New York is being much blessed, baptized an intelligent young man, the son of a well-known Rabbi. The young convert, in relating his experience, said: "Some five years since I attended a prayer-meeting in Mr. Freshman's house. Here I was urged to become a Christian. I also went to the Saturday afternoon meeting in Allen Street, and a Jew who saw me there told me if I came again he would beat me. I attended the Sunday-school and received a Bible, which I soon lost. Still, what I heard led me to think whether I had the right religion. So I went to Mrs. Freshman, and she gave me a Bible. I read it, with prayer to God to teach me the truth, and He has brought me to trust in Christ as my personal Saviour."

There was a large congregation present, and at the close of the service several Israelites requested Mr. Freshman to give them copies of the New Testament in Hebrew. The same request is frequently made by Jews, and they read the book carefully, and generally with the best results. Mr. Freshman would like to distribute these Hebrew New Testaments in greater number, but his means are limited. Any persons willing to help him in the good work, can send contributions to Rev. Jacob Freshman, 17 St. Mark's Place, New York.

THE FLAG HOISTED IN A HUT.

A CLERGYMAN of Lancashire, England, speaking to young men on the duty of testifying for Christ, said: "In Lancashire we had a lad who worked in a factory; he was what we call a 'stripper;' and there were odd half-hours in the day when the lads had nothing to do. They had a hut, and made the most of their leisure by holding meetings in it, and having what they called a 'jolly time.' They were all worldly men. They had amateur concerts, and so on, and there was often a contest to see who could say the wickedest thing. But this lad I speak of got converted to Christ. The time came for him to go with the rest into the hut, and the question was how he was to declare what the Lord had done for him. He did not see the chance just then. He made up his mind to show that he was on the Lord's side, if he could. The chairman for the day said, 'Dick, thou'll sing us a song.' 'Well,' said Dick, 'if I am to give thee a song, I suppose I may sing what I like,' and away went the flag up, and he sang, 'Crown Him Lord of all!' The company were all taken by surprise. They thought there would be a verse, and then a blasphemous chorus. Nothing of the kind. 'Well,' said the chairman, 'Dick, thou may'st as well pray.' Nothing loth, Dick replied, 'Very well; let us kneel down.' And he prayed fervently. And that day began a good work in the old mill, which is going on yet."

PRAYER IN A KRAAL.

AN incident described in a letter from Mr. Elbert Clarke, of Ixopo, Rock Fountain, Natal, well illustrates the character of the work in that region: "During the journey of about one hundred and fifty miles up the Kahlamba Mountains, I stayed at the kraal of a chief, where I had been before. After we had cooked some food, and were sitting on the ground round the fire, the chief sent to ask for a little word of prayer before they went to sleep. Of course, I was delighted, and went at once to the chief's hut, where I found every man, woman and child of the kraal assembled to hear the Word. There were about sixty in all; the Holy Ghost was working in many of their hearts, and a most blessed sense of God's presence was felt. In the morning, just as the day was breaking, I was waked up by a woman praying on the other side of the hut; while listening to her I could hear in the hut to the left of me another woman praying, and in a hut to the right of me the chief himself was engaged in the same way. He plainly said, before his wives and children, that he intended from this time to serve God, and that it was his wish that they should do so too."

THE REMOVAL OF THE VAIL.

By Rev. A. C. Tris, of Howard, Kan.

Gloom in the Valley—Light on the Mountain Crest—The Mount of Feasting—Difference of Interpretation—The Feast on Mount Zion—The People to be Feasted—The Vail to be Removed—Already Lifted but not Removed—To be Swallowed Up—The Intellect Cleared—A Revelation to Israel—Eden and Gethsemane.

WHEN the Swiss herdsman, at the approach of day, looks at the top of the Alpine mountains, he sees the first rosy beams of a joyous sun leaping around and enlightening their snowy crests; in the valley around him all is gloom and darkness; but his soul is rejoiced, because the harbinger of another day has come. This Swiss scene pictures out our present hopeful condition—gloom and darkness may yet surround us, and objects may be yet obscure, "the daybreak of the East" is coming, the first beams of the Sun of Righteousness are seen, and the day is at hand "when the covering which is cast over all the people shall be removed, and the vail shall be taken away, which is spread over all nations." Isa. 25:6, 7.

Different Expositions.

We are aware that the words of the prophet Isaiah in those verses are taken in different ways. We have heard them called The Mount of Ordinances, and have seen them applied to the holy communion services, and explained them as a prophecy spoken and belonging to the Christian Church of this present dispensation, meaning a sacramental feast of fat things prepared for the believers—a feast in which death is swallowed up in victory.

Others have taken a wider view, stating that in those texts is spoken of the whole Christian Church in this present dispensation, which was commenced with the Ascension of Christ on Mount Olivet, and with the Feast of Pentecost. Acts 2:1, showing that this Dispensation is called "a feast," Matt. 22:2; Luke 14:16, 17; and, of course, they allege that all the particulars mentioned in Isa. 25:6, 7, 8, must be spiritualized; and, by way of allegory, must mean the great privileges enjoyed by true believers in Christ.

At the first sight, those expositions seem to be the true meaning, and have a great weight in the mind of many believers—being held by many able expositors of the Bible; yet, if we accept those ideas, we have entered into a labyrinth from which no skillful guide ever can find his way, or is able to bring the weary traveler to the entrance. Therefore, we differ from their opinions, advocating the literal meaning of the Word of God.

The Feast on Mount Zion.

Every careful reader of the twenty-fifth chapter of Isaiah must observe its connection with Isaiah 24:18–22, in which a catastrophe is spoken of, which will happen in the latter days: "When kings and high-ones shall be visited with fearful judgments." The same event is mentioned in Rev. 6:15, 16, after the opening of the sixth seal, with Isa. 24:23, in which is said at that time, "When the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and that there shall be glory before his ancients" (margin,) and also with Isa. 26:1–4, where it is said, that "In that day a glorious anthem will be sung in Jerusalem." Yea, with Isa. 26:19, where the resurrection of the dead is spoken of, and this connection with Isa. 25:6, 7, 8, standing in the midst of those three chapters, shows conclusively that "this mountain" is indeed the same spoken of in Isa. 2:3, and is located "in Jerusalem, the land of Judah."

It might be urged against this view that this glorious event spoken of by the prophet, is called "a feast or banquet," which shall be given unto "all the peoples." But examining this matter carefully, that objection must have little weight, if we consider the fact that the word rendered "a feast" in Hebrew is found in Gen. 13:3, where it is said, That Lot entertained the angel Jehovah in Sodom; and also in Gen. 21:8; 26:30, where it is mentioned, "That Abraham made a feast." In Job 1:5, mention is made "Of the days of feasting." We surmise the text has special reference to Esther 9:17, 19, 22, in which it is said that after the downfall of Haman, "The Jews had a day of feasting, gladness, yea, a good day."

No doubt, that day on Mount Zion will be a day of public acknowledgment of mercies received, an inauguration day of the new order of government, and a public manifestation of loyalty to King Jesus by Israel. We say especially by Israel—the Hebrew word means "the peoples," plural, and is commonly used to point out the people of Israel, and all the tribes. It is to be noticed how different the words of those three verses are; there is spoken: "For all the peoples," off all faces—the rebuke: "reproach" of His people, and then, over all the nations—the Hebrew word, speaking of the nations as a rule, is mostly used for heathen nations, a particularity worthy our observation, and leads us to the fact. That the feast will be given to Israel, restored in their own land, Canaan.

A Problem.

Another objection might be urged, namely, that the authorized version reads: "A feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things, full of marrow, of wines on the lees, well refined." This rendering of the text has often puzzled us, and we could not find a better explanation than to take them as words of comparison, as we find in the Song of Solomon, ch. 7:9, 8:2. The most faithful and original translation, expressing every word found in the Hebrew text, we read in Dr. Robert Young's Bible, "And made hath the Lord of Hosts for all the peoples in this mount, a banquet of fat things, a banquet of preserved things, fat things full of marrow, preserved things refined."

The Hebrew word "shemarim," plural, which is rendered in the authorized version, "of wines on the lees," is only found in the four following places: Isa. 25:6; Ps. 75:8; Zeph. 1:12; Jer. 48:11 (Frommins Concordance, 1691), and means "rigid, kept, preserved," and was applied by the ancients "to the dregs of liquor, and to the settlings and sediments of wine." So in Ps. 75:8, "But the dregs thereof, all the wicked of the earth wring out and drink." In Zeph. 1:12, is spoken of "hardened" persons denying God's providence, and in Jer. 48:11, it is applied: To the sinful, "easy condition of Moab."

The Vail.

Although in thirty-two places of the Old Testament mention is made of the vail, yet the word "massekah" is only found in Isa. 25:7, 28:20, 30:1—"a covering." Its original root-word is most beautiful, expressing "pouring out, entwined, surrounding with a hedge," and this gives a clear insight into the natural condition of mankind, as being surrounded by a darkness which has taken hold on their mind, and is, as it were, "poured out" in their hearts—a state beset with obstacles like a thorny hedge, obstructing their pathway and being entwined by many schemes, designs and evil devices, so that their intellectual powers are covered with a wrapping which is wrapped over all the people and nations. This covering, called a vail, shall be swallowed up when the Lord of Hosts shall take away from all the earth the reproach of His people Israel.

(To be concluded next week.)

Five Cents, Postage Free.

END OF THIS AGE ABOUT THE END OF THIS CENTURY,

and its Last Week Passover Week, Ending on Thursday, April 11, 1901,

As shown by Daniel's 2300 and 1335 and 1290 Years—this being the termination also of the 6000 Years from the Creation of Man, and the 2520 Years from Nebuchadnezzar, and the 360 Years from Luther's Reformation, according to the Bible periods—a pamphlet of 29 pages—by Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal Clergyman and one of the Editors of the "Christian Herald." Author of "Forty Coming Wonders," "Coming Wars," etc. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The President's Proposal to Return to the Southern States the flags captured from the Confederate regiments in the war, caused general excitement last week throughout the North. He has now rescinded his order on the subject, subsequent reflection having convinced him that any action of the kind should originate with Congress. The flags, however, are to be inventoried, and classified, and properly stored, with a view to their careful preservation. The original order appears not to have been an idea of the President's, but of General Drum, who suggested it to the Secretary of War, and subsequently to the President himself. Without careful consideration, the President approved the project, but the emphatic protests which the publication of the idea evoked, led to a new consideration of the subject, with the result mentioned. It is sad that an officer so generally respected as Gen. Fairchild, should have been betrayed by his indignation into an exhibition of temper which was unjustifiable. He publicly invoked palsy on the hand and brain and tongue of the man responsible for the proposed return of the flags. The invocation was as unworthy of him as it was futile and needless. Now that it is proved that arguments without curses were sufficient to prevent the return of the flags, it may be hoped that the General will rehabilitate his character by expressing his regret.

The Collapse in the Corner on the Wheat market shook the markets of this country and Europe on June 14. It is many years since so gigantic a project was launched, maintained so obstinately and failed so utterly. The combination succeeded in locking up in Chicago millions of bushels of wheat which, in the ordinary course of trade would have been exported. The price rose, and if the schemers could have held their stock until it rose to the figure expected, and could then have sold, their profits would have been enormous. But the break came, and on the very first day half a million bushels were liberated. Little commiseration is felt for the sufferers. They alienated public sympathy because it was realized that they were intent on making a fortune for themselves, careless of the fact that their gain involved the increased cost of living to the general community and the risk of starvation to thousands. It is this selfish disregard of the public welfare that is embittering the poor against the rich.

The Office of Commissioner of Jurors is one deserving more attention from the public than it generally receives. Perhaps a description of the state of affairs existing in New York may arouse citizens of other cities to inquire whether the scandal of miscarriage of justice, so generally complained of, is due to carelessness in regard to the character of the man selected for this office. The question has been forced on public attention in New York by the fact that four weeks have been occupied in getting a jury to try Jacob Sharp, who is charged with conspiring to bribe the Aldermen of the city. Eighteen hundred talesmen were summoned before twelve suitable men were found. Among them were people who were deaf or over age; many who had actually served within three months, and whose names, in some unaccountable manner, had got back into the great wheel; many who were exempt by law, non-residents, poll clerks, militiamen, persons without the property qualification, people suffering from permanent ailments, occasionally the names of even deceased persons. Numbers could neither read, write nor speak English understandingly, and many of those who could were lacking in intelligence, and ignorant of the duties of a juror, Judge Barrett did not conceal his opinion of the cause of this waste of time. He said: "If the dregs of the Directory, supplemented with a limited percentage of good names, had been pitched haphazard into the jury box, we could not have had anything worse than at present exists. The box is an insult to this great city. It seems to preponderate with a representation of everything that is low, ignorant, vicious and unintelligent." Judge Beach also emphasized this opinion by saying that "it is an outrage on justice that a better class of jurors is not furnished." Wherever such a system prevails there need be no surprise if wealthy and influential criminals escape.

A Manly and Sensible Letter from General Sherman was published last week, in which he gives advice very much needed in these days, when strong political feeling is apt to make us forget the respect due to regularly constituted authority. President Cleveland's vetoes of pension bills have caused some indignation in many quarters, and there has been manifested a disposition to express it in the matter of the invitation to him to visit the encampment at St. Louis. Gen. Sherman, who will not be suspected of any lack of sympathy with veterans, vehemently protests in his letter against any such behavior. He says: "Mr. Cleveland, the President of the United States, by a fair election of all our people, Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, is free to come and go wherever the jurisdiction of this our National Government extends. The idea of his being insulted, much less endangered, should he be on the stand when the Grand Army is passing in review, seems to me monstrous. Should Mr. Cleveland accept the invitation, which I hope he will, to attend the parade, I will stand by his side, or march past in the ranks of Ransom Post, as may be ordered by Gen. Fairchild." It is especially important, now that efforts are being made by socialists and anarchists to sow the seeds of lawlessness in the community, that Christian men, however strong may be their allegiance to the Republican party, should set the example of showing respect to the man who occupies the office of chief executive. The apostolic injunction as to this duty is emphatic (Rom. 13: 1–3).

Fresh Atrocities Perpetrated by the Escaped Apaches are reported. A despatch from Tucson, Arizona, states that they have attacked the ranch of the Inter-Ocean Cattle Company, and burned all the buildings. Thirty hostiles are believed to be in the band. The troops are in close pursuit. The Indians have also fired the mountains from the San Carlos Reservation and 80 miles south to the Mexican line. This is to prevent the use of heliograph signals. The Eskinzine Indians say the hostiles have got a captain who talks, writes and reads white man's talk, and who knows all about the white man's "big chief." It cannot yet be definitely learned if the Hampton Indian is the leader, but the manœuvres of the hostiles show much more than ordinary intelligence. The panic among the settlers has been in a measure allayed by the arrival of Gen. Miles, whose success in capturing Geronimo inspired confidence in his abilities.

The Abandonment of the Panama Canal enterprise was pronounced probable by M. Boulanger, a distinguished French engineer, who delivered a speech on the subject in New York, on June 15. He has just returned from the Isthmus, and spoke of the work with despair. He said: "We have funds enough on hand to continue the work about four months. After the money is exhausted, I think De Lesseps will be forced to abandon the enterprise for good, or for some years at least. The scarcity of money, impracticability of the present route, and unexpected obstacles are reasons sufficient. Not more than one-fifth of the work has been done, or about 30,000,000 cubic metres out of 140,000,000 cubic metres have been excavated. It has cost $200,000,000. Great difficulty has been experienced in getting laborers, owing to the unhealthy climate. I was four months getting six men. We have sent to Trinidad, Hong-Kong, and other remote places, with varied success. We got about 800 Chinese, and they brought their own cooks and physicians for sanitary reasons. Sixty per cent. of the common laborers die each year. Eighty per cent. of the whites perish. Last year our society sent seventy-two engineers, agents, clerks, &c., to Panama, and there are eleven of us left fit for work. Forty-five died and the remainder are as good as dead."

A Revolution in Hawaii is said to be in Progress. The New York Herald says that a missionary who left Honolulu on June 7, and arrived at San Francisco on Thursday last, states that affairs in Honolulu are in a state of chaos. He says that at the time he left it was in a seething condition, and while the king has not been deposed, he thinks it is liable to occur soon. Both the Chinese and the white population are arming themselves, and they demand a change of government. The royal palace is barricaded and preparations are made for its defense in case of an attack. Other persons of authority are of the opinion that a revolution will surely occur, and foreigners residing there have gone so far as to call on their home governments to send men-of-war for their protection. Various causes are assigned for the outbreak, the principal one being the extravagance of the king. It appears that the Chinese are leading in the outbreak—their hostility having arisen in disputes over the opium monopoly.

Reports that the Crown Prince of Germany was suffering from cancer of the throat, were current last week and caused general concern in Germany and throughout Europe. The Crown Prince is very popular, and the advanced age of his father, the Emperor, renders his accession to the throne in the near future, a probability in which the people rejoice, especially as his son, who would take his place if he died, is not noted for wisdom or discretion. The rumor that he was suffering from the incurable disease which killed Gen. Grant, has therefore startled the public. Up to the close of last week the suspense continued; it is hoped, however, that the affection of the prince's throat is not cancer. It appears that in January last he was troubled with hoarseness, and a morbid growth was discovered by his physician. This growth not yielding to treatment, specialists were called in, and eventually Dr. Mackenzie, a skilful professor of London was summoned. He performed an operation on May 20, in which a portion of the growth was removed. It was examined under the microscope, and medical opinion is divided as to the result. Some physicians believe it to be cancereous, while others think that it is a harmless tumor. Meanwhile the Prince has gone to England, to be under the charge of Dr. Mackenzie, who is reported to be hopeful of his recovery. The statesmen of Europe, who realize what might happen if the present Emperor of Germany should be succeeded by a hot-headed young soldier, await results with anxiety.

A Severe Earthquake with Serious Loss of Life is reported from Turkestan a region of central Asia on the border of China. A despatch from St. Petersburg dated June 10, says: Several shocks of earthquake have occurred at Vernome, in Turkestan. The town was almost entirely destroyed. One hundred and twenty persons were killed and 125 injured. Among the latter is Gen. Friede, the Governor of the province of Semiretchinsk. Shocks still continue to be felt at intervals. The inhabitants of the town are panic-stricken, and have fled to the open country.

A Report of the Addresses Delivered at the Recent Prophetic Conference, at Chicago, with portraits of some of the speakers, may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York. It contains 216 pages. Fifty cents in paper covers.

The Death of Dr. Stevens, the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Pennsylvania, on June 11, though not unexpected, is deeply deplored, not only in his own diocese but throughout the Church. Dr. Stevens was seventy-two years of age, having been born at Bath, Me., in 1815. He was consecrated Assistant Bishop to Bishop Alonzo Potter in 1862. Three years later Dr. Potter died, and Dr. Stevens succeeded him. In 1871 the diocese was divided, so as to comprise only Philadelphia and the four adjacent counties; but the change left the diocese still a large one, and the Bishop was too conscientious a worker to neglect any part of his duties. His frequent journeys, and the exposure some of them entailed, caused a failure of health, and Dr. Ozi W. Whitaker was appointed to assist him. He will now succeed to the Bishopric.

The Legislature of Rhode Island is Energetically wrestling with the problem of rendering Prohibition effective. The House on Thursday last passed a bill which it labored to make exhaustive. It provides that "No person shall manufacture or sell, or suffer to be manufactured or sold, by any person, or keep or suffer to be kept on his premises or possession, or under his charge, for the purpose of sale, any ale, wine, rum, or other strong or intoxicating liquors, or any mixed liquors, a part of which is ale, wine, rum, or other strong or intoxicating liquors." Two per cent. of alcohol in any liquor suffices to bring the liquor into the category of intoxicating drinks.

The Temperance Party in Michigan are not relaxing their efforts for the suppression of the liquor traffic; and the Legislature appears to have profited by the lesson taught by the casting at the recent election of 178,000 votes for absolute prohibition. On June 16 a local option bill for counties was finally passed by a vote of 27 to 7 in the Senate, and 67 to 11 in the House. It provides that whenever one-fifth of the voters at the last preceding election for Governor in any county shall petition for a special election to be held on this question of totally prohibiting the sale of liquor throughout that county, such election shall take place, nothing else being voted upon. An affirmative vote establishes prohibition in the county. Such an election once held, cannot be repeated until the expiration of three years, and the decision, whatever it is, will be binding for that time.

One of the most Remarkable Trials on Record was concluded on June 10, in the Court of Calhoun County, Michigan. Eleven years ago a man was charged with forgery and perjury. He was admitted to bail, and being a very wealthy man, was able to secure the services of astute counsel. His efforts were directed to the postponement of the trial. Every plea known to adepts in legal practice was used for the purpose. It was hoped that the judges would lose patience and discontinue the case, but they would not; they were, however, obliged to postpone it from term to term. Every term it was called, and on some plea or other, put forward by the accused, it was adjourned. When at last the pleas were exhausted and it seemed that the case must be tried, the accused man had a fit in court, and his convulsions were so frightful to witness that every one left the court-room, and the case was again adjourned. This was repeated several times, the man alleging that excitement produced the fits. Altogether the case was adjourned forty-four times, and last week it came on again. The prosecutor produced medical men, who testified that the horrible fits were simulated, and the judge arrived at the conclusion that they were a mere trick to evade a trial. The man had five fits, but the trial went on, and finally, after a delay of eleven years, he was convicted and sentenced to ten years in State's prison. The interval between the commission of the crime and the punishment is unprecedented, but the man has not escaped, as he hoped to have done. Some persons cling to the same futile hope about God's justice; but neither gifts to churches, nor reformation of life, nor even repentance will save the sinner from punishment, though it be long delayed. The only way of escape is the way God has provided through faith in Christ. (Eccles 3: 15).

A Riot at a Mineral Spring in Central Park, New York, is predicted by the policeman on duty there as an event sure to occur at no distant time. A visitor to the Park one morning at sunrise noticed a crowd of men and women surrounding the big mica rock from which the water trickles, and asked the policeman what was going on. "They are cranks," he said irreverently; "some medical ass recommended a patient to drink water from that spring just at sunrise, and he did so and got well. Now all the neighborhood comes here, and they all want to get the water exactly when the sun gets up. It takes two or three minutes to fill the glass, and they all struggle to be the lucky one. There'll be a fight and a regular riot some of these days over it." The policeman's prediction may come true, for it is quite natural that a sufferer who has no more sense than to believe in the virtue of drinking a particular kind of water at a particular time will make a struggle to be first, as was the case at the pool of Bethesda (John 5: 7). It is a pity that there is not the same anxiety manifested to get the water of life, which is free to all and its efficacy beyond question (Rev. 22: 17).

A Blind Beggar Received a Fortune on June 11, at Elmira, N. Y. The man, who has subsisted by begging for more than twenty years, was formerly a soldier in the Union Army, having enlisted during the first year of the war. He was then a robust, healthy man with good sight. One day while on picket duty he was struck completely blind. He tried to find his way back to camp, but was unable to do so, and wandered off, where he does not know. He was classed as a deserter, but escaped arrest. He went to Elmira, where his infirmity was established, and from that time he has roamed the streets of Elmira a beggar. He was led around by his son a few years, but during the past eighteen years his leader was a well trained shepherd dog. For several years his counsel has been urging his application for a pension, but found much difficulty, owing to the charge of desertion against him. Within the past few days the charge was removed, and on June 11, $13,322 back pay, and an order for $72 a month pension, the largest amount ever paid by the government, was received. It is well that the right has been done at last. If, as is stated, the man was injured in the service of his country and was also wrongly accused of the heinous offence of desertion, the large pension awarded is not too much by way of atonement. In the day of final award the world will be surprised at some of the honors conferred. Christ will see that those who have suffered in His service and who have been slandered and vilified do not miss their reward. (Mark 10: 30, 31).

The Gratification of a Bereaved Father, as described in the Commercial Gazette, of Pittsburg, Pa., exhibits a curious side of human nature. Some years ago a young man came to this country from Italy, and obtained employment at the Union Station, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Pittsburg. He was industrious and thrifty, and had the good sense to join the Pennsylvania Relief Association, which provides for support during incapacity by sickness or injury, and the payment of a sum of money to the member's heirs in case of his death. The young Italian was killed in an acccident a few months ago, and the association buried the body and forwarded to the man's father in Italy a cheque for $500. The old man was so overjoyed at securing so much money for the loss of a son that he immediately dispatched another son to this country, with instructions to get a job on the Pennnsylvania Railroad and become a member of the association. It may be supposed that the father will not be overwhelmed with grief if he receives news of that son's death too, if it is accompanied by another cheque for $500. He evidently was not aware until now what his sons were worth. We may despise him as an unnatural parent, but there are many parents among ourselves who do not scruple for the sake of gain to place their sons in positions where they are liable to lose their souls through evil associations (Ezekiel 23: 39).

A Problem was solved in a Dream recently, in Pennsylvania. A school-teacher writing to the Christian Advocate, states that he submitted an intricate mathematical problem to an acquaintance who was fond of such mental exercise. But the problem was so difficult that both he and the teacher decided that it could not be solved. The next day, however, to the astonishment of the teacher, his friend handed him a solution which was not only correct, but a marvel of arithmetical simplicity. On asking him how it had been achieved, his friend told him a remarkable story. He said that during the preceding night he dreamed that he was talking to an old man, long since dead, who taught the school to which he went as a boy, and that he submitted the problem to the old man, who at once took it in hand, solved it, and told him how it was done. When he awoke he remembered the dream, and wrote out the solution, which proved correct. Probably psychologists may be able to explain this phenomenon without admitting that the solution was supernaturally imparted, and their explanation may be true as to the mathematical problem, but when the Christian is perplexed by spiritual difficulties, and the seeming inconsistences of God's providence, light comes to him generally, not by his own mental effort, but as a revelation from heaven (Ps. 73: 16, 17).

BRIEF NOTES.

MR. BURDETTE, whose brilliant work on the Hawkeye has made him one of the most famous of American journalists, will have charge of the service of the Second Reformed Church, North River, among the Adirondacks, this summer. Last year he conducted the services with many tokens of the Divine blessing. It is stated, that out of the offerings he took one dollar as a memento and put the rest into the Church fund.

Mrs. N. F. Shipman is now conducting special services at Lawrence Mass., where the Primitive Methodist Conference has recently opened a Mission Hall. Her mission at Lowell was remarkably successful.

The project of a Cathedral in New York which was advocated by Bishop Potter, as mentioned in these columns recently, meets with popular approval. Half a million dollars have already been promised to the fund.

The New York Board of Excise has refused a firm a license to open a liquor saloon opposite the University Place Presbyterian Church. The wealthy and influential applicants had previously boasted, with some appearances of probability, that they would be successful.

In fifty counties of Iowa, where the saloons are banished, the jails have stood empty for a year. The Iowa State Register is our authority for the assertion.

Canon Wilberforce is reported as saying in Philadelphia that when a physician prescribed alcohol for him, he prescribed the door for the physician.

A church capable of holding one thousand persons has been built at Bergen, Norway. Its peculiarity is that no material has been used in it but papier maché.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, the eminent Evangelist, who labored successfully in Brooklyn last season, is now conducting services at Exeter, N. H.

The annual statistics of the United Presbyterian Church show an increase during the past year in the membership of 3,915, and in income of over $10,000.

The next Convention of the International Young Men's Christian Associations will be held in Philadelphia.

An appropriate gift is projected by some veteran soldiers. Mrs. Hannah Shaw, whose labors in connection with the Christian Commission during the war will never be forgotten, is now the wife of Dr. Happer, missionary in China. It is proposed that the veterans subscribe for the endowment of a professorship in the college which Dr. Happer is about to establish there, the endowment to be a mark of recognition of the value of Mrs. Happer's services.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE WAY AND THE EXPECTED END.

A New Sermon, by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"For I know the thoughts that I think towards you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end."—Jeremiah xxix. 11.

A Message to the Exiles—Their Two Dangers—False Hope and Needless Despair—A Double Admonition—Needed by the Church Now—I. The Lord's Thoughts—The Exiles not Forgotten—Kindness done Thoughtfully—The Engine Understood by the Engineer—Definite Thoughts—Men who are Slow to make up their Mind—God's Thoughts Always of Peace—The Needful Discipline—II. The Proper Attitude of God's People—Submission—Hopefulness—Not Presumption.

THESE words were written by Jeremiah in a letter to the captives in Babylon. A considerable part of the people of Israel were carried away by Nebuchadnezzar into a far country. They were exhorted by the prophet to build houses, form families, and to abide peaceably there till the Lord should Lead them back at the end of seventy years. But at that time there was a general uneasy feeling among the Jews and other subjected nations, who did not rest quietly under the iron yoke of Babylon. They were plotting and planning continual rebellions, and certain false prophets in Babylon worked with them, stirring up the spirit of revolt among the exiles. Jeremiah, on the other hand, assured them that they had been sent of God into the land of the Chaldeans for good, bade them seek the peace of the city wherein they now dwelt, and promised them that in due time the Lord would again plant them in their own land. A people in such a position were in Danger in two ways:

either to be buoyed up with false hopes, and so to fall into foolish expectations; or, to fall into despair, and have no hope at all, and so become a sullen and degraded race, who would be unfit for restoration, and unable to play the part which God ordained for them in the history of mankind. The prophet had the double duty of putting down their false hopes, and sustaining their right expectations. He, therefore, plainly warned them against expecting more than God had promised, and he aroused them to look for the fulfillment of what He had promised. Read the tenth verse, and note that pleasant expression, "and perform my good word unto you."

At the present time the Church has need of both admonitions. Expectations which are not warranted are being raised in many quarters, and are leading to serious delusions. We hear men crying, "Lo here!" and "Lo there!" This wonder and that marvel are cried up. It would seem that the age of miracles has returned to certain hot heads. Take ye no heed of all this. False prophets will be left in the lurch, but the word of the Lord will stand.

This morning my desire shall be to comfort any of God's people who are in a state of perplexity, and thus are carried away captive. I would assure them of the Lord's kindliness to them, and urge them to trust and not be afraid. God's thoughts towards them are good, though their trials may be grievous.

I. First, then, dear friends, consider towards His people. It is noteworthy, first of all that He does think of them, and towards them. These people in captivity were likely to fear that their God had forgotten them: hence the Lord repeats His words in this place, and speaks of thoughts and thinking three times. His words are so repeated as to seem almost redundant, out of a desire to make His people feel absolutely sure that not only did He act towards them, but that He still thought towards them. To the banished this would be a grand consolation. The Lord thought of them when they walked the strange streets of "the golden city," and heard a language which they understood not. He thought of them when they were buffeted as aliens by those who marched in the proudest pomp, and danced in cruel derision to the sound of their viols. The Lord thought of His exiles when their sole solace was solitude by the brink of the Babylonian canals, where they remembered Zion.

The Lord's thoughts

All that the Lord was doing towards them was done thoughtfully. A person may happen to do you a good turn; but if you are sure that he did it by accident, or with no more thought than that wherewith a passing stranger throws a penny to a beggar, you are not impressed with gratitude. But when the action of your friend is the result of earnest deliberation, and you see that he acts in the tenderest regard to your welfare, you are far more thankful: traces of anxiety to do you good are very pleasant. Have I not heard persons say, "It was so kind and so thoughtful of him!" Do you not notice that men value kindly thought, and set great store by tender consideration! Remember, then, that there is on the part of God. His mind goes with His hand: His heart is in His acts. Never has anything happened to you as the result of a remorseless fate; but all your circumstances have been ordered in wisdom by a living, thoughtful, loving Lord. Brethren, if I said no more you might go on your way rejoicing. Remember that the infinite God has thoughts of peace towards you, and your own thoughts will be thoughts of peace all the day.

Never a Thoughtless Action

To go a step further, let us next note that the thoughts of God are only perfectly known to Himself. It would be a mere truism for God to say, "I know the thoughts that I think toward you." Even a man usually knows his own thoughts; but the meaning is this: when you do not know the thoughts that I have towards you, yet I know them. Brethren, when we cannot know the thoughts of the Lord because they are too high for our conception, or too deep for our understanding, yet the Lord knows them. Our heavenly Father knows what He is doing: when His ways towards us appear to be involved and complicated, and we cannot disentangle the threads of the skein, yet the Lord sees all things clearly, and knows the thoughts that He thinks towards us. He Never Misses His Way.

Despite our ignorance, nothing can go wrong while the Lord in infinite knowledge ruleth over all. The child playing on the deck does not understand the tremendous engine whose beat is the throbbing heart of the stately Atlantic liner, and yet all is safe; for the engineer, the captain and the pilot are in their places, and well know what is being done. Let not the child trouble itself about things too great for it.

> "His thoughts are high, his love is wise,
> His wounds a cure intend;
> And though he does not always smile,
> He loves unto the end."

Let us go a step further still: the Lord would have us know that His thoughts toward us are settled and definite. This is of the words, "I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord." Sometimes a man may hardly know his own thoughts, because he has scarcely made up his mind. There are several subjects now upon the public mind, concerning which it is wise to say little or nothing, because it is not easy to decide about them. Upon a certain matter, one asks you this question, and another asks you another question; and it is possible that you have so carefully weighed and measured the arguments both pro and con that you cannot come to a conclusion either way. Your thoughts differ from day to day, and therefore you do not yet know them. You need not be ashamed of this; it shows that you have a just sense of your own imperfect knowledge. A fool soon makes up his mind, because there is so very little of it; but a wise man waits and considers. The case is far otherwise with the only wise God. Your way may be closed, but His way is open. God knows all when you know nothing at all.

Part of the Intent

Now we have advanced some distance into the meaning of our text, and we are prepared to go a step further, namely, that God's thoughts toward his people are Always Thoughts of Peace.

Note well the negative, which is expressly inserted. It is very sweet to my own heart. It might have appeared enough to say, "My thoughts are thoughts of peace." Yes, it would be quite sufficient when all things are bright with us: but those words, "and not of evil," are admirably adapted to keep off the goblins of the night, the vampires of suspicion which fly in the darkness. When under affliction we are sorely depressed, and when conscience perceives that there are reasons why the Lord should contend with us, then the enemy whispers, "The Lord has evil thoughts toward you, and will cast you off forever." No, beloved, his thoughts are not of evil. Though the Lord hates thy sin, He does not hate thee.

The hardest blow that He ever laid upon His child was inflicted by the hand of love. Thou mayest rise from thy bed in the morning to be chastised, and ere thou dost fall asleep in the night thou mayest smart under the rod, and yet be none the less, but all the more, the favorite of heaven; therefore, beloved, lay hold upon the negative, "not of evil." There shall not a hair of your head perish, but yet with weariness. It is for good, and only for good, that God thinks of us and deals with us. Oh, that we could settle this in our hearts, and have done with dark forebodings! Though thy way may now lie through dark ravines where the crags rise so steep above thee as to shut out the light of day, yet press thou onward, for the way is safe. Follow the Lord, for where the road is rough, thou wilt be less likely to slip than in more smooth and slippery places. If the way be steep, thou wilt the sooner ascend on high; or if thy way inclines downward, thou wilt the sooner feel the needful humiliation, and the more readily cease from thyself, and cast thyself upon thy Lord.

That Head May Ache

No, His thoughts are "not of evil." The next time the devil comes to you with a dark insinuation, tell him that the Lord's thoughts are "not of evil." Drive him away with that. When he hisses his foul suggestions, say "Not of evil." God cannot have an evil thought toward his own elect. He that gave His own Son to die for us cannot think anything but good towards us.

Once more, and then we shall have fully compassed this text. The Lord's thoughts are all working towards "an expected end," or, as the Revised Version has it,

"To Give You Hope

in your latter end." Some read it "a future and a hope." The renderings are instructive. God is working with a motive. All things are working together for one object: the good of those who love God. Let us comfort ourselves with this. God meant in Babylon to prepare a people that should know him, of whom He could say, "I will be their God, and they shall be my people." At the end of seventy years, he would bring these people back to Jerusalem like a new race, who, whatever their faults might be, would never again fall into idolatry. He knew what He was driving at in their captivity; and in our case the Lord is equally clear as to his purpose. We do not ourselves know, for "it doth not yet appear what we shall be." O brethren, we should not know ourselves if we could see ourselves as we are to be when the Lord's purpose is accomplished upon us! We know that we shall be like Him when we shall see Him as He is; but what is He like "as He is"? God is working, working, working always to that end, and so all His thoughts tend towards this expected end.

I am probably addressing many a child of God who is vexed in daily conflict with his inward corruption. Alas! we find the old man yet alive within us. The old nature in the Christian is no better than the old man in the sinner; it is the same carnal mind which is enmity against God, and is not reconciled, neither indeed can be. The new nature has a hard struggle to hold its own against this embodied death. We are, as it were, chained to a rotting carcase, and we cry, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me?" Now, do not despair because of this experience. It is better to mourn over imperfection than to be puffed up with the idle notion that there is no sin in you to be watched and conquered. You will come to true holiness by this painful process, and so shall you glorify God.

II. In the second part of my discourse I would ask you to consider

The Proper Attitude of God's People towards their Lord. You will all agree with me when I say that our attitude should be that of submission. If God, in all that He does towards us, is acting with an object, and that object a loving one, then let Him do what seemeth Him good. Henceforth let us have no quarrel with the God of Providence; but let us say, "Thy will be done." Who would not yield to that which works his health, his wealth, his boundless happiness? "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of Him: for whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth."

Next, let our position be one of great hopefulness, seeing the end of God, in all He does, is to give us "a future and a hope." We are not driven into growing darkness, but led into increasing light. There is always something to be hoped for in the Christian's life. Let us not look towards the future nor regard the present with any kind of dread. There is nothing for us to dread. The death of Christ is the death of evil to the child of God. Let us trust, and not be afraid. Let us not be content with sullenly making up our minds to storical endurance. We must not only bear the will of the Lord, but rejoice in it. It is a blessed thing when we come to rejoice in tribulations, and to glory in infirmities. It is fine music when we can sing, "Sweet affliction."

"Hard work," says one. Yes, but it is worth the pains; for it

Secures Perfect Peace.

If thy will is brought to thy circumstances; and better still, thy will is brought to delight in God's will, then the fangs of the serpent are extracted. The sorrow is sucked out of the sorrow by the lips of acquiescence. When thou canst say, "Not my will, but thine be done," thou shalt have thy will. There is always something "better on before" for those who believe in Jesus. Be you sure of that.

Our relation to God should, next, be one of continual expectancy, especially expectancy of the fulfilment of his promises. Brethren, do not heap up to yourselves sorrow, as some do in these days, by expecting that which the Lord has not promised. I earnestly warn you against those who have been led by a fevered imagination to expect, first, perfection in the flesh, and then perfection of the flesh, and then an actual immortality for the flesh. God will fulfil His promise, but He will not fulfil of it. I should not wonder if there should arise a race of people who will believe that they can live without eating, because it is said, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God shall man live." If healed without medicine, why not fed without food? What absolute need of any visible means when God can work without them? Those who think it needful to lay aside all outward means in order to a true faith in God, are on the way to any absurdity. Truly, if God had bidden me live without eating, I would fast at His command, and expect to live; but as He has not done so, I shall not presume. Faith that is not warranted by the word of God is not faith, but folly. The Lord will perform His own word, but He will not perform the delirious declarations of madmen.

Your Misreading

Again, beloved, our position towards God should be one of happy hope as to blessed ends being answered even now. In the twenty-fourth chapter we observe one of the ends of the Lord's sending His people into exile. I noticed in the fifth verse that the Lord said, "So will I acknowledge them that are carried away captive of Judah." Their sorrow would bring about the Lord's acknowledgment of them. Thus do we, brethren, bear in our body the marks of the Lord Jesus. Affliction is the seal of the Lord's election. I remember who was a Baptist minister in Northamptonshire. In his youth he was a soldier, and calling on Robert Hall, when his regiment marched through Leicester, that great man became interested in him, and procured his release from the ranks. When he went to preach in Glasgow, he sought out his aged mother, whom he had not seen for many years. He knew his mother the moment he saw her; but the old lady did not recognize her son. It so happened that when he was a child, his mother had accidentally wounded his wrist with a knife. To comfort him she cried, "Never mind, my bonnie bairn, your mither will ken you by that when ye are a man." When Mack's mother would not believe that a grave, fine-looking minister could be her own child, he turned up his sleeve and cried, "Mither, mither, dinna ye ken that?" In a moment they were in each other's arms. Ah, brethren! the Lord knows the spot of his childre1. He acknowledges them by the mark of correction. What God is doing to us in the way of trouble and trial is but his acknowledgment of us as true heirs, and the marks of his rod shall be our proof that we are true sons. He knows the wounds he made when he was exercising upon us. By this also shall you yourself be made to know that verily you are a piece of gold, or else you would not have been put into the furnace. This will be one "expected end" of the Lord towards us; let us rejoice in it.

A Story of Mr. Mack,

His Sacred Surgery

But to close. We have kept the best wine until now. The thoughts of God toward us are that he will give us "an expected end." An end: there is good cheer in that. We do not wish to remain here forever. We would be diligent in running the race, but we long for the end of it. I should be satisfied to preach here throughout all eternity if I might always bring glory to God; but yet I am glad that there is to be an end of preaching, and a season of pure praise. You, my brethren, love the Lord's work; but still you look forward to the time when you shall take your wage, and have done. It is a comfort that there is an end.

Christ's Coming.

Blessed be God, it is an expected end. You ungodly people can only look forward to a dreaded end; an end of your foolish mirth, an end of your carelessness, an end of your boasting. You fear your end. But God will give his people an expected end. Suppose that end should be the coming of Christ! Oh, how we long for it! Oh that the Bridegroom would now appear! Oh that he would descend from heaven with a shout, and gather his chosen from the four winds of heaven! "Even so, come quickly!" That is our expected end. If our Lord does not come, and we must be taken home by death, we feel no alarm in looking forward to that expected end. One by one our dear friends go home from this church. It makes me feel happy to see how the brethren and sisters die; they pass away as if they were going to a wedding rather than to a tomb—as if it were the most joyful thing that ever happened to them to have reached their expected end. Doubts are all driven away when you see how believers die. Grace is given them, so that they surmount the weakness of the hour. When the believer comes to die, it will not be to an end which he feared, but to an end which he expected.

Brethren, when death is past, then comes that expected end which shall never end. What will the first five minutes in heaven be? There is a larger question; what will thousands of years in heaven be? What will myriads of ages be? My disembodied spirit will at the first be perfectly happy in the embraces of my Lord; but in due time the resurrection day will dawn, that this body may rise again in full glory. Then there will be a re-marriage of soul and body, and we shall be perfected, even as our risen Lord. Oh, the glory of that expected end!

Ending this discourse, I would ask you to plight your troth that you will meet me where glory dwelleth in Emmanuel's land. We shall soon be with the angels. The Lord is thinking of us, and he is expecting us home. Our Lord Jesus is waiting for his wedding-day, which is his expected end. "My soul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from him."

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

A CHANGE OF FRONT.*

WE are told (Gen. 9:19.), "These are the three sons of Noah, and of them was the whole earth overspread." Now, you know there has been a great deal of opposition to the doctrine of the Bible; that "God hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth;" but the old difficulties that were raised in connection with this subject are rapidly disappearing, and confirmations of the Bible doctrine are coming to the front; for example, there was much made, not long ago, of the great physical differences between the races of man—between the negro and the white man, between the Hottentot and the Anglo-Saxon. We do not hear much about this now. As long as it suited Infidelity to make a great deal of these differences, they were constantly held up as an objection to the Bible; now Infidelity has shifted its position, and those who are opposed to the Bible, instead of wishing to exaggerate these differences, want to reduce them as much as possible. Instead of making a great deal of difference between the white man and the negro, as they used to do, they want to make almost nothing of the difference between man and the beasts. They want to bridge all these chasms, and show not only how the different races of men, but how all the different species of animals, have come from the same parentage. Thus unbelief is constantly shifting its base; it is only the word of the Lord that endureth forever.

Then again, there are the differences in language. Before the study of comparative philology arose, the languages of men were thought to be so radically different that it was impossible to get any explanation of the variation that would be consistent with the unity of mankind. But in the beginning of this century, the researches of Sir William Jones, in the Sanscrit, followed by those of Schlegel and Bopp in other languages, opened up the way for a solution of the difficulty. In 1833, Bopp's "Comparative Grammar" was published, setting forth the then wonderful fact that the Sanscrit, the Zend, the Greek and Latin, the Lithuanian, Old Slavonian, Gothic and German languages were all derived from the same stem. About the same time Prichard published his work on "The Eastern origin of the Celtic Nations;" and the Indo-European or Aryan group of languages was complete, extending all the way from India on the East to Ireland on the West, all coming from the same stem. Then, as the study of comparative philology progressed, it was discovered that the Semitic languages, which seemed to be so vastly different from all the Aryan group, had close relations with them. The two great departures of the Semitic, on the one hand, and the Aryan on the other, come together, when you trace them back far enough. Still more recent investigations in the Turanian languages, which seemed, at first, to be so utterly diverse

* From "The Ages Before Moses," a Series of Lectures on The Book of Genesis, by Rev. John Monro Gibson, D. D, of Chicago. A timely book, which ought to be read by every young man whose faith in the Bible has been unsettled by the quibbles of scientists. Pp. 258; price 75 cents. Published by Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., 38 West Twenty-third Street, New York.

The Marriage of Queen Victoria and Prince Albert on February 10, 1840.

from all the rest, have shown their affiliation also with the others.

The ethnologist Latham, than whom none is more impartial as an investigator, and who betrays no leaning toward the Bible, in his book on "Man and his Migrations," based especially on linguistic considerations, traces back all the races of men to one origin. He works geographically from the extremities to the centre, and is constrained, by following the affinities of languages, to follow the races of men back to the same region of the world where the old Bible puts man in the beginning, and even Haecel, than whom none is more bitterly opposed to the Bible and all Christian ideas, is constrained to take substantially the same position. But when he finds his investigations pointing exactly in the same direction as the Bible does, viz., to the neighborhood of the Euphrates Valley, what does he do? He will not carry his lines there. He traces them a little further south and runs them into the ocean, and then says, "We must suppose there was a continent here!" There is not one particle of evidence to show that there was ever a continent there; but he tells us we must suppose a continent there, now sunk into the ocean, on which continent, if you could get down to it, you would find the remains of the ape-like men, and the man-like apes, which form the missing link.

NEW LIFE FROM AN OLD TREE.

A REMARKABLE natural curiosity is described in a Southern journal. It states that near Columbus, Ga., there is a china-tree that grew up to an unusual height. Several years ago the top was taken off, leaving the main trunk of the tree about twenty feet high. On the top it has become somewhat decayed, but is making up for lost life by supporting a young forest. There are several different varieties of shrubs growing on its top, among others an evergreen three or four feet in height, a blackberry bush, which has put on leaves and flowers, and a water-oak which is about two inches in circumference. It is said that the spectacle is a very remarkable one, and arboriculturists take great interest in it. The old tree is a type of many lives. When God has withdrawn one of His children from active service, he is frequently able to continue his usefulness in another way, by supporting others, lifting them nearer to Heaven and sustaining them with his own stalwart spiritual growth (2 Tim. 2: 10).

THE MARRIAGE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

(See Illustration.)

WHEN the Queen ascended the throne of England there were many whose thoughts went back to the other time when in Elizabeth England had an unmarried queen, and every one saw that much of the success of her reign would depend on whether she married, and, if she did, the kind of man she would marry. In her earlier years there had already been many suitors for the hand of the Royal maiden. Her uncle, the King, favored the suit of Prince Alexander of the Netherlands; then Prince Adalbert of Prussia was named; Duke Ernest of Wurtemburg; and Prince George of Cambridge. It was certainly time that the destined Prince should appear; therefore the Duchess of Kent, in spite of obstacles raised by the King, invited her brother, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, to pay her a visit with his two sons in the spring of 1836, and in the blossoming May the two who were to be united met for the first time. The father and his sons stayed for a month, and as the visit closed it was clear that an affection had sprung up between the young couple. About three years later—on November 23, 1839, the Queen announced to her council her approaching marriage to her cousin Prince Albert.

On February 10, 1840, the marriage took place in the Chapel Royal, St. James's. The Queen's procession was in the words of a chronicler of the time "plain without pomp, and rich without a show." The Queen wore no jewels, save a necklace of brilliants. She and her bridesmaids were all clad alike, in dresses of rich white satin trimmed with orange flowers, and wore on their heads wreaths of the same blossoms: the only thing that distinguished the Royal bride was the Honiton lace which enveloped her dress, and the fact that she wore a veil, which, however, did not conceal her face, especially noticeable for its extreme paleness and traces of nervous effort. Next to the Queen walked the Mistress of the Robes, a lady of majestic beauty, while the procession of bridesmaids and ladies presented a fair array of loveliness.

All the ordinary formula of the liturgy was observed, no other title being given the bride and bridegroom beyond that of Victoria and Albert. When the Queen was asked, "Wilt thou obey him and serve him," etc., she replied in accents which, though soft and musical, were distinctly heard through the Chapel. The Duke of Sussex gave away the bride; and exactly at a quarter to one the guns in the Park announced the putting on of the ring. So commenced the happy married life which continued for twenty-one years.

SLAVE YOKES IN AFRICA.

THE invitation of Christ to all who "labor and are heavy-laden," "Take my yoke upon you . . . . for my yoke is easy and my burden is light" (Matt. 11: 29), has not the force of application with us that it has, by painful contrast, to travelers in Africa, who see yokes that are far from easy. In a recently published work entitled, "The Far Interior," Mr. Montagu Kerr describes what he saw in the Zambesi district when he was there, little over a year ago, and personally witnessed the cruelties inflicted on the poor creatures torn from their homes and driven across the country to be sold to the slave dealers. He says:

"Every village shows the familiar sight of the slave in the yoke. After purchase the poor things are taken to the headquarters of the East Coast traders, some of whom are constantly in this district. At the agents' the yoke is made secure, and it is not exaggeration to say that it is often allowed to remain upon a slave for nine months or a year, night and day, without being once taken off. Constant rubbing by the yoke upon the neck chafes the skin, and gradually ugly wounds begin to fester under the burning sunshine. Slaves, however, are to some extent looked after with a view to prevent serious bodily injury, the appearance of which would certainly depreciate their marketable value. Until all is ready for a start, the miserable slave sits waiting with all the compulsory and hopeless patience of bondage. Day after day he sees the sun rise and set. The dreary days pass by and are numbered into weeks and months, and still the victim is bound by the yoke about his neck.

"The yoke is a young tree fixed to their necks, the weight of the implement depending upon the disposition of the slave; for, should he be fractious, he will be tamed by the employment of the heaviest yoke. Those I saw were very heavy. This appliance of torture is made from the forked branches of a tree, about five or six feet long—some are much larger—and from three to four inches in diameter at the thickest part. Through each prong of the fork a hole is bored for the reception of an iron pin. This ready, a soft fibrous bark is wrapped round until the whole forms a thick collar of bark, making a sort of pad much rougher than a horse's collar. The forked branches vary in thickness, to suit docile or fractious subjects.

"Mrs. Hore, the brave wife of a missionary in Central Africa, traveling through a district far to the north of that visited by Mr. Kerr, was shocked, as he was, at passing through the grim relics of slave caravans. 'Every now and then I saw curious dark objects lying on or beside the path, and shortly afterwards became aware that they were the dead bodies of helpless laggards.'"

Queen Victoria, Her Daughter, Grand-Daughter, and Great-Grand-Daughrer.

HOW A FINE WAS COLLECTED.

A CURIOUS incident in a Texas Law Court is thus described in a local journal: "It was in Crosby County, and a prisoner was convicted of shooting a bull that did not belong to him, and was fined $75. 'Why, jedge,' said the doomed man, 'I heven't got no $75; I can't pay no sich fine.' His honor replied, 'The State of Texas puts me in this office to find out a way to make men pay their fines. You will cut cedar poles until you have cut enough to satisfy the majesty of the law.' 'But, jedge, what use has the State of Texas got for cedar poles.' Said the justice: 'The State of Texas hasn't got no use for cedar poles. It's this court who needs them cedar poles to build a fence. I'll take the poles and settle with the State of Texas for them.' And the prisoner forthwith commenced his work." He probably supposed that as he was too poor to pay a heavy fine, and his imprisonment would entail the expense of his board on the State, he might escape altogether. The discovery that another alternative existed, which solved both difficulties, must have been a disagreeable surprise to him. It may be that a similar surprise awaits the men of liberal ideas who now expect to escape eternal punishment on the ground that such punishment is inconsistent with the character of a loving God. Like the reasoning of the Texas culprit, their logic will fail as a defense in the day of trial (Thess. I : 8).

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 335.)

Ethel's Companion.

IN two households of Thorpe Aspen there was exceeding gratitude and joy. That wondrous outcome of civilization, the mail, which distributes so much of daily joy and sorrow over the wide area subject to its influence, had both at Aspen Towers and Aspen Garth brought brightness to the hearth so long shrouded in unlimited gloom. Ethel Spofforth's ready and triumphant pen had informed her father that Harold, the waif and wanderer, was clothed and in his right mind; was with her in London; and that he was about to return with her to his long neglected sire and his long forgotten home.

Sir Godwin, thanks to Clara Atheling's diligent and tender care, and in the new peace and strength that had come into his soul, was still cheerfully and hopefully bearing the absence of his darling Ethel: but this letter, with its pleasant news of Harold, almost rejuvenated him, so great was his delight. He found plenty of employment for Clara and for everybody else at the Towers in getting things arranged and making special preparations for a hearty welcome on the happy day when his son and daughter should again dwell in peace beneath his roof.

At Aspen Garth matters had not yet reached so definite a phase of expectation and preparation. Still the Widow Atheling's ageing features wore a new glow, and were oft irradiated by the pleasant smiles which used to be there so constantly, but which, since the absence of her youngest born, had only come, like angels' visits, few and far between.

It is a sad thing to drive the smile from a mother's face and the brightness from the home. Whatever Alfred might be during the remainder of his life, that time of anguish would be a burden on his conscience. He often thought of the old home and his mother's face as he had seen them during those stolen night visits, and contrasted the sorrowful look on the widow's features and the increased whiteness of her hair with both as he had known them in his early years, and reflected that his evil deeds had much to do with the sad change. The home was the same, however, and to that his thoughts constantly turned like the needle to the pole.

East or west, home is best, says the racy, rhyming old Saxon saw. "The reek of my ain hame is better than the fire of another's," tells us how the Scotchman values his ingle-nook; and the Spaniard cries with true feeling, "Home! my own home! Tiny though thou be, to me thou seem'st an abbey." Washington Irving somewhere remarks, "It was the policy of the good old couple to make their children feel that home was the happiest place on earth, and I value this delicious home feeling as one of the choicest gifts that a parent can bestow." That was what had made Alfred Atheling's home so dear to him now, and that is what parents everywhere, who are wise and good, will endeavor to make of theirs.

There is an epitaph in a certain churchyard which runs thus: "She Always Made Home Happy." No mother need wish a fairer record. That answer was beautiful and true which was given by the little child when she was asked, Where is your home? Where my mother is. In the old feudal days of castles, moats, barons and armed retainers, a belief in magic was part and parcel of the mediæval state of things, and the magician's aid was oft invoked to keep the inmates of the castle safe. Never necromantic spell or wizard's wand of old could work the wonders which are wrought by the magic charms of a wise good wife and mother; and never subtler, stronger bonds were meshed by kindly fairy than the web woven round a household by a mother's love.

That influence increased with Alfred day by day, and who can tell but some subtle power which science has not yet discovered, may have communicated to the widow's heart the knowledge that her darling boy was thinking of her and longing to be with her again. However that may have been, she certainly grew more cheerful and hopeful, as Edgar and Clara rejoiced to see.

The little household knew now that Alfred's character, so far as the eyes of men were concerned, was cleared of its most shameful stain;

they knew, moreover, that though his whereabouts was unknown, he was still in the flesh; that his life and conduct, as judged from the writings of "Ralph Ravensworth," were all that could be desired; and they had good reason for believing that by-and-bye, when Robert was able to travel northward, he would be able to crown their hope with full fruition by bringing the wanderer home again.

The sympathetic villagers of Thorpe Aspen, who had heard the good news, seemed to entertain a common feeling of pleasant anticipation.

Tim Crouch, who felt as though he had a hand in it, and who longed for the return of Jacob Benson, that he might tell him how faithful he had been to his trust, hammered away at his lapstone, sang a jovial song, and, much to the laborious Sallie's satisfaction, kept away alike from the "Chequers" and the "King's Head." The fact is, that Alfred Atheling's brief residence beneath his roof had been of great moral service to the cobbler; and he was determined that when Alfred did return, he should find him sober and acknowledge his friendship without a blush. He even went so for as to endeavor to impress the propriety of a change of conduct on Sam Vause; but that bibulous blacksmith was too far gone, I fear, so that he looked forward to the return of the two young men as affording a fair and reasonable excuse for a prolonged and intimate interview with John Barleycorn. Even Peter Prout, the loquacious miller, felt constrained, if not to hold his gossipping tongue, at any rate to give his gossip a more mild and genial flavor.

"Ah'll tell yo' what it is, Tim," said he to the cobbler one day, when Tim had come to the mill for a couple of stones of flour, "we'll gi' them young chaps a welcum sitch as Thorpe Aspin hezn't seen for a munth o' Sundays. It's nowt but right we sud, beeath for Sir Godwin an' Mrs. Atheling's sake. Ah meean te shut up t' mill an' hev a halida. Hey, though t' wind may be strang aneef te tonn all t' mill steeans an' work t' beean-crusher inte t' barga'n."

The days passed on, however, and the miller hadn't that excuse for closing the mill. There were no arrivals at Aspen Tower nor at Aspen Garth. Beside this Simon Holmes did not return, and the miller inferred from the fact that his order for the "mill-wreet" had not been executed, that Simon had not been to Hull, after all. He wondered whether Simon had deceived him that morning when he told him that he was going to Hull. He might never have intended going to that town, thought the suspicious miller, or, perhaps he had overtaken Alfred Atheling, and the two had gone off together. That, however, was so unlike Simon, that even the miller, who was naturally disposed to take the most uncharitable view of any subject, was constrained to reject the idea, but he meant to "have it out" with Simon when he did return. If a man said he was going to a certain place, and he did not go there, had he told the truth or a falsehood? The miller was no casuist, but he thought he had a good case against Simon.

The truth of the matter was that, as we have seen, though the miller had not, Simon had been too busy to go to Hull, or to return to Aspendale. He was well content with the delay, though many men would have fretted at leaving their own business while they attended to that of some one else, which would never yield a profit. But this was not an uncommon thing for Simon to do. When an opportunity for going on his Master's business occurred, it would not be missed by Simon, though loss to himself might result from using it.

As to Robert Atheling, his mission was not yet fulfilled, though its success was now assured. His injuries, in any case, prevented his return, and, while under the same roof with Ruth Hartgold, he was not pining for Yorkshire. Ethel and her brother Harold were still in London. When they went to the hotel on their arrival from Spain with Señor Bonanza, it was necessary, on Ethel's account, that immediate rest should be had before proceeding to Thorpe Aspen. This she would fain have done, but her physical strength, never really robust since that strange illness out of which faith and prayer had brought her, was sadly shaken by the excitement of the last few weeks.

"We will wait here a few days, Harold, dear," she said to her brother, "I feel that I am not equal to so long a journey. I will rest quietly here for a while, and you can take the opportunity of calling on any old friends for whom you care."

"I had no friends, dear sister, when I was in London, so there cannot be any old friends now; and my acquaintances were such that, God helping me, I will never resume them nor seek their like again. In all this, however, I make one exception; I would give much and go far to find Alfred Atheling. I wonder where he is, or what has become of him?"

"I think he was your friend, Harold; at least you always seemed to like him from a boy, and I know he cared for you." "That he did, sister. More's the pity," he replied. "Alfred Atheling's ruin, if he is ruined, which Heaven forbid, lies at my door. May God forgive me! There is nothing upon earth I would not do; there is no place on earth to which I would not go; I think there is little that I would not suffer, if I might lay my hand upon his shoulder, ask his forgiveness, and try to lead him back again into the paths from which both of us unhappily wandered so long and so far." There was that in the tone of Harold's voice that displayed how deep were his feelings on this subject. Had she needed convincing as to the genuine character of Harold's reformation, it would have been sufficient to have heard him now; and his tone became still more tender as he added: "At present, however, my dear sister, as I owe you a debt such as I can never repay, my duty is by your side. Rest awhile, and then you shall go with me to gladden the dear old man's heart by saying, "Father, Harold's come home!"

But Ethel did not get any better. She was tired, always tired—tired when she went to bed at night, tired when she arose in the morning, tired and listless, feeble and faint, at noonday. One morning, after a restless and unrefreshing night, Ethel joined her brother at the breakfast table, with cheeks so pale, lips so white, rings so dark round her eyes, and she entered the room with a step so slow and feeble, that Harold started from his chair at the sight of her, and helped her to her place.

In that moment the scales had fallen from his eyes. The truth had dawned upon him at last that his sister's "weariness after travel" would not pass away with rest, unless it was the repose of the quiet grave. "Don't be alarmed, Harold, dear," she said, with a reassuring smile, "I was afraid you would notice something wrong this morning; for, to tell you the truth, I am far from well. I shall be better, no doubt, after I have had a cup of tea."

The breakfast passed almost in silence. Ethel was doing her best to seem to eat in her brother's presence, but it was a pitiful effort at deception. Harold was silenced by the awful oppression of his new-born fears.

When the table was cleared and the two were left alone, Ethel said, "Harold, dear, you must not feel alarmed or sad by what I am going to tell you. All is right. All is in God's hands, and as it should be—all is well. I feel that my mission is almost over. I have been right down to the brink and border of the grave before, so that I know all about it; and I do not fear it any more than I fear putting my head upon my pillow. My Saviour, in answer to prayer, raised me from the bed of death, that I might have the joy of bringing you home, dear brother. So you see there is no need of any regrets on your part, for if it had not been for you I should never have left my sick-bed alive. I thought I should be better able to travel if I rested; but it is not so, and we had better not delay. Remember, we are going to cheer our father in his weakness and age, and I shall expect you, dear boy, to take your cue from me. If ever you see me unhappy, why, I will let you follow suit; but until then, for dear father's sake, remember that cheerfulness is to be the order of the day,"

So saying, Harold was dismissed with a light laugh and lifted finger, to make preparations for their departure to the north. Poor Harold was obedient—he could not trust himself to try his voice, lest he should break down altogether. But when he had found Jacob Benson, more than ever thankful now that he had not sent that faithful servant home before, he told him the sad story, to which honest Jacob could only answer, "Then the sun's going out o' heaven, an' t' summer's going out o' t' year. That's all I can say;" and stalwart Jacob made his way to some quiet corner to have it out with himself. Meanwhile Ethel, nerving herself, as usual, for the duty that lay next her, went about her preparations with a feeble frame made strong by a noble purpose and an indomitable faith.

In the evening Señor Bonanza called, bringing his new found daughter Inez with him to introduce her to his friends and fellow-travelers. The señor was painfully struck with the change which a few short days had made in the appearance of the amiable and gentle Ethel. With the courtesy and delicacy peculiar to his race, and still more peculiar to himself, he suppressed his feelings, said but little on that or kindred subjects, and instead went off into a stream of cheerful talk about his new-found darling, who certainly at that moment looked as well worth finding as any diamond picked out of Brazilian sands.

The rich dark eyes of the young Creole were lifted to the gentle orbs of Ethel, fairly lustrous with sympathy and liking. She had heard from her father the whole story of Ethel's sisterly search for her brother, and to see her now, in the joy of full success, evidently fading out of life, touched the maiden to the heart.

As soon as it was known that Ethel was to take her long journey into Yorkshire on the following day, Inez went over to her and kissed her, as she said, softly, "May I go with you? You are not fit to go so far without a friend of your own sex; and I do love you. Oh, if I might!"

"You certainly may, dear, and, what is more, I shall be very grateful, for I am sure you will help me to bear the journey more bravely. When I prayed this morning for strength to travel, it was in my mind to ask for such a friend; but I did not dare to seem to dictate to my Heavenly Father. O, dear Inez! do you see how much better He is than all our fears, and does more abundantly for us than we can ask or think; for certainly I never hoped for such a companion as you will be. Besides, it will do my father good to hear Señor Bonanza talk of Harold and his kindness to him in the brigand's cave."

"What are you two young ladies discussing there so earnestly and pleasantly?" said the señor, with a smile. "Or is it a secret that cannot be told?" "No, papa, it is a secret that can be told now. You told me you would do anything I ask you, and I have found out now what I want."

"What is thy request, and I will give it, to the half of my kingdom—or the whole of it, for that matter, little sweetheart?"

"I want to go with Miss Spofforth to Yorkshire," said Inez, "because she ought not to travel without a lady friend, and I want you to go with me."

"And we want you both," said Ethel, with a little ripple of laughter—"Don't we, Harold?"

Harold heartily joined in the request, and the matter was settled to everybody's content. So the visitors left immediately, and repaired to Sharon Lodge to make preparations for the journey, having promised to be at the hotel the next day, in time for Inez to join her friend at the outset of the journey.

(To be Continued.)

THE INFANT JESUS.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for July 3, Matt. 2: 1–12. Golden Text, Matt. 1: 21.

The Message of the Evangelists—Each with a Distinct Line—Matthew's View—Jesus as King A King Born—The Inquiries of the Magi—Their Search for the King—Herod's Consternation—His Inquiry of the Priests—The Predicted Birthplace The Injunction to the Magi—Their Leading—Their Significant Offerings—The Real Kingship of Jesus—Cases in which it is not Acknowledged.

THE four evangelists who wrote the life of Jesus upon earth, had a great task before them. Except the Holy Ghost had taken them in hand and used them as His pen it would never have been accomplished. The apostle John says that if all the things were written which Jesus did, he supposes "the world itself could not contain the books that should be written." (John xxi. 25). The Spirit of God so ordered it that each of the evangelists should take a certain line. S. Matthew represents Jesus as the King.

He speaks continually of the kingdom of heaven, and in the parables which he records we hear again and again of "a certain King." He begins his Gospel with the genealogy of Jesus, not reckoning it from Adam, as S. Luke does, but from David the king, and Abraham, the priest and king, in his own person of the family of the faithful. Having related the circumstances of the birth of Jesus, and the fulfilment of Isa. 7: 14. He goes on to tell how Jesus, even at his birth, was recognized as king.

Jesus was born in Bethlehem, which means: "the house of bread." It was fitting that He who was "the Bread of Life," "the living Bread which came down from heaven," should be born there. He was born in the most lowly circumstances, in one of the tavern stables which belonged to the inn, or inclosure, where the guests who had assembled for the census then being made, had pitched their tents and encamped for the time. There was no room for His mother and Joseph in this inclosure, and so His birth took place just where the camels and asses were tethered. Yet God instructed Magi, who came from the East, and enquired for Him as a King, spite of all the surroundings. They asked of one and another, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?"

Born King!

This is an unusual thing, yet it was true of Jesus. He was born into the world as its King. If He is born in our hearts, He is equally born there to reign. No doubt the commotion was very great among the crowd at the idea that there should be an unknown king among them. The King of the Jews was their promised Messiah. Some few, old Simeon and Anna, and some others with them, looked for redemption in Jerusalem, but the greater number were content with things as they were, and, no doubt, they looked upon the wise men as fanatical, and misled in thinking that they had found traces of the Messiah. Men in general are willing enough to hear of God at a distance, they have no objection to hear of what he did many years ago, or to hear and take part in discussions of doctrine concerning Him. But to be brought face to face with God in a way which entails personal responsibility, which claims that they shall come in contact with, receive Him and obey Him—this is unpalatable to most men. If the King of the Jews was indeed born among them, it was their bounden duty to search Him out, to yield Him homage, and to give in their adherence to Him. This the Magi were ready to do, but the world of that day shrunk from it. "When Herod had heard these things,

He was Troubled,

And all Jerusalem with him." Troubled that God's chosen Messiah was come! Troubled that the Son of God was come unto His own! Yes, even so. The presence of sin does not inconvenience the world; they can get on very well with drunkenness, swearing, sabbath-breaking, lying, gossip, etc. Worldly people will smile at these things, and sometimes "make a mock at sin." But when God comes to the front, and there is some undoubted answer to prayer, some making bare of His arm in the conversion of one of the most depraved and wicked, then the world begins to be troubled. Conscience is aroused, and it is very inconvenient to have this quiet sleeper, who knows so many secrets, waken up and begin to tell them. The Messiah in prospect was all very well, not really amongst them. No? They would see if it would not be proved untrue. If it were true, surely the priesthood would know all about it; therefore, instead of examining the witnesses, those wise men who had seen his star in the East and were come to worship, Herod called together the chief priests and scribes of the people and "demanded of them where Christ should be born."

Was it not somewhat strange, that when the enquiries of the wise men reached Jerusalem, and even Herod's court, the chief priests and scribes did not bestir themselves to enquire if the promised Messiah were really present among men? What were these leaders of the people about? Yet this is what we find, even in our own day. It is the ministers and religious leaders, who are more averse than any others to examine for themselves any experimental truth of God, which may have lapsed through the unbelief and unfaithfulness of the church. But the chief priests and scribes were acquainted with the letter of the word, and they gave answer: "In Bethlehem of Judea; for thus it is written by the prophet: And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Judea, art not the least among the princes of Judah; for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule My people Israel." Scripture confirmed the testimony of the wise men. Herod must do something; he must take up his position for or against the infant King of the Jews. He chose the latter, and, in so doing, influenced all Jerusalem.

Is it not marvelous, that when their own witness from the Word confirmed the wise men's testimony, the chief priests even then did not seek Jesus? Their indifference must have encouraged Herod, his hostility must have influenced them, and thus in Jerusalem were Church and State Allied Against Jesus.

It must have been a marvel to the wise men, set as they were on finding Jesus, in order to yield themselves to Him, that these very keepers of the Scriptures who testified to Him should have no concern about him! They found themselves alone on a path little trodden; and so it is to all who will follow on to know the Lord; there are not many, even of Christ's disciples, who are willing to follow "withersoever He goeth."

When Herod had obtained the information he needed from the priests, and had also come under the influence of the position of unconcern which they took up, he sent for the wise men, and set up for a would-be enquirer, asking them diligently what time the star appeared. They had no object to gain by concealing anything, and, no doubt, they told him freely all which God had revealed to them. Perhaps they were cheered and their hopes greatly raised by the apparent interest of the royal enquirer; perhaps the Spirit of God shewed them the duplicity of his conduct; we know not. His words were fair enough. He said: "Go, search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found Him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also." But all the time, murder was in his heart.

When the wise men had come out from their interview with the king, they got

On Divine Ground Again.

While they were occupied with kings and priests, they had no guidance direct from God, but no sooner did they get away, than "the star which they saw in the East went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was." In our life with God he is jealous over us, desiring always to have the first place. Since He has permitted that we shall know Him, and hold personal intercourse with Him, He would not have any person or thing come between Him and us. He may and does use and help religious teachers, but, after all, every step of our way has to be trodden with him alone, the venture has to be upon him, the confidence in him.

Once within sight of the star, the wise men were at home again. We read nothing of their joy at Herod's court, or among the troubled population in Jerusalem. The "glad tidings of great joy" had found a welcome in their hearts, and "when they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy." When they arrived, Mary and the infant Jesus were no longer in the stable, they had been moved into the house. But there was nothing to be seen which betokened the birth of royalty, nothing to impress the senses. It was the revelation of God to their souls, and the confirmation of it from His written Word which made them recognize in that lowly babe the Saviour of the world, the King of the Jews. It was not what they felt nor what they saw which made them worship, it was their belief in what God had said. They would by faith see in that baby the Son of God, and their rightful and lawful King, and they treated Him accordingly. "When they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh"—gold to signify His Kingship, "the Kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents, the Kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts." (Ps. 72: 10.) Incense in token that He was God; and myrrh in token that he should die. These were faith offerings; they told of hearts which "endured as seeing Him who is invisible," they saw in the light of God. Feeble as was the Infant whom they saw with their eyes, their faith saw Him "higher than the Kings of the earth," and, no doubt, at that very time, they knew Him as Jesus who should "save his people from their sins."

Is Jesus a King to us? Is He the Ruler in our hearts and thoughts? Is He King over our words and actions? There are in our day a large number of so-called conversions—people get a kind of persuasion that their sins are forgiven, they have a certain measure of gratitude to God for His mercy, they like religious meetings and accept all in religion which can minister to their happiness, but they

Have Never Yielded Themselves

Up to Jesus for Him to reign over them, and have His way with them. They lived for themselves in a worldly way before, now they are living for themselves in a religious way. Anything which touched self before their conversion made them angry and indignant, anything which touches self now makes them just as angry and just as indignant. They justified themselves before, they justify themselves still. They complained of inconveniences before, they complain of inconveniences still. They had a high opinion of themselves before, they have so still. They disposed of their time and money and strength as pleased themselves before, they do the same still, only that their tastes are changed. Old things have not yet passed away, and all things are not yet become new. These are believers who do not know Jesus as their King, they rule over themselves, or they let circumstances or people rule them, but the direct rule of Jesus they do not yet know, and yet He is willing to take the government upon His shoulder, and then there is peace which knows no end. Self-rule is misrule, and the worst of anarchy, but to know, and to yield to the will of God is the most perfect freedom and the deepest joy. It makes life quite another thing when we recognize Jesus as King. Then, whatever happens, we know He permits it, and so it must be right. He could not permit what was bad for us, and thus every mourner is stilled, every fear hushed. "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts." (Col. 3: 15). Amen.

Volume IX. of the Christian Herald, Containing the numbers for 1886, with complete index, bound in cloth, may be had from this office; price, $2.50, including postage. A few volumes of 1883, 1884 and 1885 are also for sale. We have none prior to 1883.

ASKING.

"If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children: how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?"—ST LUKE xi., 13.

O Heavenly Father, Thou hast told
Of a gift more precious than pearls and gold;
A gift that is free to every one,
Through Jesus Christ, thy only Son,
For His sake, give it to me.

O give it to me, for Jesus said
That a father giveth his children bread,
And how much more Thou wilt surely give
The gift by which the dead shall live?
For Christ's sake, give it to me.

I cannot see, and I want the sight;
I am in the dark, and I want the light;
I want to pray, and I don't know how;
O give me Thy Holy Spirit now!
For Christ's sake, give it to me.

Thou hast said it, I must believe
It is only "ask" and I shall receive:
If Thou said it, it must be true,
And there's nothing else for me to do!
For Christ's sake, give it to me.

So I come and ask, because my need
Is very great and real indeed.
On the strength of Thy Word I come and say
Oh, let Thy Word come true to-day!
For Christ's sake, give it to me!

—Frances Ridley Havergal.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

MEXICO.

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are most pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of

J. P. HEATH,
43 Bible House, New York.

CLUB ORDERS

We have made a specialty since 1877 of giving a Premium to those who get up clubs or purchase Tea and Coffee in large quantities, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, &c. Teas of all kinds from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS every day. Silver-Plated Castors as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. White Tea Sets with $10 orders. Decorated Tea Sets with $13. Gold-Band or Moss Rose Sets of 44 pieces, or Dinner Sets of 112 pieces with $20 orders, and a Host of other premiums. Send us postal and mention THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, and we will send you Illustrated Price and Premium List.

GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
793 Washington St., Boston Mass.

UNIVERSITY ORGANS.—They Lead the World. $35 to $500. Sold Direct to Families. No Middlemen. Solid Walnut 5 Octaves-Double Couplers. Guaranteed for Six Years and sent on TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. ESTABLISHED 1859. $35 with Stool and Book, for MARCHAL & SMITH, 235 East 21st Street, New York.

CRYING BABIES

are made GOOD NATURED, HEALTHY, HEARTY,
by the use of

Lactated Food

Babies do not cry if they are satisfied, and they cannot be satisfied if they are not properly nourished by their food, or if it produces irritation of stomach or bowels.

Very many mothers cannot properly nourish their children, and the milk of many mothers produces bad effects in the child because of constitutional disease or weakness.

For all such cases there is a remedy in

LACTATED FOOD.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be retained when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach, hence it is of great value to all invalids, in either chronic or acute cases.

150 MEALS for an infant for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.
A valuable pamphlet sent on application.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1887-BABIES-1887

To the mother of any baby born this year we will send on application a Cabinet Photo, of the "Sweetest, fattest, healthiest baby in the country." It is a beautiful picture, and will do any mother's heart good. It shows the good effects of using Lactated Food as a substitute for mothers milk. Much valuable information for the mother given. Give date of birth.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

AMERICAN MAGAZINE

NOW READY.

PARTIAL CONTENTS FOR JULY:

METLAKAHTLA. Illustrated. Z. L. White.
OLIVIA DELAPLAINE. Illustrated. Edgar Fawcett.
COLORED SCHOOLS IN THE SOUTH-WEST. Illustrated. Rev. S. W. Culver.
LITERARY LIFE IN PHILADELPHIA. Illustrated. Moses P. Handy.
THE LADY OF THE WHITE HOUSE. (Poem). Edna Dean Proctor.
WOMEN AS FRUIT RAISERS AND FLORISTS. George R. Knapp.
MRS. HALDY'S ENCOUNTER WITH A GHOST. Sarah Marshall Hayden.
OUR DIPLOMATS AT COURT. Frank G. Carpenter
THE DOMINANT. Arthur Dudley Vinton.
THE HOME OF A POET. Claiborne Addison Young.
SOUTHERN HOUSEKEEPING. Zitella Cocke.
And many others.
Ask any Newsdealer for it.

R. T. BUSH & SON,
Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

NEW STORY

BY THE REV.

E. P. ROE.

50 CENTS.

Over one million copies of Rev. E. P. Roe's books have been sold. He is the most popular author in the United States. His last and best work is a great war and earthquake story entitled, "The Earth Trembled." It will be begun in THE BOSTON WEEKLY GLOBE June 22. By sending 50 cents to THE WEEKLY GLOBE, Boston, Mass., U. S. A., you will get that paper six months, and this great war story will be printed in it. Subscribe now.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE

A new book containing plans and specifications for 25 houses, all sizes, from 2 rooms up. Sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents, by J. S. OGILVIE & CO., 31 Rose Street, New York.

SILKS AND VELVETS.

During the interim between now and their July stock-taking JAMES M'CREERY & CO. will dispose of their Spring Importations of Summer Silks, Foulards, Fancy Surahs, Tussahs and several large Lots of Plain and Fancy Colored Silks and Velvets, at a very marked Reduction in Price.

A personal examination, or by sample, is invited.

BROADWAY, AND ELEVENTH ST.,
New York.

Bridal Trousseaux.

Ladies who are unable to examine our stock of these goods personally, would find it to their advantage to correspond with us. The most complete information furnished, and careful attention given to special orders.

Lord & Taylor,
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y.

9 Million worn during the past six years.

This marvelous success is due—

1st.—To the superiority of Coraline over all other materials, as a stiffener for Corsets.

2d.—To the superior quality, shape and workmanship of our Corsets, combined with their low prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kinds of cord. None are genuine unless

"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"

is printed on inside of steel cover.

FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.

WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York City.

FOR GAS.

BAILEY'S REFLECTORS!

COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.
BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

FOR OIL.

Palmer's Book of Gems.

FOR THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

111 Songs, with music, many of them new. The old favorites are gems of a high order, select'd by H. R. PALMER, Mus. Doc., and 200 S. S. Superintendents.
Price $10 per 100 Copies. Single Copies by Mail, 25c.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York & Chicago.

SILK LACE & JERSEY MI

"THE RETROGRADE" TRADE MARK ELASTIC LOCK STITCH WARRANTED NOT TO RIP.

Buy Only those Labelled as here

PATENTED FULL FASHIONED SEAMS

PERFECT FINISH!
PERFECT STYLE
PERFE

For Sale by all Leading

MOTH-WA

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller
It is a perfect protection of Furs and Fabrics, and is more economical to u camphor.
In one-pound boxes containing a doze
Agents wanted in every city, town and co
For sale by all druggists.
WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LAN

BEAUTIF WOME

In the United States, C and England wea

"GOOD SEN

CORSET WA
THOUSANDS NOW I
BEST FOR HEA
Economy and Be Buttons at front i of Clasps.
Be sure your stamped "Good S
SOLD BY LEADING RETA everywhere. Send for FERRIS BROS., Manu
341 Broadway, NEW Y

I START ME

and WOMEN of small means in Home Phot
It pays big with other business in stores or home, or from house to house. The novel surpri with complete apparatus, appearing at the door rea anything. Persons, Groups, Buildings, or Anima profitable orders in nine out of ten homes. A good, paying business, suitable for either sex; no exp quired. Send for a copy of the "New Process R
(free). Sample Photos. 10 cents. FRANKLIN
M'f'r & Dealer in Photo. Apparatus, 483,485 Can

FOR

Sick Heada
Biliousnes
Constipa

The sore Dyspepsia people feel,
However light may be their meal,
Should ne'er be suffered to repose
And breed a train of graver woes.
When perfect health they may secure
Through TARRANT'S SELTZER safe

"Demonology or Spiritual

Ancient and Modern."—"An effective weapo sword of fire."—"Only unanswerable worl subject."—Startling disclosures.—History data—Scores saved already. Whole com rescued. Every family, preacher and christia needs one. 310 pp. 12mo, cloth. Price redu
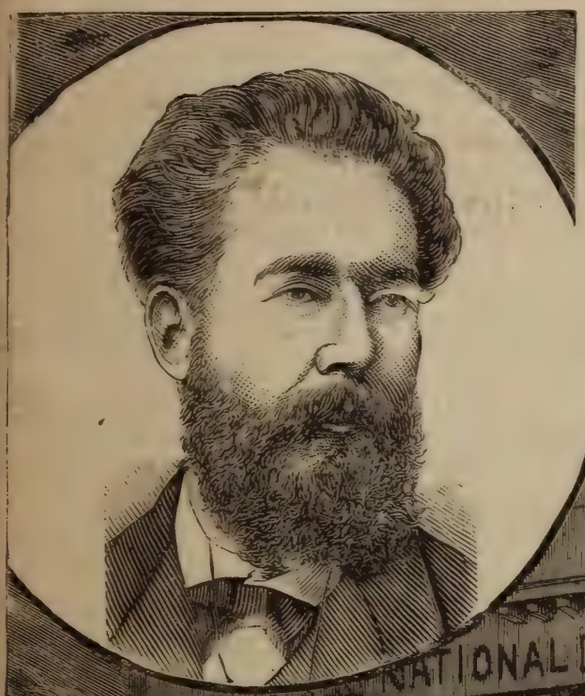
Sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.
J. S. JEWETT, 77 Bible House, Ne

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887, in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 26. Office, 63 Bible House N. Y. THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.



CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAIT OF M. MAURICE ROUVIER AND PICTURE OF THE BURNING OF THE OPERA COMIQUE IN PARIS.

HUNTING FOR SOULS. Dr. Talmage's Sermon last Sunday Morning.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

THE REMOVAL OF THE VAIL. By Rev. A. C. Tris.

A Missionary's First Experience.—Dr. Cullis's Record of Faith—An Inebriate Mother Reformed—A Child's All-night Journey—Deadly Leaves—A Tell Tale Scar.

PICTURE OF A PRIEST BLESSING CATTLE IN BULGARIA.

THE DEATH OF MOSES. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's New Sermon.

CURRENT EVENTS: The New Mexican Treaty—The Captured Flags Again—The Jubilee Celebrations—The German Crown Prince—The Boston Iconoclasts—An Autograph on a Brick—A Honeymoon in Prison.

Gems from New Books: The Story of Metlakahtla.

AN ATHEIST ON HIS KNEES. (With Illustration.)

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. A Serial Story. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT. By Mrs. M. Baxter.

M. MAURICE ROUVIER, the New Premier of France—The Fatal Fire at the Opera Comique, Paris.

MAURICE ROUVIER.

The New French Premier.

THE appointment of M. Rouvier to succeed M. Goblet as Premier of France, has no significance except the proof it furnishes of the dearth of first-class statesmen in the country. President Grèvy is said to have been extremely reluctant to intrust M. Rouvier with the duty of forming a cabinet, as he had never given any indications of possessing the qualities expected in a man appointed to so responsible a position. The office, however, was refused by men of greater prominence, and ultimately M. Rouvier seemed the only available man. The difficulty arose from the fact that the extreme Republicans, the Radicals and Anarchists, made large gains at the last election, and have a sufficient number of representatives in the Legislature to embarrass any Cabinet, though not sufficient to force the appointment of a Radical Cabinet.

Arising out of this combination is the difficulty of Gen. Boulanger's personality. He is intensely popular with the people and has a large following in the Legislature, but the moderate Republicans see in his popularity a menace to the Republic. They have not forgotten how the first Napoleon climbed into the throne, and they perceive that Gen. Boulanger permanently in office might repeat the same tactics, and by a coup d'état make himself military dictator of France. M. Grèvy was therefore resolute in making it a condition, before offering the premiership to any man, that he should not give Gen. Boulanger a place in the Cabinet. As the exclusion of Gen. Boulanger would arouse the opposition of the Radicals, who might at any moment be reinforced by the Monarchists, it was clear that the Cabinet would exist only on sufferance, and no statesman with a character to lose would accept so humiliating a position.

Probably M. Rouvier is as acceptable to the Radicals as any man of his party who could have been chosen, and probably that fact has encouraged him to hope that some of M. Clemenceau's followers will support him. He has some claims upon their consideration, having more than once pleaded on their behalf. During the Second Empire he made himself conspicuous as the author of virulent attacks on Napoleon III., printed by opposition journals and written by him when he was a young lawyer living in Marseilles, probably with more leisure than practice. After Sedan, in September, 1870, he was made General Secretary of the Prefecture of the Bouches-du-Rhone. In 1871 he was elected a member of the National Assembly, where he protested against the execution of the condemned communists. During the period of judicial reforms in Egypt, he was a conspicuous defender of French interests in that country. In 1876 he was elected Secretary of the Chamber of Deputies. M. Rouvier is a tall, thin man, forty-five years of age, with a pronounced stoop. His attempt to govern France by a combination of moderate Republicans with a section of the Radicals will be watched with interest, though not with much confidence.

THE FATAL BURNING OF A FRENCH THEATRE ON MAY 25.

The Outbreak—The Panic Which Ensued—Graphic Narratives by a Correspondent and Eye Witnesses—Elegant Victims—Stories of Providential Rescue—The History of the Theatre.

THE picture on the preceding page depicts another of those appalling catastrophes with which on frequent occasions the world is horrified. It is the burning of the famous theatre, known as the Opera Comique, in Paris, France, on May 25, which caused the death of at least one hundred, and some reports say of two hundred, persons. Though the frequency of fires in theatres is not to be regarded as a judgment of God upon such places, but is the natural result of the efforts made by managers to supply the popular demand for gorgeous spectacles in which brilliant lights and inflammable materials have to be brought into close proximity, yet the horror of death in such a catastrophe is not physical only. The presence of a person at the theatre implies a love of worldly amusement, and a recklessness of danger to the soul's interests incompatible with a life of consecration to the Saviour. He who lives in close communion with God, who earnestly seeks the holiness without which no man can see the Lord, will not be found in a place notorious for temptations which have proved fatal to thousands; and where frivolity, if nothing worse, is induced. Appalling as this and former catastrophes in theatres have been, they form but a small part of the reasons why the advice should be given to every young man and woman which was given to St. Paul at Ephesus, when his friends "besought him not to adventure himself into the theatre" (Acts 19: 31).

The Details of the Catastrophe are in many respects almost as heartrending as those of the destruction of the Ring Theatre at Vienna on December 8, 1881; and although the list of fatal casualties is not so large as the death-roll of the Vienna tragedy, the scene described by Paris correspondents of the daily papers has rarely been surpassed in its terrible suggestiveness. A Paris journalist who was quickly on the scene, says that he saw the Place Boïeldieu and the Rue Favart blocked by surging crowds, alternately swayed by terror and curiosity; the frightened horses of the fire-engines, goaded forward by the bayonets of the Republican Guards; panic among the guests at the adjacent Café Anglais; groups of shrieking figurantes and supernumeraries, who had escaped from the burning building in their stage dresses, half burned off their backs, men and women, the relatives of persons who had been among the audience at the theatre, rushing about in quest of their kindred, and shouting and dancing like maniacs; and, in the midst of all, the great edifice converted into one huge furnace, sending up sheets of flame to the sky, belching tongues of fire from the upper windows, hurling volumes of red-hot cinders on to the roofs of the neigboring houses, and lighting up them and a vast area of the heavens with a dull red glare—all these, he says, and one can easily believe it, constituted a spectacle absolutely Appalling in its Horror.

The first sign of the disaster was noticed about a quarter to nine, shortly after the curtain had risen on Ambroise Thomas's opera of "Mignon," when fire was seen issuing from the stage. A surviver of the audience, writing from Paris the next day, says that M. Taskin, who was playing Lothario when the conflagration began, came forward to the footlights with an official of the theatre, and begged the public to leave the theatre calmly and all would be well. This advice was being followed to some extent, when the stage was suddenly enveloped in flame, and dense volumes of smoke filled the whole house. Then arose the terrible panic; the people rushed madly to the doors, trampling on the weak, and struggling with the strong. The theatre resounded with the piercing shrieks and supplications of women, children and men. The staircases were overcrowded with the panic-stricken, some of whom let themselves down over the banisters, and sustained serious injuries; others rushed to the windows and jumped out, while the chorus singers and supernumeraries, most of them attired in their theatrical costumes, clambered to the roof of the house, and were rescued after half an hour's perilous proximity to the surging flames. Some of these, however, had remained in the building and were lost.

A New York Family had a marvelous escape, which is described in the New York Herald. Mr. W. J. Ayres was in the theatre on the fatal night with his wife and daughter, and a Mr. Rutter, a friend of the family. Mr. Ayres rose directly he saw the fire in the flies, took his wife, and confiding his daughter to the care of Mr. Rutter, passed quickly into the corridor. They rushed to a passage leading to a side door. The passage was nearly empty, but a rush of desperate men began so quickly that the crowd pressed between the two couples and separated them. Happily, however, Mr. Ayres retained firm hold of his wife, as did Mr. Rutter of Miss Ayres. It was well that they did so, for the politeness and gallantry for which Frenchmen are famous were not in use that night. The one thought seemed to be to escape at any cost, and delicate women and girls were hurled to the ground, and trampled upon without compunction. A burly, well-dressed Frenchman seized Miss Ayres from behind, rudely twisted her aside, and rushed on ahead. Mr. Rutter had the utmost difficulty in saving the staggering girl from falling under the feet of the surging crowd. Mr. Ayres had a similar difficulty with his wife, but eventually they were borne along by the human tide, and the four, to their inexpressible joy, met together in the street in safety.

A correspondent says: "The firemen arrived rather late on the scene, and the men who were posted in the theatre worked wonders. It was evident, however, that their efforts were unavailing against the gigantic volume of flame, which increased in fury every moment. The police helped to the best of their ability, and I saw several of them led out, like the firemen, bleeding from injuries received. There was some after the crowds of people came rushing from all parts to see the terrific conflagration. The policemen on duty were insufficient in numbers to keep back the curious from getting near the theatre, and it was not until the troops arrived and a military cordon formed all round the block of buildings where the fire raged, that order could be restored. Before the soldiers arrived I witnessed some heartrending scenes. Men continued to rush towards the theatre inquiring for absent friends. One man was like a maniac. He raved, tore his hair, and threatened everybody who stopped him with his stick. He wanted, he said, to go after his brother.

Disorder on the Boulevards

An Eye-Witness

writes: "It was not until the fire had spent most of its energy, that the soldiers arrived for the purpose of forming a cordon. The Pompiers did their best, but unfortunately they are soldiers rather than firemen, and it was remarked even by Frenchmen that an efficient fire brigade would have prevented much of the damage. It must however be admitted in justice to the Pompiers that they were seriously hampered in their movements at the back of the Opera Comique, that is to say, over the stage, where the flames were fiercest. Engines continued to arrive from different stations until the boulevard was blocked, and men in opera hats and dress clothes helped the Pompiers to work their pumps or hoist their ladders. Soon after the first alarm a small body of the force arrived on the scene, and one of their number, in climbing to a window on an upper floor, where a group of

Shrieking Women Imprisoned

could be seen and heard, slipped, and fell upon a glass roof. The man was badly bruised and cut, but he was up in a moment, and speedily reached the window, whence, amid the loud applause of the crowd below, he helped the women one by one down the ladders.

Several Hairbreadth Escapes occurred. Mdlle. Merguillier, who was playing Philine in "Mignon" when the fire broke out, was warned of the danger by M. Soulacroix. She did not believe him at first, but when she saw the flames scorching the heads and shoulders of the supernumeraries and kindling the scenery, she ran to the dressing-room of the artistes, but no one was there. Thence she made her way to a private door, which she found closed. After knocking and kicking at it for a few moments it was opened by some one, and to her relief she found herself in the street, and walked home in her stage dress. M. Taskin, who escaped in a similar manner, also went home and changed his clothes, and returned to assist M. Carvalho, the manager, in rescuing some of his property. M. Fournez, another actor, had a hard task to save some of his friends, and states that in getting them to a place of egress he had to step over a heap of bodies.

The Search for the Dead among the ruins was a melancholy task. The Paris correspondent of the New York Herald, who was allowed to assist, says: "Nearly all the bodies were those of well-dressed persons. Almost all still had on their gloves. Many of the bodies were twisted into strange, weird shapes. Some seemed broiled, as if on a gridiron. Under the débris of a narrow staircase I saw a group of seven corpses, whose charred and blackened members were intertwined in Laocoön coils.

A Ghastly Sight.

One of these was that of a woman, whose face was literally roasted like an overdone piece of beef. In her ears glistened a pair of large solitaire diamond earrings. Her right arm was fractured; her left arm was wound about a smaller corpse—apparently that of a girl twelve years old—probably her daughter. Other corpses in this group were so black and so mangled that it was almost impossible to say whether they were the remains of human beings or of animals. A few yards distant were the remains of a young ballet girl.

Of one of the victims, a young and beautiful married lady, a French woman, no trace was found except one hand almost wholly uninjured. The third finger was still encircled by a curious antique ring, set with an engraved emerald, which had been a recent gift to her from her husband, and by which this poor fragment was identified. One old gentleman, whose wife and daughter both perished in the flames, no trace being discoverable, has become a raving maniac.

Two Wagon Loads of Limbs, separated and charred, have been taken out, and on June 1 were taken to the morgue. The number of victims, so far as is ascertained, is about 150. Of these, 86 bodies have been recovered, the others having been reduced to ashes as thoroughly as though they had been cremated. It is estimated that at least fifty more must be added to the number of those who are known to have perished, for many of the persons present were strangers, stopping at hotels or boarding-houses, and whose disappearance would not be reported to the police for some time.

The Opera Comique occupied one solid block of buildings, which stands isolated between the Rue Favart and the street running by the side of the well-known Café Anglais. The front of the Opera was on the Place named after it, and at its back are stores and offices which line the Boulevard. The interior of the theatre was magnificently decorated in 1781, from the plans of the architect, Heurtin, and two years later the Comedie Italienne was installed there. On January 15, 1838, the famous theatre was burnt down in the night. The building was re-erected in 1839, and has been the favorite resort of Parisean theatre-goers during the forty-eight years which have elapsed since that time.

A Remarkable Prediction was uttered in the French Legislature only two weeks before the catastrophe. Deputy Steenackers formally called the attention of the House to the dangerous condition of this theatre. He said that the portion of the theatre given to the stage necessities, the administration, the costumes, and the dressmaking, etc., was seven stories high and divided into small rooms, to many of which the only approach was by means of a narrow ladder and almost perpendicular stairs, and into these tiny chambers hundreds of people were crowded nightly. Moreover, everything was constructed of old wood. A shout of derisive laughter was evoked from his fellow-members when he added that the Opera Comique was sure to burn, because every theatre did in just so many years. The record, however, shows that the deputy was right. During the past ten years no less than thirty-seven theatres have been burned in the United States, and twenty-eight in Europe. Some of these were attended—notably the Brooklyn Theatre, December 5, 1876—with a horrible loss of life. The worst was the Ring Theatre, in Vienna, on December 8, 1881, when more than eight hundred lives were lost.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

A Lady's Fatal Delay.—Mr. Smart, Speaking at a gospel meeting, said: "A lady, being engaged in litigation, was advised by her friends to consult a certain lawyer, and engage him to defend her cause. She delayed for one reason and another until the last moment. At length going to him, she began to explain her case, but she was stopped by his saying, 'You are too late; I cannot now be your advocate, for I have been appointed to be your judge.' Let sinners who are behaving as that lady was, beware. Just now, if they come to Christ, they will find in Him a Saviour, an Advocate. Let none delay, but put away those frivolous pretexts for procrastination, and come to Christ at once, lest delay be followed by a summons to meet Him, not as the Saviour and Advocate, but as the righteous Judge."

A Word Spoken in Time.—The Rev. Mr. Edgar says: "When engaged in the Lord's work we have our part to do, and He His. When we have done our part, let us retire and leave the result in His hand. Not long ago I was speaking to a young lady in London about her soul, and she interrupted me with the remark, 'You will excuse me, but I object to any one speaking to me upon that subject.' I apologized, saying I was unaware of the fact, and soon afterwards took my departure. Three days later this same young lady became exceedingly anxious about her soul, and sent for me to speak to her about that once obnoxious subject. She accepted salvation through faith in Christ, and now is most ready in leading others to the cross. How true is the Divine promise—'Cast thy bread upon the waters, and thou shalt find it after many days.'"

A Marriage Dowry Given Away.—"Some time ago, a young girl, who had been educated at one of our mission schools in Ceylon, returned to her own home to live there. She was a Christian, and attended all the religious meetings in her neighborhood. The good people of the district were greatly disturbed because they had no church, and had to meet for worship in all sorts of out-of-the-way places. This girl thought, 'These people need a site on which to build a church, and I have a small piece of land; I'll give it to the Lord.' This was her whole possession, but she resolved to give it. On communicating her intentions to a friend, she was told, as she herself knew, that if she gave away all that she had she would never get married, for no one in that country will have a wife without a dowry of some kind, and not to be married is looked upon as a calamity. Yet she did not turn back, but gave the ground to the Lord, and on that site was built, and still stands, the first native Christian church. As she had given her all to the Lord, He did not forget her. A young man, a native pastor, hearing of the girl and her noble sacrifice, asked her hand in marriage, and she became the honored wife of that Christian pastor.

An Aged Fisherman's Joy.—Mr. Robert Simpson, a Glasgow merchant, who is a well-known supporter of all Evangelistic and Gospel Temperance work, says: "At revival services held recently at one of the fishing stations on the Moray Firth, the following cases came under my notice. An aged fisherman, upwards of sixty-five years old, who has all his life-time been living in indifference and indecision regarding the things of eternity, became awakened concerning the state of his soul. Having the way of salvation through faith in Christ opened up to him as taught in the Word of God, he accepted Jesus as his Saviour, and found rest and peace in Him. About midnight, a day or two afterwards, the love of God had so powerfully been shed abroad in his heart that he could not remain in bed; being so overpowered by the thought that his guilty soul had been redeemed by the Blood of the Lamb, he was constrained to get down on his knees and thank and praise the Lord for such a blessing. At five o'clock in the morning he dressed and went down stairs, and called up one of his sons, who also was converted, that he might announce to him the joyful news. And now this aged man is finding his delightful occupation in going about among his converted children and unconverted friends, and telling them what great things the Lord has done for him.

Explaining a Minister's Letter.—A Worker observes: "About two years ago I was asked to attend a meeting held by a number of workingmen in an old log-cabin. They had received a letter from a dearly beloved minister, now in Australia, which was hard to understand, and as I was very intimate with him, they thought that I might be able to explain his letter. I went because I thought there might be an opportunity to preach the Gospel to them. After I had read and explained the letter to their satisfaction, I spoke to them of Christ and of His letter sent to them. At the close of the meeting, one old man did accept Christ, but there was another who, although very anxious about his soul, would not decide. He came to me afterwards, and spoke to me about his soul, but he never would take the needful step. A year afterwards he died, without Christ. Truly he was at the door, but refused the gracious invitation given to every one to enter and sup with his Lord."

A Drunkard's Purchase.—A Middle-aged man of considerable energy, who has been the slave for a long time of the intoxicating cup, was sitting in a saloon, considerably the worse for drink. He lifted up his eyes, and seeing a picture hanging on the wall, his curiosity led him to examine into the subject of it, and finding it was, 'Christ's Own Redeemed,' he called the liquor seller. Pointing to the picture, he asked, 'What is that?' 'Oh, it is just a picture to fill up and ornament the wall with,' was the reply. And the fisherman again pointing to the subject of it, said, 'When you know that you are ruining the bodies and souls of your fellow-men all the week round, what right have you to hang such a picture as that on your wall?' The sense of this reproof was felt by the saloon-keeper, although it did come from the lips of a drunkard. Calling in a member of his family, he said, 'Take down that picture at once, and put it away.' The customer seeing it being removed, asked the owner, 'Wud ye no' sell't?' (Would you not sell it?) The man named a price, which the customer gladly paid, and went away with his purchase rejoicing. That man has since given up the drink and come to the Lord, and it has been my privilege to see the veritable picture hanging above the redeemed man's fireplace.

Burying a Man Alive.—Mr. Campbell remarks: "A man once joined a certain order of monks, one of the rules of which was implicit obedience to the superior. This man, however, broke one of the rules, and was brought before the master, who ordered him to confess his fault: but he refused. The master commanded him to be taken to the court, a hole to be dug, and the man put into it. When this had been done the master went up to him and asked, 'Are you dead?' But no answer was made. Then another began slowly to shovel the earth into the yawning grave until it was up to the man's waist, but to the renewed question, 'Are you dead?' the man undauntedly replied, 'No.' The brother, for the second time, resumed his horrible task, and the man was soon almost entirely buried alive, for the earth was up to his mouth. A few more shovelfuls, and his head would have been covered, when, for the last time, the master inquired, 'Are you dead?' 'Yes,' was the reply. The earth was at once removed and the man released. He was conquered. His will was broken; he was henceforth dead to self, and lived only for the will of his order. Similarly, Christians, if they are to work for Christ, and be used for His cause, must be dead unto self, giving up their own will to Him, and living, moving and having their being in Him alone. They are 'dead unto sin, but alive unto God.'"

HUNTING FOR SOULS.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon, Preached Last Sunday Morning, June 26, 1887.

"He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."—Gen. 10: 9.

Hunting a Serious Business in Ancient Times—The Lands Infested with Wild Beasts—Gospel Hunters Wanted—Not Blunderers—Momentous Result of an Evangelist's Story—Special Directions for Archers—I. Be Sure of Your Weapon—Arrows that Pierced the Breastplate—What Simple Faith Can Do—II. Where to Hunt—The Good Game Hidden—Waiting for the Game to Come—III. Courage Needed—The Tiger of Drunkenness—The Gigantic Heidelberg Tun—An Indian Hunting Party—IV. The Game to be Brought In—The Deer Leap in Germany—Roland's Broken Trumpet—A Wonderful Tomb.

In our day, hunting is a sport; but in the lands and the times infested with wild beasts, it was a matter of life or death with the people. It was very different from going out on a sunshiny afternoon with a patent breech-loader, to shoot reed-birds on the flats, when Pollux and Achilles and Diomedes went out and tigers and bears. My text sets forth Nimrod as a hero when it presents him with broad shoulders and shaggy apparel and sun-browned face, and arm bunched with muscle—"a mighty hunter before the Lord." I think he used the bow and the arrow with great success practicing archery.

To Clear the Land of Lions

I have thought if it is such a grand thing and such a brave thing to clear wild beasts out of a country if it is not a better and braver thing to hunt down and destroy those great evils of society that are stalking the land with fierce eye and bloody paw and sharp tusk and quick spring. I have wondered if there is not such a thing as by which those who have been flying from the truth, may be captured for God and heaven. The Lord Jesus, in His sermon used the art of angling for an illustration when He said, "I will make you fishers of men." And so I think I have authority for using hunting as an illustration of Gospel truth; and I pray God that there may be many a man in this congregation who shall begin to study Gospel archery, of whom it may, after a while, be said, "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

Gospel Hunting,

How much awkward Christian work there is done in the world! How many good people there are who drive souls away from Christ instead of bringing them to Him!

Religious Blunderers, who upset more than they right. Their gun has a crooked barrel, and kicks as it goes off. They are like a clumsy comrade who goes along with skilful hunters—at the very moment he ought to be most quiet, he is cracking an elder or falling over a log and frightening away the game. How few Christian people have ever learned the lesson of which I read at the beginning of the service, how that the Lord Jesus Christ, at the Well, went from talking about a cup of water to the most practical religious truths, which won the woman's soul for God! Jesus in the wilderness was breaking bread to the people. I think it was good bread; it was very light bread, and the yeast had done its work thoroughly. Christ, after He had broken the bread, said to the people, "Beware of the yeast, or of the leaven, of the Pharisees!" So natural a transition it was, and how easily they all understood Him! But how few Christian people understand how to fasten the truths of God to the souls of men!

A Story of a Storm.

Truman Osborne, one of the evangelists who went through this country some years ago, had a wonderful art in the right direction. He came to my father's house one day, and while we were all seated in the room, he said, "Mr. Talmage, are all your children Christians?" Father said, "Yes, all but De Witt." Then Truman Osborne looked down into the fireplace, and began to tell a story of a storm that came on the mountains, and all the sheep were in the fold; but there was one lamb outside that perished in the storm. Had he looked me in the eye, I should have been angered when he told me that story; but he looked into the fireplace, and it was so pathetically and beautifully done that I never found any peace until I was inside the fold, where the other sheep are.

The archers of old times studied their art. They were very precise in the matter. The old books gave special directions as to how the archer should go, and as to What an Archer should Do.

He must stand erect and firm, his left foot a little in advance of his right foot. With his left hand he must take hold of the bow in the middle, and then, with the three fingers and the thumb of his right hand, he should lay hold of the arrow and affix it to the string—so precise was the direction given. But how clumsy we are about religious work! How little skill and care we exercise! How often our arrows miss the mark! Oh, that we might learn the art of doing good, and become "mighty hunters before the Lord!"

I. In the first place, if you want to be effectual in doing good, you must be very Sure of your Weapon.

There was something very fascinating about the archery of olden times. Perhaps you do not know what they could do with the bow and arrow. Why, the chief battles fought by the English Plantagenets were with the long bow. They would take the arrow of polished wood, and feather it with the plume of a bird, and then it would fly from the bow-string of plaited silk. The broad fields of Agincourt, and Solway Moss, and Neville's Cross, heard the loud thrum of the archer's bow-string. Now, my Christian friends, we have a mightier weapon than that. It is the arrow of the Gospel; it is a sharp arrow; it is a straight arrow; it is feathered from the wing of the dove of God's Spirit; it flies from a bow made out of the wood of the cross. As far as I can estimate or calculate, it has brought down four hundred million souls. Paul knew how to bring the notch of that arrow on to that bow-string, and its whirr was heard through the Corinthian theatres, and through the court-room, until the knees of Felix knocked together. It was that arrow that stuck in Luther's heart when he cried out, "Oh, my sins! Oh, my sins!" If it strike a man in the head, it kills his skepticism; if it strike him in the heel, it will turn his step; if it strike him in the heart, he throws up his hands, as did one of old when wounded in the battle, crying, "Oh, Galilean, Thou hast conquered."

In the armory of the Earl of Pembroke, there are old corselets which show that the arrow of the English used to go through the breastplate, through the body of the warrior, and out through the back-plate. What of that Gospel which is sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and body, and of the joints and marrow! Would to God we had more faith in that Gospel! The humblest man in this house, if he had enough faith in him, could bring a hundred souls to Jesus—perhaps five hundred. Just in proportion as this age seems to believe less and less in it, I believe more and more in it. What are men about that they will not accept their own deliverance? There is nothing proposed by men that can do anything like this Gospel. The religion of Ralph Waldo Emerson is the philosophy of icicles; the religion of Theodore Parker was a sirocco of the desert, covering up the soul with dry sand; the religion of Renan is the romance of believing nothing; the religion of Thomas Carlyle is only a condensed London fog; the religion of the Huxleys and the Spencers is merely a pedestal on which human philosophy sits shivering in the night of the soul, looking up to the stars, offering no help to the nations that crouch and groan at the base. Tell me where there is one man who has rejected that Gospel for another, who is thoroughly satisfied and helped and contented in his skepticism, and I will take the car tomorrow and ride five hundred miles to see him.

A Symbol

The full power of the Gospel has not yet been touched. As a sportsman throws up his hand and catches the ball flying through the air, just so easily will this Gospel after a while catch this round world flying from its orbit and bring it back to the heart of Christ. Give it full swing, and it will pardon every sin, heal every wound, cure every trouble, emancipate every slave, and ransom every nation. Ye Christian men and women who go out this afternoon to do Christian work, as you go into the Sunday-schools, and the lay preaching stations, and the penitentiaries, and the asylums, I want you to feel that you bear in your hand a weapon, compared with which the lightning has no speed, and avalanches have no heft, and the thunderbolts of heaven have no power; it is the arrow of the omnipotent Gospel. Take careful aim. Pull the arrow clear back until the head strikes the bow. Then let it fly. And may the slain be many!

Where to Hunt.

II. Again: if you want to be skilful in spiritual hunting you must hunt in unfrequented and secluded places. Why does the hunter go three or four days in the Pennsylvania forests or over Raquette Lake into the wilds of the Adirondacks? It is the only way to do. The deer are shy, and one "bang" of the gun clears the forest. From the California stage you see, as you go over the plains, here and there a coyote trotting along, almost within range of the gun—sometimes quite within range of it. No one cares for that; it is worthless. The good game is hidden and secluded. Every hunter knows that. So, many of the souls that will be of most worth for Christ, and of most value for the Church, are secluded. They do not come in your way. You will have to go where they are. Yonder they are, down in that cellar, yonder they are, up in that garret. Far away from the door of any church, the Gospel arrow has not been pointed at them. The tract distributor and the city missionary sometimes just catch a glimpse of them, as a hunter through the trees gets a momentary sight of a partridge or roebuck. The trouble is we are to come to us. We are not good hunters. We are standing in Schermerhorn Street, expecting that the timid antelope will come up and eat out of our hand. We are expecting that the prairie-fowl will light on our church-steeple. It is not their habit. If the church should wait ten millions of years for the world to come in and be saved, it will wait in vain. The world will not come. What the church wants now is to lift their feet from damask ottomans, and put them in the stirrups. We want a pulpit on wheels. The church wants not so much cushions as it wants saddle-bags and arrows. We have got to put aside the gown and the kid-gloves, and put on the hunting-shirt. We have been fishing so long in the brooks that run under the shadow of the church that the fish know us, and they avoid the hook, and escape as soon as we come to the bank, while yonder is Upper Saranac and Big Tupper's Lake, where the first swing of the Gospel net would break it for the multitude of the fishes. There is Outside Work to be Done.

Waiting for the Game

What is that I see in the backwoods? It is a tent. The hunters have made a clearing and camped out. What do they care if they have wet feet, or if they have nothing but a pine branch for a pillow, or for the northeast storm? If a moose in the darkness steps into the lake to drink, they hear it right away. If a loon cry in the midnight, they hear it. So in the service of God we have exposed work. We have got to camp out and rough it.

We are putting all our care on the seventy thousand people of Brooklyn who, they say, come to church. What are we doing for the seven hundred thousand that do not come? Have they no souls? Are they sinless, that they need no pardon? Are there no dead in their houses, that they need no comfort? Are they cut off from God, to go into eternity no wing to bear them, no light to cheer them, no welcome to greet them? I hear to-day surging up from the lower depths of Brooklyn a groan that comes through our Christian assemblages and through our Christian churches; and it blots out all this scene from my eyes to-day, as by the mists of a great Niagara, for the dash and the plunge of these great torrents of life dropping down into the fathomless and thundering abyss of suffering and woe.

I sometimes think that just as God blotted out the Church of Thyatira and Corinth and Laodicea, because of their sloth and stolidity, He will blot out American and English Christianity, and raise on the ruins a stalwart, wide-awake, missionary Church, that can take the full meaning of that command: "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned."

III. I remark, further, if you want to succeed in Gospel hunting, you Must Have Courage.

If the hunter stand with trembling hand, or shoulder that flinches with fear, instead of his taking the catamount, the catamount takes him. What would become of the Greenlander if, when out hunting for the bear, he should stand shivering with terror on an iceberg? What would have become of Du Chaillu and Livingstone in the African thicket, with a faint heart and a weak knee? When a panther comes within twenty paces of you, and it has its eye on you, and has squatted for the fearful spring, "Steady there."

Courage, O ye spiritual hunters! There are great monsters of iniquity prowling all around about the community. Shall we not in the strength of God go forth and combat them? We not only need more heart, but more backbone. What is the Church of God that it should fear to look in the eye any transgression? There is the Bengal that prowls around, and instead of attacking it, how many of us hide under the church pew or the communion table? There is so much invested in it, we are afraid to assault it; millions of dollars in barrels, in vats, in spigots, in corkscrews, in gin palaces with marble floors and Italian-top tables, and chased ice-coolers, and in the strychnine, and the logwood, and the tartaric acid, and the nux vomica, that go to make up our "pure" American drinks.

Tiger of Drunkenness

I looked with wondering eyes on the "Heidelberg tun." It is the great liquor vat of Germany, which is said to hold eight hundred hogsheads of wine, and only three times in a hundred years has it been filled. But, as I stood and looked at it, I said to myself: "That is nothing—eight hundred hogsheads. Why, our American vat holds four million five hundred thousand barrels of strong drinks, and we keep three hundred thousand men with nothing to do but to see that it is filled." Oh, to attack this great monster of intemperance, and the kindred monsters of fraud and uncleanness, requires you to rally all your Christian courage. Through the press, through the pulpit, through the platform, you must assault it. Would to God that all our American Christians would band together, not for crack-brained fanaticism, but for holy Christian reform.

I think it was in 1793 that there went out from Lucknow, India, under the sovereign, that was ever projected. There were ten thousand armed men in that hunting party. There were camels and horses and elephants. On some, princes rode and royal ladies, under exquisite housings, and five hundred coolies waited upon the train, and the desolate places of India were invaded by this excursion, and the rhinoceros and deer and elephant fell under the stroke of the sabre and bullet. After a while the party brought back trophies worth fifty thousand rupees, having left the wilderness of India ghastly with the slain bodies of wild beasts. Would to God that instead of here and there a straggler going out to fight these great monsters of iniquity in our country, the million membership of our churches would band together and hew in twain these great crimes that make the land frightful with their roar, and are fattening upon the bodies and souls of immortal men. Who is ready for such a party? Who will be a mighty hunter for the Lord?

The Greatest Hunting Party

IV. I remark again: If you want to be successful in spiritual hunting, you need not only to bring down the game, but

Bring the Game in.

I think one of the most beautiful pictures of Thorwaldsen is his "Autumn." It represents a sportsman coming home and standing under a grape-vine. He has a staff over his shoulder, and on the other end of that staff are hung a rabbit and a brace of birds. Every hunter brings home the game. No one would think of bringing down a reindeer or whipping up a stream for trout, and letting them lie in the woods. At eventide the camp is adorned with the treasures—beak and fin and antler.

If you go out to hunt for immortal souls, not only bring them down under the arrow of the Gospel, but bring them into the Church of God, the grand home and encampment we have pitched this side the skies. Fetch them in, do not let them lie out in the open field. They need our prayers and sympathies and help. That is the meaning of the Church of God—help. O ye hunters for the Lord! not only bring down the game, but bring it in.

If Mithridates liked hunting so well that for seven years he never went in-doors, what enthusiasm ought we to have who are hunting for immortal souls. If Domitian practiced archery until he could stand a boy down in the Roman amphitheatre, with a hand out, the fingers outstretched, and then the King could shoot an arrow between the fingers without wounding them, to what ought not we to subject ourselves in order to become spiritual archers and "mighty hunters before the Lord!" But let me say, you will never work any better than you pray. The old archers took the bow, put one end of it down beside the foot, elevated the other end, and it was the rule that the bow should be just the size of the archer; if it were just his size, then he would go into the battle with confidence. Let me say that your power to project good in the world will correspond exactly to your own spiritual stature. In other words, the first thing, in preparation for Christian work, is personal consecration.

Drill and Practice

"Oh! for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb."

I am sure that there are some here who, at some time, have been hit by the Gospel arrow. You felt the wound of that conviction, and you plunged into the world deeper; just as the stag, when the hounds are after it, plunges into Scroon Lake, expecting in that way to escape. Jesus Christ is on your track to-day, impenitent man! not in wrath, but in mercy. Oh, ye chased and panting souls! here is the stream of God's mercy and salvation, where you may cool your thirst. Stop that chase of sin to-day. By the red fountain that leaped from the heart of my Lord, I bid you stop. There is mercy for you—mercy that pardons; mercy that heals; everlasting mercy. Is there in all this house anyone who can refuse the offer that comes from the heart of the dying Son of God?

There is in a forest in Germany, a place called two crags about eighteen yards apart, between a fearful chasm. This is called the "Deer Leap," because once a hunter was on the track of a deer; it came to one of these crags; there was no escape for it from the pursuit of the hunter, and in utter despair it gathered itself up, and in the death agony attempted to jump across. Of course it fell, and was dashed on the rocks far beneath. Here is a path to heaven. It is plain; it is safe. Jesus marks it out for every man to walk in. But here is a man who says: "I won't walk in that path; I will take my own way." He comes on up until he confronts the chasm that divides his soul from heaven. Now, his last hour has come, and he resolves that he will leap that chasm from the heights of earth to the heights of heaven. Stand back, now, and give him full swing, for no soul ever did that successfully. Let him try, Jump! Jump! He misses the mark, and he goes down, depth below depth, "destroyed without remedy." Men! angels! devils! what shall we call that place of awful catastrophe? Let it be known forever as "The Sinner's Death Leap."

The "Deer Leap."

It is said that when Charlemagne's host was overpowered by three armies of the Saracens in the Pass of Roncesvalles, his warrior, Roland, in terrible earnestness, seized a trumpet, and blew it with such terrific strength that the opposing army reeled back with terror; but at the third blast of the trumpet it broke in two. I see your soul fiercely assailed by all the powers of earth and hell. I put to my lips, and I blow it three times. Blast the first—"Whosoever will, let him come." Blast the second—"Seek ye the Lord while He may be found." Blast the third—"Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation." Does not the host of your sins fall back? But the trumpet does not, like that of Roland, break in two. As it was handed down to us from the lips of our fathers, we hand it down to the lips of our children, and tell them to sound it when we are dead, that all the generations of men may know that our God is a pardoning God, a sympathetic God, a loving God; and that more to Him than the anthems of heaven, more to Him than the throne on which He sits, more to Him than are the temples of celestial worship, is the joy of seeing the wanderer putting his hand on the door-latch of his Father's house. Hear it, all ye nations! Bread for the worst hunger. Medicine for the worst sickness. Light for the thickest darkness. Harbor from the worst storm.

The Trumpet of the Gospel

Dr. Prime, in his book of wonderful interest, entitled "Around the World," describes of marvellous architecture. Twenty thousand men were twenty-two years in erecting that and the buildings around it. Standing at that tomb, if you speak or sing, after you have ceased you hear the echo coming from a height of one hundred and fifty feet. It is not like other echoes. The sound is drawn out in sweet prolongation, as though the angels of God were chanting on the wing.

A Tomb in India

How many souls here to-day, in the tomb of sin, will lift up the voice of penitence and prayer? If now they would cry unto God, the echo would drop from afar—not struck from the marble cupola of an earthly mausoleum, but sounding back from the warm heart of angels flying with the news; for there is joy among the angels over one sinner that repenteth.

Volume IX. of the Christian Herald, Containing the numbers for 1886, with complete index, bound in cloth, may be had from this office; price, $2.50, including postage. A few volumes of 1883, 1884 and 1885 are also for sale. We have none prior to 1883.

An Illustrated Work on the Unfulfilled Prophecies of the Bible, by the Rev. M. Baxter, entitled, "Forty Coming Wonders," may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York, by remitting 75 cents. It is a book of 528 pages, is handsomley bound in cloth, and contains fifty full-page pictures and diagrams representing the scenes described in the prophecies of Daniel and in the book of the Revelation. It also contains a rséumé of the opinions of other expositors, and extracts carefully collated from the works of all the most eminent writers on prophecy from the earliest ages of the Christian era down to those of recent date. It thus forms the most useful and complete guide the student can have on entering the study of that portion of the Word of God. The book may be obtained for seventy-five cents from any bookseller. This reduction in price is made to encourage the study of this important subject.

A CHILD'S ALL-NIGHT JOURNEY.

A FATHER and his little daughter were making a long railroad journey together, and in order to reach their home it was necessary for them to travel all night. When it became too dark for them to look out of the windows, and the lamps were lighted inside, the father laid aside the little girl's hat, and spreading out cloaks and shawls, said, "Now we will rest." But a little troubled face peered out upon the strange scene, a mist was gathering in those blue eyes, and the cheery tone of voice changed to a very plaintive one as she asked, "Father, how can we go to bed here?"

"This is your bed, darling," he said, drawing her to his heart, "and a warm one you will always find it." And then he tucked her in so carefully that in place of what had been a little girl there seemed only a great bundle of shawls.

But every now and then there was a movement inside the bundle, and a voice would say, "Oh, father, I am afraid to go to sleep here!" Then the father reminded her that he was taking care of her, and would do so all night. So at last, soothed by this assurance and worn out by unwonted fatigue, she fell asleep. When she opened her eyes again, after what seemed to her only a few minutes, the sun was shining brightly. The train stopped, and there just in sight was her own home. She could even see her mother standing in the open door, with arms outstretched to welcome back her loved ones. After the kisses were over, the mother asked. "And so my little girl has been traveling all night? Did she find it a long and weary time?"

"Oh, no, mother, not at all. I had such a good sleep, and father watched over me all night. Only think of it! All night, mother, he watched over me. At first I was afraid to go to sleep in that strange place, but he told me to lean against him and shut my eyes, and rest easily, for he would stay awake and take care of me, So I crept close to him, and, before I knew it, I was really and truly sound asleep; and dear father staid awake and took care of me all night. How I do love him for it!" Then the mother, with the love-light beaming from her eyes, told her child of that Heavenly Father who watches over each of His children, not only one, but every night of their lives.

A MISSIONARY'S FIRST EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. M. Murray, now of Pekin, China, thus describes his first reception in that country: "I arrived at a place where I was to hold my first Gospel service; it was the New Year's day, and all was quiet, for during the first three days of the year the people stay at home to pray to their dead relations. When we arrived at the hotel, I found the table heaped with bread and all kinds of good things, and I said to the man who carried my bed, 'Here is a fine feast,' but he answered, 'No, no, we dare not touch that; it is for the spirits.' After the three days were over, the calm gave place to a storm. The people heard that I had brought to the place a wagon load of Bibles, and they were not going to tolerate it. The innkeeper, who had been very friendly to me, came one night, and said, 'There is no hope of your being allowed to stay quietly here, and I would advise that you go away at once.' I took his counsel, and left the town; but, while going, I felt much grieved at having thus to leave, and prayed the Lord that He would permit me to stay even yet. And He did. The Mandarin, hearing of my departure, sent a letter after me, asking me to return; he had allowed the uproar to go so far, only that he might see who were concerned in it; and now, as the disturbers were all in prison, I might return in peace.

"I immediately went to the market-place to preach the Gospel of Christ, but the moment I made my appearance, I was greeted with hooting and yelling. I waited patiently until there was a lull, and then said, 'If you will let me, I will give you good news; surely you don't think that I have come here to harm you?' Then one man cried out, 'Let us hear what you have got to say.' Just at that moment the man with my box of books came down, and taking out a specimen, I let them see it, and told them what it was, and what was the price. As I spoke I could see the hands of many wandering to their pockets for the necessary cash, and during all that day my attendant was selling these books; over three hundred were sold in that one day. I stayed six months in that place, and such was the friendship and love with which I was regarded that residents were very unwilling to let me go. 'Have we not been kind to you?' they asked. 'Oh, yes.' 'Then why would you leave us?' 'I cannot give you all the books,' I replied; 'I must go to others.' Reluctantly they let me go, asking me to return soon."

THE OPEN DOOR IN JAPAN.

A MAGNIFICENT field for Christian effort is now awaiting occupation in Japan. The Hon. R. B. Hubbard, United States minister to that country, in the course of a recent letter home, says: "Here are thirty-eight million people on islands containing not much more than one-half of the area of the State of Texas! The whole country is accessible to the heralds of the cross from all Christian lands. Unlike the Chinese, these people do not cling, as to life itself, to their ancient political or religious traditions, or faiths of either church or state. Within the past one-third of a century their awakening from a sleep of ages has been marvelous to the Western world, and certainly without a parallel heretofore in history. In a word, they are ready and willing, in fact, eagerly so, if convinced, to let the scales fall from their eyes and to embrace new thoughts and creeds, whether of government, science or religion. Such a people, just at this special junction, it seems to me, present the most inviting—urgently inviting—field for this great work, of all other Oriental lands."

DR. CULLIS'S RECORD OF FAITH.

THE following record is extracted from the twenty-first annual report of the manifold work conducted by Dr. Charles Cullis, which comprises: The Consumptives' Home, two Orphan Homes, a Faith Cure House and several other institutions, in Boston, Mass., an Orphanage at Boydton, Va., a Chinese Mission in California, a Mission in West Virginia, in Oxford, N. C., and an Orphanage and three Missions in India, all of which are dependent entirely upon God for support.

October 6.—To-day I make my first record of God's dealing with me in relation to the Work of Faith. The year ending September 30 found me with an empty treasury. During the twenty years of the history of the Work, there has never been a trial of such length of time, or a time when, to my own heart, the promises of God were more precious.

October 8.—Yesterday I had occasion to call on a friend on a matter of business. Just before I left he handed me his cheque for $250, saying he was thinking of me last night, and intending to send it to me. I have had a quiet rest in my soul all the day, though full deliverance has not come.

October 10.—A lady called with a gift of $50; this has been the only gift larger than five dollars for two days.

October 11.—The morning mail brought from Little Compton, R. I., $50 for the Consumptives' Home and the Cancer Home. I received notice that the interest on the Home mortgage, amounting to $1,960, was due. I had saved $600 toward it, most of which had come in from the sale of lots at Intervale Park. This morning I took the amount and paid the coal bill, adding $11 more to it. I now begin again to trust the Lord for the $2,000 interest money. Solomon prayed, "O Lord God of Israel, there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; which keepest covenant and shewest mercy unto thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts" (II Chron. 6: 14). I believe it, and can trust God for thousands.

November 4.—Still the trial holds. Only a few dollars yesterday; but a little rift in the cloud to-day, in the gift from New Jersey of $100.

November 24.—Out of a full heart I praise God for the gifts of to-day. By mail, $25; another of $450; another of $25; one of $10; and one of $2. No one but heavenly Father knew of our great need. I will praise and trust until all our need is supplied.

December 1.—One gift to-day of $40 from Philadelphia, ten of the amount for my personal use. Several small gifts of less than $5; for all of which I praise God.

December 4.—My heart has been cheered by two gifts to-day; one of $100 from a stranger in Philadelphia, and from Pennsylvania, $40. I never knew more of the presence of God in my soul, and I never knew such trials resting upon the work.

December 14.—I received to-day a legacy of $300 from the estate of the late M. B. L., of Warren, R. I. My heart thanks God for this.

December 16.—To-day I have received a legacy of $1,000—the gift is the will of the late Dr. G. R., of this city—and with it $45 interest; on Saturday, a legacy of $300; and now, to-day, another of $1,000. I receive these gifts as an earnest of greater blessings in store. My heart sings for joy.

DEADLY LEAVES.

A TIMELY warning against poisonous leaves is given in a scientific journal, which says: "Some of our most admired flowers, which we would least willingly banish from cultivation, are associated with green leaves of a very poisonous character. The narrow, long leaves of the daffodil act as an irritant poison; the delicate compound leaves of laburnum have a narcotic and acrid juice which causes vomiting, and has not unfrequently led to death. The narrow leaves of the meadow saffron, or autumn crocus, give rise to the utmost irritation of the throat, thirst, dilated pupils, with vomiting and purging. The dangerous character of aconite, or monkshood, leaves, is doubtless well known, but each generation of children requires instruction to avoid above all things those large, palm-shaped leaves, dark green on the upper surface. Leaves of coarse weeds provide an abundant quota of danger, but frequently their strong scent and bitter or nauseous taste give warning against their being consumed." It is in nature as in the moral world, warning is not needed so much against the coarser forms of sin as against evil attractive in appearance, but deadly in its effects (Prov. 1: 17).

AN INEBRIATE MOTHER REFORMED.

A JOYFUL testimony recently given at a meeting of the Medical Mission, in New York, of which Dr. Dowkontt is the director, led the doctor to relate in his report the history of the woman who gave it. He says: The workers at the Roosevelt Street Branch of the mission had watched with considerable anxiety over Mrs. S——. They had seen her in a terrible condition, through drink, several times. On one occasion, about two years ago, when the doctor called to see one of her two children, who was sick, he found her intoxicated and very quarrelsome, abusing everybody that came in her way, and using such terrible language that he had to run away from it, used as he was to hear such things in the Fourth Ward.

One day she came to the dispensary covered with bruises, which she had received at the hands of her husband, through her having given way to drink again—he, too, having taken some. At these times their two poor little children, Joey and Annie, would suffer terrible neglect, even preferring to sleep on a door step to coming into their miserable home.

One evening, about a year since, when they arrived home with their mother, after being present at the meeting at the dispensary, Annie said, "Papa, I wish the doctor was my papa, for he don't drink any beer, and that must be nice. Papa, why don't you give up the nasty drink and come to Jesus, like mamma?" It was a cutting question, and it cut deep into the father's heart, so that he, too, was led to give up the drink.

A short time ago Mrs. S—— received a severe injury to her leg, necessitating her removal to hospital. It was, indeed, a touching scene to witness, as the mother had to part with the two little ones; but she commended them to her Heavenly Father's care, and, with a word of kindly warning to her husband, to cheer up and look to the Lord, and mind not to take the drink, she left them.

For some days the fever raged high, and part of the time poor Mrs. S—— was quite delirious. One morning a stretcher was brought to her bedside to remove her to the operating room. She knew what it meant, and a shudder passed through her frame at the thought of what she would have to undergo; but she said, "I'm ready to go; bless the Lord, for He will be with me."

Just then, though, a thought crossed her mind, causing a temporary feeling of depression. What was it? Why, she had heard that persons under ether uttered strange things at times, and the thought crossed her mind that perhaps she might say some bad words, such as she had been wont to use in days gone by. But so changed had she become now that the very thought of her giving utterance to these things was horrible; and so she lifted her heart to the Lord as the nurses lifted her body upon the operating table; "O Lord, keep the door of my lips;" and He did so.

The operation was a very tedious one, needing the removal of a large piece of bone, and it was three hours before Mrs. S—— came to herself. On doing so, her first question was not as to her leg being on or off, but, turning to the nurse she asked, eagerly: "Did I say anything wrong?" On being assured that the only words she had uttered were, "Safe in the arms of Jesus," she exclaimed, "Thank God!"

One day there was great rejoicing in a little home near the Mission. Poor little Joey and Annie did not know how to contain themselves as they went shouting around, "Mammy's come home!" That very evening Mrs. S—— went to the Mission and gave her testimony.

Dr. Dowkontt's work is being much blessed, for while his students are preparing for their labor in the foreign missionary field, they under his direction prescribe for the poor, and hold evangelistic services, thus gaining experience for both branches of their work. Funds are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the work. Contributions may be sent to Dr. Dowkontt, 118 East 45th Street, New York.

A TELL-TALE SCAR.

A CICATRICE on a young man's brow led to his identification by his mother recently. She had been searching for him for fifteen years as far as her means would allow, and her joy at finding him was very touching. When a child, he was injured by a car on the railroad, which cut a deep gash from his right temple to his left eyebrow. The wound healed, leaving a conspicuous scar, but symptoms of mental disorder were developed, and ultimately he had to be placed in the asylum on Ward's Island. Soon afterwards his father died, the home was broken up, and the widow removed to other places in quest of remunerative employment. Eventually she married and settled in Newark, N. J. Then she went to visit her demented son. To her surprise she found that he had recovered and had been removed, but no clue to his movements could be discovered. Fifteen years elapsed without bringing mother and son together, but at last the mother, seeing a scar on the brow of a stalwart man, made inquiry of him and discovered that he was her son. He could remember nothing of his life prior to his dementia, except that he had a vague impression of a woman crying over him, and he was not sure that that was not a dream. He was as delighted at finding his mother as she was at finding her son, and said that if he had known she was living and searching for him, he would never have rested until he found her. He said, "I have known what it is to want a mother, and now that I have found her I know how to appreciate her." How many men who have been brought to their heavenly Father who has sought them with infinite patience have had reason to make a similar avowal (Isa. 55 : 5).

THE REMOVAL OF THE VAIL.

By Rev. A. C. Tris, of Howard, Kan.

(Continued from page 391.)

The Present.

It is an obvious fact, that an intellectual covering, or vail, resembling an entwined hedge, full of thorny obstructions, surrounds the mind of all nations, and "That the whole world lieth in darkness and wickedness." Gal. 1 : 4; 1 John 5 : 19—a darkness which ancient and modern philosophy never could remove or evade: It is not only a covering of the mind, in not fathoming scientific and obstruse problems—it is a darkness impenetrable in regard to spiritual things. The Lord Jesus has proclaimed: "Except a man be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God." John 3 : 2, 3. And although the Vail is already partly removed, it is not "swallowed up." "For now, we see through a glass "in a riddle." 1 Cor. 13 : 12 (margin), and, How true is that word of the great Apostle of the Gentiles. What a diversity of opinions are found concerning the fulfillment of the prophetic word! there is "a running to and fro." Dan. 12 : 4, although knowledge, or "the teachers" are increased. Some learned men not only disbelieve the personal coming of our Lord, but combat it in their writings. Some, who profess to believe the prophetic word, never speak of the restoration of Israel, and many of their explanations are far from being clear, not having the true ring in them. Indeed, how very few of those, who are waiting for the kingdom to come, live in a daily expectation and joy, to meet their Lord? and in a heavenly atmosphere that fills their hearts and enables them to walk as priests of God. Rom. 12 : 1. Without any reserve, we must acknowledge, that we are yet babes in Christ, babes in understanding, hoping for the coming day of freedom and joy.

The Future.

Israel, and the future, the ingathering of Israel, and receiving the first Hebrew: "the head dominion" Micah, 4 : 8, of the nations, is a fact, which is plainly taught in the prophetic word—and at that time the Lord of Hosts shall make on Mount Zion such a joyous and intellectual feast, of which we are not able to give an adequate description, only we desire to point out, that the Vail wrapping or covering shall not be taken away by degrees, but that it shall be "swallowed up." At the present time, darkness of the mind is only taken away by degrees, but then, it shall be removed and destroyed—it will be expelled, like darkness is expelled by the rising of a clear morning light. No doubt, in higher degree the saints shall experience the same blessing, which was enjoyed by Solomon: 2 Chron. 1 : 7–12, "That wisdom and knowledge was granted unto him." In Isa. 30 : 26, in connection with Isa. 49 : 6, and Isa. 60 : 19, 20, is given a glorious description of that conquest of light over the powers of darkness; and that, that light surely will embrace: "Intellectual powers" is plainly stated in Hebr. 8 : 10–12, where the Lord saith concerning the Jews, the house of Israel, "I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts, and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people, and they shall not teach every man his neighbor and every man his brother, saying: know the Lord, for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest." In Zech. 12 : 8 we read: "At that day, Israel shall be as David and the house of David shall be as God, as the Angel of the Lord before them."

What a joyous state! and what a glorious freedom it shall be, to rise to such a high standard of intellect, to be free from perplexing doubts, and to walk in the full light of God's countenance! Then the book of nature will be studied and the confession will be made carefully: "I believe in God, the Father, the Maker of heaven and earth."

That Vail, being taken away, the saints shall see the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! and fathom the length and breadth and depth of that ocean: "the love of Christ which passeth knowledge." Eph. 3 : 18, 19, and then the inner mind shall be full, (as far as they shall be able to comprehend) "that God was in Christ, reconciling the world into himself." 2 Cor. 5 : 19.

At that time, Israel especially, will discover the vast extent of the Abrahamic and Davidic covenants of which "their elder brother" after the flesh, Jehovah Jesus, is the beginning, the centre, and the end. Rev. 5 : 5. When they shall stand "at that mount" with ADONAI JEHOVAH they shall experience: "a love which many waters cannot quench, neither the floods can drown," and when they shall taste the honey-drops taken from that slain Lion of Judah and will sing that new song. Rev. 7 : 4; Rev. 14 : 1–5, which no other nation ever could learn, a privilege which never was enjoyed by the first Adam, then they shall understand the words of Isaiah 25 : 6–8, being partakers of that "banquet of preserved fat things" prepared for them by the faithful God of their covenant, Ps. 89 : 1.

But, above all, who is able to give a graphic description of that period, when the covering, now spread over all the nations, shall be swallowed up! "In that day, there shall be one Lord, and His name One." Zech. 14 : 9, and in every place incense and a pure offering shall be offered to Him. Mal. 1 : 11. Who can comprehend the degree of clearness which the Holy Spirit shall shed upon every page of God's inspired word. Acts 2 : 16–21; when the Spirit will be poured out upon all flesh, indeed, every one shall see and observe the union and unity existing between the Old and New Testaments. Moses, the prophets and the Psalms will shine as a galaxy, and the Revelation of Jesus Christ will be an open volume of heavenly treasures and heavenly light. Then the garden of Eden will join hands with the garden of Gethsemane. Then the mountain of Moriah will be connected as a chain of so many links, with the mountain of Transfiguration, with Mount Olivet, and with the mountain spoken of in Isaiah 2 : 2; 25 : 6, and all will centre, as in one focus, the hill of Calvary, where the Lamb was slain, as the Alpha and Omega, the first and the last; yea, then the redemption of our bodies revealed in Romans, 8 : 23, will be experienced, bodies made glorious and strong, to receive the fulness and effulgence of the revelations of the Triune God, when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." Isa. 11: 9. One chorus will arise from the purified earth: "Unto Him, that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father, to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever." Amen.

Retrospect.

How clear in mind, how bright in pure ideas, and how delightful in contemplations must have been the soul of the first Adam! and how joyful must have been the communion with his Creator, when he heard the footsteps of the Eternal walking in the garden in the cool of the day! and although his mind was not matured by sweet experiences or reminiscences of the past, yet he was in such a state of sweet repose and tranquility of mind that his thoughts were as so many pearly dewdrops shining in the light of the morning. He had, as it were, the grasp of his own self; his individuality and intellectuality were unclouded and fresh. What an incomparable loss has been caused by his departure from God! and his fall was the ruin of mankind; but, thanks to God, the time is coming that the prophecy found in Isa. 25 : 6–8 must be fulfilled.

Five Cents, Postage Free.

END OF THIS AGE ABOUT THE END OF THIS CENTURY,

and its Last Week Passover Week, Ending on Thursday, April 11, 1901,

As shown by Daniel's 2300 and 1335 and 1290 Years—this being the termination also of the 6000 Years from the Creation of Man, and the 2520 Years from Nebuchadnezzar, and the 360 Years from Luther's Reformation, according to the Bible periods—a pamphlet of 29 pages—by Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal Clergyman and one of the Editors of the "Christian Herald." Author of "Forty Coming Wonders," "Coming Wars," etc. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Treasury Statement now Issued has one gratifying feature; there has been a decrease during the eleven months now expired of the fiscal year in the receipts from the tax on distilled liquors. The summary published by the New York Times shows that the total receipts from internal revenue for all but one month of the fiscal year are about a million and a half larger than they were during the same period of last year, and this in spite of a decrease in the receipts from the tax on distilled liquors of nearly $3,000,000. The increase from tobacco has been $1,800,000, from fermented liquors, $2,000,000, and there has been about $700,000 collected from the oleomargarine tax. The exports of merchandise were $724,559,702, or $52,459,156 in excess of the exports for the twelve months preceding. During the last five months the exports were $282,859,251, as compared with 271,703,570 during the corresponding five months of 1886, or a gain of $11,155,681. The imports for the year ending May 31 were $685,341,819, or a gain of $54,805,029. These figures, on the whole, speak favorably for the financial prosperity of the country.

The Question of the Captured Flags is Still prominent. A new turn was given to the discussion last week by a letter from the Secretary of the Gettysburg Reunion Committee to the President. The letter intimates that at the approaching ceremonies connected with the unveiling of the monument on the field of Gettysburg, when the survivors of the Southern troops engaged in that battle are to be the guests of the Northern regiments, the latter would like to return to the former the Southern flags captured in the battle, and the writer asks what has become of them. This is another indication of the magnanimity and good feeling existing between the men who actually fought in the war. The general public, especially the generation that has grown up since the war, should note this fact. It is remarkable that while Senator Sherman and other politicians are strenuously laboring to keep alive the old sectional issues, and General Fairchild is calling for palsy to fall on the President's brain, tongue and hand for proposing to return the flags, the very men who captured some of them contemplate returning them voluntarily.

The Examinations of Civil Service Clerks for promotion appear to be less severe than the clerks apprehended. The first examination was in the War Department, and was of a very simple and elementary character. The test was not exclusively scholastic, but was applied with the object of testing the clerk's fitness for the duties he would have to perform if promoted. From the published report of the examination, it appears that a candidate who was 40 per cent. below perfection in the very simple acquirements of writing, "ciphering," and ordinary grammar, but who stood as high as 85 in knowledge of the duties of his bureau, and in the estimation of his superior officers for efficiency, would be in no danger of being excluded from the eligible list. The matter of efficiency was left entirely to the chief clerk, and the latter can, if the subordinate be valuable in his special line of work, rate him high enough to outweigh delinquencies found by the examination in other respects. This power is vested in the chief clerk for the purpose of enabling him to retain clerks who have special qualifications in special lines of work. This result shows that the commissioners do not desire to promote the interests of highly educated clerks, but to secure practical efficiency in the departments, and with this desire the country is heartily in sympathy.

A New Treaty with Mexico was Signed by President Cleveland on June 21, by which postal facilities advantageous to both countries were arranged. It is officially stated that the treaty will make Mexico as accessible through the mails as any State in the Union. As each country is to charge and collect its own postage, and no accounts are to be kept between the countries, it is expected to be simple in its operation. One great advantage expected to be derived from it is the extension of trade through the exchange of merchandise parcels. By a simple arrangement for consular permits covering custom duties, small articles may be purchased and transmitted through the mails between the two countries. It is expected that both American and Mexican merchants will avail themselves of the facilities afforded by the treaty, and, by reciprocal advertising, will largely extend the business transactions now existing. The treaty goes into effect on July 1.

A Fatal and Destructive Tornado Passed over Wilmington, Del., on June 22. The reports from that city state that no such visitation has been experienced there for many years. Nothing in the track could resist the force of the tornado, which swept from east to west, from north to south, and by a circuitous path swept the city and surrounding country from almost every quarter. There were spots and narrow belts that enjoyed immunity from the fearful force of the storm, but these were few, and the city the next morning presented a desolate scene. The streets were almost blockaded with huge trees and detached branches upturned and broken during the tornado, while signboards, awnings, window shutters, sections of roof, and loose boards were sent whirling hither and thither like chaff. Houses and barns and various buildings were leveled to the ground, and roofs were sent adrift from half a hundred buildings and carried away. Three persons were killed in a house on which a huge uprooted tree was hurled by the wind, and several other persons were so severely injured that no hopes of their recovery are entertained.

Shocking Revelations in Canada are Contained in a return submitted to the Dominion Parliament on June 23 in reference to the management of the Indians. The return embodies specific charges preferred by the Rev. James Robertson, Superintendent of Presbyterian Missions in the Northwest, regarding a wholesale system of immorality and peculation on the part of the Government's Indian agents. The Rev. Mr. Robertson's charges cover a period of ten or twelve years, but especially deal with recent events. Against the employees of the department he charged incompetency, immorality and dishonesty. An employee of ex-Gov. Provencher on his death-bed told the missionary a tale of wholesale peculation and perjury. Flour and groceries were bought by the sample, but the samples were good, while the goods afterward received were unfit for use in many instances. The missionary goes on to say that he has seen Indians at Qu'Appelle, File Hills, Maple Creek and Swift Current, whose emaciated faces and shrunken forms told a story of hunger, and has seen them turning over heaps of refuse, searching swill tubs for crusts. The return includes a letter from Gov. Dewdney denying the charges.

The Collapse of the largest Bank in Ohio was announced on June 21. Suspicions were excited on the failure of the wheat corner mentioned in these columns last week, that the Fidelity Bank of Cincinnati would be a severe sufferer. These suspicions were justified when the Government Bank Examiner took possession of the bank and closed its doors. It would appear that the property of the bank has disappeared as completely as if the officers had stolen the whole. One report says that everything is gone but the building. There does not seem to have been dishonesty, as the word is generally understood, but the effect on shareholders and depositors will be the same as in cases of defalcation. The property was used to sustain the wheat corner, and when that collapsed the bank fell with it. The vice-president, the cashier and the assistant cashier, who are all respected citizens, and were believed to be wealthy, have been arrested on affidavits of the Bank Examiner, and charged with having, on or about June 13, unlawfully issued "certain drafts or certificates of deposit for large sums of money, to wit, $300,000, with intent to defraud the bank." The penalty prescribed is imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than five years nor more than ten. It is feared that the depositors will lose all their deposits, and that some country banks which kept their accounts with the Fidelity will be embarrassed. The entire loss is expected to reach ten millions, most of which has gone into the pockets of the grain brokers, and the elevator companies who stored the wheat. So far as was disclosed last week, it did not appear that the bank officials had taken part in the corner, but had lent money to the operators.

The Reports of the Health of the Crown Prince of Germany last week were more hopeful. One British medical journal, the Lancet, said, apparently by authority: "Crown Prince Frederick William, of Germany, is enjoying excellent health. The appearance of the larynx is quite satisfactory. There is no congestion. Solution of perchloride of iron has been applied on several occasions. It is probable that more of the growth will be removed early next week." This implies that the physicians now believe that the malady is not cancer.

The Celebration of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria on Tuesday, June 21, was a pageant of unusual magnificence. The Queen, escorted by her sons, grandsons and sons-in-law, and accompanied by her daughters, granddaughters, and daughters-in-law, went in state to Westminster Abbey, where a special service of thanksgiving was conducted. The building was gorgeously decorated for the occasion, and a congregation of distinguished persons joined in the service The spectacle was very brilliant, the Queen wore her coronation robes, and around her was a hitherto unprecedented assembly of Mohammedan, Buddhist, Hindoo, Sikh and Japanese princes, with Persian and Chinese heathen magnates, seated near the altar of a Christian church, amicably awaiting a Christian prayer The Queen's journey from her palace to the Abbey, and back by another route, was the occasion of an ovation of unprecedented enthusiasm. Dense crowds lined the entire route, some of the persons present having paid as much as a hundred dollars for seats in windows and balconies from which they could view the procession. Wherever the carriage bearing the Queen came in sight the cheering started up, which seemed steadily to increase in volume and eventually to be continuous and mighty. The enthusiasm of the people appeared absolutely boundless. She received magnificent presents from many foreign potentates, and a gift in money of $75,000 presented by three million English women. She gave a private audience to Mr. Phelps, United States Minister, at Buckingham Palace, for the purpose of allowing him to present President Clevelana's congratulations. Mr. Phelps was attired in plain evening dress. The Queen's demeanor toward him was most cordial. She expressed thanks for the President's congratulations.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

Contributions to the Fund for Supplying colored ministers with THE CHRISTIAN HERALD have been received since our last acknowledgment to the amount of $23. They are from: Dalton, Ohio, $1; Marysville, Kan., $1; Felchville, Vt., $1; Parsons, Kan., $2; Allegheny, Pa., $2; New Brunswick, N. J., $2; Chester, Neb., $1; Seaward, Me., $5; Grass Valley, Cal., $1; Jackson, Minn., $5; Bethany, N. Y., $1; Belleville, Pa., $1. This enables us to add twenty-three names to the list, which we are very glad to do. Many other applications have been received from colored clergymen, which we shall have much pleasure in filling as soon as subscriptions to the fund come in.

The New Berachah Mission in New York was dedicated on June 21. It is situated in West Thirty-second Street near Tenth Ave., a part of the city where mission work has long been needed. The front of the chapel is built in a pretty design in terra cotta, with a large, roomy entrance. There are offices and reading-rooms on the side facing the street, and back of these is the large room where services will be held. It is light and airy, finished in excellent taste and will be sure to attract a large number of poor people to the mission. There was a large attendance at the dedicatory services, and among those who assisted the Rev. A. B. Simpson in the exercises were the Rev. Dr. R. R. Booth, of the Rutgers Presbyterian Church; the Rev. A. F. Schauffler; the Rev. Dr. John E. Cookman; the Rev. John Dooley; and Dr. Mackenzie.

Tearing Down the Lion and the Unicorn from the front of the Old State House in Boston, Mass., was an occupation in which a number of men engaged on the night of June 21. A few years ago the Bostonian Society, with a veneration for relics of antiquity, obtained permission to replace on the State House the royal arms of England, which had been removed in the Revolution. Accordingly the old emblem was brought out of the cellar, the accumulation of the rust of a hundred years was removed, and the relic, cleaned and burnished, was put in its old place, much to the disgust of some of the citizens. No action was taken against it, however, until last week, when the spectacle of prominent officials joining English residents in Boston in celebrating the Queen's jubilee, stimulated the latent repugnance into activity. The men went in the night to the State House, and, under cover of the darkness, attached ropes to the obnoxious emblem, and set to work to pull it down. The police came upon them before they had achieved their purpose, and they ran away, vowing that they "would have the thing down yet." If these iconoclasts had more sense they would perceive that there is no degradation in this emblem of a broken yoke. Their concern should rather be to be really free, and this is not to be attained by violating the law, but by the way Christ proclaimed (John 8: 32).

The Test for Immigrants in Force in the ports of the United States was the subject of a correspondence given out for publication last week between the Secretary of State and the British minister. Sir Lionel West wanted to know whether immigrants would be received if they had friends able and willing to support them if the government or private persons paid their passage here. Although the law enacted by Congress prohibited the landing of any persons in this country whose expenses had been paid by a foreign government, Sir Lionel thought that if such persons had friends here who would maintain them and keep them from becoming a public burden, their being admitted would not violate the spirit of the law. Secretary Bayard's answer was explicit. He stated that the fact of an immigrant having friends here would not remove the objection. If the foreign government paid his passage, or if he proved unable to support himself, he would not be allowed to land. Every immigrant is examined as to his own capacity, without regard to his friends, and on the result of that examination his admission or exclusion depended. This explicit statement should be made known to intending immigrants, as it may save some of them the hardships of a futile voyage. Those who cannot bear the test had better not come. The test for admission into Christ's kingdom is equally stringent, though it differs in kind. It, too, takes no account of friends already there, but it admits the helpless who acknowledge that they can do nothing for themselves (Luke 14: 21).

The Omission of a Question at a Trial has invalidated the sentence on a prisoner in Canada. At the recent session of the Court of Appeals, at Montreal, the Chief-Justice, in a long and elaborate judgment, decided a remarkable case submitted to the court. A prisoner charged with a capital offence was tried fourteen months ago in the court below, and convicted. Sentence was pronounced upon him, but he was not asked the usual question put to persons in his situation—whether he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced. The prisoner contended that the failure to ask the question rendered the sentence illegal, and he appealed against it. The Chief-Justice admitted the claim, and declared the sentence void. He did not, however, order a new trial, but remitted the prisoner to the court below to be re-sentenced. Precisely what benefit this decision can be to the prisoner does not appear, as it does not touch his conviction, but only his condemnation, which is involved by the verdict of the jury. When the verdict has been given in a trial, the only plea that can avail is one for mercy. That is the case of the sinner standing self-convicted before God. If his plea for mercy through Christ is too long delayed, the question finds him speechless (Matt. 22: 12).

A Honeymoon in Prison is Being Passed by a couple who were married at Mount Vernon, N. Y., on June 16. In trying a man arrested on a charge of assaulting the police, Justice Edmunds questioned the accused man, and learned from him the circumstances of the assault. The police had found him leaving a house in the night, and believing that he was a burglar attempted to arrest him and a fight ensued. The man said he was not a burglar but had merely been to see his sweetheart, who was a servant at the house, and who had supplied him with keys so that he could visit her after the family had retired for the night. The justice sent for the servant, and she admitted that she had given the keys. As the two were willing to be married the justice married them there and then, and afterward sentenced them to four months imprisonment each in Albany penitentiary, humorously suggesting to them that they could regard the journey there as their wedding-trip. The newly married couple seemed overwhelmed with astonishment, having evidently expected that their marriage would have satisfied the judge and averted punishment. No such surprise awaits those who through repentance and faith enter into spiritual union with Christ. His merits absolve them from their past sins (Eph. 5: 25–27).

A Curious Autograph on a Brick has been found in Maine. The Chronicle of Farrington, Me., says, that a few days ago a workman who was cleaning the bricks from the walls of the Old South Church, which was destroyed by fire, found one on which some letters could be seen. When the brick was quite clear the full inscription was legible. It read, "F. V. Stewart, 1836." The brick was taken to Mrs. J. P. Thwing who, being acquainted with Captain Stewart, saved it to show him. The captain, who is now eighty years of age, studied the brick with some interest. For a time he could not understand it, but at last he recollected that about fifty years ago he was in a brick yard, and in an unoccupied moment he amused himself by tracing his signature with the point of his stick on the soft clay of an unburned brick. It must have been sent to the kiln afterward, and ultimately laid in the walls of the church, to be found after half a century. Such a record of words and actions is every man writing, often unconsciously, in the soft material of his daily life. It passes from his sight and memory, but is imperishable and at the last great day, unless it has been erased by the blood of Christ, it will appear in judgment against him. Those who walk secretly in sinful paths forget the warning of the patriarch, that God has set "a print on the heels of their feet" (Job 13: 27).

A Ludicrous Newspaper Blunder is acknowledged with regret and an apology offered in a recent number of the Republican of Anthony, Kan. It appears that the editor was not responsible for the mistake, which occurred after his work was done, and he contends that it was due to the carelessness of an employee. Among the items of news was one reporting a trial in which the mental capacity of a citizen was in question, and over that item was the heading "Adjudged Insane." Another item was the announcement of a marriage, and a description of the festivities, and that paragraph was headed "At Hymen's Altar." In some way, the compositor in arranging the type, transposed the paragraphs but not the headings, and the marriage notice appeared under the caption "Adjudged Insane." The editor did quite right in apologizing, for whether the couple acted wisely or not in marrying, they had not been "adjudged" insane. There are, however, some marriages of which a worse judgment than that of insanity is recorded in heaven. The marriages of Christians with worldlings are pronounced wicked (2 Cor. 6: 14).

BRIEF NOTES.

The Hon. W. L. Gilbert has given $400,000 to establish a home for friendless children at Winsted, Conn.

The number of additions to the churches of Chicago on profession of faith directly traceable to Mr. Moody's meetings is over sixteen hundred.

Native Indian gentlemen are in London protesting against the regulation of prostitution which the British Government has undertaken in seventy cities of India.

The gifts of the Japanese Methodists of San Francisco to Foreign Missions last year, amounted to $400. They have also renovated their church at a cost of $1,000.

The cause of religious education has suffered two severe losses in the deaths of ex-President Mark Hopkins, of Williams College, who died June 17, and President Roswell D. Hitchcock, of the Union Theological Seminary, who died June 16.

Liquor dealers are alarmed at the progress of Prohibition. The National Association of Wholesale Liquor Dealers have ordered an assessment to fight the battle in Texas and Tennessee. One distiller in Cincinnati has given $10,000, toward that object.

Bishop William Taylor writing from Africa in April, asks for fifty "consecrated missionaries" to be sent to him by October. He wants them to be of sound constitution, willing to take nine hours' sleep every night and one day's Sabattic rest every week. Such he believes need not fear the climate.

The trial of the men accused of the murder of Rev. George C. Haddock, the prohibitionist martyr of Sioux City, Iowa, has been adjourned to the next term. A fund has been opened to pay the expenses of the prosecution. The first trial, in which the jury disagreed, has exhausted the money at the command of the family.

The State Convention of the Prohibition party of New York will be held in Alhambra Hall, Syracuse, on Thursday and Friday, Aug. 25 and 26, 1887, for the purpose of electing a State General Committee, placing candidates in nomination for the following State offices, viz.: Secretary of State, Comptroller, Treasurer, Attorney-General, and State Engineer and Surveyor; and for such other business as may come before the Convention.

Rev. J. Arthur Sherman, Chairman of the National Committee of the Young Men's Association of Christian Endeavor is meeting with remarkable success in England in the establishment of this order. The International Conference of this body will meet in Buffalo, N. Y., from December 1 to 14. Among the speakers announced are Drs. J. W. Hamilton, L. W. Davis and J. F. Pall, of Boston; Rev. T. A. Harrison, of Dorchester; Drs. D. C. Ball, Clark Montgomery, D. K. Burns, C. Punshon and D. Clay Ward, of England; Dr. G. W. Gordon, Buffalo; Dr. J. H. Vincent, Plainfield, N. J.; Revs. Sam Jones and Small; Revs. J. Arthur Sherman and Jos. A. Sherman, Youngstown, O.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York.

THE DEATH OF MOSES.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"So Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord."—Deuteronomy 34 : 5.

The Lord's Faithful Servant—Subject to the Common Lot—The Lord may Come—The Death of Moses Remarkable—I. According to Warning—Long Foreseen—Exceedingly Disappointing—A Severe Chastisement—A Great Calamity—Not Averted by Prayer—II. According to Divine Appointment—III. According to Loving Wisdom—Identity with Israel Preserved—Released from Trial—IV. According to Grace—Without Complaint—His Work Finished—A Legend.

WHAT an honorable title! Moses is distinguished as "the servant of Jehovah." He was this of choice, for he willed to be the servant of God rather than to be great in the land of the Pharaohs. Such he was most perseveringly throughout the whole of his life. Such he was most intensely, for he waited upon God for his directions, as a servant waits upon his master; and he endeavored to do all things according to the pattern which was shown him in the holy mount. Oh that you and I may so live as to approve ourselves servants of God! Unto as many as have received him our Lord Jesus has given power to become the sons of God, and this is our great joy; but as sons we aspire to serve our Father, even as His great First-born Son has done, who took upon himself the form of a servant that He might accomplish His Father's good pleasure for His church.

But servant of God as Moses was, he must die. It is of men. We might have expected that he would live on till the people were settled in Canaan; but it seemed right unto the Lord God that he should die outside of the Promised Land, like the rest of the people. Caleb and Joshua alone of all that generation who came out of Egypt were permitted to possess the land towards which they had journeyed for forty years. It may be that we shall not die,

The Common Lot

Our Lord Jesus may Come before we fall asleep; but if He do not come speedily, we shall find that it is appointed unto all men once to die. We shall pass from this world unto the Father by that common road which is beaten hard by the innumerable feet of mortal men. Since we must die, it is well to meditate upon the solemn future. Moses shall be our teacher in the art of dying. We will consider his decease, in the hope that so our fears may be removed, and our desires may be excited. There is a Pisgah where we must yield up the ghost, and be gathered to our fathers: may we climb to it as willingly as did Moses, the servant of God!

I. We are told in the text that "Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord." This I shall read, first, as meaning that Moses died on Pisgah, according to of the Lord. His death was long foreseen. Moses knew some time before, that he must die without setting foot in Canaan. His death outside of the Promised Land did not come upon him at all as a surprise. He had to see his sister Miriam, first of the great trio, fall asleep; and, next, he was called to go up to Mount Hor and disrobe his brother Aaron of his priestly garments, which he placed upon Eleazar, his son. Moses had also to see the whole of the generation that came out of Egypt with him buried in in the wilderness. The Great Lawgiver had thus abundant pledges of his own departure, and he must have had in his brother's death a rehearsal of his own. Have not we also had many warnings? Are we ready?

The Warning

Concerning his death in the land of Moab, it is natural to remark that it was exceedingly disappointing. He had been for forty years engaged in leading the people to the land of promise: must he die when that country was within a day's march? It was his life's work, for which he had been prepared by forty years in Egypt, where he became learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians; and by another forty years in the solitary wilderness, where he kept sheep and held high fellowship with God. His third forty years had been spent in freeing Israel from Egypt, training them to become a nation, and conducting them to the land of promise: must he now expire before the nation entered in? What years his had been!

What a Life

was that of Moses! How glorious was the man who had confronted Pharaoh, and broken the pride of Egypt! How tried and troubled a man had he been while called to carry all that nation in his bosom, and care for them as a shepherd careth for his sheep! Yet, after all that toil in fashioning a nation, he must die before the long-expected conquest. It was a bitter disappointment when first the sentence pierced his heart.

Apparently it was a severe chastisement. His offence was but one, and yet it excluded him from Canaan. We have not time to describe in detail the sin of Moses. It would appear to have been a sin of unbelief, occasioned by his feeling for and with the people. Three times in the Book of Deuteronomy Moses tells the people, "The Lord was angry with me for your sakes." It was not so much that which Moses did personally which involved him in judgment, but he suffered because of his being mixed up with Israel. His faith had saved them, and now his unbelief, being backed by theirs, secures for him the sentence of exclusion from the land.

Beloved, it seemed a great calamity that Moses must die when he did. He was an aged man as to years, but not as to condition. It is true he was a hundred and twenty years old, but his father and his grandfather and his great grandfather had all lived beyond that age, two of them reaching a hundred and thirty-seven, so that he might naturally have of life. This truly grand old man had not failed in any respect; his eye was not dim, neither had his natural force abated, and therefore he might have expected to live on. Besides, it seems a painful thing for a man to die while he was capable of so much work; when, indeed he was more mature, more wise than ever. The mental and spiritual powers of Moses were greater in the latter days of his life than ever before. Notice his wonderful song! Observe his marvellous address to the people! He was in the prime of his mental manhood. He had been tutored by a long experience, chastened by a marvellous discipline, and elevated by a sublime intercourse with God; and yet must he die. How strange that, when a man seems most fit to live, it is then that the mandate comes, "Get thee up into the mountain and die"!

Expected a Longer Lease

The sentence was not to be averted by prayer. Moses tells us that he besought the Lord at that time, "O Lord God, thou hast begun to show thy servant thy greatness, and thy mighty hand: for what God is there in heaven or in earth, that can do according to Thy works, and according to Thy might? I pray thee, let me go over, and see the good land that is beyond Jordan, that goodly mountain, and Lebanon." This was altogether a very proper prayer: he did not plead his own services, but he urged the former mercies of the Lord. Surely this was good pleading, and he might have hoped to prevail for himself, seeing he had formerly been heard for a whole nation. But no! This boon must be denied him. The Lord said, "Let it suffice thee; speak no more unto me of this matter." Moses never again opened his lips upon the subject. He did not beseech the Lord thrice, as Paul did, in his hour of trouble; but seeing that the sentence was final, he bowed his head in holy consent.

When I thought of the trial of Moses in being shut out of the land, I found myself unable to read the chapter which lay open before me, for I was blinded by my tears. How shall any of us stand before a God so holy? Where Moses errs, how shall we be faultless? Never servant more favored of his Lord, and yet even he must undergo a disappointment so great as a rebuke for a single fault. The flower of his life is broken off from the stalk for one act of unbelief. To be exalted so near to God is to be involved in a great responsibility. A fierce light beats about the throne of God. He that is the king's chosen, admitted to continual intercourse with him, must stand in awe of him. Well is it written, "Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling." An offence which might be passed over as a mere trifle in an ordinary subject, would be very serious in a prince of the blood, who had been favored with royal secrets, and had been permitted to lean his head upon the bosom of the king. If we live near to God we cannot sin without incurring sharp rebukes.

II. But now I have to conduct you to a second point of view. Moses, the man of God, died in the land of Moab, "according to the word of the Lord," that is, according to

The Divine Appointment.

All the details of the death of Moses had been ordered of the Lord. Time, place and circumstances were arranged by God. So, brethren, it is appointed unto us where we shall die, and when we shall die. We speak of certain persons as having "died by accident," and we sometimes bewail the deaths of Christian men as premature; but in the deepest sense it is not so. God hath marked out for us the place where, and the time when, we must resign our breath. Let this suffice us. That which is of divine appointment should be to our contentment. We do not believe in the Kismet of blind fate, but we believe in the predestination of infinite wisdom, and therefore we say, "It is the Lord, let him do what seemth him good."

Moses died according to an appointment which is very general amongst God's people. He died without seeing the full result of his life-work. If you look down the list of the servants of God you will find that the most of them die before the object which they had in view is fully accomplished. It is true that we are immortal till our work is done; but then we usually think that our work is something other than it is. It never was the work of Moses to lead Israel into the promised land. It was his wish, but not his work. His work he saw; but his wish he saw not.

Moses did really finish his own proper work; but the desire of his heart was to have seen the people settled in their land; and this was not granted him. Thus David gathered together gold and silver wherewith to build the Temple, but he was not to build it; Solomon, his son, undertook the work. Even thus great reformers rise and speak the truth, and cause colossal systems of error to tremble: but they do not themselves utterly destroy those evils. Their successors continue the work. Most men have to sow, that others may reap. It is according to the divine appointment which links us to each other that one plants and another waters, one brings out of Egypt and another leads into Canaan. We also shall in life and death answer some gracious purpose of the Lord. Are we not glad to have it so? Yea, Lord, thy will be done.

III. I have conducted you a little out of the dark now, and the sky is clearing around us. In the third place, Moses died according to

The Loving Wisdom

of the Lord. It was a meet thing, a wise thing, and a kind thing that Moses should not go over Jordan. First, by so doing he preserved his identity with the people for whom he had cared. For their sakes he had forsaken a princedom in Egypt, and now for their sakes he loses a home in Palestine. He had suffered with them "esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than all the treasures of Egypt;" and he had been with them in all that great and terrible wilderness, afflicted in all their affliction, bearing and carrying them in God's name all his days; was it not meet that he should at last die with them? He sleeps with the older nation; he ends his career on the hither side of Jordan, like all the generation which he had numbered when they came out from under the iron hand of the Egyptian tyrant. It seemed fit that one so identified with the people should say, "Where thou diest I will die." Are not we satisfied to take our lot with the holy men and women who already sleep in Jesus?

Moreover, Moses might be well content to die there and then, since he was thus released from all further trial. Surely he had known enough of sorrow in connection with that rebellious nation! Forty years was enough for a pastorate over a people so fickle and perverse. His was no life of luxury and ease, but of self-denial, and perpetual provocation. What trial he endured! What self-restraint he exercised! What he led! Are you surprised to hear me say that? With whom could he associate? Even Aaron, his brother, was a poor comrade for such a man. Remember how he failed Moses, when that man of God was absent for forty days upon the Mount with God. Moses dwelt apart, and shone as a lone star. It is significant that he died alone, for so had he lived. Aaron had tender attendants to disrobe him: he who put the vestments on, most fitly aided to take them off; but the crown which Moses wore, God himself had set upon his brow, and no human hand must remove it. Surely this burdened watcher of Israel must have been glad when his watch was over! We also in our deaths shall find the end of toil, and the rest will be glorious.

A Lonely Life

Remember, that by his so dying, in the next place he was relieved from a fresh strain upon him, which would have been involved in the conquest of Canaan. He would have crossed the Jordan, not to enjoy the country, but to fight for it; was he not well out of so severe a struggle? Joshua was naturally a man of war; let him use the sword, for Moses was abler at the pen. The Lord, therefore, graciously took him off the active list, and promoted him to a higher sphere. Let us not be distressed by the fact that he will one day perform the like kindness to us in our turn.

But, you will say, surely it might have been as well if Moses had lived to have the country. Would this have been desirable? Do active men find much delight in sitting still and seeing others take the lead? Had Moses remained the leader of the people, he might have injured the glory of his former days. Have we not seen aged men survive their wisdom? Have not their friends wished that they had closed their career long before? Have we not seen pastors, once able and efficient, holding to their pulpits to the injury of the churches they once edified? Oh, that men would have wisdom enough not to undo in their age what they have wrought in their youth! Moses is removed before this evil can happen, and it is well.

Seen Joshua Win

IV. I must hasten on to say, that while the death of Moses thus exhibits the loving wisdom of God, the way in which he died abundantly displays the grace of God. After Moses had been well assured that he must die you hear of it, nor even a prayer against it. Most fitly the old man immediately called forth all his energies to finish his work. He prepared his manuscripts, not for the press, but to be put away in the ark and to be preserved. He would have his testimony to future generations complete before his hand was paralyzed by death. He knew that he was to die, but he did not sit down and weep, nor sulk, nor give himself up to bitter forebodings of the hour of departure. He served his God with increased vigor, and was more than ever alive as life neared its close. Then he preached his best sermon. What a wonderful sermon it was! How he poured out his heart in pleading with the people! The sermon over, he began to sing. The swan is fabled to sing but once, and that just before it dies; so did Moses at the last give us that famous ninetieth Psalm. Moses had no time for poetry while his whole strength was needed in his government; but now he is about to die, his frame of mind is ecstatic; prose will not content him, he must weave his thoughts into verse. In fine, all the faculties of his manhood were drawn out to their utmost in a final effort to glorify the Lord his God. Brethren, is not this a fine fruit of grace? Oh, that we may bear it!

No Complaint

Then he gathered the tribes together and blessed them in prophetic words, pouring out his soul in benedictions. Having already cried to God about his successor, he laid his hands upon Joshua, and charged him, and encouraged him, and bade the people help in his service.

He did all that remained to be done, and then Went Willingly to his End.

We, my brethren, also expect to die. Let us not fear it, but let us arouse ourselves to labor more abundantly; let us preach more boldly, let us sing more sweetly, let us pray more ardently. As flowers before they shed their leaves pour out all their perfumes, so let us pour out our souls unto the Lord. Let us live while we live, and dying, let us die unto the Lord. May our life-work close as sets the sun, looking greater when he sinks into the west than when he shines at full meridian height!

Moreover, his successor was appointed, and was just below in the plain. It was not his son, but it was his servant, who had become his son at length. He did not leave his flock to be scattered, his building to be thrown down. Happy Moses, to see his Joshua! Happy Elijah, to see his Elisha! The succession of workers lies with the Master, not with the workers. We are to train men "who can teach others also;" but our own especial work we must leave with the Lord. Yet as Paul was glad of Timothy, so must Moses have rejoiced over Joshua, and felt a release from care. He died, moreover, possible. Some men expire most fitly in the presence of their children; their strength has laid in their domestic duties and affections, and their children fitly close their eyes: but for the man Moses there was no true kindred. You hear that he married an Ethiopian woman; but you know nothing about her. You know that he had sons. but you do not hear a word about them except their names: their father was too engrossed in honoring his God to crave office for them. As we have seen, he lived as to men, alone, and as to men he died alone. But God was with him, and in the peculiarly near and dear society of God he closed his life on the lone peak. If he suffered any weakness no mortal eye beheld it.

In the Best Company

As he died, the sweetness of his last thought was indescribable. Before his strengthened eye there lay the goodly land and Lebanon. The Lord showed him all the land of Gilead unto Dan. Yonder is Carmel, and beyond it he sees the gleam of the utmost sea. Through breaks of the mountains he sees Bethlehem and Jebus, which is Jerusalem. What a vision! Yet even this melted into

A Nobler View.

As we have seen in our childhood by the light of the magic lantern one view dissolve into another, so did the lower scene gradually melt away into another; and the servant of the Lord found himself removed from the shadows which his eye had seen into the realities which eyes cannot behold. He had gone from Canaan below to Canaan above, and from the vision of Jerusalem on earth to the joy of the City of Peace in glory.

The Rabbis say that our text means that Moses died at the mouth of God, and that his soul was taken away by a kiss from the Lord's mouth. I do not know, but I have no doubt that there was more sweetness in the truth than even their legend could set forth. As a mother takes her child and kisses it, and then lays it down to sleep in its own bed; so did the Lord kiss the soul of Moses away to be with him forever, and then he hid his body we know not where. Whoever had such a burial as that of Moses? Angels contended over it, but Satan has failed to use it for his purposes. That body was not lost, for in due time it appeared on the Mount of Transfiguration, talking with Jesus concerning the greatest event that ever transpired. Oh that we also may pass away amid the most joyful prospects; heaven coming down to us as we go up to heaven! May we also attain unto the resurrection from among the dead, and be with our Lord in His glory!

Soon our turn shall come. Do we dread it? As we are favored to serve our Lord we shall be favored to be called home in due season. Let us be ever ready; yea, joyfully ready. To the believer it is not death to die. Since Jesus has died and risen again, the sting of death is gone: wherefore let us prepare ourselves to climb where Moses stood. Amen.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS

THE STORY OF METLAKAHTLA.*

A CIVILIZING work without parallel, alike remarkable for the original thought and genius displayed, and for the heroic courage in execution, is that conceived and carried out by William Duncan, in British Columbia, on the North Pacific Coast, near Alaska.

Captain (now Admiral) Prevost, returning to England from a cruise in the North Pacific, excited great public interest by his account of the terrible state of barbarism that prevailed there. Mr. Duncan sacrificed a highly lucrative position in a business house, and started out for this field under the auspices of the Church Missionary Society, taking passage in a Hudson's Bay Company's sailing vessel, which rounded Cape Horn. On reaching Vancouver Island, Sir James Douglas, then the Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, urged, in the strongest possible terms, the folly of his attempting to civilize the murderous hordes of the North Pacific; asserting that it would be a useless sacrifice of his life. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Duncan, persisted in his determination to go on, and he was taken to Fort Simpson, a fortified trading post of the Hudson's Bay Company. Fort Simpson was the centre of an Indian settlement, consisting of nine Tsimshean tribes, notorious on the whole coast for their cruel, bloodthirsty savagery—given up to dark superstition and atrocious habits of cannibalism—constantly waging war upon the neighbouring tribes. Their warfare was carried on with revolting cruelty, and in taking captives they enslaved the women and children, and beheaded the men. As they did not take scalps, the heads of their victims served as their trophies of war, which—after the manner of our own highly civilized ancestors in the last century—were borne home on the points of their spears, to afterward dangle from their girdles during their hideous devil dances.

Despite their atrocious barbarity, these people showed evidence of superior intellectual capacity. Their language, abounding in metaphors, is copious and expressive, and with few exceptions the sounds are sweet, soft and flowing.

One of the most marked characteristics of these people is their inordinate personal pride and vanity. In fact, this is true of all the North Pacific tribes, because of a slight taunt, or insult, a man will sometimes kill a slave or destroy all his property, believing that thereby he wipes out all the disgrace. Some years ago an officer in charge of a division of an Arctic search expedition indiscreetly gave out that he was about to send for a certain prominent chief. Word of this reached the ears of the chief in question, who was in the habit of being waited upon, or the honor of his presence requested; so when the officer's emissaries arrived, they were carved and grilled and eaten by the affronted chief and his council to wipe out the insult.

Shortly after Mr. Duncan's arrival he witnessed, while standing on the gallery of one of the bastions, a most sickening sight—a party of hideously painted cannibals tearing limb from

* A wonderful story of successful Christian work among the Indians, which Mr. Duncan has carried on for thirty years, containing a description of the town which he founded, his method of government and of evangelistic work—a story of deep interest. Pp. 483; Illustrated. Price $1.50. Published by Saxon & Co., 39 Chambers St., New York.

A Bulgarian Priest Blessing the Cattle of the Parish.

limb the body of a woman, who had just been foully murdered by a chief; each struggling for a morsel of the human flesh which they devoured, accompanying their fiendish orgies with unearthly howls, and weird beat of their medicine-drums. These scenes were continued during the night, and were followed by debaucheries lasting several days, during which most terrible atrocities were perpetrated, several of their number being slain just without the gates of Fort Simpson.

Such scenes as these might well daunt the stoutest heart, but to Mr. Duncan they only proved a stimulus to his intrepid determination to rescue them from their benighted state. With great patience and rare ingenuity, by means of signs, gestures and objects, he secured a fair vocabulary of Tsimshean words, which he wrote down phonetically, and began to construct into sentences. At the end of several months he was able to write out a simple address, explanatory of his mission among them, setting forth that a white man had come, not to barter or get gain, but to bring them a message from the white man's God, and to teach them the knowledge of those things in which the white man was superior to the red man. This naturally excited the curiosity of the Indians, and, finally, when Mr. Duncan ventured out among them, in spite of the warning of the officers of the fort, he was warmly received by the chiefs and people, who regarded him as some supernatural being.

At the end of four years Mr. Duncan found, as the result of his labors, that he could muster a fair number of sincere converts; but these were subject to the temptations incident to a trading post, especially as regards drunkenness. Also, he deplored the retrograding influence of constant intercourse with those natives who continued their heathenish rites, and who sought in every possible way to destroy the work of the Christian white man.

In consideration of these obstacles, Mr. Duncan resolved to remove his followers from their pernicious surroundings, and establish an isolated model community. He selected for this purpose a place called Metlakahtla, about twenty miles from Fort Simpson—the site of one of the ancient Tsimshean villages, which had been abandoned by the natives some years before. On the day appointed for the removal, fifty souls—men, women and children—were ready to start, and others promised soon to follow. It was a solemn and impressive scene, when the little flock embarked in the six canoes freighted with their belongings, and set sail for their new home, while the whole population turned out to witness the departure, and say farewells.

On landing at Metlakahtla, Mr. Duncan and his Indian converts began immediately to erect huts and a school-house, which also served as a church. Mr. Duncan was greatly encouraged by the arrival of three hundred recruits.

BLESSING CATTLE IN BULGARIA.

(See Illustration.)

In the Greek Church of eastern Europe much of the religious work is done by the married parish clergy, who are popularly styled "Papas" or "Fathers." Bishops are not allowed to marry, but the working clergy are not, as a rule, ordained until they are married. They differ from the monastic clergy, from among which the Bishops are chosen, in other ways, but it is to them that the people look for pastoral work. They belong by birth to the people, and they usually live on terms of familiarity with the peasantry, and identify themselves with the rustic population, being not much distinguished from them in manners and habits of domestic life. Among the ecclesiastical customs of Bulgaria is that of the priest visiting a farmyard, at stated intervals, to pronounce a religious benediction upon the increase of the flocks and herds; the oxen and cows, the sheep, the goats, getting the benefit of his blessing, which is read with solemnity from an authorized liturgy, accompanied with the gentle waving of a feathered fan, sprinkling a few drops of consecrated water in the presence of the assembled rural household. The picture of this observance on this page is taken from a sketch by an artist who has sojourned in that country, and may be regarded as an incident characteristic of the primitive simplicity of the Bulgarian people. There is a disposition in our land and in these times to hold such a custom up to ridicule, and to pity the people who are so ignorant as to expect benefit from a priest's blessing pronounced in a farmyard. The disposition is not altogether creditable to us. The ignorant peasant is, in his own blundering way, expressing his belief in God's control over the minutest affairs of his life, which is much better than the effort now going on among ourselves to eliminate God from all secular affairs.

AN ATHEIST ON HIS KNEES.

(See Illustration on page 413.)

The following incident is related by an English traveler, who recently spent some years in exploring our Western States:

It was the close of the Sabbath, and there had been no public worship in the village where I tarried. After the darkness had come on, and the crowds began gradually to desert the streets, I bent my steps towards the woods. I had rambled for some time, when, from between the dark trunks of the trees, a light burst upon my vision, and presently I heard the accents of a voice, apparently engaged in vehement declamation. I pressed forward through the underbrush, and stood within the woodland meeting-house. It was a wild, yet lovely scene; a grand old hall, roofed with heaven's arch, carpeted with the green grass, and columned with massive oaks. A pulpit, made by felling trees, and forming a breastwork with their trunks, with a rough board for a desk, was lighted up by two large and flickering torches. Rude seats had been arranged in rows before this singular rostrum, and upon them were seated between 100 and 200 dimly seen forms.

But my eye very soon yielded to the horror which my ears took in. A young man was haranguing the assembly in a flippant style in defence of infidelity, and though he only rehearsed the stale and oft-refuted objections of all free-thinkers, and reminded me of a child leveling his little arrows at the Alps, most of his auditors seemed pleased and the rest quite unconcerned. He had almost concluded when I arrived, and I had not been there many minutes before the poor skeptic, vain of the applause he elicited, took his seat in a conspicuous place upon the platform, and looked around him with an air of perfect triumph.

I was hesitating whether to leave the spot, or to endeavor, in my feeble way, to counteract the effect of his words, when a man arose in a corner of the camp-ground and asked to be heard for one moment. He was an old, gray-haired man, who leaned upon a staff. The simple eloquence of his manner, and the attendant circumstances, have ineffaceably stamped his words upon my memory. He said, as nearly as I can remember: "My dear neighbors, I have lived a great many years in your midst. My form has gradually bowed, and my locks have been bleaching before the effects of seventy winters, and I know you will hear me.

"Out in that copse, which is now lighted up by the pale moonlight, I buried two hardy, noble sons; and yet that spot is to me the pleasantest place on this blessed, beautiful earth; for thence went up two sainted spirits to the abodes of everlasting joy; yes, to that heaven which yon scoffer affects to deride. But though his wicked soul cannot realize such a place as heaven, I will show you that there is a world which he not only conceives of, but which in his secret soul he fears.

"You all know the cataract, which is even now sending its sullen whisper through these woods. I stood but a few days ago upon the brink of the swiftly flowing river, just above where it casts itself headlong from the precipice. I noticed suddenly a skiff, containing a single man, shoot out from the opposite shore, and prepare to cross. Just as he reached the middle of the stream, one of his oars broke, and the other was jerked from his grasp. I shall never forget the look of agony which convulsed his face when he saw that all his supports were gone, and that the boat was rushing down towards the fatal cataract. At first, loud calls for help awoke the mountain echoes for miles around.

"Soon the cries of agony were over, and he fell upon his knees within the boat, and he prayed. Oh, what burning words, what ravings of terror, what promises of the future, what reproaches for the past, were shrieked to heaven! Just then I succeeded in obtaining help; and he who had been within one short moment of eternity, stood safe again upon the shore. That man sits there! Yes, he who prayed when God's strong hand was hurrying him, as he thought, on to eternity, is here, cursing and even denying that very Being whom he then acknowledged, and who saved his life."

Every eye was turned towards the first speaker; and that countenance will haunt me while I live. Pale as the moonbeams in whose full lustre he sat, his eyes turned in a fearful gaze to the sky, his hands clenched, he had risen to his feet, and stood for one moment; then, breaking through the throng, he disappeared in the forest. A thrill of fear, and a cry of horror, ran through the assembly, as they sat an instant chained to the spot. Then dispersing, the old man and myself were left alone. I clasped his aged hand, and our tears and thanksgivings flowed out in unison that he had been able to give to the people who had listened to the blasphemy a convincing proof of the insincerity of the blasphemer.

An Atheist's Prayer in a Boat.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 393.)

Alfred's Return to Aspendale.

THE shades of evening were gathering around the hospitable mansion of the Quaker merchant, when the father and daughter arrived. Scarcely had they joined the family group, and told of their intended journey, than the servant brought the intelligence to the party in the cosy sitting-room that some persons had asked to see Robert Atheling on business of importance. They had declined to send in any further message than that they had come far to see him, and that they were sure he would be glad to give them an interview if he knew their errand.

Robert was always thinking more or less about his brother Alfred, and he instantly jumped at the conclusion that this visit was connected somehow with his brother's fortunes. He was now able to move about with the aid of a stick and a friendly arm. So, at Ephraim Hartgold's suggestion, he went into the merchant's private sanctum to receive his visitors.

In the sitting-room he had left were assembled Ephraim and Keturah, together with Ruth, his own darling Ruth, and also Señor Bonanza and sweet Inez, whose heart had just been made happier by two events—the permission to accompany Ethel Spofforth to Yorkshire, and the unexpected arrival of Captain Lanyon, who was "berthed," as he would have called it, by the "cabin" fire. These Robert left behind. Whom would he find waiting for his coming? "Hallo, Ned Saltmer!" said he, seizing the hand of the honest artisan, who was the foremost of the party. "I'm glad to see you. How is my good friend Madge?"

But by this time, Joss, who had no notion of being second in any welcome from his beloved master, placed his forefeet on his knee, and gave three joyous little barks, wagging his tail the while, as though he would employ both ends of himself to win the recognition he desired.

"Why, Joss! Joss, dear old friend! The sight of you is enough to make one homesick with a vengeance." And in very effusive fashion indeed did these two demonstrate their mutual opinions that "auld acquaintance should never be forgot."

The second visitor was good Simon Holmes, who looked so ludicrously happy standing there by the door, hat in one hand and running the fingers of the other through his long gray hair, his eyebrows arched to the utmost, and a smile upon his face that took up the whole area and seemed to spread itself over his entire person.

"Why, Simon!" said Robert, "if I might venture to predict what you would wish to say by how you look, I should prophesy that you have something exceedingly pleasant to tell me. Is it the best news, dear friend?"

"The varry best, Mister Robert, the varry best of all. But ah doan't think ah cud get it oot just now without chooakin', an' seea him 'at's browt it had better tell yo' his-sen."

Standing aside, he made room for the approach of a tall, gentlemanly looking youth who had stood back in the shade. His auburn hair was cut short, so that the native tendency to curl was not permitted to assert itself. He had a somewhat flourishing moustache that did assert itself effectively. His face was brown and sunburnt, but the blue eyes could not possibly be disguised.

"Robert! brother Robert!" said he, stepping forward. "Will you, can you, give me welcome? See here!" he continued, holding forth the bag with the familiar H. H. stamped thereon—"at least, believe me that your unworthy brother never stooped to be a thief."

"Alf! my brother Alf! Now God be praised!" said Robert, and rising from his seat, utterly forgetful of his own unstable limbs, he literally fell upon his neck and kissed him It was a touching picture. "O Alf! Alf! Alf! how this will bring the sunshine back to Aspen Garth! Surely our sainted father in his home in heaven sees this happy hour!"

It was a sight to see the strong, staid, sedate Robert Atheling, weeping like a schoolboy, fondling the repentant youth as if he had been a child, and all the while talking half incoherently of "father," "mother," "Alf, dear Alf!" mingled with ejaculations of gratitude to God. Ned Saltmer would have given a trifle to have had his white apron at command, for the honest fellow's tender heart was a fountain unsealed; the old carpenter's big colored cotton handkerchief was in constant requisition.

"Ha, ha, Mr. Robert! O, O Mr. Alfred!" said he, half laughing, half crying, and altogether beside himself with joy. "Ah tell'd yo', ah tell'd yo', ah allus tell'd yo' that God was as good as His wod! Oh, if nobbut ah'd a pair o' wings! ah wad flee te Aspen Garth like a swallo' an' mak' your mother t' happiest woman i' Christendom. Ned Saltmer, my lad, give us hode o' your hand!" and he gave the good carpenter's hand a shake and a squeeze that expressed his joy.

In a little time the reunited brothers sufficiently regained their composure to talk calmly of the events which had occurred since their separation. Alfred's lips were unsealed now about those times of gay frivolity and dissipation which had led to all his bitter experience. In bygone years his brother would have been the last person in the world to whom Alfred could have revealed that sad record. Now, however, that the record was closed, and he had said farewell to all such habits, he could speak of them to Robert freely.

"You could not have been happy in such a life, Alfred," said Robert, when the narrative was ended.

"No," Alfred admitted, "it was not happiness, it was a delirious excitement. It was like brandy or opium. I suppose the victim of either is never happy; but when he attempts to cut off his indulgence he is more miserable than when under their influence. A quiet evening at home was torture to me. I tried it many times. I would try to read or to write, but I would grow restless; I could not fix my attention. My imagination was running off to the theatre or the concert hall, or some riotous party, until feeling supremely wretched, I could bear it no longer, and rushed off anywhere to get the excitement I craved. It was a horrible time. Thank God, I have been delivered, even at such a cost."

"Yes, thank God, none but He could have done it," said Robert. And was that description you wrote in the magazine of your peril at sea substantially true? Did you really go through such a trial?"

"Oh! did you see that? How could you have known that I wrote it?"

"Yes, we saw that, and 'The Peep at the Old Home.' It was 'the peep' that gave us the clue to the identity of Ralph Ravensworth."

"Yes; the story is just what happened, save that the names are changed."

"Then we have reason to thank God again for your deliverance. You must have had a narrow escape."

"Death was very near," said Alfred, shuddering at the recollection, "as near as it ever will be until the time comes when I must die. But now enough of my unworthy self. Tell me how you have spent your time."

Robert related the history of his life in London, his vain search for Alfred, and finally his coming to Sharon Lodge to get the bag, and his providential rescue of Ruth, with the sickness resulting from that night's experience. "Now," he said, when he reached that point, "you must see Ruth herself. Lend me your arm, and help me back into the parlor. I must introduce you to my host and hostess, and—his voice sank into a whisper—your future sister-in-law."

Leaning on Alfred's arm, Robert led the way back to the little circle in the parlor, from which Alfred's coming had summoned him, while Simon Holmes and Ned Saltmer followed. Mrs. Hartgold was sitting at the outer edge of the group, and to her Robert directed his steps, proud now to acknowledge his brother. Alfred's eyes rested admiringly on the calm, motherly face, and he was extending his hand to meet that hospitably held out to him, when two noises startled him. One was the loud ejaculation of a hearty voice, which had gained strength in contention with the roar of the wind across a ship's deck in many a stormy night, and the other a startled cry that contained as much of joy as surprise. Looking quickly around, what was his astonishment to recognize Captain Lanyon and Inez.

"Ah! you deserter, you are fairly trapped," roared the Captain, seizing Alfred's shoulder with a grip of iron; "I arrest you, young man, on the charge of deserting your ship under the most aggravating circumstances;" and the Captain laughed heartily at his joke.

"We were so distressed at your leaving us, Mr. Ravensworth," said Inez, shaking hands with him, her eyes expressing the cordiality and regard that were wont to characterize her manner during their companionship at sea, when there were no decorous city people present to remind her of the restraint which the usages of society impose on the utterances of the tongue. She could not say more in the presence of Ruth and Mrs. Hartgold, but the look she darted into Alfred's eyes told him plainly how much grief his sudden flight had caused her.

It was now Señor Bonanza's turn. Alfred thought he had never seen any nobler or more winsome features in living man than those that met his gaze when that gentleman rose from his place, pushed back from his brow his whitening hair, took Alfred's two hands in his, and said: "This, then, is the young gentleman who behaved so tenderly and helpfully to my darling daughter during that terrible time when she was in peril on the sea! Permit me, Mr. Ravensworth, to tender you a father's thanks——"

"But I don't understand," said Alfred, thoroughly mystified. "Captain Lanyon——"

"Is her father yet!" said the captain stoutly, "and is going to be, but Señor Bonanza has set up a claim, too, that I cannot resist, and Inez thinks she has a heart large enough for us both. I hope she has, for I sha'n't like to lose her love."

Explanations followed, to which Alfred listened with the attention which a young man cannot but feel in all that concerns the lady who has found her way into his heart. Simon Holmes and Ned Saltmer had to be made known too, and their connection with Alfred's history described. The night closed on a happy and thoughtful party, whose foremost thought and feeling was that of devout and loving thankfulness to an overruling Providence who had brought so much good out of evil, and out of a cloud so dark had educed so bright a light.

Ephraim Hartgold, though by no means easily moved from the even current of his ways, was moved to propose that they should kneel in silent prayer. He himself was the first to break the silence and to pour out their common thanks in simple and earnest prayer to the good God that is over all. He was followed by Simon Holmes, who for the moment largely left his breadth of dialect and prayed with so much of force and feeling, and shaped the expression of their thanks and sympathies in such stirring sentences, that they all felt as though they were kneeling at the gate of Heaven.

Ned Saltmer, Simon Holmes, Alfred Atheling and Joss returned to Ned's cottage for the night, but before they left, yielding to the entreaties of Alfred and Simon, whose thoughts had turned to his neglected business now that his work in Alfred's interest was completed, Robert agreed to accompany them to Aspen Garth on the next day if he were able to travel.

Ruth and Mrs. Hartgold would fain have detained their guest, but with the delicacy and consideration which characterized both ladies, they forbore to urge his remaining when it was evident that he was able to travel and that his going would add to the happiness of those dear to him. Accordingly, on the following day Robert was assisted by Alfred from his room in Mr. Hartgold's mansion to a hack, in which he drove to the railroad station, where with Simon Holmes and the faithful Joss they took the train for Yorkshire. On the journey down Robert's thoughts continually turned to the dear, good girl he had left behind at Sharon Lodge, and he could not but thank God as he traveled over the country, which but a short time before he had crossed in anxiety and apprehension, that on his return journey he had his brother by his side and had gained since then the most precious thing that man can gain in this world—the pure love of a good woman.

No words of mine can describe the welcome which awaited the travelers at Aspen Garth. Not since Alfred's departure in the days long gone by had her children seen on Widow Atheling's face so deep a joy, so unadulterated a happiness. The Benjamin of her flock, her youngest born, was lost and was found, and the elder brother was not standing discontented outside, marring the festivities with his unbrotherly malignity, but was rejoicing with the mother that God had enabled him to bring the prodigal home. Surely never before had the beech-logs flung so bright a glow upon the hearthstone, never before lit up the spacious ingle with such a cheerful flame.

Among the happy and grateful group that gathered there on Alfred's return was Simon Holmes, for he could be ill spared at a time like that. He who had wept with them that wept, must now help to make their rejoicing more.

"If there's yah thing mair then anuther te be depended on," said Simon, "te be depended on fully an' for iver, it's this: God's marcy is allus mair than a match for oor misery, an' prayer an' faith can set yan ageean t' other till misery mak's an end of itself an' massy gains the day. Them things 'at seeams te us te be meeast unlikely is just the soort o' things' 'at He tak's pleasure i' deoain'; just te show us 'at it pays te trust Him, nut a lahtle bit noo an' then, but oot an' oot, an' all the tahme. It's a grand thing, Mrs. Atheling, that the good Lord tohns oor varry troubles inte t' meeans o' bringin' us tiv his-self. Ah wunder hoo monny prayers hez been offered up for Mr. Alfred."

"None can tell but the Lord Himself," said Mrs. Atheling.

"An' what's prayers for but te be answered, ah sud like te knoa? Ah've allus said 'at as sure as Sunday morning follows Saturday night, them 'at sows i' tears shall reeap i' joy, an' that you wad ha' your lad, the bairn o' monny prayers, te hug te your heart ageean, because God is allus as good as His wod."

"That's true, Simon; you never gave up hope, and many a time you have cheered me by your confidence."

"I'll tell yo' what," continued the old carpenter, "it seeams te me 'at we niver owt te put ony limits te what God can deea for us. Why, Mr. Robert, if a lahtle ant was te cum te t' door o' your granary an' ax yo' kindly for a grain o' corn, you wud say, 'Tak' it an' welcome, ah sall loss nowt be that.' Noo, isn't it sense an' reeason that all an' everything 'at we can ask o' the Almighty is i' comparison summat less then that? I had a tree i' my garden last autumn 'at was so full o' golden apples, 'at when ah lifted me hand te pull an odd 'un, ah shak'd t' branch an' mair then a schhore on 'em fell tumm'lin' at me feet. Says ah te me-self, 'Thoo's a generous tree, an' like the God that meeade tha' thoo gi'es ma' mair then ah axed for."

"I can say that of the Lord's goodness to me," said the widow.

"An' then ageean," he continued, "what a monny wunderful ways He hez o' meetin' oor wants, an' helpin' us i' oor heavy needs and foorce-puts! He's niver at a loss. If yah way weean't deea, He tries anuther. It's just like t' fooaks 'at were on t' ship wi' Paul when it brak' its back on a rock. Some on 'em swam ashore; some on 'em wer' carried by planks, an' some on 'em floated upo' brokken pieces o' ship; some on 'em yah way, an' some on 'em anuther; but be it hoo it may, he browt 'em all safe ashore. We think 'at oor ship's the thing te bring us seeafe te land, an' all of a sudden He breks wer ship up, an' finds us a plank 'at we nivver expected an' didn't mitch like t' looks on; but you can testify 'at its browt yo' te land for all that."

It is no wonder that both at the Towers and the Garth, and indeed at every house in Aspendale where trouble was, the pious old carpenter was a welcome guest. There was something contagious in his firm and fervent faith; and long after the doctor had given an adverse opinion in some case of serious illness the simple villagers would ask if Simon had "given 'em up." Methinks it is a pity that simple but sublime faith like this, power with God like this, holy influence with men like this, is so rare a thing among Christian people. Were it otherwise we might hope to see signs and wonders, wonders of healing, wonders of deliverence, wonders of reformation and conversion, wonders of rapid evangelization which now we only dream of and so very seldom see.

(To be Continued.)

THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for July 10. Matt. 2:13, 23. Golden Text, Ps. 18:19.

The Warning to the Wise Men—Obedience Apparently Imprudent—Mistakes about Divine Guidance—Consequences to be left to God—Loss often Involved by Obedience—Self-supporting Gospel Work Needed—The Massacre of the Infants—The Prompt Obedience of a Consecrated Man—A Word Surer than a Dream—Souls in Bondage.

AFTER the wise men had worshipped the Infant Jesus at Bethlehem, they were "warned of God in a dream, that they should not return to Herod." Here was a trial of faith, and a test of obedience. The king of the country where they were sojourning had commanded them to return to him with tidings of the new-born king. Human wisdom would have said, "At all costs, do as the king commands; you will never again have such an opportunity to testify for Him whom you have believed in and worshipped." Or, again, personal fear might have influenced them. The king would know how much time the journey to Bethlehem would take, and if they did not return within a given time he might pursue and slay them. But these wise men saw God as greater than the kings of the earth, and they obeyed Him without a question, leaving all results to Him. Much of the difficulty which God's children have arises from their weighing the clear directions of God in the scales of human prudence. It was this very thing which led to the setting up of the golden calves in Dan and in Bethel. God had commanded his people, "Take heed to thyself that thou offer not thy burnt offerings in every place that thou seest: but in the place which the Lord shall choose in one of thy tribes, there thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, and there thou shalt do all that I command thee" (Deut. 12:13, 14). But when Jeroboam became king, he reasoned against the plain command of God: "Jeroboam said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David; if this people go up to do sacrifice in the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam, king of Judah, and they shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam, King of Judah" (1 Kings 12:26, 27). The result was the setting up of the golden calves, and the making Israel to sin! We have no right to judge or question the consequences of anything which God has in His Word commanded us to do. He will take the consequences if we obey.

Concerning Guidance,

"The wise men" departed into their own country another way. And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, "Arise, and take the young child and His mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy Him." Here, again, was clear direction; but to follow it involved a cost. Joseph's business was at Nazareth; all his stock in trade was there; all his connection was there; to remain away meant the ruin of his business.

Could he Afford to Obey God?

This is the question, baldly put, which is stirring the hearts of thousands; they see that to follow God fully must involve a loss, and as they have not really yielded themselves a living sacrifice to Him, they are not prepared for it, and they uphold the claims of self against the claims of God. Joseph was "a just man," and he recognized that God must be first in everything; so, without a moment's hesitation, the very same night he arose, packed all they had with them on an ass, seated Mary and the holy Child upon it, and the very same night in which God spoke to him, before the morning broke, he commenced his journey. This promptitude of obedience, with no guarantee of success but the eternal faithfulness of God, is most lovely, most precious, and alas, most rare! What was the little business at Nazareth compared to the interests of Jesus?

How were the holy family maintained in Egypt? We are not told; but I doubt not that Joseph found employment as a journeyman carpenter. There are many who think beneath them, and who wish to enter upon evangelistic work because they think it would raise them somewhat in worldly position. This idea never came from Jesus, who labored with his hands; nor yet from Paul, who said, "Laboring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you; we preached unto you the gospel of God" (1 Thes. 2:9). We hope the time is coming when there will be more of self-supporting gospel work and self-supporting missions abroad. Joseph was in no hurry to return; he remained in Egypt until the death of Herod, and the prophecy of Hos. 11:1 was fulfilled in the Person of Jesus, as in the people of Israel, "Out of Egypt have I called My Son."

Mechanical Labor

Herod watched in vain for the return of the wise men. The time they would have taken for the double journey had more than elapsed, but there was no trace of them, and no tidings reached the king's ears. He was not accustomed to be disobeyed. It was very clear that they had no intention of coming to the king. But it may be, his conscience may have smitten him, and that he may have felt that this was God's hand working to hinder his evil purposes. But Herod had taken his choice; he had entered the lists to contest with God. So, in his wicked, tyrannical hatred of the infant Jesus, he in Bethlehem of two years and under, thinking that in so doing the life of Jesus would be sacrificed. But the unhappy tyrant had not taken into account who it was he was contending with. "Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker! Let the potsherds strive with the potsherds of the earth" (Isa. 45:9). Herod, unknown to himself, was bringing about the fulfilment of prophecy. "In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation and weeping and great mourning; Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not." But the children and the mothers? Surely, He who so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son to save the world, would fold these little ones in safety into His own presence, and He who was anointed to comfort all that mourn (Isa. 61:3), would not fail to comfort these bereaved mothers!

Slew all the Children

When Herod was dead, Joseph received direction in the same way as before, "by a dream," that he should return again into the land of Israel. He must have been fairly established in Egypt by that time, but he was ready for any move to which God called him; he had yielded himself and his will up to God, he was a truly consecrated believer.

"I don't like,"

and "I don't think," are words scarcely heard from the lips of one who is really consecrated; his object is to know what God wills and what God thinks. Joseph did not judge for himself when the infant Jesus would be out of danger, but waited to be guided. The royal David, at all times and in all circumstances, accepted guidance from God. "He leadeth me," was his glad testimony. King though he was, he was a little child in his own eyes, with no trust in himself. And it was this loving, confident trust in a God who infallibly guided him as he obeyed, which made David's life to overflow with praise. There are many who think that if they would only receive guidance by a dream, as Joseph did, they could be more sure of God's mind than they can be without such a personal direction. Peter was of another opinion, when he said, "We have also of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place" (2 Pet. 1:19). Where there is a heart really subject to God, and a spirit still enough before Him for Him to speak to it, He will never fail to guide. Of course, He wants us to know His will. But if we have a preconception in our hearts that His will must be in this direction or that, we are not open to His guidance. While we are balancing in our own minds the pros and cons of any question, we are not in a condition to learn the mind of God; it is in the stillness of our souls that we hear the still, small voice of God.

A More Sure Word

Joseph "arose and took the young Child and His mother, and came into the land of Israel. But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither; notwithstanding being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee: and he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth, that it might be fullfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene." Again the willing Joseph obeyed. There is something in this history which prefigures our experience. When we are born again of the Spirit, the life of Christ within us is small and the enemy seeks to destroy it, but a stronger than he has said, "No man shall snatch them out of My hand" (John 10:28, R. V.). Yet the young life exists in a land of strangers, the land of bondage. How often are Saved Souls in Bondage.

How many there are who are really saved, but a sense of condemnation weighs them down, so that they are perpetually occupied with their own condition; instead of praising God that they are not condemned, they are continually groaning because sin still has dominion over them; instead of praising Him that the blood of Jesus cleanseth us from all sin, they are ever mourning over their defilement. But the prophecy says, "Out of Egypt have I called My son." God would have us live in His own land of promise, occupied, not with ourselves and our condition, but with Jesus and what He is, and what He does for us. We cannot attain to liberty by contemplating our bondage, but we do so by accepting the freedom which Jesus offers through His cleansing blood, accepting Him to keep us from sin, from which we could never keep ourselves. He wants to have the keeping of us. Why should one burdened, bound, desponding soul remain in Egypt when Christ says, "Come unto Me. Let Me cleanse and keep you clean, let Me fight temptation as it arises." "I will dwell in them and walk in them," says God (2 Cor. 6:16). His only condition is that we yield ourselves unto God, our propensities, our failings, our all, to be purged, kept, used, transfigured by Him alone. O, that it may be true of each one of us, "Out of Egypt have I called My son"!

MRS. M. BAXTER'S WORKS.

THE following works by Mrs. M. Baxter, and others, may behad from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York:

"Words for Daily Life," "Practical Lessons," "Life Lessons," "Leaves from Genesis," "Trials and Teachings of Paul." By Mrs. M. Baxter. Each, paper, 25 cts.; cloth, 35 cts. "Record of International Conference on Divine Healing. London, 1885." Paper, 25 cts. "Living Word in the Gospel of St. John." Paper, 25 cts.; cloth, 50 cts. "God's Prophets." Paper 35 cts.; cloth 50 cts. "Lessons from St. Matthew's Gospel." Paper, 35 cts.; cloth 50 cts. "Teachings from St. Mark's Gospel." Paper, 35 cts.; cloth, 50 cts. "Sunday-School Lessons, 1877 and 1878." By Mrs. Baxter. Each, cloth, 50 cts.

Any of Mrs. M. Baxter's tracts in the following list may also be had at one cent each or ten cents the dozen: "If it be Thy Will," "Does Sickness Sanctify?" "Casting All Your Care," two cents each or twenty cents the dozen. "God's Purpose in Sickness," "The Great Physician," "Job's Sickness," "God's Side of Prayer," "Pastor Rein," "The Body for the Lord." Also the following tracts at one cent each, or ten cents the dozen, by the late Rev. W. E. Boardman: "He Careth for You," "A Perfected Self," "Paul's Thorn," "The Father's Rod," at two cents each, or twenty cents the dozen. "The Law of Liberty," at three cents each, or thirty cents the dozen. "Bethshan, a House for Healing," and "Enduement with Power," Miss C. C. Murray's tracts, at one cent each, or ten cents the dozen. "Repeating Prayer," "Thou Art Loosed," at two cents each, or twenty cents the dozen. "Redeemed from all Evil," "Anointing Him with Oil," at three cents each or, thirty cents the dozen. "Pastor Blumhardt," by Miss Sisson, at one cent each, or ten cents the dozen. "What About the Use of Means," and "The Apostolic Attitude," at two cents each, or twenty cents the dozen. "Asking and Receiving," by Mrs. Boardman, at two cents each, or twenty cents the dozen. "Simple Truths about Faith." By T. Kirkman, "Health by Grace," and by H. W. S., "The Lord Hath Done It."

THE END OF THE WAY.

My life is a wearisome journey;
I'm sick with the dust and the heat;
The rays of the sun beat upon me;
The briars are wounding my feet;
But the city to which I am journeying
Will more than my trials repay;
All the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

There are so many hills to climb upward;
I often am longing for rest;
But He who appoints me my pathway
Knows just what is needful and best;
I know in His word He has promised
That my strength shall be as my day;
And the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

When the last feeble step has been taken,
And the gates of the city appear,
And the beautiful songs of the angels
Float out to my listening ear;
When all that now seems so mysterious
Will be plain and as clear as the day;
Yes, the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

Though now I am foot-sore and weary,
I shall rest when I'm safely at home,
I know I'll receive a glad welcome,
For the Saviour himself has said "Come;"
So when I am weary in body,
And sinking in spirit, I say,
"All the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way."

Cooling fountains are there for the thirsty,
There are cordials for those who are faint,
There are robes that are whiter and purer
Than any that fancy can paint;
Then I'll try to press hopeful y onward,
Thinking often through each weary day,
The toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

—Selected.

J. E. JEWETT, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.
ROYAL BAKING POWDER Co., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

MEXICO.

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are most pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of

J. P. HEATH,
43 Bible House, New York.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

"FLORIDA; Its Advantages and Drawbacks." For the above book or free information, address O. M. CROSBY, the author, 76 Park Place, N. Y.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.
THIS NEW
ELASTIC TRUSS

Has a Pad different from all others, in cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy. Durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. ECCLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

Lactated Food

The Mother's Favorite.

Send for our Circular entitled
"LETTERS from MOTHERS," which contains a large number of letters, many of which say the life of their baby was saved by the use of LACTATED FOOD.

Read these letters and, if you wish, write to the mothers and get their opinion—every one will gladly answer.

If your baby is not hearty and robust try it.

LACTATED FOOD

Is also a Perfect Nutrient for INVALIDS, in either chronic or acute cases. Weak stomachs always retain and relish it. Thousands of Physicians recommend it as the best of all prepared foods. Unequalled in DYSPEPSIA.

150 MEALS for an INFANT for $1.00.
Easily Prepared. At Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1887-BABIES-1887

To the mother of any baby born this year we will send on application a Cabinet Photo, of the "Sweetest, fattest, healthiest baby in the country." It is a beautiful picture, and will do any mother's heart good. It shows the good effects of using Lactated Food as a substitute for mothers milk. Much valuable information for the mother given. Give date of birth.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This Magazine portrays American thought and life from ocean to ocean, is filled with pure high-class literature, and can be safely welcomed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.

Sample Copy of current number mailed upon receipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.

Premium List with either.

Address:
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

GET UP CLUBS.

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.
It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.
In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county. For sale by all druggists.
WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 MAIDEN LANE, N.Y.

HOW TO BUILD A HOUSE

A new book containing plans and specifications for 25 houses, all sizes, from 2 rooms up. Sent post-paid on receipt of 25 cents, by J. S. OGILVIE & CO., 31 Rose Street, New York.

Palmer's Book of Gems.
FOR THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

111 Songs, with music, many of them new. The old favorites are gems of a high order, select d by H. R. PALMER, Mus. Doc., and 200 S. S. Superintendents.
Price $40 per 100 Copies. Single Copies by Mail, 12c.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York & Chicago.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES—(avoid Agents and Dealers whose profits and expenses double the cost on every Piano they sell) and send this First-Class UPRIGHT Cabinet GEM 7⅓ Octave Rosewood Piano, Warranted 6 years, for $193! We send it—with Beautiful Cover and Stool—for Trial in your own Home before you buy. Send for circulars to Marchal & Smith, 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

SILKS AND VELVETS.

During the interim between now and their July stock-taking JAMES M'CREERY & CO. will dispose of their Spring Importations of Summer Silks, Foulards, Fancy Surahs, Tussahs, and several large Lots of Plain and Fancy Colored Silks and Velvets, at a very marked Reduction in Price.

A personal examination, or by sample, is invited.

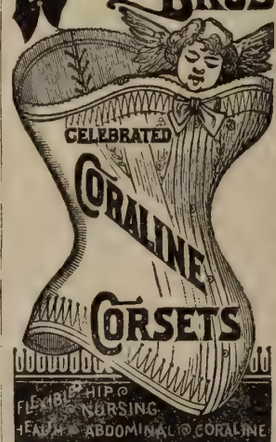
BROADWAY, AND ELEVENTH ST.,
New York.

Ladies' Suits.

Ladies who are unable to examine our stock of these goods personally, would find it to their advantage to correspond with us. The most complete information furnished, and careful attention given to special orders.

Lord & Taylor,
Broadway & 20th Street, N. Y.

WARNER BRO'S



9 Million worn during the past six years.

This marvelous success is due—

1st.—To the superiority of Coraline over all other materials, as a stiffener for Corsets.

2d.—To the superior quality, shape and workmanship of our Corsets, combined with their low prices.

Avoid cheap imitations made of various kinds of cord. None are genuine unless
"DR. WARNER'S CORALINE"
is printed on inside of steel cover.
FOR SALE BY ALL LEADING MERCHANTS.
WARNER BROTHERS,
359 Broadway, New York City.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

FOR Sick Headache,
Biliousness,
Constipation.

The sore Dyspepsia people feel,
However light may be their meal,
Should ne'er be suffered to repose
And breed a train of graver woes,
When perfect health they may secure
Through TARRANT'S SELTZER safe and sure

AGENTS WANTED (Samples Free) for DR. SCOTT'S beautiful Electric Corsets, Brushes, Belts, Etc. No risk, quick sales. Territory given. Satisfaction guaranteed.
DR. SCOTT, 843 Broadway, New York.

SOMETHING NEW
DR. SCOTT'S ELECTRIC
SUMMER CORSET

Owing to the unprecedented success attending the introduction of our Electric Corsets, and in response to numerous inquiries for an Electric Summer or Ventilating Corset, Dr. Scott has placed on the market his "Electric Summer Corset." It has already met with the most unqualified approval, thereby proving its value, merit and durability. It is a beauty, made of extra satin jean and fine quality linen netting, with pockets all around, in which are placed our watch-spring magneto batteries, which are highly charged with electro-magnetism, which imparts a steady and gentle current, all-healing magnetic influence to the wearer. They create no unpleasant sensation whatever. They can be worn by the most delicate lady, and are as valid as by the most robust, with wonderful and quick results.

The above remarks refer equally to our regular Electric Corsets, which retail at $1, $1.50, $2, and $3. The $1 and $1.50 goods are made of extra fine and durable Jean, and the $2 and $3 Abdominal Corsets of Superfine English Sateen, except Summer Corsets come in white and drab, from 18 to 30 inches; we make the Abdominal up to 36 inches. The postage on each is 15c. Every one is sent in a handsome box accompanied by a silver-plated [illegible] with which the electro-magnetic power is tested.

Professional men assert that there is hardly any disease which Electricity or Magnetism may not benefit, and they daily practice the same, as your own physician will inform you.

THE CELEBRATED DR. W. A. HAMMOND, of New York, formerly Surgeon-General of the U. S. Army, has lectured upon this subject, and advised all medical men to make trial of these agencies, describing at the same time most remarkable cures he had made, and also cases which would seem hopeless.

If you cannot obtain them in your own town, send us the price, with 15c. added for postage, and we will deliver them into your hands free. Always mention this paper, and remit by P. O. Money Order, Draft, or currency in Registered Letter payable to
GEO. A. SCOTT, 842 Broadway, N. Y.
Agents Wanted. Quick sales, large profits, satisfaction guaranteed. No risk. TRY for Corns, Bunions and Frost Bites. Sent by mail, post-paid, in 25 and 50-cent boxes.

DR. WEIDEMAN'S
CELEBRATED GOLDEN HERB SALVE

U. M. WEIDEMAN, 137 Willis St., Paterson,

TRACTS! TRACTS! TRACTS!

Send for our catalogue of Gospel Tracts, Booklets and books. A choice selection of Reward Cards, 8, 12 and 16 Tracts and Booklets, illustrated with specially prepared wood-cuts. GOSPEL BOOK AND TRACT DEPOT, Orillia, Can.

Have You Seen

Sweney and Kirkpatrick's newest book? They've christened it Glad Hallelujahs. It's a perfect gem! It's the book. Your Church and School should have it. What grand singing there will have! Everybody would be pleased with its songs, they wouldn't be able to keep from singing. Do tell them about it. They should get it.

By mail, 35 cents. By express (not prepaid), $30 per dozen; $30 per 100. One sample copy 25 cents. Further inducements to Schools, Churches, Evangelists. Write us.

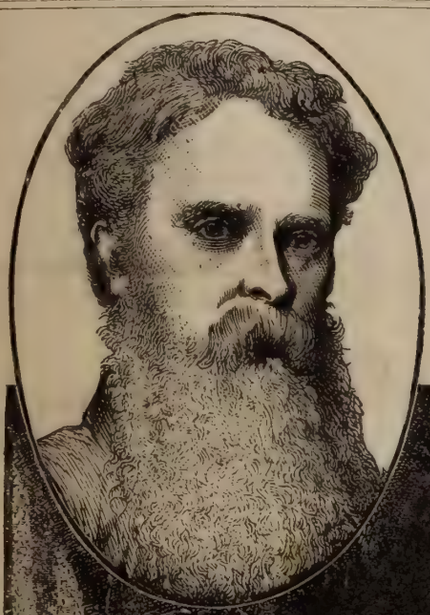
T. T. TASKER, SR., PUBLISHER,
921 ARCH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD is published at 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887 in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 27. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.



CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAIT AND LIFE OF MR. R. STEWART CLOUGH, and Picture of a South American Forest.

HOLDING THE ROPE, Dr. Talmage's Sermon at Martha's Vineyard Last Sunday Morning.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

THE PRE-MILLENNIAL ADVENT, By Rev. J. M. ORROCK, D. D.

Healing for the Eyes—A Long-Delayed Baptism—Savages Entertaining a Missionary—A Rabbi Proclaiming Christ—$10,000 at a Crisis—Total Abstinence Pigeons, etc.

ALICE HOWARD'S FRIENDS. (With Illustration.)

A PLAIN GOSPEL FOR PLAIN PEOPLE. Rev. C. H. Spurgeon's New Sermon.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Increased Immigration—Shall Utah Become a State?—A Briber Convicted—Two Earthquakes Reported—The Surrender of the Hostiles—A Million-Dollar Fire—Queen Victoria's Letter of Thanks—The Sultan's Dilemma—Sixty Skeletons in a Tennessee Cave—A Singular Suicide—Workmen Stopped on the Frontier, etc.

PICTURES OF THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE PROCESSION.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE. By Rev. J. Jackson Wray. (Continued.)

JOHN THE BAPTIST By Mrs. M. Baxter.

MR. R. STEWART CLOUGH, Pioneer Missionary in the Amazons.—A South American Forest.

MR. R. STEWART CLOUGH:

Pioneer Missionary in The Amazons.

Born in 1837—His Father's Life-Work—Goes to Spain in 1856—Mother's Bible—Anguish at the Opera—A Dying Blacksmith's Appeal—Peril on the Sea in 1859—Conversion—Returns to Spain as an Evangelist in 1862—Marriage—Goes to South America in 1871—Running into the Bush—A Jaguar Fishing—Too Near an Anaconda—An Irate Redskin Pacified—An Amazonian Encampment—Midnight Visit of a Vampire—A Cunning Alligator Despatched—The Return Home to Europe—Subsequent Work for Christ.

On the preceding page accompanying the picture of that most marvellous and imposing of nature's wonders, a South American forest, is a portrait of the Rev. R. Stewart Clough, whose love for Christ and zeal in the cause of missions prompted him a few years ago to undertake a pioneer journey in South America. There, like Livingston in Africa, he encountered personal perils of many kinds, that he might personally satisfy himself, and the Society with which he was connected, respecting the character and disposition of the natives, and the practicability of mission work. His work on South America, recently issued, has made a deep impression on the public, and has enlisted Christian sympathy with the land in which, there being "no vision, the people perish."

Mr. Clough was born of godly parentage at Leeds, England, on June 7, 1837, so that he is now fifty years of age. He was educated at a Commercial School, where his progress was rapid and his success conspicuous. His father, Mr. William Clough, was for thirty-seven years an ardent and successful home-missionary and evangelist, and so thoroughly possessed the confidence of the Christian public that he was appointed Principal of an institution at St. Albans for the training of young men for home and foreign mission work, nearly 250 of whom have passed through his hands. While a rigid Puritan of the old school, he was beloved by Episcopal ministers, and in St. Peter's churchyard is a tombstone erected to his memory by the Rev. H. N. Dudding, the rector, to whom he was devotedly attached. He was a Christian whose virtues shone both in public and private life. He went about doing good from the age of eighteen till within a few days of his death, at the age of seventy-three. In this town his name is still held in reverence and affection. He never spoke to anyone without naming his Master, and saying a word for Him."

An Exemplary Parent,

Daily intercourse in his youth with men of culture and travel inspired the son of this godly man with a desire to see the world, and in 1856, he went to Spain with his uncle, Dr. Stewart, who was then laboring as a medical missionary in that country. Soon after his arrival, Mr. Clough was appointed to a post on the Santander line of railway. He with facility, and subsequently went to Bilboa, on another railway. Here he acquired a colloquial knowledge of Guipuscoano (Basque), one of the oldest and most difficult of European languages, and laid the foundation of his subsequent extraordinary linguistic attainments. Though some acquire languages with greater ease than others, diligence, perseverance and continuous study are essential in every case to all real progress, and Mr. Clough was no exception to the invariable rule.

Learned Spanish

Wherever he went Mr. Clough carried about with him a Bible which his beloved mother had given him on his sixteenth birthday, but which he was then living made him fear to open it, lest he should therein read his condemnation. For a time he lived in a Roman Catholic family the members of which were reputed to be very pious people. They tried hard to induce him to embrace their religion. Though they sincerely pitied their young lodger, and regularly prayed for his soul, they went to bull-fights on Sunday afternoons and in the evening to the opera. One Sunday evening Mr. Clough accepted an invitation to accompany them to the opera. Between the acts, he looked round upon the gay and thoughtless assembly, and suddenly remembering how his dear father and mother would most likely then be praying for him at family worship, he was overwhelmed with shame and remorse and felt unspeakably miserable. The verses of Scripture committed to memory in infancy and childhood at home and in the Sunday-school stung him like scorpions, yet he feared to kneel down and ask for mercy. But God had begun to work in him.

A Godless Life

At a Deathbed.

Just at this juncture an English blacksmith who was thought to be dying sent for him to see him. "Young man," said he, "I have lived a wicked life and am about to die. I have heard you speak of your godly parents; kneel down and pray for me!" The appeal went home to the heart of Mr. Clough with terrible force. How could he pray for another when he did not pray for himself! However, he had his Bible with him, and kneeling down, he read the 103d Psalm. To his reading of the Psalm he could only, add with anguish, the publican's prayer: "God be merciful to me, a sinner!"

In October, 1859, Mr. Clough returned to his native land. The passage was rough at the outset, and when the vessel was passing from the Bay of Biscay to the English Channel it encountered the memorable storm in which the Royal Charter with hundreds of valuable lives went down. The tempest struck the vessel on which Mr. Clough was sailing and hurled it to and fro like a skiff. Nobody on board expected to see land again, and the future missionary braced himself up to meet death. He felt it was too late to pray, and had he then been called into eternity, he would have passed away, to use his own words, "conscious of deserving condemnation." He knew about Christ, but his eyes had not been opened by the Holy Spirit to know Him as his Saviour. This, however, did take place only a little later on, and, at once, with characteristic enthusiasm, the new convert devoted himself without reserve to the service of Him who had translated him "out of nature's darkness into His own marvellous light."

Gospel Work in Spain

In the year 1862 Mr. Clough, now "a new creature in Christ Jesus," returned to Spain as an evangelist. Two years of happy, successful service passed away, and at the end of this period he was married in Lisbon, to an English lady, a devout Christian and a true helper to her husband. Except in his journey to Amazonia, nine years afterward, she accompanied him in most of his journeys, and being an excellent Spanish scholar, has been enabled to do a good and great work for the Lord among the members of her own sex. Mr. Clough now undertook to master the Portuguese language, which was soon accomplished. Soon afterwards he went to Spain again, and in that country and in North Africa, Gibraltar and France, was engaged in proclaiming the Gospel of salvation until 1871, when he accepted service under the auspices of the South American Missionary Society, to go for the sole purpose of ascertaining what facilities existed for missionary enterprise among Indian tribes in Amazonia. In this region he spent four years, travelling about 13,000 miles backwards and forwards between the Atlantic and the Andes, and as far south as Bolivia. Much of this travel was on the river Amazon, the course for the most part being through forest walls, which tower up on each side to the height of eighty feet, like vegetable cliffs. Having passed through an intricate labyrinth of islands situated in The Narrows, the little town of Breves was touched at for the purpose of obtaining fuel. This being accomplished, and "leaving Breves," says Mr. Clough, "we continued our way through a maze of channels, and, tired of straining my eyes to pierce the gloom, I lay in my hammock and admired the lovely constellation of the Southern Cross, which now stood sharply defined in the clear, though inky-black sky; but my rest was soon broken by hearing the pilot sing out para, and in a moment afterwards by the vessel running into the bush. In less time than it takes me to mention, every passenger had turned out to ascertain the mischief done, and all hands were at the paddle-boxes, where the axes are semi-circularly arranged for immediate use. By dint of cutting away the branches of trees, and reversing engines, we soon got clear, but the stench arising from disturbed decaying vegetation was so overpowering that our olfactory organs could only find relief in the folds of a handkerchief."

To South America,

There is a beautiful district north of the Amazons, called Furo de Uraria.

The Furo itself is described as a chain of expansive and beautiful deep-water lakes, the largest being situated at the mouths of the numerous rivers flowing into it. Fish abound in surprising variety and numbers, and here, too, the jaguar may often be seen engaged in piscatorial exercise, as he draws his tail backwards and forwards in the water till approached by his finny prey, when with lightning speed his sharp-clawed paw grasps the coveted prize.

Mr. Clough had been in Pebas a week when for the first time he encountered in his native solitudes. One day he was writing in his tent, when he heard subdued whispering; thinking it proceeded from some of his attendants, he paid no further attention until the voices began to be very loud. He then lifted the curtain, and discovered nearly a couple of dozen of men, women and children squatting against the wall. As usual, they were all painted. "When I made a step forward," says the missionary, "a huge fellow started up and raised a long glittering knife above my head. I did not like to draw back lest I might be thought afraid, so I smilingly pointed to the weapon, and held out my hand for it. My heart went up to God in prayer. The man's chest rose and fell, his heart beat violently, his lips were tightly pressed, and for a few moments he hesitated what to do, but I calmly looked him in the eye, and by signs requested the knife. By-and-bye, I think it must have dawned upon him that my intentions were amicable and not sanguinary, so, lowering his arm, he handed me the knife; after pretending to examine it, I took the blade between my fingers, and politely returned it, when I could see the brawny redskin was fairly ashamed. A few trinkets put all in good humor, and during the stay of this horde in Pebas they were very friendly disposed." Families among rarely remain long in one spot. They generally fix their hut near a creek, river or lake. A belt of jungle is usually left between the water and clearing, and frequently several canoes lie hidden under a mass of overhanging foliage. Here plantains, bananas, sweet potatoes and pines are planted, and a plot of corn; hence an abundance of breadstuff is ensured; while the forest and water furnish game and fish without limit. The women manufacture pots, pans and ovens, and upon removal take nothing with them. After six months' absence all will be found as left, and a crop of bananas into the bargain.

The Wild Indian

The Amazonian Indians

Vampires

were found very troublesome by Mr. Clough. They attack without scruple fowls, dogs, horses and cattle. "It was nothing for one to rise in the morning," says the missionary, "and find his or her hammock drenched with blood from a wound. Out of curiosity I sometimes laid awake in my hammock on bright moonlight nights, hoping a vampire would bleed me. One or two soon paid me a visit, and silently flitted above, below and around me, hovering on their leathery wings only a few inches from my face; the fanning I found deliciously soothing, and I could hardly resist succumbing to somnolency, but I had no ambition to be operated upon asleep. The appearance of the vampire is singularly repulsive; and as they hung over my face, gloating at the prospect of drinking my blood, I thought they looked anything but angelic. I sent to the museum of the South American Missionary Society in London a specimen twenty-three inches across the wings.

One bright moonlight night while Mr. Clough was fishing, he observed something rising and falling upon the surface of the water. It was An Alligator.

It was evident the brute contemplated making an attack, so the solitary fisherman took a lively interest in his strategy. Mr. Clough writes: "I believe he suspected I had discovered him, for after a few minutes' absence he rose up stream, waited awhile, and then slowly drifted down, doubtless hoping I might mistake him for a log. Facing the water, I fastened my line to a stake, and knelt ready to give my dusky enemy a warm reception; and when he was opposite and distant only a few yards, he made a most savage and sudden rush at me with his colossal jaws wide open. At once I fired. The smoke of my rifle had barely cleared, before the monster fell backwards, sunk with a splash, a minute afterwards reappearing belly upwards, when he slowly drifted from view."

It appears that young alligators, from five to seven feet long, offer no resistance to the tiger when attacked. A gentleman, who has a plantation near Cudajáz, told Mr. Clough that while tapir hunting, his place of observation being the margin of a lake, he saw a large striped tiger spring out of some bushes and stand before an alligator. Instead of diving into deep water, which it could easily have done, the reptile threw up its tail and stood motionless, apparently paralyzed with fear. The tiger walked round and round its victim, its coat bristling with rage, eyes flashing fire, and emitting tremendous roars; soon afterwards he commenced devouring the tail, the alligator, as if paralyzed with terror, never once attempting to escape.

The mission on which Mr. Clough had been sent to South America being at length accomplished, he bent his course what he had seen in his three thousand miles of exploration. In his diary this record shows his own estimate of the field. He says: "'Spare me, O Lord,' 'spare me to return to my beloved land, that I may report how large a portion of the world there remains to be possessed, and prepare the hearts of Thy servants, that they may be encouraged to go forth in Thy power, strength and fear, to proclaim the Gospel of Christ to those that sit in the darkness.'

Homeward to Report

"Day after day, and week after week, as we shot down the yellow Amazon, now ploughing our way through drift-wood, winding among verdant islands, or cleaving surging billows amidst the rush of wind and tempest, I watched the distant emerald walls. I had had many rambles in their gloomy depths. I had seen the wild Red Man in his native solitudes, and found him oftentimes so low in point of knowledge, though not lacking latent intelligence, that he was nothing more or less than a giant baby. I had found him a stolid though earnest listener, and believed the Gospel would be to him, what it is to all who believe it, the power of God.

Having reached Pará the last week in January, 1873, Mr. Clough found an English vessel in the estuary, and took passage in her for Europe. After a successful voyage of nearly a month, he entered the Mersey, and landed at Liverpool. His report rendered, he desired to remain at home for a time, that he might give advice or information to aid the Society in organizing the work of the mission. He naturally took a deep interest in the work, and accompanied the first set of missionaries sent out to labor in Amazonia. Since that time Mr. Clough has engaged in Work in Spain and Mexico.

and has been much occupied in important and necessary translations, among which the most valuable is the "Divine Offices and other Formularies of the Reformed Spanish Church."

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

The Cry of an Injured Man.—The Rev. Mr. Howie, in the course of an address recently, said: "I heard of a man who, not long ago, was injured in a railway collision. The doctor was speedily brought, but after inspecting the sufferer's injuries, he was obliged to tell him that there was no hope. As he lay there, so helpless, he turned his eyes to his fellow-workmen, who were grouped around him, and said, 'Are there any of you fellows can tell me about Jesus?' Not one of them could; there they stood, their faces expressing the honest sympathy they felt, while a tear trickled down many a furrowed and dust-begrimed cheek. But, happily, the doctor could tell both him and them about Jesus as "mighty to save," and so he did. The man was sent to the hospital, where he soon afterwards died; but not without knowing that Jesus was his Saviour."

Light From the Old Lamp.—Mr. Stewart, a Scotch evangelist, observes: "An intelligent young man was awakened to a sense of sin at a Gospel meeting lately. Greatly disturbed in mind, he and his wife came again to the meeting about a fortnight afterwards. They were spoken to by one of the friends, but it seemed to have no effect, until the Bible was opened and the verse read, 'If ye, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Heavenly Father give good things to them that ask Him?' They were asked, 'Do you believe God's Word?' 'Certainly we do,' was the reply. 'If you will ask for the Holy Spirit on the authority of God's Word, you will surely receive the blessing.' This was quite a revelation to them, and both exclaimed at once, 'I see it now as I never did before.' I believe they entered on a life of peace through faith in Jesus that very night, for they went home rejoicing in the love of God to them."

Is the Door Open or Closed?—A Minister remarked: "I once was addressing a Gospel-meeting, and had repeated my text several times, 'And the door was shut.' A man in the meeting was most affected by these words, and without waiting to the second meeting he went trembling home with the text sounding in his ears. For many days he tried to forget them, but in vain. While he walked in the street or lay down to rest, he unconsciously repeated the words, 'And the door was shut.' He began to think, 'Is this Christ knocking at the door of my heart?' Yes, it was the wounded hand of the Saviour. I am glad to say that he did open the door and let the Saviour in. Poor unsaved one, let me warn you that when Christ's knocking shall cease after death, your knocking will begin, and He will say, 'I never knew you.' But now accept and believe His gracious promise, 'Behold I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear My voice and open the door I will come in and sup with him, and he with Me.'"

The Transformation of Jack and Jenny.—"At one of the Tent-meetings in Yorksnire, last summer, a man and his wife crept in one Sunday evening, whose miserable appearance was noticeable even among the poor and outcast who were gathered there. The woman was not even decently clothed; her gown had no fastening at the neck, and no sleeves, and she held up a miserable apron to hide her arms and her poor bosom as she sat at the meeting. Her husband was as miserably dressed for a man as she was for a woman. They sat side by side, and listened as a workingman preached the glad tidings of Him who had come to seek and to save that which was lost. They felt it was for them; both were convinced of sin that same evening, and both fled for refuge to the Saviour. The change in them was soon manifest to all. And every week saw a still greater improvement. Two months later the Evangelist was again in the same neighborhood, and he met a friend from the district where the tent had been. 'Do you remember, he asked, 'that man and his wife who became Christians that Sunday evening? Well, you wouldn't know them now. Their dress and appearance are so completely altered, that their nearest friends have to look some time before they know who they are, and their home, though but poorly furnished, is now a pattern of neatness, and people are already beginning to talk of them as Mr. and Mrs. ——, instead of giving them their old title of Jack and Jenny.'"

A Huntsman's Widow's Story.—An Evangelist who conducted a mission at Hungerford in March, this year, wrote thus: "You will be glad to learn that I have just met an old lady, the widow of a man who had for many years been the huntsman of the Berks Hounds, and who was brought to God through this mission here twelve years ago. Amid sobs and tears she told me how she and her husband went to the meeting together, and when they came out she stopped to speak to a friend, and on looking round for her husband found he had gone. On reaching home and not finding him in any of the down-stair rooms, she thought he must have met with some one and gone indoors with them, but going upstairs some time after, she found him kneeling beside the bed, weeping bitterly, and pleading with God to have mercy on his soul, and that night he found peace with God through Christ. For nine years he lived to serve and love Him who had done so much for him, and then was taken to His presence. Those were happy years we lived together rejoicing in the love of God, and his was a happy death."

His Last Quart of Cider.—"I was walking from my lodging to the tent where I was to preach, when I noticed a tramp. As I passed I heard him say: 'I'll just go and have another pot, and then I'll go and hear what that bloke's got to say.' This man had been an habitual drunkard for many years, and he has told me that often when his children have gone to bed crying with hunger, he has turned his wife's pockets inside out, to try and shake out money to buy drink. He was never known to go to church or chapel, except for a christening or a funeral. On this particular summer evening he went, as he said, to the saloon to get his pot, i.e., a quart of cider, and it was the last drop of intoxicating liquor he ever took. From the saloon he came to the meeting 'to hear what the bloke had got to say,' but it was God who spoke to him, and, by the Holy Spirit, convinced him of sin, and he went home that night conscience-stricken and full of anxiety. For three weeks his distress was very great, then he fled to Christ, and yielded himself up to Him, and from that time he has been known by all as a servant of God. He joined a Congregational Church in the neighborhood, and has now been a member for two and a half years."

A Man and His Wife Saved.—Mr. Marrs said: "Many attended our mission who were the victims of strong drink, and who, in consequence, were poorly and raggedly clad. Conspicuous among these was a man and his wife, who were in a deplorable condition. Though the husband was in receipt of good wages, they were spent in drink; and his wife and children had not sufficient clothing to make them decent. Both husband and wife came night after night to the meetings. The Spirit of God powerfully strove with them, and one Sunday evening in May they were found seeking the Lord. They obtained the pardon of their sins by simple trust in Christ, and rejoiced in God their Saviour. With their conversion to God a new sense of self-respect arose in them. They were distressed at the condition into which habits of drunkenness and sin had brought them. Ere long they were seen at the meetings looking altogether neater and cleaner, and much better clad. Like their prototype in the Gospel, they were sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed, and in their right mind. This is work which makes all heaven ring with gladness, and which should surely cheer our hearts and stimulate us in the glorious work which we have been graciously commissioned to do—testifying repentance towards God and faith towards our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

HOLDING THE ROPE.

Dr. Talmage's Sermon Preached Last Sunday Morning, July 3, 1887,

In the Camp-Meeting Tabernacle, Martha's Vineyard Mass. The Annual Excursion of the Congregation of the Brooklyn Tabernacle this year occupied six days, and among the places visited were Martha's Vineyard, Newport and Nantucket.

"Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall." 2 Cor. 11:33.

A Famous City—The Overthrown Horseman—Successful Evangelization—A Persecuting Mob—Escape of the Intended Victim—Great Results on Slight Tenure—Mighty Issues Dependent on a Rope—The Boat of the Infant Law-giver—Wesley's Escape from a Fire—The Mutineer's Bible—Nothing Insignificant—An Unthanked Engineer—The Unrecognized Worker—The Struggle in the Young Preacher's Home—A Personal Reminiscence—Introductions in Heaven—Mighty Occupants of Celestial Thrones.

SERMONS on Paul in jail, Paul on Mars Hill, Paul in the shipwreck, Paul before the Sanhedrim, Paul before Felix are plentiful, but in my text we have Paul in a basket.

Damascus is a city of white and glistening architecture, sometimes called "the eye of the East," sometimes called "a pearl surrounded by emeralds," at one time distinguished for swords of the best material called Damascus blades, and upholstery of richest fabric called damask. A horseman by the name of Saul, riding toward this city, had been Thrown From the Saddle.

The horse had dropped under a flash from the sky, which at the same time was so bright it blinded the rider for many days, and, I think, so permanently injured his eyesight that this defect of vision became the thorn in the flesh he afterward speaks of. He started for Damascus to butcher Christians, but after that hard fall from his horse he was a changed man, and preached Christ in Damascus till the city was shaken to its foundation.

The mayor gives authority for his arrest, and the popular cry is:

"Kill him! Kill him!"

The city is surrounded by a high wall, and the gates are watched by the police lest the Sicilian preacher escape. Many of the houses are built on the wall, and their balconies projected clear over and hovered above the gardens outside. It was customary to lower baskets out of these balconies and pull up fruits and flowers from the gardens. To this day visitors at the monastery of Mount Sinai are lifted and let down in baskets. Detectives prowled around from house to house looking for Paul, but his friends hid him, now in one place, now in another. He is no coward, as fifty incidents in his life demonstrate, but he feels his work is not done yet, and so he evades assassination. "Is that preacher here?" the foaming mob shout at one house door. "Is that fanatic here?" the police shout at another house door. Sometimes on the street incognito he passes through a cloud of clenched fists, and sometimes he secretes himself on the house-top. At last

The Infuriate Populace

get on sure track of him. They have positive evidence that he is in the house of one of the Christians, the balcony of whose home reaches over the wall. "Here he is! Here he is!" The vociferation and blasphemy and howling of the pursuers are at the front door. They break in. "Fetch out that Gospelizer, and let us hang his head on the city gate. Where is he?" The emergency was terrible. Providentially there was a good stout basket in the house. Paul's friends fasten a rope to the basket. Paul steps into it. The basket is lifted to the edge of the balcony on the wall, and then while Paul holds the rope with both hands his friends lower away, carefully and cautiously, slowly but surely, further down and further down, until the basket strikes the earth and the apostle steps out and afoot, and alone starts on that famous missionary tour, the story of which has astonished earth and heaven. Appropriate entry in Paul's diary of travels: "Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall."

I observe, first, on what a slender tenure great results hang. The ropemaker who twisted that cord fastened to that lowering basket, never knew how much would depend upon the strength of it. How,

If it Had Been Broken and the apostle's life had been dashed out? What would have become of the Christian Church? All that magnificent missionary work in Pamphilia, Cappadocia, Galatia, Macedonia, would never have been accomplished. All his writings that make up so indispensable and enchanting a part of the New Testament would never have been written. The story of resurrection would never have been so gloriously told as he told it. That example of heroic and triumphant endurance at Philippi, in the Mediterranean Euroclydon, under flagellation, and at his beheading, would not have kindled the courage of ten thousand martyrdoms. But that rope holding that basket, how much depended on it! So again and again great results have hung on slender circumstances.

Did ever ship of many thousand tons crossing the sea have such as had once a boat of leaves, from taffrail to stern only three or four feet, the vessel made water-proof by a coat of bitumen, and floating on the Nile with the infant lawgiver of the Jews on board? What if some crocodile should crunch it? What if some of the cattle wading in for a drink should sink it? Vessels of war sometimes carry forty guns looking through the port-holes, ready to open battle. But the tiny craft on the Nile seems to be armed with all the guns of thunder that bombarded Sinai at the law-giving. On how fragile craft sailed how much of historical importance!

An Important Passenger,

The parsonage at Epworth, England, is on fire in the night, and the father rushed through the hallway for the rescue of his children. Seven children are out and safe on the ground, but one remains in the consuming building. That one awakes, and finding his bed on fire and the building crumbling, comes to the window, and two peasants make a ladder of their bodies, one peasant standing on the shoulder of the other, and down the human ladder the boy descends—John Wesley. If you would know how much depended on that ladder of peasants, ask the millions of Methodists on both sides of the sea. Ask their mission stations all round the world. Ask their hundreds of thousands already ascended to join their founder, who would have perished but for the living stairs of peasants' shoulders.

The Mutineer's Bible.

An English ship stopped at Pitcairn Island, and right in the midst of surrounding cannibalism and squalor, the passengers discovered a Christian colony of churches and schools and beautiful homes, and highest style of religion and civilization. For fifty years no missionary and no Christian influence had landed there. Why this oasis of light amid a desert of heathendom? Sixty years before, a ship had met disaster, and one of the sailors, unable to save anything else, went to his trunk and took out a Bible which his mother had placed there, and swam ashore, the Bible held in his teeth. The book was read on all sides until the rough and vicious population were evangelized, and a church was started, and an enlightened commonwealth established; and the world's history has no more brilliant page than that which tells of the transformation of a nation by one book. It did not seem of much importance whether the sailor continued to hold the book in his teeth, or let it fall in the breakers, but upon what small circumstance depended what mighty results! Practical inference: There are No Insignificances in Life.

The minutest thing is part of a magnitude. Infinity is made up of infinitesimals; great things an aggregation of small things. Bethlehem manger pulling on a star in the eastern sky. One book in a drenched sailor's mouth the ev gelization of a multitude. One boat of papy on the Nile freighted with events for all ag The fate of Christendom in a basket let dc from a window on the wall. What you do, well. If you make a rope make it strong a true, for you know not how much may dep on your workmanship. If you fashion a b let it be water-proof, for you know not who n sail in it. If you put a Bible in the trunk your boy as he goes from home, let it be he in your prayers, for it may have a mission as reaching as the book which the sailor carried his teeth to the Pitcairn beach. The plain man's life is an island between two eternitie eternity past rippling against his should eternity to come touching his brow. The cast the accidental, that which merely happened are parts of a great plan, and the rope that l the fugitive apostle from the Damascus wall the cable that holds to its mooring the ship the Church in the storm of the centuries.

Again, notice unrecognized and Unrecorded Service.

Who spun that rope? Who tied it to the b ket? Who steadied the illustrious preacher he stepped into it? Who relaxed not a mus of the arm or dismissed an anxious look fr his face until the basket touched the grou and discharged its magnificent cargo? Not c of their names has come to us, but there was work done that day in Damascus or in all t earth compared with the importance of th work. What if they had in their agitation tie knot that could slip? What if the sound of t mob at the door had led them to say: "P must take care of himself, and we will take c of ourselves." No, no! They held the ro and in doing so did more for the Christ Church than any thousand of us will ever complish. But God knows and has ma record of their undertaking. And they knov

How exultant they must have felt when th read his letters to the Romans, to the Corin ians, to the Galatians, to the Ephesians, to t Philippians, to the Colossians, to the Thes lonians, to Timothy, to Titus, to Philemon, the Hebrews, and when they heard how walked out of prison, with the earthqua unlocking the door for him, and took comma of the Alexandrian corn-ship when the sail were nearly scared to death, and preache sermon that nearly shook Felix off his judgm seat. I hear the men and women who hel him down through the window and over t wall, talking in private over the matter, a saying: "How glad I am that we effected t rescue! In coming times others may get t the glory of Paul's work, but no one shall r us of the satisfaction of knowing that we h the rope."

In Peril of Wreck.

Once for thirty-six hours we expected ev moment to go to the bottom of the ocean. T waves struck through the skylights and rush down into the hold of the ship and his against the boilers. It was an awful time; b by the blessing of God and the faithfulness the men in charge, we came out of the cyclo and we arrived at home. Each one before le ing the ship thanked Captain Andrews. I not think there was a man or woman that w off that ship without thanking Captain Andre and when years after I heard of his death I w impelled to write a letter of condolence to family in Liverpool. Everybody recognized t goodness, the courage, the kindness of Capt Andrews; but it occurs to me now that never thanked the engineer. He stood av down in the darkness amid the hissing furna doing his whole duty. Nobody thanked t engineer, but God recognized his heroism a his continuance and his fidelity, and there w be just as high reward for the engineer w worked out of sight, as for the captain w stood on the bridge of the ship in the midst the howling tempest.

There are said to be about sixty-nine th sand ministers of religion in this count about fifty thousand, I warrant, came from early

Homes which had to Struggle or the necessaries of life. The sons of rich bankers and merchants generally become bankers and merchants. The most of those who become ministers are the sons of those who had terrific struggle to get their every-day bread. The collegiate and theological education of that son took every luxury from the parental table for eight years. The other children were more scantily apparelled. The son at college every little while got a bundle from home. In it were the socks that mother had knit, sitting up late at night, her sight not as good as once it was. And there also were some delicacies from the sister's hand for the voracious appetite of a hungry student.

The father swung the heavy cradle through the wheat, the sweat rolling from his chin bedewing every step of the way, and then sitting down under the cherry-tree at noon, thinking to himself: "I am fearfully tired, but it will pay if I can once see that boy through college, and if I can know that he will be preaching the Gospel after I am dead." The younger children want to know why they can't have this and that, as others do, and the mother says: 'Be patient, my children, until your brother graduates, and then you shall have more luxuries, but we must see that boy through."

The years go by, and the son has been ordained, and is preaching the glorious Gospel, and a great revival comes, and souls by scores and hundreds accept the Gospel from the lips of

That Young Preacher,

and father and mother, quite old now, are visiting the son at the village parsonage, and, at the close of a Sabbath of mighty blessing, father and mother retire to their room, the son lighting the way and asking them if he can do anything to make them more comfortable, saying if they want anything in the night just to knock on the wall. And then, all alone, father and mother talk over the gracious influences of the day, and say: "Well, it was worth all we went through to educate that boy. It was a hard pull, but we held on till the work was done. The world may not know it, but, mother, we held the rope, didn't we?" And the voice, tremulous with joyful emotion, responds: "Yes, father, we held the rope. I feel my work is done. Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen Thy salvation." "Pshaw!" says the father, "I never felt so much like living, in my life, as now. I want to see what that fellow is going on to do, he has begun so well."

A Personal Reminiscence.

Something occurs to me quite personal. I was the youngest of a large family of children. My parents were neither rich nor poor: four of the sons wanted a collegiate education, and four obtained it, but not without great home-struggle. We never heard the old people say once that they were denying themselves to effect this, but I remember now that my parents always looked tired. I don't think they ever got rested until they lay down in the Somerville cemetery. Mother would sit down in the evening and say: "Well, I don't know what makes me feel so tired!" Father would fall immediately to sleep, seated by the evening stand, overcome with the day's fatigues. One of the four brothers, after preaching the Gospel for about fifty years, entered upon his heavenly rest. Another of the four is now on the other side of the earth, a missionary of the cross. Two of us are in this land in the holy ministry, and I think all of us are willing to acknowledge our obligation to the old folks at home. About twenty-one years ago the one, and about twenty-three years ago the other put down the burdens of this life, but

They Still Hold the Rope.

O men and women here assembled, you brag sometimes how you have fought your way in the world, but I think there have been helpful influences that you have never fully acknowledged. Has there not been some influence in your early or present home that the world cannot see? Does there not reach to you from among the New England hills, or from Western prairie, or from Southern plantation, or from English or Scottish or Irish home a cord of influence that has kept you right when you would have gone astray, and which, after you had made a crooked track recalled you? The rope may be as long as thirty years or five hundred miles long or three thousand miles long, but hands that went out of mortal sight long ago still hold the rope.

You want a very swift horse, and you need to rowel him with sharpest spurs, and to let the reins lie loose upon the neck, and to give a shout to the racer, if you are going to ride out of reach of your mother's prayers. Why, a ship crossing the Atlantic in six days can't sail away from that. A sailor finds them on the lookout as he takes his place, and finds them on the mast as he climbs the ratlines to disentangle a rope in the tempest, and finds them swinging on the hammock when he turns in. Why not be frank and acknowledge it—the most of us would long ago have been dashed to pieces had not gracious and loving hands steadily and lovingly and mightily held the rope.

But there must come a time when

We Shall Find Out

who these Damascenes were who lowered Paul in the basket, and greet them and all those who have rendered to God and the world unrecognized and unrecorded services. That is going to be one of the glad excitements of Heaven, the hunting up and picking out of those who did great good on earth and got no credit for it. Here the Church has been going on nineteen centuries, and yet the world has not recognized the services of the people in that Damascus balcony. Charles G. Finney said to a dying Christian: "Give my love to St. Paul when you meet him." When you and I meet him, as we will, I shall ask him to introduce me to those who got him out of the Damascene peril.

We go into long sermons to prove that we will be able to recognize people in heaven, when there is one reason we fail to present, and that is better than all—

God will Introduce us.

We shall have them all pointed out. You would not be guilty of the impoliteness of having friends in your parlor not introduced, and celestial politeness will demand that we be made acquainted with all the heavenly household. What rehearsal of old times and recital of stirring reminiscences! If others fail to give introduction, God will take us through, and before our first twenty-four hours in heaven—if it were calculated by earthly timepieces—have passed, we shall meet and talk with more heavenly celebrities than in our entire mortal state we met with earthly celebrities. Many who made great noise of usefulness will sit on the last seat by the front door of the heavenly temple, while right up within arm's reach of the heavenly throne will be many who, though they could not preach themselves or do great exploits for God, nevertheless held the rope.

Come, let us go right up and accost those on

The Circle of Heavenly Thrones.

Surely, they must have killed in battle a million men. Surely they must have been buried with all the cathedrals sounding a dirge and all the towers of all the cities tolling the national grief. Who art thou, mighty one of heaven? "I lived by choice the unmarried daughter in an humble home that I might take care of my parents in their old age, and I endured without complaint all their querulousness and administered to all their wants for twenty years."

Let us pass on round the circle of thrones. Who art thou, mighty one of heaven? "I was for thirty years a Christian invalid, and suffered all the while, occasionally writing a note of sympathy for those worse off than I, and was general confidant of all those who had trouble, and once in a while I was strong enough to make a garment for that poor family in the back lane." Pass on to another throne. Who art thou, mighty one of heaven? "I was the mother who raised a whole family of children for God, and they are out in the world Christian merchants, Christian mechanics, Christian wives, and I have had full reward of all my toil." Let us pass on in the circle of thrones. "I had a Sabbath-school class, and they were always on my heart, and they all entered the kingdom of God, and I am waiting for their arrival."

But who art thou, the mighty one of heaven on this other throne? "In time of bitter persecution I owned a house in Damascus, a house on the wall. A man who preached Christ was hounded from street to street, and I hid him from the assassins, and when I found them breaking into my house and I could no longer keep him safely, I advised him to flee for his life, and a basket was let down over the wall with the maltreated man in it, and I was one who helped hold the rope." And I said: "Is that all?" And he answered: "That is all." And while I was lost in amazement, I heard that sounded as though it might once have been hoarse from many exposures, and triumphant as though it might have belonged to one of the martyrs, and it said: "Not many mighty, not many noble are called, but God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty, and base things of the world and things which are despised hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not to bring to naught things which are, that no flesh should glory in His presence." And I looked to see from whence the voice came, and lo! it was the very one who had said: "Through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall."

A Strong Voice

Henceforth think of nothing as insignificant.

A Little Thing May Decide

your all. A Cunarder put out from England for New York. It was well equipped, but in putting up a stove in the pilot box, a nail was driven too near the compass. You know how that nail would affect the compass. The ship's officers, deceived by that distracted compass, put the ship two hundred miles off her right course, and suddenly the man on the lookout cried: "Land ho!" and the ship was halted within a few yards of her demolition on Nantucket Shoals. A sixpenny nail came near wrecking a Cunarder. Small ropes hold mighty destinies.

A minister seated in Boston at his table, lacking a word puts his hand behind his head and tilts back his chair to think, and the ceiling falls and crushes the table and would have crushed him. A minister in Jamaica at night by the light of an insect called the candle-fly, is kept from stepping over a precipice a hundred feet. F. W. Robertson, the celebrated English clergyman, said that he entered the ministry from a train of circumstances started by the barking of a dog. Had the wind blown one way on a certain day, the Spanish Inquisition would have been established in England; but it blew the other way, and that dropped the accursed institution with seventy-five thousand tons of shipping to the bottom of the sea, or flung the splintered logs on the rocks.

Nothing unimportant in your life or mine. Three noughts placed on the right side of the figure one make a thousand, and six noughts on the right side of the figure one, a million, and our nothingness placed on the right side may be augmentation illimitable. All the ages of time and eternity affected by the basket let down from a Damascus balcony.

An Illustrated Work on the Unfulfilled Prophecies of the Bible, by the Rev. M. Baxter, entitled, "Forty Coming Wonders," may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York, by remitting 75 cents. It is a book of 528 pages, is handsomley bound in cloth, and contains fifty full-page pictures and diagrams representing the scenes described in the prophecies of Daniel and in the book of the Revelation. It also contains a rséumé of the opinions of other expositors, and extracts carefully collated from the works of all the most eminent writers on prophecy from the earliest ages of the Christian era down to those of recent date. It thus forms the more useful and complete guide the student can have on entering the study of that portion of the Word of God. The book may be obtained for seventy-five cents from any bookseller. This reduction in price is made to encourage the study of this important subject.

HEALING FOR THE EYES.

The following testimony of Miss Latham, of New York, was given by her at Bethshan, London, while on a Transatlantic tour, and is published in the current number of Thy Healer.

"Two years ago, in January, I was led very seriously to consider Divine Healing. I was at the time in a distant village in New Jersey. I had never come into contact with those who had been healed, or received any instruction in the doctrine of Divine Healing. Again and again it came to me, and as I suffered so much, I thought I ought to trust the Lord. I was but a poor Christian; I think, something like half-and-half. For seven or eight years I had trouble with my eyes. For a year I was virtually blind; I could not open my eyes in a lighted room. I went to oculists, and they gave me glasses to wear, and said that I should never be able to read without glasses, and that I should not be able, even with their aid, to read at night. They said also, that as I grew older I should get worse. I pleaded with the Lord, but I did not have much faith, for I did not know Him as the Healer. However, the Lord gave me faith, and then I put the glasses away, and sat down and did what I had not been able to do for years; I was able to work at writing for two hours. I have not seen the glasses since, until the other day when packing to come away. I then saw them in a little box.

"Well, I did not have the courage to tell my family, but they noticed that I did not wear glasses. They asked me, 'Where are your glasses? Have you broken them?' 'No,' I said, 'I have given them to the Lord;' and they saw that the Lord had done so much, that I was a wonder to them. But, O my friends, the spiritual eyes are, after all, of more importance than the natural eyes. As I went on, the Lord showed me His goodness more and more, and He accepted me in soul and body. I do so thank Him, and especially that He has given me repentance and sanctification. My eyes are to-day very much stronger than ever. I want to thank Him here in England for what He has done for me."

HOW THE MONEY IS SUPPLIED.

The following are one week's entries in the report which Dr. Cullis has issued of the work at the Consumptives Home and other institutions founded by him, and conducted in absolute dependence on the Lord for support:

January 17. The day opened without a dollar; the morning mail brought nothing. I went to the Home and found nothing there; returned home and found nothing in my mail there! Lord, how are to-day's provisions to be supplied? The three o'clock mail brought nothing. We always purchase in the afternoon for the next day, and to-morrow is Sunday. A stranger has come in on business and as he left he handed me $5. After he had gone $19 came in from the Repository; thus the food for to-morrow is cared for.

I had hardly written the above when a friend called; he asked not a word about the work, and nothing was said about it, but before he left he laid $15 on my table.

January 18.—Some one called at the office during my absence and left $5; at the Home a lady called and left $50; a friend called this afternoon and gave me $10 for my personal needs. This afternoon a missionary from Trinity Church made application for a poor woman in consumption; she has two children of four and six years, all now living in an attic. Although our need is great, that of the poor woman is greater, and I gave a permit for all three.

January 21*st*.—$12 given to-day.

January 22*d*.—A bitter cold day, and word has come from the Home that we have not coal enough to last the day. The morning mail brought nothing. I had $4 in my pocket. I went to the box in the church, at the close of the faith-healing meeting, and found $6.77. I tried to think if I could any way make up the balance needed to purchase three tons of coal —for that was the smallest amount we could order, as it takes about two tons daily for the work. I thought of the box in the Repository; but I had been there an hour ago, and there was not a penny in it. I could not get rid of the impression to open it. I did so, and found a roll of new bills, which, on counting, I found to be $38. "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him." (Psalms 38: 7). "O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt His name together."

January 23*d*.—This morning's mail brought a check for $17.30 for the work, and $5 for my personal use.

A LONG-DELAYED BAPTISM.

In a letter to the Church, the Rev. George A. Seely, who is laboring in Mainpuri, India, reports the baptism of a convert whose public confession of Christ has been long delayed. He lived in the Furrukhabad district, and is an old student of the Furrukhabad mission school. He is one of many throughout these provinces who have been kept from confession of Christ by fear of friends and kindred. Again and again had he promised me to come soon; but his time was always in the future, and I feared procrastination would steal away his life. Conceive then of my joy to learn from his card that he had at last firmly resolved to leave all—horses, lands, friends—and cleave to Christ. There was still a fear, however, that the way would be closed against him, so that not till he actually stood before me was I at rest regarding him. He had gathered together a bundle of clothes, a few favorite books, among them a much-worn copy of the New Testament in English, and, saddling a faithful and to him much-valued pony, made his journey quickly over. His adopted son, who now possesses the small estate, and his wife, knowing of the old man's intention at some future time to become a Christian, had again and again besought him to put such wild thoughts far away and never to think of leaving them.

CONVERTS OPENING A MISSION.

The welcome news is recorded in Jerry McAuley's Newspaper that a mission has been opened in Buffalo, N. Y., by two converts who date their conversion from Jerry McAuley's Water St. mission. They say in reporting the fact to Mrs. McAuley:

"I and my wife were converted at the Water Street Mission on January 13, 1878. We were on a canal boat. The Lord has opened up a way to start this mission. A lady was converted partly through the instrumentality of my wife, in the hands of God, and she was led, one day as she went to the store, to rent this place and asked me to take charge of it. We put in some chairs and other things, and the Mission has been opened in the name of the same Jesus that we found at the Water Street Mission, and by whom we are now led, and without whom we can do nothing. We know that we are weak in learning and ability and everything else, but, praise His Holy Name, we have on our side the King of kings and the Lord of lords, who holds the world in the hollow of His hand. My wife has been very sick—taken down after the first night of the opening of the Mission. She was given up by the doctors. Some of the holy people united in prayer with us for her, and she has been wonderfully raised up, so that she is now able to sit up. Praise the Lord. To Him, and Him only, be the honor and glory.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE PIGEONS.

In the course of an address which Canon Wilberforce delivered during his recent visit to New York, he related the following incident in speaking of the common mistake that intoxicating liquor is a good protection from cold: In England the whole aspect of the medical question is changing, mainly under the influence of that distinguished man of science, Dr. Richardson. He is one of the leading scientific minds of Great Britain. He has been successful in his experiments and as bold as a lion in his utterances, and he is leading scientific thought in this direction. He has proved over and over again, to use a common phrase, that from the monarch on the throne down to the maggot in the cheese every healthy being is better without alcohol. The other day he was staying with me (I have the greatest possible objection to experimenting upon living animals), but he described to me an experiment on pigeons. It was not a very painful experiment; indeed, there are some people who, I am afraid, would like to have the experiment made upon them. He tried to induce the pigeons to take peas soaked in alcohol. They refused to do so at first; but after a while they were pleased, and they selected the peas saturated with alcohol. One cold night he turned the pigeons out; and on the following day, when he was examining them, strange to say, all those pigeons who ate the alcoholized peas were frozen to death, and those that remained teetotalers were perfectly safe and sound.

SAVAGES ENTERTAINING A MISSIONARY.

Last fall, in the "anges" of New Guinea a missionary party had traveled for many days. The leader of the party was the well-known missionary James Chalmers, who thus describes his deliverance in a crisis: We had got short of food. We were traveling with our own kits; we call them swags down in Australia. We had very little to eat on Monday, and on Tuesday, and on Wednesday, and on Thursday. We took but a few bananas that we could pick up, and I never want to see a banana again except when hungry. It came to Friday—no bananas, and on Saturday I was dead beat, and at three o'clock in the afternoon I threw down my swag and sat down on it. I was sore pressed. What was to be done? We never travel on Sunday, but we could not starve. We had met with no natives. We were traveling through an unknown country. At last I said to the party. "Give one long loud shout, as loud as you possibly can; I cannot help you." Then there was one grand loud yell, and suddenly it was answered by another; and then there was another yell, and a man and a lad came out of the bush, followed by a woman carrying a baby. She came up, and my look of sorrow and want touched the savage's heart. She stood and looked over me; we could not speak a single word to one another, but she indicated to me that I was to get up. She had a knitted bag, and she took up the swag of mine and put it into the bag, and after placing the baby on the top, she signed that I was to follow. When passing through the bush we came to a few houses. She motioned that I was to sit down. She went away, and shortly afterward returned and placed food before me and motioned me to eat. You know it was in that way that we began to preach the Gospel. It was a gospel to me. Touch the heart of a man; let him be cannibal, savage, I care not what; give a look of kindness and sympathy, and you will get it in return.

A RABBI PROCLAIMING CHRIST.

A venerable Rabbi, named Lichtenstein, who lives in a quiet place called Tapio Szele, about two hours' ride by rail from Budapesth, in Hungary, has published two remarkable pamphlets, addressed to his brethren throughout the world, and in which he calls upon them to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as the Messiah of Israel and the Saviour of the world. The pamphlets have already been widely circulated, and are causing a profound sensation in Jewish circles in Europe. The result will probably be as important as the Rabinowitz movement, which was inaugurated a few years ago in Kischinew.

Mr. Schonberger, of the British Jews' Society, accompanied by Mr. Baron, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, visited Rabbi Lichtenstein lately. They found him in great trouble, as his son, a promising young doctor, was lying in the last stage of consumption, fast fading away. The Rabbi told them that his aim in writing and publishing the pamphlets was to make "the name of Jesus known and loved among the Jews, and to impress them with His Gospel as the Divine source of regeneration for Israel, as well as for the Gentiles." He told them of the trials, inexpressibly severe, which he has had to pass through because of his stand for the truth in Christ. They were permitted to have an interview with the dying son, who having expressed a wish that the missicnary should see him alone, his father and mother withdrew from the room. Then he said that he was filled with great anxiety about the future maintenance of his dear parents. He had hoped to be their support and comfort in their old age, and especially under the great persecution they were undergoing through his father's testimony for Christ. His visitors encouraged him to cast the care of his father and mother upon the Lord, who would be as good as His promise, and provide all things needful for them; and spoke of the great propitiatory work of the Saviour, finished on the cross, through which the forgiveness of sins and perfect peace in the prospect of death are bestowed upon all who believe. As the missionary stood by the bed of that young doctor, aged about twenty-nine, on the very brink of eternity, he felt deeply that he had indeed been divinely led to take this journey, and to speak the glorious Gospel message into the ear and down into the heart of that Rabbi's dying son. At length they said good-bye to each other.

Next day Mr. Schonberger wrote, from Pesth, a letter, in which he repeated the Gospel words he had given at the bedside. The interview had taken place on a Tuesday, the letter was written on the following day, and arrived on Thursday morning, just in time to be read before the occurrence of death. Soon after, a letter was received from the bereaved father, intimating that his dear son had read and understood the precious letter sent, and was holding it in his hand when he fell peacefully asleep in the Lord. The missionary is now corresponding with that noble Rabbi confessor, and most earnestly requests Christian friends to remember him and his wonderful mission at the heavenly throne.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS AT A CRISIS.

AT the annual festival of the Stockwell Orphanage, Pastor C. H. Spurgeon in the course of his address said that he had lately been asked whether a story which had appeared in the newspapers concerning a large sum of money sent to him when the Orphanage was being built was true. He desired now to say publicly that it was perfectly true. He was at the time staying at the house of Mrs. Croll, at Regent's Park, and one evening, in the presence of a party of ladies and gentlemen, he stated that £2,000 had to be paid to the builder of the Orphanage the following day, towards which he had not got a single penny; but he was absolutely certain that he would pay it by 10 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Brock expressed an opinion that he was unwise in declaring his faith, in consequence of the impression it might have if this money did not come in. He replied that he could not do otherwise than express his confidence in God, and they might take it from him that if the money was not forthcoming his faith in God was in vain. A few minutes after that a servant brought in a telegram from the secretary, stating that a person who did not disclose his name, had called at the office and left a cheque for £2,000 for the Orphanage. Such things had happened before, on a larger and smaller scale, and would continue to occur as long as there was a God in heaven.

The Orphanage enterprise commenced with a family of six boys in 1867, and since that date it has sheltered 1,151 fatherless children—869 boys and 282 girls. The object at the outset was to provide homes for 250 boys, but the enterprise rapidly grew beyond the original thought and intention of the president, and it now supplies accommodation for 250 boys and a like number of girls. During the last year the income of the institution from all sources was about $80,000.

THE PRE-MILLENNIAL ADVENT.

By Rev. J. M. Orrock, D. D.*

Four Millennial Boundary Events — An Awful Resurrection — Satan's Hosts — The Millennial Sabbath—A Striking Contrast—The Golden Age The Dividing Line — Scholars Becoming Pre-Millennialists—Cheering Considerations.

IN the 20th chapter of Revelation, we have a description of the millennium. In looking carefully at it you will find that the millennium is bounded by four notable events, two at the commencement and two at the end. Those at the beginning are bright and blessed, those at the end are dark and dreadful. At the beginning we have "the resurrection, the first," that of the "blessed and holy" and the binding of the devil and his incarceration in the abyss for a thousand years, commonly called the millennium. At the end we have the resurrection of "the rest of the dead," the unblessed and unholy —all who had not part in the first resurrection— and the loosing of the devil "for a little season." Now I want you to distinctly note the two events which come together at the close of the millennium. If you pause for a moment to think of what is involved in the resurrection of the unjust you will agree that it must be

A Dreadful Event.

Think how vast must be the multitude brought from the dead at the close of the millennium, when it includes all the ungodly who have died from the first hour of time down to the last moment. Dr. John Gill, a learned Baptist commentator of the last century, held that the hosts of the ungodly thus brought on the earth again by the second resurrection will constitute the army of Satan, metaphorically denominated in verse 8 "as Gog and Magog." They were his subjects previous to death; they are his subjects in the resurrection. They served him in the flesh and were deceived by him there; they will be gathered unto their master again after they have arisen, see him for the first time face to face, and be again deceived. There is no intimation that any saints will be deceived by him after the first resurrection. He cannot reach them during the millennium, for he is imprisoned, nor at the end, for they are encamped and in "the beloved city" (v. 9). He only has access to his own subjects.

The Millennial Sabbath.

As to the state of things in the millennium itself the passage assures us that the subjects of the first resurrection live and reign with Christ, are priests unto God, and will never "be hurt of the second death," which is the doom of all the finally impenitent. This for them is the sabbatismos—"the keeping of a Sabbath"—which Paul affirms "remaineth for the people of God" (Heb. 4: 9). There was no higher dignity of old among men than that of kingship and priesthood; and by these figures we are taught the great dignity to which these "blessed and holy" ones will be raised, as well as their intimate communion and sacred fellowship with their glorious head.

If Satan is bound and imprisoned when the millennium begins you will readily see that the conditions of things then will be in striking contrast to what we have now. At present the devil is very punctual at religious meetings. Jesus said, when the word of the kingdom is preached "then cometh the devil and taketh away the word out of their hearts, lest they should believe and be saved;" but then his church-going will be ended. Now Christians are exhorted to "be sober and vigilant, for the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about seeking whom he may devour;" but then his peregrinations will be stopped.

All agree that the millennium will be but whether to be enjoyed under the moonlight of Christianity, or under the sunlight of the glorious appearing and personal reign of our Lord Jesus Christ is the question at issue. All premillennialists take the latter view; and the diversity of opinion which exists among them is largely owing to what is read between the lines of the famous millennial text of Revelation. There are passages in the Old Testament which speak of blessings to Israel—whether conditional and forfeited, or otherwise—and these are brought over into the millennial age. Some bring more than others, and just to the extent that is done is the difference. But as to the fact that the millennium lies between two resurrections, and is ushered in by the personal appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ, we are a unit.

A Golden Age;

A variety of objections are urged to the view that the second coming of Christ will Precede The Millennium.

One of these is that premillennialism has the weight of numbers and scholarship against it. This is an old objection to God's truth. They said of Christ, "Whence hath this man letters?" and of some of the apostles, that they were "unlearned and ignorant men." It was brought up at the time of the Reformation, and Luther said. "The multitude is always on the side of error." The time was when the objection had more weight than now. Those were the times when the people had to read the Scripture, if at all, in a foreign tongue.

> "But Wicliff, by the grace of God,
> In hand the Bible took,
> And into English language turned
> That ever-blessed book."

And since then translation has followed translation, until in the Revised Version we have the latest results of scholarship. Since the days of the "pious and profoundly learned Joseph Mede" (as his biographer calls him), who died in 1638, there have been many scholars who have committed themselves to the doctrine of the premillennial coming of our Lord. But we do not deem great erudition necessary to an understanding of either the last things or first things connected with our Redeemer and His work. If a man has good common sense, a fair English education, and is taught of the Spirit in the Word, he will know more of the mind of the Lord than college professors and doctors of divinity who are not humble enough to bow and take God at his Word. Indeed, in reading some criticisms one is ready to question whether the writers really believe anything; for they seem more like men sinking in sand than standing upon a rock. The objection about scholarship has little weight.

In proportion to our yielding to be taught by Divine grace will be our interest in

The Prayer of the Seer

of Patmos: "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Do you hesitate to join in it because should He come now He would find the world so unprepared to meet Him and so many must perish? Think again, that if He delays to come, how many will die in their sins, and that whenever He does come He will find the world as it was in the days of Noah and of Lot—the multitudes in the broad road (Matt. 24: 37–39). Moreover, when we thus pray we petition the Lord to hasten forward the work that must be done before His return—to speedily "take out of the nations a people for his name." And then our world's history will end, as it begun, with Paradise. Earth's Creator will be its Regenerator (Rev. 21: 1–5). The divine hand will sponge out the stain which sin made six thousand years ago. And when the redeemed "out of every nation, kindred, tongue and people"—from the ranks of infancy and of riper years—shall find their everlasting home in the deathless land and sorrowless clime of the kingdom of God, it will be seen that, though all men are not saved, nor the whole world converted by the gospel, yet is not God's work in this and past ages "belittled into a practical failure?" as some say. The millennium comes, but the Lord of the millennium comes first; and His own coming will effectually answer the objections raised against it.

---

* From his paper entitled "Objections to Christ's Pre-millennial Advent Considered." The entire paper is contained in the valuable work "Prophet Studies," in which also are many other addresses and portraits of eminent students of prophecy. Pp. 216, Paper covers 50 cents; may be had from the office of THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York.

Five Cents, Postage Free.

END OF THIS AGE ABOUT THE END OF THIS CENTURY,

and its Last Week Passover Week, Ending on Thursday, April 11, 1901,

As shown by Daniel's 2300 and 1335 and 1290 Years—this being the termination also of the 6000 Years from the Creation of Man, and the 2520 Years from Nebuchadnezzar, and the 360 Years from Luther's Reformation, according to the Bible periods—a pamphlet of 29 pages—by Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal Clergyman and one of the Editors of the "Christian Herald." Author of "Forty Coming Wonders," "Coming Wars," etc. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The Business Record of the First Half of the year is of an encouraging character. An exhaustive statement published by the New York Times, made up to the close of June, shows that the failures recorded up to that date numbered but 4,912, against 5,196 for the same period last year, and 6,004 for the first half of 1885. This is a steady decrease in the number of disasters, which is a cheering evidence that the business of the country is becoming more solidly grounded on sound principles. The volume of liabilities of suspended firms, however, shows an increase for the six months just ended over that of the corresponding period last year. The amount recorded is $55,138,092, against $50,434,460 in 1886. This, the Times believes, is due to the great number of speculative failures, which can scarcely be credited to the account of the legitimate business of the country, but which go to swell the aggregate of losses sustained by financial collapses. In Canada the number of failures during the past six months was larger than in the corresponding period of 1886, and the total liabilities nearly double.

The Tide of Emigration Continues to Increase. The returns just issued show that the total number of immigrants received at the ports of the United States from the principal foreign countries, except Canada and Mexico, during the month of May was 83,664, an increase of 28,431, as compared with May, 1886. For the eleven months ending May 31, the number was 417,860, an increase of 133,608 as compared with the same period last year. This comprises about ninety-eight per cent. of the immigration into the entire country. Of the immigrants who arrived during the past eleven months the largest number, 94,278, came from Germany. From Ireland came 58,509; Sweden and Norway, 48,540; England and Wales, 65,213; Italy, 39,993; Russia, Finland and Poland, 32,428.

The Effort to Introduce Utah into the Union is assuming definite shape. A convention to frame a State constitution assembled in Salt Lake City last Thursday, and it is stated that the people have strong hopes of getting it adopted by Congress. It is difficult to find out whether they have any ground for their hope, but it will be well for Members of Congress to learn what the opinions of their districts are before voting to admit Utah. Congress has control over it while it remains a Territory, but once admitted as a State it will be under the control of its own citizens. Although the Constitution might contain a strong anti-polygamy article, when adopted, there is no guarantee that it would not be "amended" afterward by a vote of the citizens. Under present circumstances, and with the leaders of the Mormon Church still unrepentant, Utah ought to be firmly refused admission into the Union.

The Surrender and Return of the Hostile Apaches was the welcome intelligence sent to Washington on June 27 by General Miles. He telegraphed with military brevity from San Carlos, Arizona: "Lieut. Johnson's surprise and capture and the rapid pursuit of the troops have driven the band of hostiles back to the reservation, where they have surrendered, and I have instituted an investigation and detailed a General Court Martial for trial of those guilty of military offenses, thus ending the present disturbances." It may be hoped that the court martial will also shed light on the cause of the outbreak. If the Apaches had substantial grievances they ought to be remedied. Their savage nature does not excuse injustice. Gen. Miles and Lieut. Johnson, with his colored regiment, deserve great credit and the gratitude of the people on the frontier for this speedy end to the raid. During the pursuit the troops followed the hostiles forty-five miles, over the roughest mountains in southern Arizona, through intense heat and with no water.

The Trial of Jacob Sharp, who was charged with conspiring to bribe the Board of Aldermen in New York, ended on June 29 in his conviction. This result is largely due to the confession of one of the aldermen. There was no doubt about the aldermen being bribed, and three of them are now undergoing sentence for the offence, but the District-Attorney had difficulty in proving that Sharp did it, although there was no moral doubt that he furnished the necessary money. Alderman Pearson, however, supplied the missing link in the evidence. He testified that Sharp called upon him and asked him to meet Moloney just before the vote was taken for granting the franchise of the Broadway railroad. He did meet him, and received five thousand dollars for his vote. This, he stated, he afterward returned. After that evidence the guilt of Sharp was so clear that the jury convicted him on the first ballot. The result of this trial, and those of the aldermen, ought to have a beneficial influence throughout the State. They give distinct intimation to all whom it may concern, both here and at Albany, that the law is strong enough to hold both the giver and the taker of the bribe.

The Restriction of Emigration Being Likely to become an important issue in the elections in the near future, an utterance of Mr. Powderly, the chief of the Knights of Labor, published on Thursday last, is important as showing the attitude of a large proportion of workingmen on the question. He said: "I am utterly opposed to all forms of pauper emigration, and to a great deal of emigration, pure and simple. I think a halt should be called on emigration until this Nation can consider what it is doing in allowing these nationalities to enter here and become a burden on our country and a menace to the American home. As a ruling to decide who should be excluded, I would make it an almost inflexible rule that a man or woman who could not sustain himself or herself and their respective families for one year should not be allowed to land." Still more important than this is the moral character of the immigrants. Pauperism and competition, which appear to be Mr. Powderly's great dread, are not evils so dire in a great country like this, as are the principles of socialists and anarchists, which are spreading very rapidly, and menace our constitution and social order. The leaders in the movement are nearly all of foreign birth.

Two Earthquakes were Reported last Week. From several points in New Hampshire intelligence was received of a shock on Thursday afternoon about five o'clock. A dispatch from Concord says that there were three several distinct vibrations, crockery and windows being rattled and heavy buildings perceptibly jarred. In some instances persons ran from their houses through fear, and the shock at the State House was so severe that several legislators and others sought safety from impending danger in flight. The course of the vibrations seemed to be from the northwest, and reports from surrounding towns show that the shock was felt as strongly within their limits as in that vicinity. Dispatches of similar tenor were sent from Contocook and Manchester, and from Bellows Falls, Vt. A still more severe earthquake occurred on the previous day in Ecuador. A telegram from Guayaquil says: "The most violent earthquake experienced here since 1858 occurred here at 6:20 o'clock this morning, causing great alarm among the population. The shock lasted two minutes and twenty seconds, and the direction of the movement was from northeast to southwest. All the clocks in the city were stopped at the moment of the shock. A number of ceilings were shaken down and several buildings were demolished. So far as reported, no one was injured. It is thought that the shock must have caused much damage in the cities in the interior."

A Million Dollar Fire Occurred in Chicago on June 26, destroying the works of the Chicago Packing and Provision Company, north of Forty-second Street and west of Centre Avenue in the stockyards, with the main building, a four-story brick structure, 300 by 475 feet. The fire started in a room where the lard-rendering tanks are situated, and before the firemen had got fairly at work the tanks exploded, and forced the fire in every direction. The great building was surrounded on all sides by other packing houses, and the firemen concentrated their work upon the protection of adjoining property. After the lard tanks exploded the fire authorities concluded that there could be no safety inside the buildings for the firemen, and for an hour and a half the fire swept through them unrestrained except by the water thrown on them by the 30 engines from the outside. Nine firemen were seriously injured and one has since died, and a million dollars worth of property consumed.

An Investigation of Irish Affairs by the Pope is being conducted. The Irish Roman Catholic Archbishops and Bishops are decidedly against the English government, and the reports they have sent to Rome appear to have won the Pope's sympathy. On the other hand, the English Roman Catholic prelates support the government, and have urged the Pope to place less confidence in the statements of their Irish brethren, who, they allege, are prejudiced. They have advised him to send a commission to Ireland composed of unbiased agents of his own, with directions to discover the exact truth. The Pope has consented, and Mgr. Persico and Mgr. Gualdi have been appointed to make the investigation. They sailed from Rome for Ireland on June 28. Whether the investigation will lead to pacific results may be doubted. The British government will not be moved by Papal decisions, and if the Pope decides in favor of the government, and the people have to choose between him and the League, it is believed that the majority will choose to be faithful to the League and let the Pope go.

Queen Victoria has Written a Formal Letter of thanks for the enthusiastic celebration of her jubilee. She writes: "I am anxious to express to my people my warm thanks for the kind—more than kind—reception I met with going to and returning from Westminster Abbey with all my children and grandchildren. The enthusiastic reception I met with then, as well as on all these eventful days in London and at Windsor, on the occasion of the jubilee, touched me most deeply. It has shown that the labor and anxiety of fifty long years—twenty-two of which were spent in untroubled happiness, shared and cheered by my beloved husband, while an equal number were full of sorrows and trials borne without his sheltering arm and wise help—have been appreciated by my people. This feeling and a sense of duty toward my dear country and my subjects, who are so inseparably bound up with my life, will encourage me in my task, often a very difficult and arduous one, during the remainder of my life. The wonderful order preserved on this occasion and the good behavior of the enormous multitude assembled, merit my highest admiration. That God may protect and abundantly bless my country is my fervant prayer."

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

A Distressing Story from China is Told by Mr. J. J. Bardinel, one of the United States vice-consuls in that land. In a letter to the State Department, received on June 30, he says that he has just returned from a trip through the flooded districts. He was distributing food and necessaries of life to the starving people, and during the trip relieved 396 persons. He found the people generally living on bran or the chaff of a large grass grown for feeding cattle. Some were reduced to eating chopped grass, either moistened with hot water or baked in cakes, while others fed on the leaves and seeds of weeds gathered in the fields. In some of the villages half of the dwelling places had been washed away and the inhabitants were huddled together in the remaining ones. The deaths from starvation had been very numerous, and the sights he saw in the villages were pitiable.

The Belle of Bourbon is the Name of a Whisky extensively advertised in the daily press, and as the advertisement contains the picture of a beautiful woman, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union considers that it is justified in entering a protest against it. The Union contends that this association of womanhood with whisky is disrespectful, and should not be allowed. It asks the Christian public and all religious and temperance associations to take into consideration the mischief worked by the advertisements of intoxicating liquor in the daily press, and individually and collectively to exert influence on the newspapers to induce them to refuse all advertisements of intoxicants. It contends that if the publishers of the newspapers were made aware that such advertisements are offensive to a large number of their readers they would not be inserted, and therefore all who do not protest share the responsibility of their appearance. This is the gist of a series of resolutions which Miss Frances E. Willard requests us to publish, but for which we have not sufficient space.

A Suicide's Blunder Must Have Caused Him much suffering last week in New York. On June 28 one of the policemen employed in Central Park noticed something unusual about one of the trees. On going to examine it he found the body of a man hanging by the foot, head downward. A thin slight rope was around his neck and a piece of the same rope was attached to a limb of the tree about fifteen feet from the ground. The man had evidently intended to hang himself, had clambered up the tree, tied himself by the neck to the branch, and let himself drop. But the rope had broken and in falling his foot had caught in a fork of the tree and held fast. In that inverted position he had made a long but unavailing effort to release himself and he remained there until the flow of blood to his head ended his suffering. If he expected an easy and painless death he must have been disappointed. But that was not the worst disappointment he would experience. Letters in his pocket showed that he had killed himself to escape the consequences of sin. By this time he must have learned that suicide was the very way to make such escape hopeless (Rev. 20: 10).

News of Patients Cured by an Earthquake is printed in the Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise. It states that miners from the Comstock mines report that at Walley's hot springs where sufferers from rheumatism resort for the benefit of the waters, a large number of patients were gathered on the night of the recent earthquake. The shocks were worse there than at any other point—"they were simply terrific." There was the wildest consternation among the patients. Men who had been limping about for days, hardly able to put one foot before the other, and men who thought they could not move at all, except on crutches, hopped out of their beds as nimbly as youths of sixteen. Cramped and crooked legs were straightened out in a hurry. Not a man remembered that he had ever had rheumatism. One man says that a well-known Comstocker, who for days had been carried from one bed to another, hopped up as lively as a cricket and beat all the rest at getting into his clothes. It is the opinion of the miner that the shaking up did all the patients good. In his own case, he is sure that it made him well. There is no reason to impute hypocrisy to the patients who showed so much agility in their terror, when it was supposed that they were helpless. Physiologists have often been surprised by evidences of the influence which the mind has over the body, which they witness but cannot explain. Neither has science any explanation for the more wonderful phenomenon of the spiritually helpless throwing off their lethargy and becoming active in Christ's service. The believer, however, who has experienced the change knows that it is the Lord who has given him the power (Isa. 35 : 6).

Sixty Skeletons in a Cave in Tennessee Were discovered on June 27. The cave is situated near Cookville, on what was known, many years ago, as the Kentucky stock road. This was at that time the principal highway for traders between Kentucky and Georgia or South Carolina. Stopping places on the road were few and far between, and many men returning after selling their stock never reached home. A short time ago, a man digging near the entrance to the cave near Cookville, found a human skeleton, and on Monday of last week, a party concluded to explore the cave, which is about one-half mile from one of the notorious stopping places on the old road. The cave opened into large caverns, with a downward course under the mountain. At the bottom the party found human bones, and with a little searching in the débris that had accumulated at this point found sixty skeletons of men who had been murdered and thrown down this hole. Some skulls were found with bullet holes through them, others being mashed with an axe or instrument of that kind. It was a shocking discovery, and it seems strange that, as so many persons had disappeared in traveling that road, suspicion of foul play was not excited, and the road avoided by travelers. But if men would only avoid the road on which others are known to have fallen victims, the broad road of sin which leads to destruction would not now be crowded (Matt. 7:13).

A Famous Acrobat Fell from his Rope at Niagara Falls on June 25. For some time past visitors at the Falls have been astonished by a performance which surpassed those of Blondin. A man named Beer crossed and recrossed on a three-quarter inch cable, and his daring feats performed on the way thrilled every spectator, exciting the emotion, which some people enjoy, of apprehension that he might at any moment be dashed to pieces. Latterly, he has become more venturesome, and, to add to his peril, he is reported to have become occasionally intemperate. On the day of his death, after taking a drink, he went off to the place where his rope was stretched, and is supposed to have had a private rehearsal by himself. As he did not return to his hotel, search was made for him near his rope. A man was lowered over the precipice, and there among the rocks he found the body of the rope-walker, cut and crushed almost beyond recognition. He probably fell a victim to over-confidence. Having performed his perilous feats so often without falling, he ventured one too perilous, or, one of his usual feats, when he was not in a condition to maintain his equilibrium. In that way judgment often falls upon sinners. They think that because God does not punish their sins immediately, they may go on in their impiety with impunity (Eccles. 8: 11).

A Gang of Astonished Laborers had a Disagreeable experience on the Canadian frontier on June 24. For some time past workmen residing in Canada have been employed near Niagara Falls on the American side of the frontier, crossing in the morning and returning at night. About two hundred of them were crossing Suspension Bridge that morning as usual to their work when they were surprised to find at the United States end of the suspension bridges, deputies stationed by the Collector of Niagara Falls, who demanded their names, ages, residences, occupations, and where and by whom they were employed. During the day notices were served upon the employers of these foreigners that if they should continue to employ such foreign labor after July 1, the United States District-Attorney would be recommended to proceed against them according to law. The Collector alleges as the reason of his action that a similar movement was being made by the Dominion Government, but the Canadian Inspector of customs denies this, and contends that the American Collector is animated by hostility to Canada. However that may be, it would appear that in future, workmen will not be able to live under one Government while working under the other. In Christ's kingdom many are trying to live that double life, attending church, giving liberal contributions and even helping in Christian work, without giving themselves wholly to the Lord. All such will learn at the last that their divided allegiance is fatal to them (Luke 13: 25–27).

BRIEF NOTES.

It is reported that thirty-five students of Cornell University have expressed their desire to become missionaries in the foreign field.

A force of 2,000 colporters distribute printed sermons among the non-church going people of Berlin, Germany. More than 100,000 sermons are distributed each week.

The Senate of Pennsylvania has passed a bill providing for the infliction of the death penalty by electricity. Two or more patents have already been issued for chairs provided with wires for the purpose.

The International Temperance Congress will be held in Zurich, Switzerland, on the 9th and 10th of September. Mrs. Mary B. Willard and Miss Charlotte Gray will, it is expected, be delegates from the W. N. C. T. U.

The Canadian Presbyterian General Assembly, which has been holding its sessions this year at Winnipeg, was entertained at a special reception by the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province, who attended all its sessions.

The National Temperance Society will hold a five-days' temperance camp-meeting at Ocean Grove, N. J., under the management of J. N. Stearns, Corresponding Secretary, commencing Wednesday, July 27, and ending Sunday, the 21st.

Rev. W. H. Browne's services in Baltimore, Md., have been the means of stirring up the churches to organized evangelical work. Mr. Avis and his son conducted an efficient choir of sixty voices, which attracted many to the meetings who do not often attend religious services.

Evangelist D. W. Potter, assisted by Prof. Miller, who has had charge of the music, has been holding Union services in Sterling, Ill., with much success. The Record of Christian Work says that a petition was circulated in the town requesting all business houses, Jew and Gentile, to close in the evenings, so as to enable the employees to attend the revival meetings. This request was acceded to and many came.

Major J. H. Cole has concluded his services in Missouri. At the last meetings the scene was unprecedented in the State. The Hannibal, Mo., Courier says that dense crowds of converts surrounded him, blessing God that he had been sent there. Four thousand five hundred names of persons who have accepted Christ during the services, have been registered. He has now gone to his home at Adrian, Mich., for a brief rest.

Mr. Charles Herald has conducted two very successful campaigns during the past month in Chicago—one at the Congregational Tabernacle and one at the Railroad Chapel. He also spent a week at Renssalaer, Ind., where much good was accomplished. The lady visitors have labored in connection with these services, visiting from house to house, calling upon inquirers, laboring in the inquiry-room, and seeking out those who need their help.

The Believers' Meeting for Bible study opens at Niagara, Ont., on July 19, and continues for ten days. So much benefit has been derived in past years from this conference that it has been decided to hold one in the same place every year in July. Applications for board and lodging in the houses and hotels, excepting the Queen's Royal Hotel, may be addressed to the Secretary of the Committee of Entertainment, T. B. BLAIN, Esq., Niagara, Ontario. Further information about the conference may be obtained from W. J. ERDMAN, 193 West Springfield Street, Boston, Mass.

Canvassers Wanted to Sell, from House to House, THE CHRISTIAN HERALD. Any man, woman, or youth may easily add to their income every week by selling the paper in their spare hours in their own neighborhood. One man has sold one hundred copies on a Saturday. For terms address Manager of CHRISTIAN HERALD, 63 Bible House, New York.

PLAIN GOSPEL FOR PLAIN PEOPLE.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"For this commandment which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off. * * * * But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it."—Deuteronomy xxx. 11-14.

Moses Writing of the Saviour—I. The Way of Salvation an Open Secret—To be Expected from the Nature of God—Necessary if the Masses are to be Saved—A Gospel for Children—For Semi-Imbeciles—For Dying Men—II. Its Nearness—On the Tongue—In the Heart—The Backsheesh of the Almighty—The Obstacles to Accepting It—The Barter Idea—Pride—Love of Sin—III. Why It is Simple—That it May be Received.

Our Lord Jesus Christ, in John's gospel, in the forty-sixth verse of the fifth chapter, says: "Moses wrote of me." Hence we may safely interpret much that Moses said, not only of the law, but also of the gospel. This is certainly one of the passages in which Moses wrote of the Saviour yet to come. We are not, however, left to conjecture this; for the apostle Paul has quoted this passage in the tenth chapter of his Epistle to the Romans. He has given us a sort of paraphrase of it; not quoting it with verbal exactness, but giving its sense, and then inserting his own interpretation of that sense, which interpretation may be accepted as decisive.

What is meant by these words is this—that the way of salvation is plain and clear; it is not concealed among the mysteries of heaven: "It is not in heaven that thou shouldst say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it and do it?" Neither is it wrapped up among the profundities of deep, unrevealed secrecy; "Neither is it beyond the sea, that thou shouldst say, who shall go over the sea for us, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it and do it." But the way of salvation is brought home to us, given to us in a handy form, and laid within grasp of our understanding; it is spoken to us in human language, and brought within the compass of human emotion,

I. And so I begin my discourse this morning with this first head: The way of salvation is plain and simple. You have neither to look skyward nor seaward to find it out; here it is before you; near as your tongue; inseparable from you as your heart. You have neither to rise to the sublime nor sink to the profound; it lies before you

An Open Secret.

As saith Moses in the last verse of the previous chapter: "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God; but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children forever." I think we might have expected this if we consider the nature of God, who has made this wonderful revelation. When God speaks to a man with a view to his salvation, it is but natural that in his wisdom he should so speak as to be understood. It is not wisdom which leads teachers to become obscure; if they teach at all, they should adapt themselves to the disciple's capacity. No doubt some men have obtained a reputation for wisdom because they have not been understood; but this was fictitious, and unworthy of true men. If they had possessed the highest wisdom, they would have aimed at making matters clear when their object was to instruct. As a general rule, when a speaker is not clear to his hearers it is because the thought is not clear to himself. This can never be supposed of Him who knows all things and sees all things as they are.

I admit that certain parts of the divine revelation are hard to be understood, but these are intended for our education, that we may exercise our minds and thoughts, and may by the guidance of the Holy Spirit grow thereby. But in the matter of salvation, where the life or death of soul is concerned, it is needful that the vision should be plain, and our wise and gracious Lord has condescended to that necessity. In all that concerns repentance and faith, and the vital matters of pardon and justification, there is no obscurity—all is plain as a pikestaff. He that runs may read, and he that reads may run.

We might also expect simplicity when we remember the design of the plan of salvation. God aims distinctly by the gospel at the salvation of men. He bids us preach the gospel to every creature. It gospel if it is to be preached to every creature. I thank God with all my heart that the sage is here put on a level with the child; for the gospel must be received by him as a little child receives it. If the grace of God be given to the least educated person in yonder village, he is as well able to receive the gospel as the most profound scholar in the university. Would any of you wish to have it otherwise? Could you be so inhuman? Must the gospel also be enclosed for an aristocracy? Must the cultured few be gratified at the expense of the ruin of the masses? God forbid. But it must be so unless the saving doctrine of the gospel can be perceived by the untutored many, Every generous heart delights to think that "the poor have the gospel preached unto them."

Had Need be Simple

Brethren, to save the many the truth must be very simple and easy to be understood; for the many are busy with needful labor. From morning to night their hands are going to earn the bread that perisheth, their thoughts must be largely taken up with their daily toil, If men cannot be saved without weeks and months of careful study, they will certainly be lost. As good have no salvation as one which is beyond ordinary comprehension. Our workingmen need a gospel which can be heard and thought upon while they earn their daily bread. It should be clear as the sun, and simple as the A B C, that they may see it, and then hold it in their memories.

The mass of our fellow-men are not only very busy, but from their poverty and other surroundings they never will attain to any high degree of education. We are thankful for all that is done by School Boards and other agencies; but these operate for the present world rather than for eternal and spiritual things. Men may learn all that books can teach them, and not be a jot nearer the knowledge of heavenly truth. Heavenly knowledge is of another sort, and is open to those who gain no certificates and pass no standards. Those who know their Bibles true, and find therein the appointed Saviour, have not reached that point by the learning of the schools; we may say of each one of them, "Blessed art thou; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven." The word of life is meant for men as sinners, and not for men as philosophers; and hence the message is made plain and clear.

Moreover, we might expect the gospel to be very plain, because of the many which else would be unable to receive it. Remember the children. How glad we are that our boys and girls can know and receive the Saviour, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not!" Remember, also, that many return to feebleness of mind in their old age. How many who displayed considerable strength of intellect in middle life find their faculties failing them as their years multiply! We want a gospel which an old man can grasp when sight and hearing are failing him, when the memory is weakened, and the judgment is enfeebled. Remember, once more, the many feeble intellects which are to be found on all hands—not imbecile, but still not intellectual; not without thought and reason, but yet with an exceedingly narrow range of understanding. Shall these be shut out by a complicated, philosophical gospel? We cannot think so. The gospel of our salvation saves the feeble-minded as well as the clever; it reaches the slow and dull as well as the quick and bright. Is it not well that it should be so?

Feeble Minds

What think you, my friends, would become of the dying if the gospel were intricate and complex? How would even the saints derive consolation in death from a labyrinth of mysteries? We are called at times to visit persons who are in their last hours, passing to judgment without God and without hope. It is

A Sorrowful Business.

It is always a cause of trembling with us, when we have to deal with the impenitent upon the borders of the eternal world. But we must never visit another sick bed, for we can never talk with another dying man with any hope, if we have not a gospel to take to such, which can be made plain even to those whose minds are bewildered amid the shadows of the grave.

But, beloved, I need not argue from what we expect or see; I bid you look to the revelation itself, and see if it be not nigh unto us. Even in the days of Moses, how plain some things were! It must have been plain to every Israelite that man is a sinner, else why the sacrifice, why the purgations and the cleansings? Not a day passed without its morning and evening lambs. Plain enough also was the doctrine of faith; for each bringer of a sacrifice laid his hand upon the victim, confessing his sin, and by that act he transferred his sin to the offering. It was also clear to every Israelite that this cleansing was not the effect of the typical sacrifices themselves, otherwise they would not have been repeated year by year and day by day; for as Paul well puts it, the conscience being once purged, there would be no necessity for further sacrifice. Equally clear it must have been to every Israelite that the faith which brings the benefit of the great sacrifice is a practical and operative faith which affects the life and character. Continually they were exhorted to serve the Lord with their whole heart. So that, dim as the dispensation may be considered to have been as compared with the gospel day, yet actually it was sufficiently clear. Even then "the word was nigh" to them.

II. Secondly, the word

Has Come Very Near

to us. I want your earnest attention to this point. I beg those of you who are unconverted to hear with attention. "The word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth." It is a thing which you can speak of; you have talked about it; you still talk of it. It is "familiar in your mouths as household words." Most of you are able to speak it to others, for you learned it in your catechism, you repeated it to your Sunday-school teachers. You sing it in your hymns; you read it in books and tracts and pamphlets; and you write it in letters to your friends. I am glad that you have it upon your tongues: the more it is so, the better: but how near has it come? Oh, that your tongue may be also able to say, "I believe it. I accept Jesus as my Saviour. I avow my faith before men!" Then will it be nearer still. I dare humbly, but boldly, to speak of my own ministry, and of you as my hearers, that the word comes very near to you from this pulpit, for I have always aimed at the utmost plainness of speech and directness of address. There is not one among you but what may understand the gospel which you hear from me every Sabbath day. If you perish it is not for want of plain speaking. The word is on your tongue.

Moses also added, "and in thy heart." By the heart, with the Hebrews, is not meant the affections, but the inward parts, including the understanding. My dear hearers, the gospel. Moreover, the doctrines of the gospel are such that our inward nature bears witness to the truth of them. When we preach that men are sinners, your conscience says, "That is true." When we declare that there is salvation by sacrifice, your understanding agrees that this is a gracious mode by which God is just, and the justifier of him that believeth. If you believe it, this gospel will appear so plainly true that every part of your nature will attest it. Many of us have accepted this way of salvation; now we love it and delight in it, and to us it seems the most simple, and at the same time the most sublime system conceivable.

You Can Understand

There are no difficulties and obscurities about the gospel, except such as we ourselves create. The reason for thine unbelief lies partly in the natural tendency of the human heart towards legalism. Human nature cannot believe in free grace. It is accustomed to buying and selling, and therefore it must bring a price in its hand: to have everything for nothing seems out of the question. The notion of a wage to be earned is natural enough; but that of God is not so readily perceived: yet so it is. I have heard that a missionary trying to make an Oriental understand salvation by grace, set it out in many ways to him and failed, until at last he cried, "Salvation is a backsheesh of the Almighty." Then the Eastern caught the idea. You cannot get the idea of grace into a natural man's head; it requires a divine surgical operation to open a way for this truth into our mercenary minds; yea, it requires that we be made anew before we will see it. That God freely forgives, and that He loves men solely and only because He is love, is a thought divinely simple, but our selfish prejudices refuse to accept it.

Eternal Life is a Gift

In many instances it is pride that makes the gospel appear so difficult. You cannot think that Jesus saves you, and that all you have to do is to accept his finished salvation. Like Naaman, you would prefer to do some great thing.

You Want to be Something, do you not? Human nature craves to have a little hand in salvation—to feel something, to groan a certain time, or despair to a certain length; but when the gospel comes with the one message, "Believe and live," pride will not consent to be saved on such pauperizing terms. Yet so it is; accept it, and you have it; stretch out your hand and take what God most freely gives. This is also caused by the love of sin. Those who do not wish to give up their favorate sins pretend the gospel is very difficult to understand, or quite impossible to accept, and so they excuse themselves for going on in their iniquity. Do you murmur that you cannot see? Who has closed your eyes? There are none so blind as those who will not see: your blindness is wilful. Salvation is of the Lord, but damnation is of man only.

There I leave the matter. I can bring you to the water, but I cannot make you drink. May God the Holy Spirit apply to your hearts and consciences the important truth that, whether you enter it or not, "the kingdom of God has come nigh unto you!" O Lord, grant that none of these, my hearers, may put from them Thy word, and count themselves unworthy of eternal life!

III. I close with this, that

The Design

of this simplicity and nearness of the gospel is that we should receive it. Observe how the text expressly words it, "The word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it." "That thou mayest do it." The gospel is not sent to men to gratify their curiosity, by letting them see how other people get to heaven. Christ did not come to amuse us, but to redeem us. His word is not written for our astonishment, but "These are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God: and that believing, ye may have life through His name." As the word of the Lord is not sent to gratify curiosity, so also it is not sent coolly to inform you of a fact which you may lay by on the shelf for future use.

It is not even sent to thee merely to make thee orthodox in opinion as to religious matters, although many persons seem to think that this is the one thing needful. Remember, that perdition for the orthodox will be quite as horrible as eternal ruin for the heterodox. It will be a dreadful thing to go to hell with a sound head and a rotten heart. Alas! I fear that some of you will only increase your own misery as you increase your knowledge of the truth, because you do not practice what you know. God save us from dead knowledge, and give us the gracious action which is the fruit of knowing: "That thou mayest do it!"

What is to be done? There are

Two Things to be Done.

First, that thou believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as thy Saviour. Take him to be thy sacrifice: trust him wholly and alone from this time forth as thy ransom from sin. Take him to be thy Lord as well as thy Saviour: yield thyself up to him as thy prophet, priest and king. Let Jesus be thine all in all, and be thou wholly his. The second thing is that thou confess thy Lord with thy mouth. Avow thyself to be a believer in Jesus, and a follower of him. Do this in his own way; for he hath said, "He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be saved." But let thy confession be sincere; do not lie unto the Lord. Confess that thou art His follower because thou art indeed so; and henceforth all thy life bear thou His cross and follow Him. This is what thou art to do; to yield thyself up to him whom God hath appointed to save his people from their sins.

"But," saith one, "I thought that there was a certain experience." Indeed there is an experience; but all true experience ends in this, in leading the heart to accept Christ as its Saviour. "But I thought," says another, "that you would dwell at length upon the work of the Holy Spirit." I rejoice in that work, and will tell you a great deal about it at another time; but the chief work of the Holy Spirit is to strip you of yourself, and bring you to receive that simple word of God which is the subject of this morning's discourse. If thou wilt now bow before the Christ of God, and take him, henceforth, to be thy Saviour, thou art saved. The simple act of trusting Jesus has brought thy justification; and thine open confession of him in his own appointed way shall bring thee a fuller realization of salvation. By coming out on the Lord's side, thou shalt gather strength to overcome the sins which now beset thee, and thou shalt be helped to work out thine own salvation with fear and trembling, because God is working in thee to will and to do of his good pleasure.

I will preach the gospel once more, and I have done. The apostle Paul, thinking of what Moses said about going up to the sky or down to the sea to find says in effect, "That is right, Moses; there was a necessity for some one to come down, and an equal necessity for some one to go up: but that necessity exists no longer."

The Sacred Secret,

The whole gospel lies in this—there was One in heaven at the right hand of the Father, very God of very God, and in order to save thee, poor lost and ruined sinner, this adorable Son of God came down, down, down to the manger, to the cross, to the grave, to the lowest parts of the earth; and down in grief, in rejection, in agony, in death. Because He came under the weight and curse of sin, He came down indeed! Because Jesus has come down thus, and borne the punishment of sin, he that believes in Him is justified. By that coming down of the Lord from heaven the sinner's sin is put away, and the transgression of the believer is forgiven. Believest thou this? Believest thou that Jesus bore thy sins in His own body on the tree? Wilt thou trust to that fact? Thou art saved. Doubt it not.

So far this clears thee of sin. But it was necessary that we should not merely be washed from sin—for that would leave us naked—but that we should be clothed with righteousness. To that end our Lord Jesus rose again, and so came up from the depth. When our Redeemer had finished His going down, and so had made an end of sin, He had yet to bring in everlasting righteousness, and so He returned by the way which He went. He rose from the tomb; He rose from Olivet; He rose until a cloud received him out of His apostles' sight; He rose through the upper regions of the air; He rose to the pearl gate; He rose to the throne of God where he sitteth as one who has accomplished His service, expecting until His enemies are made His footstool.

"He that believeth is justified:" so saith the Scripture. Dost thou see this? I believe it, I believe it with my whole heart, and therefore I confess it before this multitude with my mouth, and I am saved. Wilt thou believe and confess, Oh, that the blessed Spirit may bring thee to this: this is the entrance into the way of eternal life. This is the dawn of a day which shall never die down into darkness. May the blessed Spirit bring thee to this faith, and this confession, for Jesus Christ's sake! Amen.

GEMS FROM NEW BOOKS.

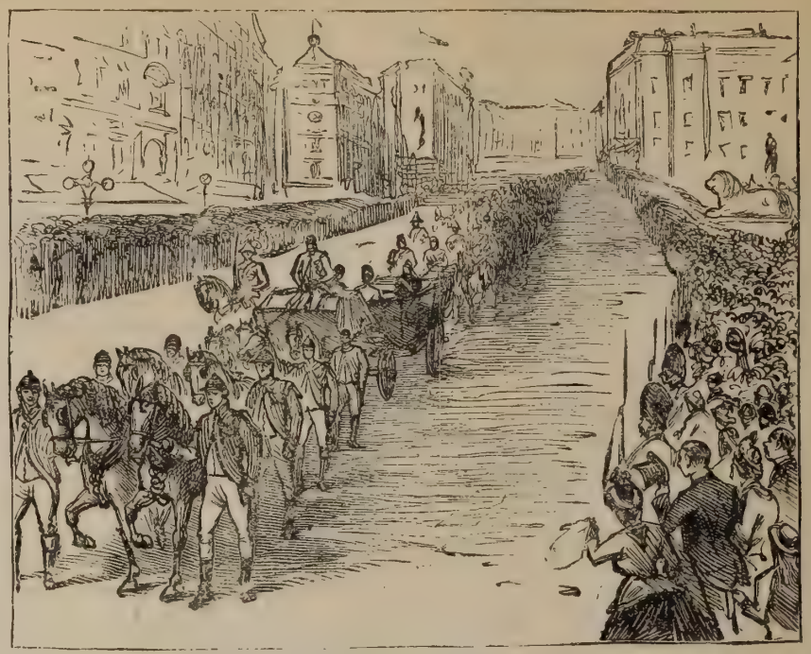
THE LAST SURVIVOR.*

FAR away down the years, at the close of the first century, an old man sits brooding over the things that he had seen and heard in the cities of Judah and in the fields of Galilee. Forty, fifty, sixty years, and more perhaps, lie now between him and the scenes which he records. Sixty years—and such years:—years of revolution—years of judgment—years in which the old order perished in doom, and the new world rose into victory under the breath of the Spirit of God. He had himself long ago, it may be, laid up in the book of the Revelation, the visions in which the tremendous drama of those momentous years moved toward its final and critical act. Yet now his look is not forward into the silences that delay the trumpet blasts of Divine action. His eyes turn ever back, overleaping the crowded interval—back to those wonderful days when he walked behind the feet of the Master—the days when he touched and tasted and handled. Still his whole being hangs on those memories. Still he ponders and weighs and wonders and broods. For we are listening, in these first verses of St. John, to an old man's broodings. No one can mistake their tone, or be insensible to their atmosphere—as the verses fall on the ear with solemn weight of monotony, serious as a winter's eve, in which the stars silently offer themselves to our eyes one by one. in seemly order and in noiseless ease. So the great words detach themselves from his lips, single, slow, deliberate, unhasting. Round and round the story His spirit has searched and labored, and waited, until word could set itself to word, and phrase to phrase. No time could be too long in which to collect into one brief passage the sum and substance of all that revelation which was made known to him in the name of Jesus Christ.

So he sits, and slowly speaks, and round him are clustering close a crowd of anxious listeners. How strange that crowd would once have been to the fisherman of Bethesada! It was a crowd gathered out of all those who are scattered abroad upon the face of the earth—keen Greeks, and fervent Syrians, and cultivated Africans, with perhaps a Roman magistrate or a Gaulish slave. Every kind of alien blood is there, but none, or almost none, of his brethren, the children of Abraham. The church in which he rules is wholly Greek in tone, in temper, in habit. He has had to forget his own country and his father's house; and the house is now shattered and that country wrecked, and all the old scenes of his far home are darkened, desolate; and never will he walk at all in those deep, familiar places where he first looked up from his nets and saw the Master, and heard the call, and left all and followed Him. Ah! how long ago, though it be to Him but as yesterday. And now he sits alone, perhaps in all the world, of those who saw the Lord! Alone and very old, and the question is daily pressing, can it be that he, too, is to die as all the rest have died—James, his brother, fifty years back, and Peter, whom he loved—can it be thirty years since Peter died; Andrew and Philip, so long his companions on the coasts of Asia. And will there be no one left on earth of all those who were his friends, who will be there to greet the Lord when he comes again, as they had seen him go?

*From "Creed and Character," by the Rev. H. S. Holland, M. A.; pp. 344. Price $1.50. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

Queen Victoria's Jubilee Procession leaving her Palace.



The Procession in Trafalgar Square.

Yet what was it the Lord had promised when Peter pressed him by the lake side, on that awful dawn, when they whispered, "It is the Lord?" Was it not that he, John, should be there alive, tarrying long until the glad day when He should come again, and their joy should be full?

So he half thought, so many had asserted, and yet it was not quite that. No; but only that perhaps it might be so, if Christ willed that he should so tarry.

And would he will it? Often he had prayed for this to be, and cried, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Yet now it seemed otherwise. Now it seemed as if, after all, he would die without seeing it. So it felt to him; so it looked; it must now be very near, and much as he and they had longed for the other to be true, yet still he keeps reminding them that his dear Master had never said, "he should never die," but only "if I will that he tarry."

THE QUEEN'S PROCESSION.

(See Illustration.)

The interest manifested by the American people in the Jubilee celebrations in England, on June 21, has been a surprise to many, and has led some Englishmen—a prominent English clergyman particularly—to infer that it indicates a waning loyalty to republican institutions. Though the inference has no foundation in fact, and though there is not the slightest desire on the part of any section to see monarchy introduced here, it is certain that no European event of late years has so fully occupied the attention of the American public as this. Not only was there a display of bunting and numerous public meetings in honor of the occasion, but a large number of our citizens—Mr. Blaine among them—crossed the Atlantic on purpose to witness the celebration, and many paid an enormous sum for good posts of observation.

The pageant appears—if we may judge by the voluminous reports cabled to the daily press—to have been a spectacle well worth seeing. Long before the hour fixed for the Queen's departure from Buckingham Palace immense crowds assembled near the Palace gates, and along the whole line which the procession was to traverse, from there to Westminster Abbey, where the special service was held.

Punctually at eleven o'clock the gates were thrown open and the first of the procession issued forth. Princes from India and minor German "serenities" came first. Then followed officers of the Royal household and the "Ladies in Waiting," in five open carriages. Then more carriages, containing the Queen's daughters-in-law and granddaughters. Then the Queen's carriage drawn by eight cream-colored horses. (See Illustration.) The Queen rode facing the horses and sat alone. The Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria, the Queen's oldest child and wife of the Crown Prince of Germany, occupied the other seat in the carriage and sat opposite her Majesty. Escorting the carriage were the Queen's three sons, four grandsons, and five sons-in-law, and her cousin, the Duke of Cambridge. The Queen was manifestly delighted. Her face wore a constant smile, she bowed and thanked the people, and whenever on the way she recognized any person she fairly beamed with joy.

Over her black costume the Queen wore a white lace gown. Her bonnet was of white netting or lace, with an inwrought coronet of diamonds. The procession was closed by the regiments of Life Guards. The houses and public buildings along the route were all packed with human beings. On reaching an open space, where six main streets converge, the sight was a memorable one, the streets being all splendidly decorated with flowers, flags, evergreens etc. Many of the imposing commercial buildings along the way were one mass of heads. At Trafalgar square (See Illustration,) a thousand children seated on a platform sang God save the Queen.

ALICE HOWARD'S FRIENDS.

(See Illustration on page 429)

"I am grieved to see so intelligent and attractive a lady as you are in such a position," said a young man in New York one night about eleven o'clock to a young and graceful woman, who accosted him as he was going home from one of the piers where he had been to say good-by to a friend on board a steamer, which was to sail for Europe at sunrise.

"Oh! there is no need to break your heart over me," was the reply. "I am doing well enough—a great deal better than I used to do when I was leading what you call a respectable life. What do you mean?"

"I mean that your life can have but one end. Even if, as you say, you are doing better now than you used to do, the time is not far off when you will grow weary of your life and loathe it, and when you come to die what will it be to meet God with all your sins unpardoned?"

"Oh! don't preach; come and have a drink and drive such horrors away. You make me melancholy."

"No drink will do that; and what I say makes you melancholy because you know it's true."

"Yes; it's true enough, but what is the use of dwelling on it. When a thing is disagreeable and it can't be cured, the less one thinks of it the better."

"But this thing can be cured. If you would give up this life and give your heart to the Saviour, the thought of dying would not trouble you."

"Ah! that is all very fine; but how am I to give up the life? How should I live, if I did? Who would employ me? I suppose you would have me go into a reformatory and wear a horrid uniform, and go on a platform and tell the people that I am a penitent. No, thank you, that would not suit me. I had rather be as I am now with plenty to eat and nice clothes to wear, and to do as I like. I am no penitent."

"I do not want you to do anything of the kind, though that would be better than your present life. It would have a better ending, anyway. Anything would be better than this."

"Well, it is no concern of yours; though it is kind of you to take an interest in me. What makes you do it? You don't know me."

"No, I don't, but I would do you good if I could; I owe a debt to your sex I can never repay, and I have a reverence for women that prompts me to help any in need of help. I owe all I am and have to the love and wisdom of a good mother. Have you a mother?"

A cry—almost a shriek was the answer. "Oh, don't speak of her—you are cruel—I cannot bear it. No, I have no mother; thank God, she is in heaven!"

"Ah! I see you loved her. But do not say you have no mother when she is in heaven. She is living and longing to have you meet her. You must wish that, too, I am sure."

"I will not talk to you any longer; you make me miserable, and here is some one I know."

"Stay, give me your address; I cannot let you go without doing something."

"Here, take it," and she handed him a tiny card. "I do not know that I care to see you, but you are kind, at any rate, and you mean well, but you are dull, and, what is worse, your dullness is infectious." And she hurried away.

The young man looked at the card by the light of a street-lamp and read: "Alice Howard" and an address which he knew to be in an uptown street of French flat houses. Meditating on the case of the girl and considering the best course to pursue he walked slowly homeward. Two or three points in the conversation showed that she was not so careless and vicious as she pretended to be. A girl whose memory of her mother was so tender had at least one joint in her armor that an arrow might reach. But how to deal with her—that was the question.

Arrived at home, he prayed long and earnestly for her before retiring to rest. She mingled with his dreams in a distressing, painful way and the next morning she was the first subject in his thoughts. He prayed about it again, and this time there was light. The thought of a friend, a gentle, matronly lady of earnest piety occurred to him, and he resolved to advise with her. He called upon her and related what had happened, describing the girl and her conversation.

"If you will give me her address," the lady said when she had heard the story, "and will leave the matter in my hands I will see what can be done."

He gladly complied, asking, however, to be kept informed of the course of events, for in some way that he could not explain, his interest in the stranger was most acute. Several weeks passed and no definite information was given to him by his friend. She had seen Miss Howard several times, and was not without hope; that was all. Time and again he inquired, but learned nothing more. One day, however, his friend said she was going to see her and would take him with her, if he liked. She had moved out of the city and was with some friends, the lady said.

A short railroad journey and a walk of nearly a mile through a pretty village brought them to a quiet-looking house in a large garden. "This is a place," said the Christian lady, "that I keep for a work no one knows anything of, and I must ask you not to betray me. When I am making purchases in stores and notice any of the sales-ladies looking weary or sick I invite them to spend a week or two here to recuperate. I have quite a number of friends among them now who come every year. It costs but little, and you have no idea how much good it does. Alice is here with a party now. She is quite transformed, and I hope to get her employment.

The door of the house stood open as they walked up the garden, and looking in they saw a group of happy faces. Some of the girls were reading, others working, while sitting at a piano was a form that the young man recognized as that of Miss Howard. The welcome his companion received, the affection in which she was evidently held, astonished him. The girls clustered around her, kissing her and showing their love in many ways. "Here," said he to himself, "is Christianity as Christ intended it to be—helpful, kind, gentle, a work of rescue."

He had a long conversation with Miss Howard, and learned that, through the influence of this Christian lady, she had broken with her old life and old associates, and though she did not know how she could earn a living, she looked forward to poverty and hard work with a cheerful heart. More than that, she was earnestly seeking the Saviour.

More than once afterward the young man was allowed to visit the retreat. Alice Howard was there still, though the other inmates went and came. "I do not know what to do about Alice," the Christian lady said as they returned from one of these visits; "she wants to earn her livelihood, but I cannot procure employment suitable for her, and I will not let her go till I can. When I find a place fit for her and tell her story the door is closed against her. The compassion the Saviour felt for the erring seems to have no place now, either in the church or world," and she sighed sadly.

"Do not distress yourself about this particular case, my dear friend," said the young man. "I asked Alice to-day if she would be my wife, and she is going to speak to you about it. If you approve she will consent."

"May God bless you both," was the reverent reply; "you will not regret it." And he never did.

Alice Howard's Friends.

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE.

A SERIAL STORY.

By Rev. J. Jackson Wray.

(Continued from page 414.)

Ethel's Project.

ROBERT ATHELING'S departure from Sharon Lodge was followed, a little later on the same day, by that of Señor Bonanza and his daughter Inez, who had agreed to accompany Ethel and Harold to Aspen Towers. The offer on Inez's part had been prompted by sympathy with Ethel and a desire to minister to her wants on the journey, but now she had a new delight in it, for was she not going toward the place in which Alfred Atheling had his home? The thought of that fact brought a glow to her heart and gave color to her cheek and sparkle to her eyes, rendering her appearance so bright and blooming that it contrasted painfully with the pallor on Ethel's face and the tokens of weakness that told so pathetic a story of the inroads that disease was making in that fair and feeble form. So is it ever in this world of changes, contrasts and inequalities.

Thanks very greatly to the tender care and happy resources of Inez, Ethel was enabled to bear the tedious journey better than might have been expected, and in due time the whole party arrived at Chilworth station, and were driven in the baronet's roomiest and easiest carriage direct to the portals of Aspen Towers, where Sir Godwin awaited them with eager expectancy. It was a scene never to be forgotten by Harold, that met his view as he re-entered his boyhood's home. He had left his father a fine portly gentleman in the prime of life; now he saw a feeble paralytic, shrunken, weak, and trembling on the edge of the grave. No thought of the inheritance, soon to be his crossed his mind, as it would that of many an heir, and, indeed, as it would his a year or two ago. It was genuine sorrow and sympathy that filled his eyes as he went to grasp his father's extended hand, and kiss him affectionately.

"God bless you, my boy," said the Baronet, "I am thankful to see you before I die. I feared once I never should live till you came."

"I am very glad to come, father," Harold said, "I have not been a comfort to you in the past, but God has opened my eyes to my faults, and I have come in His strength to ask your forgiveness, as I believe He has forgiven me."

"Say no more, my boy," said the old man, his voice broken by agitation; "I forgive you from my heart. I can die in peace, now that you are restored."

"Not yet, I hope, father; I hope you will live long enough to give me an opportunity to atone for the past."

"No, no, I cannot live long, I feel the end is almost here, but I do not mind so much, now that I can leave things in your hands without fear. You will be good to Ethel. We both owe much to her."

"Yes, father, I know. But for her I should not have been here."

Ethel came in at this moment, and was folded in her father's arms. He had missed her much. Even Clara Atheling's attention, happy as it had made him, had not made up for the absence of his beloved daughter. Now that she had returned, bringing with her the prodigal, the old man's cup of happiness seemed full.

Then the Señor and Inez had to be introduced, and all that had been left untold of Harold's rescue had to be related. It was a happy if not a merry circle that the family made that night, and the Baronet seemed to gain new life as he looked from one cheerful face to another. Señor Bonanza especially won his regard. The two old men had much in common, and soon the younger members of the party left them together in delightful converse, while they chatted among themselves.

Anxiety, however, sat on more than one breast. Again and again Clara Atheling stole a glance at Ethel's worn face, and noted the changes that had come upon it since she saw it before her journey. Ethel, too, gazed at her father, whose feebleness showed more clearly by contrast with Señor Bonanza, with whom he was talking at the other end of the room. They were of about the same age, yet the Baronet looked years older, and had lost the vigor and energy that his new friend so wonderfully retained. Ethel thought she had never realized his weakness so much as now that she saw him by the side of the Señor. She had always thought of leaving him alone, and sorrowed as she imagined his grief when she died, leaving a blank in his life, but now she was looking at her father and thinking, as she gazed upon his worn and weary features, that it was a question which of them should first be laid at rest beside her mother in the little chancel of Thorpe Aspen Church. With her, however, there was no sorrow, only peace and hope; peace in the consciousness that both she and her father were well lodged in their Heavenly Father's keeping; hope that Harold had before him a career of honor and service in dear Aspendale, which should be bettered and benefited by the commanding Christian influence of the heir of Aspen Towers. "Father, I thank Thee," said she in her heart. "It was worth living for. It was worth dying for. All is well."

After the party had separated for the night, Clara sought Ethel in her own room to enjoy one of those confidential talks in which girl-friends delight, and which seem to require as an indispensable preliminary the laying aside of ordinary dress, the putting on of dressing-gowns and the letting down of the hair. In this costume, armed with a hair brush, to be used in the rare intervals of talk, words flow freely which are understood to be strictly confidential—the place, attire, and time having all the sanctity of a Masonic Lodge, where topics may be discussed which are never to be referred to anywhere until the parties find themselves in Lodge again.

First, Clara had to give a minute account of the events which had occurred during Ethel's absence. In undertaking to fill her place Clara had accepted the responsibility with no little diffidence. It was not the place of mistress of the great house alone that was the difficulty, but she had promised to be, as far as she could, a daughter to Sir Godwin, and this was no easy matter. The patience, the gentleness, the cheerfulness, required of one in close and constant attendance on the afflicted baronet few could boast. Clara had been tried many times during her stewardship, and had often been driven to the Source of all strength for help to sustain her in the struggle. Ethel had herself experienced the trial, and her confidence in Clara's ability to fill her place came from the knowledge that Clara knew where to go when she was tried. This evening she had seen, in the confidence with which the Baronet had turned to Clara in any difficulty, and the tenderness with which Clara had responded and even anticipated his wants, how well her own place had been filled and how faithfully Clara must have fulfilled her trust.

Clara's entrance into Ethel's room therefore was the signal for Ethel to throw her arms around her friend, and thank her from her heart for all that she had done and suffered for her. The appreciation was very welcome to Clara, and was sufficient payment for all that had passed. To have served one she loved as she did Ethel, and to learn from her lips how that service was accepted, filled her heart with joy, but she playfully laid a slight but beautifully formed hand over Ethel's lips, and bade her say no more of thanks.

"I have done my best, dear Ethel," she said, "but I have not filled your place. Sir Godwin has longed for you all the time, and his best compliment was that he had not missed you so much as he expected. I assure you he will be very glad to have me retire and give place to you."

"You must not think of doing so, Clara. We cannot spare you yet. I am not strong enough to assume my duties at once, if indeed I ever can. We are dependent upon you. You would not desert your old friend in her weakness, I am sure."

That was touching Clara's vulnerable point, and she wavered under the pressure. In truth, now that Alfred had returned, the family circle at Aspen Garth had stronger attractions than ever for her, and there was another reason, that Clara kept locked up in her heart, for wishing to go, but Ethel's entreaties could not be denied then. "We will talk of that again, dear Ethel," she said. "I think you will be willing to release me in a few days. It will be better on many accounts that I go, but I will not go as long as you really need me."

Ethel noticed the phrase her friend had used, and wondered what were the "many accounts" to which Clara alluded. Clara however laughingly declined to define them, and insisted on adjourning the discussion. Her real reason could not be disclosed to Harold's sister. The fact was, that in the years long gone by, when she and Robert and Alfred and Ethel and Harold were children, Harold had declared himself her "sweetheart," and in boyish enthusiasm had made her promise that when they grew up she would be his wife. His small stock of pocket-money had been hoarded until there was enough to buy a small ring, and this he had placed on her finger with becoming solemnity and secrecy before he went away. The years passed, and the stories of his gaiety and dissipation came to Aspendale; the applications for money, and the anxieties produced in the mind of Sir Godwin and Ethel thereby were known to Clara, and what could she think, but that Harold had forgotten his boyish promises, as was very natural, considering that she was a portionless daughter of a plain farmer while he was the heir to a baronetcy, and the great estate of Aspen Towers. But Clara had the ring still, though Harold had doubtless forgotten all about it. Then, too, she did not understand why Inez had come to Aspen Towers. It was not surprising that Clara should imagine reasons for the presence of the wealthy and beautiful girl which were not connected exclusively with Ethel. She could bear much; she had schooled herself to give up Harold, but if there was to be love-making at Aspen Towers between Harold and Inez, Clara resolved that she would not be there to see it.

Ethel, on her side, would have been glad to talk with Clara on this very subject, were it not that as to the feeling both of Harold and her friend she was in doubt. She had no doubt, however, that it would be a perpetual blessing, a source of moral strength for high and useful service to her brother Harold, if the staid and gentle yet merry and capable Clara, with her strong religious principles, was to become his wife. If he that findeth a wife findeth a good thing, thought she, Harold need not search far to find it, and he might easily go far afield and find a woman who, not having the capacity to be a wife in the true sense of the word, would not be a good thing, as Clara would. She felt, however, that this must not be, unless there was a real affection on both sides. The idea of a "marriage of convenience," was not for one moment entertained by her, could not be, for anything so far removed from the regions of common sense, religion and propriety was altogether foreign to her high-toned moral nature. She felt that nothing but mutual love could warrant such a union. So she resolved to bring the two together and to watch the progress of events. This, indeed, was one reason why she urged Clara to remain at the Towers, while it was the very reason why Clara desired to go. Ethel was quite resolved that if she saw any evidence that the juvenile preference, which she had not forgotten, of Harold and Clara for each other, existed still, she would help the union forward, that she might claim Clara for a sister, before she laid down her life-charge and passed to her reward.

The mention of Alfred's name brought the conversation into a more open channel, and the two pious girls talked long and earnestly of God's wonderful leading, which had brought joy to both homes in the return of a dearly loved prodigal to each. Ethel tried to inspire Clara with her own practical faith in the loving Father. If he watches the fall of a sparrow he will surely not consider the smallest concerns of his children too trivial to have his attention. Thus the talk passed to Simon Holmes, and his unwavering faith which events had so fully justified. They were still speaking of him when the great clock over the stables struck the hour, and the two girls were astonished to find that they were out of bed at two o'clock in the morning. A few words of prayer together, a loving kiss, and they parted for the night.

"Oh! that I might have her for my sister," thought Ethel, when she was left alone for the night. She is my sister in heart, the only one I ever had. How glorious it would be for her to be my sister in deed;" and she determined to avail herself of the first opportunity to ascertain the state of Harold's feelings towards her friend. The opportunity came the next day, when she and her brother Harold were strolling alone in the grounds around the Hall.

"What a sweet girl Clara is, Harold," was the adroit opening of the girl-diplomatist. "She was always nice, but I think she is nicer now than ever. She has been a sort of second Providence to dear father, and has been as a gift of God to him in his solitude and need. I love her now, more than I ever did."

Harold, nothing loth, swallowed the bait without hesitation. He at any rate was ripe and ready for her purpose.

"Love her!" said he, "ay, and so do I. I used to think I did when we called each other sweetheart in the innocent days of long ago. I tell you what, Ethel, I sincerely wish she would be a second Providence to me, and that I might be fortunate enough to receive her as a 'gift from God.'"

"She will be a treasure wherever she goes. She thinks her duty lies at Aspen Garth now. Of course we have no claim upon her equal to her mother's claim," Ethel said naïvely.

"Would you like her for a sister?" said Harold, after a pause, looking searchingly at Ethel.

"That would I, with all my heart," said she, "always provided that her heart was my brother's as well as her hand."

"If I know her aright," said Harold, "Clara will never give one without the other. Whoever has the good fortune to get one of them will get the other; and if I know myself, which in these days I think I do, I would not have the hand without the heart."

On that same evening Clara came by special invitation to Ethel's bedroom, and Ethel deftly turned the current of conversation so as to carry her observations and researches a little further.

"O Clara, dear!" said she, "what a happy thing for us all it is that both Alfred and Harold are with us once again. Things seem as though they must go right now, don't they? I am doubly glad for dear father's sake. He seems very anxious that Harold should settle down permanently. Perhaps there is a lurking fear that he might be tempted to wander away again."

"That he need not fear," said Clara, very positively. "Harold has fairly tried both the wrong and the right, and he will never take the wrong path again. You can read that in every action and almost in every word."

Whereupon Ethel drew her closely to her and kissed her, saying: "Thank you, dear, for your hearty assurance, but what makes you feel so positive?"

"Positive?" replied Clara; "why it only needs to watch his behavior to yourself and your father, and his general course of conduct, to see that the Harold Spofforth of to-day is another and altogether different Harold from that he was in the years that are past."

When she was left alone in the silence of her chamber, Ethel smiled in quiet satisfaction, knelt by her bed to ask for Harold and for Clara that they might both be guided right, and then, with a little sigh of relief, she retired to rest.

(To be Concluded.)

JOHN THE BAPTIST.

By Mrs. M. Baxter.

S. S. Lesson for July 17, Matt. 3: 1-12. Golden Text, Matt. 3: 8.

His Greatness—Not of Birth—Nor Education—In Fulfilling his Mission—Birth and Education—A Total Abstainer—The Best Preparation for Service—His Call to Preach—Commissioned of God—One Message—Audiences Supernaturally Collected—His Self-Forgetfulness—Carelessness of Physical Comfort—Supernatural not Unnatural Living—Hearers Confessing Sin—Felled Trees of Self-Righteousness—The True Way to Preach.

"AMONG them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he" (Matt. 11: 11). The greatness of John the Baptist consisted not in aristocracy of birth, not in university honors, not in any remarkable beauty of appearance, but he was "great in the sight of the Lord" (Luke 1: 15); he understood and served the purpose of his God. His were altogether exceptional. Not only was he the son of a priest, but the obligations of the priesthood were upon him from his birth. "The Lord spake unto Aaron, saying, Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die: it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations, and that ye may put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean." The angel Gabriel foretold of John before his birth, "He shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb." Thus was he brought up in priestly abstinence, and endowed with priestly anointing.

Birth and Education

Of his childhood and education only the following short summary is given: "And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel" (Luke 1: 80). What this implies is not easy to gather, except that he was prepared for service, not amongst the "sons of the prophets," but rather alone with God—not, we would think, in idleness, but in very much of communion with God. It is the universal testimony of the most useful ministers and missionaries that their best preparation for work has been the acquaintance with God which they formed in believing prayer, and communion with Him.

Unlike Moses, who was very conscious of his own importance, until God taught him otherwise, John the Baptist

Did not Initiate his own Ministry, but "in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cesar . . . the word of God came unto John, the son of Zacharias, in the wilderness." Then, and not till then, "he came into all the region round about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance unto remission of sins" (Luke 3: 1-3 R. V.). God can and does make use of education, but that alone cannot inspire a man for his work; he needs, if he is to turn many to righteousness, a distinct consciousness that God sends him. "There was a man sent from God, whose name was John" (John 1: 6). Such authority outweighed every difficulty. He might meet with the most profound ignorance, but he was sent of God to enlighten it; he might have among his hearers some whose knowledge very far exceeded his own, but, sent of God, as he was, such differences ceased to be apparent. "I understand more than the ancients, because I keep Thy precepts" (Ps. 119: 100). Critics might seek to wither, human authority to condemn, but, sent of God, John was mightier than them all.

He was sent forth with one message, "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." He may have quoted many Scriptures, used many different arguments, illustrated what he had to say in many different ways, but the burden of his message was always the same—"Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand"—that was what he was sent to say, and God always blest it.

In our day it is often very difficult to obtain an audience. Large placards, with sensational subjects, brass bands, Scripture lanterns, all manner of things, are being employed to attract men's attention, and make them listen to the gospel. God bless them all, but when John the Baptist began his ministry there was no difficulty in bringing the people together.

The same Power which was in the preacher came also upon the people, and without any invitation they went out right away into the desert where he was. "They went out to New Jerusalem, and all Judæa, and all the region round about Jordan." Business did not hinder them, pleasure was suspended, the tillage of the land ceased for the time being, the children turned out of the schools, and the mothers came from their housework to hear the plain, unvarnished message. "Repent ye: for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Such religious movement had not taken place for many a long year. There was something so remarkable about the preacher. Unlike the scribes, who loved "to go in long clothing, to receive salutations in the market places, and to have the chief seats in the synagogues and the uppermost rooms at feasts" (Mark 12: 38, 39), this man seemed to have no opinion of himself at all. Pushed by the priests and Levites to make some declaration of himself, he only said, "I am a voice." "The people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not" (Luke 3: 15). In answer to an official ecclesiastical commission which visited him, he said, "I am not the Christ," "I am a voice of one crying in the wilderness: Make straight the way of the Lord, as saith the prophet Esaias. But there standeth One among you, whom ye know not; He it is who, coming after me, is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose." The whole spirit of the man is contained in the words he once said,

"He Must Increase,

but I must decrease" (John 3: 30). It was his joy to decrease, if it served his Master's purpose. John was unlike other men, not only in this spirit, but also in external things. His message so engrossed him that food and clothing were altogether secondary things to him; he lived on the wild honey of the desert, and wore garments made of the camel's hair which had fallen when caravans passed through the desert. Instead of his chief thought being, like that of most men, "What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" (Matt. 6: 31), it was, "How can sinners be turned to God?" It was prophesied of him by the angel, "Many of the children of Israel shall he turn to to the Lord their God. And he shall go before Him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people, prepared for the Lord" (Luke 1: 16, 17). The question will arise in many minds, "Should not we be more holy if we wore the coarsest clothing and lived on the poorest fare?" If this was all that John the Baptist had done, he would have done more harm than good, for he would have led men to despise the good gifts of God, for which He desires us to be thankful (1 Tim. 4: 4). The Lord does not want us to live unnatural, but supernatural, lives. He would have us seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and, of His own free love, He promises to add these other things unto us. John the Baptist was an exceptional man, his ministry necessitated his being an ascetic, like Elijah before him, but we are not called to follow John the Baptist or Elijah, but to follow Christ. So long as we take all we have from the hands of God, and are as ready to give it up as to keep it, if that should better serve His Kingdom, then we are following our blessed Master.

The ministry of John had the effect of so revealing to his hearers their own hearts and consciences, that

They Began to Confess Their Sins.

Wherever there is a real work of the Spirit of God, things come to light which have been hidden. Lies come out of their lurking places, unkind words are owned, impure motives are revealed, the horrible desire to appear more holy than we are slinks away to where it came from, and men come to the light "that their deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God" (John 3: 20). O what a turning inside-out there must have been by the banks of the Jordan, each one so intent on humbling himself that he could not despise a humbled neighbor! O what reconciliations must have taken place there, what unburdened hearts and lightened consciences must have returned to the homes of Judea! Sin left behind, and forgiveness of sins found! John the Baptist was no kid-glove preacher; he tore off the bandages from the social sins of the day, and exposed them without mercy "Now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees. Therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Profession went for nothing with this fearless preacher. "Think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham." Fruit was what he demanded, and where he found it not, whether it were in Pharisee, Saducee, or publican, he laid to the root of the tree, and all the righteousness of a lifetime came tumbling into ruins. O how beautiful a Canadian forest looks when all the grand old trees tower in their majestic height and their unshorn foliage toward heaven! So look sinners in their own eyes until the gospel axe has been laid to the root of the tree. What a ruin is the forest when charred trunks stand here and fallen logs lie there, in dire confusion! But bye-and-bye, order comes; the hand which felled and burned, now builds and tills, and a lovely farm, stocked with horses, cows and sheep, and inhabited by man, takes the place of the wild forest. When God's axe is laid to the roots of the trees, it is that He may burn the dross, and prepare a dwelling for himself.

The Axe of Repentance

The testimony of John the Baptist was never to himself, but to Jesus. As yet he knew Him not, "but that He should be made manifest unto Israel," therefore John came. He knew that there existed somewhere on earth, in human form, that Saviour who was Christ the Lord. Day by day passed by, and yet no sign of the expected Messiah. Yet John did not relax his witness, "There standeth One among you whom ye know not." This is the gospel. "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." John the Baptist testified, "I indeed baptise you with water unto repentance: but He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear." His object was to lead all to look for Jesus. He cared not for popularity or aught else, so that he might be the "voice" which introduced Jesus to the people. His conceptions of Jesus were not now such as they were later on, when he beheld the Lamb of God, "Whose fan is in his hand, and He will thoroughly purge His floor, and gather His wheat into the garner; but He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." He knew Jesus as the coming Judge, and that as such, man would have to meet Him. The "judgment to come," when the chaff shall be winnowed from the wheat, is a very unfashionable theme, but it is one with which we are charged by God. He makes the distinction between the chaff and the wheat, the tares, and the wheat, the evil tree and the good tree, the lost and the saved, the children of disobedience and the children of the kingdom, the children of darkness and the children of light, the dead in tresspasses and sins, and those who have passed from death unto life. Reader, to which category do you belong?

The True Way To Preach

REST.

There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.—Heb. iv., 9.

O rest that remaineth!
Blood bought and life-paid,
By Him upon whom
All our burdens were laid.
Tho' we pass through temptations,
'Neath affliction's dread rod,
There remaineth a rest
To the people of God.

O rest that remaineth!
Life's billows may roll,
And sorrows like tempests
Sweep o'er the tried soul.
But with Christ at the helm
Every storm we may breast,
Till we anchor within
The fair port of His rest.

O rest that remaineth!
The way here grows rough,
Till we cry in our anguish,
"Lord, Lord, 'tis enough!"
Yet we pass o'er the way
Which His bleeding feet trod,
To the rest that remains
For the people of God.

With desert before us,
And rock-waste behind,
The path may stretch onward
Rough, steep and thorn-lined.
But we look thro' the vista
Of years, Lord, and see
The sweet rest that remains
For Thy people with Thee.

O rest that remaineth!
The blest, longed-for goal
Of each burdened heart,
Each weary, worn soul.
At the end of life's journey
So wearily trod,
There remaineth a rest
To the people of God!

—Beulah B. Driscoll.

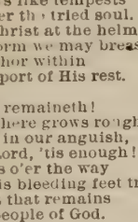
Newark, N. J.

J. E. Jewett, Publisher, 77 Bible House, New York, will furnish the above poem in leaflet form for general distribution at twenty-five cents per hundred.

As the subscription department of the Christian Herald is entirely separate from the advertising department, all persons remitting for their subscriptions or ordering the address of their papers changed are requested to direct such letters to The Manager, 63 Bible House, New York, and all orders for advertising or books, or inquiries about books, should be addressed to J. E. Jewett, 77 Bible House, New York. If you want any books, it makes no difference where you see them advertised, or by whom or where they are published or sold, send your orders to me and I will attend to them promptly. In sending money for books, please send post-office orders (costing only five cents) or register your letters, by which you will insure their safe delivery to me, and I guarantee all books to reach you safely. In that way any one can send for books without any fear of loss.

J. E. JEWETT, Advertising Department,
77 Bible House, New York

ROYAL



BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

Royal Baking Powder Co., 106 Wall St., N. Y.

TO CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

Send your address and we will mail to you our new Catalogue of Tracts selected by careful examination from the publications of more than twenty American and foreign publishers, and arranged according to subjects. You will be glad if you send. Address

EVANGELICAL BOOK AND TRACT REPOSITORY,
No. 901 8th Street, Washington, D. C.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

This most fatal disease of infancy,

PREVENTED, CONTROLLED and CURED by

Lactated Food

It has been successful in hundreds of cases where other prepared foods failed.

FOR INFANTS,

of any age, it may be used with confidence, as a safe and complete substitute for mother's milk.

FOR INVALIDS,

it is a Perfect Nutrient in either chronic or acute cases. Weak stomachs always retain and relish it. Physicians and mothers concede its superiority. The most palatable, nourishing and economical of Foods.

150 MEALS for an INFANT for $1.00.

Easily Prepared. At Druggists—25c., 50c., $1.
Valuable circulars and pamphlets, sent free.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

1887-BABIES-1887

To the mother of any baby born this year we will send on application a Cabinet Photo, of the "Sweetest, fattest, healthiest baby in the country." It is a beautiful picture, and will do any mother's heart good. It shows the good effects of using Lactated Food as a substitute for mothers milk. Much valuable information for the mother given. Give date of birth.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

MEXICO

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are most pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of

BISHOP H. C. RILEY, care of
J. P. HEATH,
43 Bible House, New York.

MANHATTAN SAVINGS INSTITUTION,

New York, June 22, 1887.

72d SEMI-ANNUAL DIVIDEND.

THE TRUSTEES OF THIS INSTITUTION have declared interest on all sums remaining on deposit during the three or six months ending June 30, inst., at the rate of THREE AND A HALF PER CENT. per annum on $1,0.0 and under, and THREE PER CENT. per annum on the excess of $1,000, not exceeding $3,000, payable on and after the third MONDAY in July next. Interest not withdrawn will receive interest the same as a deposit.

EDWARD SCHELL, President.
C. F. Alvord, Secretary.

BAILEY'S COMPOUND Light-Spreading Silver-Plated CORRUGATED GLASS REFLECTORS! A wonderful invention for LIGHTING Churches, Halls, &c. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue & price list free.

BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.,
113 Wood St., Pittsburgh, Pa

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Castor, or Webster's Dictionary. For particulars address

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P. O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

Palmer's Book of Gems.

FOR THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

111 Songs, with music, many of them new. The old favorites are gems of a high order, selected by H. R. Palmer, Mus. Doc., and 200 S. S. Superintendents.

Price $40 per 100 Copies. Single Copies by Mail, 12c.

BIGLOW & MAIN, New York & Chicago.

UNIVERSITY ORGANS.—They Lead the World. $55 to $500. Sold Direct to Families. No Middlemen. Solid Walnut-5 Octaves-Double Couplers. Guaranteed for Six Years and sent, with Stool and Book, for TRIAL IN YOUR OWN HOME BEFORE YOU BUY. ESTABLISHED 1859. $35

MARCHAL & SMITH,
255 East 21st Street, New York.

Gospel Book and Tract Repository, ORILLIA, CANADA, will send to S. S. Teachers, Y.M.C.A. Workers, Pastors, Evangelists, and Tract Distributors their latest catalogues of Gospel Slips, Tracts, Leaflets, Handbills, Booklets and Books. They will also send a Sample Packet of Gospel Literature to Christian workers on receipt of stamp to pay postage.

Ease in Conversation,

—OR—

HINTS TO THE UNGRAMATICAL.

BY

Mrs. Emma C. Hewitt,

80 Pages, Paper Covers, 50 Cents, Postpaid.

It points out unsuspected errors in everyday English. Tells you how to talk well in Society. How to acquire ease and correctness in conversation. Shows how we make ourselves ridiculous; how we miss that nice balance of ready thinking before folks that gives one that hardest achievement—ease. Tells how to say, and not to say things that make folks wonder where you were born, if you say them, or don't say them wrong.

Sent, postpaid, to any address on receipt of only 50 cents.

CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa

A New Song Book.

(Not, an Old One.)

Glad Hallelujahs is the newest book of sacred songs. We emphasize new. Of 160 songs, more than 100 will be sung for the first,—these are the best of their celebrated composers, Sweney and Kirkpatrick.

It'll put new life into your church or school. No dull pieces. All soul-stirring. Before deciding, examine Glad Hallelujahs.

By mail, 35 cents. By express (not prepaid), $3.60 per dozen; $30 per 100. One sample copy 25 cents. Further inducements to Schools, Churches and Evangelists. Write us.

T. T. Tasker, Sr., Publisher,
921 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.

This Magazine portrays American thought and life from ocean to ocean, is filled with pure high-class literature, and can be safely welcomed in any family circle.

PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.

Sample Copy of current number mailed upon receipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.

Premium List with either.

Address:

R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

GET UP CLUBS

MOTH-WAX.

Kills the Moth and the old Moth Miller.

It is a perfect protection of Furs and Woollen Fabrics, and is more economical to use than camphor.

In one-pound boxes containing a dozen cakes. Agents wanted in every city, town and county.

For sale by all druggists.

WM. H. H. CHILDS, 73 Maiden Lane, N.Y.

IF YOU WANT ANY BOOKS,

it makes no difference where you see them advertised, or by whom or where they are published or sold, send your orders to me and I will attend to them promptly, send all books to you prepaid, and guarantee that they reach you safely. Postage stamps received for fractional parts of a dollar.

J. E. JEWETT, 77 Bible House, New York

SILKS AND VELVE

During the interim b... now and their July stock... JAMES M'CREERY & C... dispose of their Spring I... tions of Summer Silks, Fo... Fancy Surahs, Tussahs, a... eral large Lots of Pla... Fancy Colored Silks and V... at a very marked Reduc... Price.

A personal examination... sample, is invited.

BROADWAY, AND ELEVEN...
New York.

Ladies' Underwe...

Ladies who are unable to ... our stock of these goods pe... would find it to their adva... correspond with us. The m... plete information furnished, a... ful attention given to special...

Lord & Tay...
Broadway & 20th Street, ...

SEDGWICK STEEL WIRE ...

The best Farm, Garden, Poultry Y... School Lot, Park and Cemetery Fences ... Perfect Automatic Gate. Cheapest ar... Iron Fences. Iron and wire Summer Ho... Furniture, and other wire work. Best W... er and Plier. Ask dealers in hardware, ...

SEDGWICK BROS., Richmo...

I START ME...

and WOMEN of small means in Home Ph... It pays big with other busines... in stores, home, or from house to house. The novel suc... with complete apparatus, appearing at the door ... anything. Persons, Groups, Buildings, or An... profitable orders in nine out of ten homes. A ge... paying business, suitable for either sex; no ... quired. Send for a copy of the "New Process" ... (free). Sample Photos. 10 cents. FRANKLI... M'f'r & Dealer in Photo. Apparatus, 483,485 ...

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

Pleasant to ...
Prompt in ...
Always ...

It soon brings into healthy play
The Torpid Liver day by day,
And Regulates the System through,
From crown of head to sole of shoe.
It cures the Piles, it opens sores,
Lost appetite it soon restores.
Wise families throughout the land
Keep TARRANT'S SELTZER no...

HOW TO BUILD A HOU...

A new book contain... and specifications for 2... all sizes, from 2 rooms ... post-paid on receipt of ... by J. S. OGILVIE, 31 Rose Street, New ...

"FLORIDA; Its Advantages and D... backs." For the above book or free infor... dress O. M. CROSBY, the author, 76 Park ...

The Christian Herald is published ... House, New York, N. Y.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD AND SIGNS OF OUR TIMES.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1887 in the office of the Librarian of Congress at Washington.

Vol. X., No. 28. Office, 63 Bible House, N. Y. THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1887. Annual Subscription, $1.50.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

PORTRAIT OF DR. SIMS, and Pictures of Incidents in THE CONGO MISSION.

FROM DUNGEON TO PALACE, Dr. Talmage's Vacation Sermon.

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

SIGNS OF THE COMING END, by Rev. Geo. H. Pember, M. A.

An Escape from a Geyser—Mr. H. M. Stanley and the Missionaries—Fashion in Japan—A Sailor's Example—Jumping from the Railroad Cars Mr. George Muller's Return, etc.

THE KING'S JUBILEE. A New Sermon, by C. H. Spurgeon.

CURRENT EVENTS: The Utah Convention—Dr. McGlynn's Excommunication—The Undesirable Immigrants—Appalling Calamity in Switzerland—Election of a Bulgarian Prince—The Anglo-Turkish Convention—A Premature Explosion—A Man with a Marble Leg, etc.

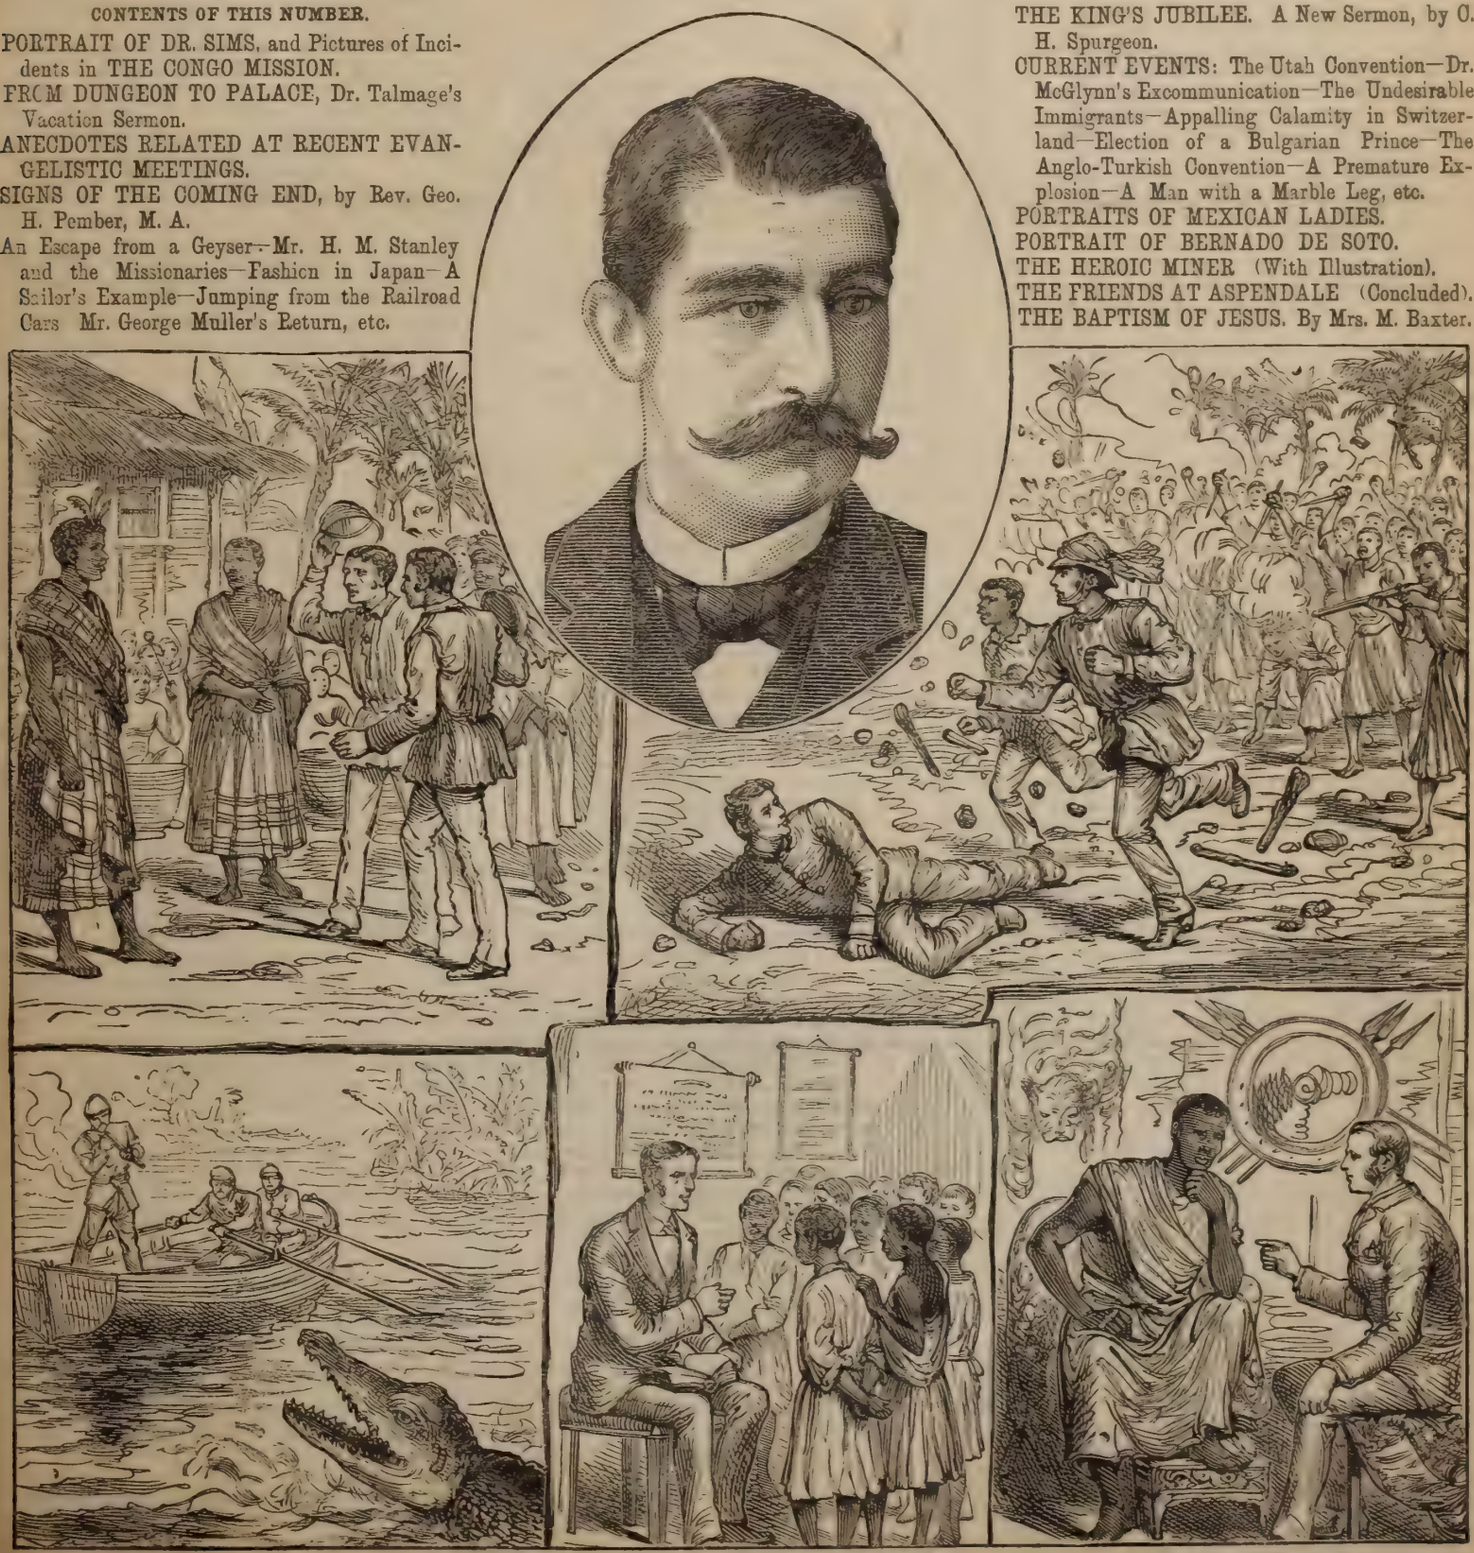
PORTRAITS OF MEXICAN LADIES.

PORTRAIT OF BERNADO DE SOTO.

THE HEROIC MINER (With Illustration).

THE FRIENDS AT ASPENDALE (Concluded).

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS. By Mrs. M. Baxter.



DR. SIMS, MEDICAL MISSIONARY ON THE CONGO—Scenes in Mission Work.

DR. SIMS.

The Fruit of Martyrdom—The Mother of Dr. Sims—His Conversion—Desire for Mission Work—Helpful Friends—Graduates at Aberdeen University—Joins the Congo Mission.

MANY of our readers had the opportunity a few months ago of seeing and hearing the noble, self-sacrificing young man whose portrait appears on the first page. He visited this country with the object of counteracting a dispiriting report which had been rendered to the Baptist Missionary Society respecting the Mission on the Congo in Africa, and which it was feared would lead to the Society abandoning the Mission. Dr. Sims has devoted his life to the work of proclaiming Christ in that land, and was most earnest in his effort to impart his own enthusiastic confidence to the brethren here. A recently published history of the mission work on the Congo having brought that field into new prominence in the minds of Christians, a few brief extracts from it are given here, and with them we appropriately connect the portrait and life of Dr. Sims.

Dr. Sims was born in Leicestershire, England, in 1857 and is therefore now thirty years of age. From his earliest years he received a careful religious training from his godly mother, who was very prayerful, humble and sincere, and led a consistent Christian life. It was from her excellent example of faith and trust in Christ that her son was led to read his Bible and pray; and it was through her teaching and prayers that he was led to realize the necessity of seeking pardon through the Lord Jesus Christ.

His Conversion

took place under the ministration of the Rev. J. E. Matthews, of Swanwick, Alfreton, who continued to watch over him with godly care, and helped him in the early stages of his religious life. Having an intense love of missionary work, Mr. Matthews never ceased in private and in public to encourage interest in it in others, and induced men, when suitable, to offer themselves for the mission field. To his testimony and prayers, Dr. Sims and three others of his friends are indebted for the impetus which led them to devote themselves to this important work. Dr. Sims was first led to think of becoming a medical missionary by the reading of Dr. Henderson's life in Shanghai, and Dr. Elmslie's in Kashmir; and the idea was further developed by the powerful testimony borne to the value of medical missions by his intimate friend Miss Annie Butler, who is herself prominently identified with them, and also by seeing the valuable aid rendered to Christ's cause in heathen lands by the Medical Mission in Birmingham.

Enters Aberdeen University.

His desires having become known to his friends and his missionary spirit recognized, they generously helped him forward with his purpose. Dr. Thompson Crabbe, of the Birmingham Medical Mission, advised him to enter the University of Aberdeen, where he remained four years, working hard in his classes, and distinguishing himself in anatomy, botany, surgery, zoölogy, physiology, and chemistry. He had succeeded in taking a high place in some of these branches, gained a medal in zoölogy, and graduated in 1881 with qualifications in medicine and surgery. In his student days he was not idle in his Master's service. When time and opportunity offered he spoke at Gospel and temperance meetings, and privately to the hospital patients, when undeterred by the authorities, and had the joy of knowing that souls were blessed through his instrumentality. In the work of the Birmingham Medical Mission he also took an active part.

Becomes a Medical Missionary.

Dr. Crabbe being compelled at one time to remain on the Continent of Europe for several weeks, Dr. Sims was called upon to undertake his duties, and commenced his life work by earnest preaching, visiting, and healing, endeavoring to soften the hearts of many who were hardened by every form of sin and vice. The testimonies he at that time received in body and soul, greatly delighted and encouraged him, and tended to confirm him in the wisdom of the choice he had made in devoting himself to missionary work. He afterwards became a surgeon in the country, where he was content to abide until such time as the Lord gave him a sphere of labor more in accordance with his desire.

Joins the Congo Inland Mission.

One quiet Sunday afternoon he read the account of the death of Mr. Adam McAll, and was so moved by it that he immediately offered himself for work on the Congo. He visited the Missionary Institute, in London, where he was warmly welcomed, and, after a careful consideration of the missionaries' letters and journals, and acting on the advice of those qualified to help him in coming to a decision, he felt it to be the guiding hand of God, and resolved to go and open the first medical mission on the Congo. He was gladly accepted for this branch of labor, as a fellow-helper in the Gospel of Christ, and at the end of May, 1882, he set sail for the Congo, where he has been one of the most indefatigable and useful of the devoted party.

THE CONGO MISSION.

Mr. Arthington's Liberal Offer—Missionary Pioneers—Messrs. Comber and Grenfell's Visit to the King of Congo—Fresh Helpers—Efforts to Reach Stanley Pool—Attacked by Natives—Pursued by a Crocodile—Welcomed by Mr. Stanley—A Steamer for the Congo—Princely contributions—Hopeful Signs.

THE history of the Congo Mission, to which we have referred, is the work of one of the officers of the Baptist Missionary Society in London, who, being confined to a sick-room, occupied his enforced leisure in preparing the record from which the following sketch is compiled:

The Baptist Mission to the Congo owed its origin to the interest excited throughout the world by the publication of Mr. Stanley's record of his journey "Across the Dark Continent." The Church at large was touched by the thought of the multitudes of people that Stanley had seen sunk in barbarism, and was moved to send the gospel to them by Stanley's assurance that missionaries would, if wisely directed, receive a cordial welcome. The effort made in response by the Church Missionary Society at Uganda, the propagation of the gospel and its ready reception at the court of King Mtesa, further stimulated religious sympathy in the work.

Mr. Robert Arthington's Offer, which has now become historical, was an outcome of this general interest. Mr. Arthington proposed to consecrate a portion of his wealth to the evangelization of the Congo region, and was anxious that his own denomination should take it up. In the spring of 1877 he thus wrote to the committee of the Baptist Missionary Society: "There is a part of Africa, not too far, I think, from places where you have stations, on which I have long had my eye, with very strong desire that the blessing of the Gospel might be given to it—it is the Congo country, an old kingdom, once possessed—indeed, is now—of a measure of civilization, and to a limited extent instructed in the externals of the Christian religion. It is therefore a great satisfaction, and a high and sacred pleasure to me, to offer $5,000 if the Society will undertake at once to visit these benighted people with the blessed light of the Gospel, teach them to read and write, and give them, in imperishable letters, the words of Eternal Truth. By-and-bye, possibly, we may be able to extend the Mission eastwards, on the Congo, at a point above the rapids."

In a subsequent communication, Mr. Arthington promised a sum of $250 towards the expenses of a pioneer who should explore the land, preparatory to the dispatch of a regular missionary expedition. This was followed by a gift of $2,500 from another gentleman, a Mr. Wathen, of Bristol, who, with other friends, showed his sympathy with the work in a practical shape. The means being provided, were at once forthcoming, in the persons of Messrs. Comber and Grenfell (whose portrait and life appeared in this journal on June 3, 1886), who were laboring at Cameroons, both longing to press further into the interior, as messengers of the Gospel of Peace. They at once took ship to Banana, at the entrance of the river Congo, established friendly relations with the large and influential Dutch trading firm there settled, went up more than seventy miles by the company's steamer to Mboma, proceeded thence to Mbanza-Noki, from which place they sent a letter to the King of Congo, telling him of their projected visit to San Salvador; having done which, and obtained most valuable information, they returned to Cameroons.

The Pioneers

In the month of June following, having been furnished with instructions and necessary stores, they again set forth, and in due time reached San Salvador; having accomplished the land journey, some ninety miles, in safety.

The party was large, consisting of the two missionaries, two native preachers, and ten helpers. The reception given to them was favorable; they were heartily

Welcomed by the King of Congo, Dom Pedro V., and had full liberty accorded them "to teach and to preach Jesus Christ." (See Illustration No 1.)

Thus was the Mission established, with San Salvador for its base of operations, until a more eligible spot should be discovered.

After a sojourn of three weeks at San Salvador, Mr. Comber and Mr. Grenfell resolved on an excursion to the northeast, in the direction of the river above the falls. Various difficulties surmounted, they reached the neat, well-built town of Tungwa, the chief town of the King of the Makuta country. Here they had a grand reception, the more remarkable as it was the first visit of a white man to the place. They were not, however, permitted to go forward to the upper reaches of the river, and yielding to necessity, with great reluctance they retraced their steps to San Salvador. Circumstances having necessitated the return of Mr. Grenfell to Cameroons, and the objects of the expedition having been thus far accomplished, Mr. Comber went to England to report and advise on the future course of the mission, and to secure the co-operation of other brethren.

In the April of 1879, with his wife, to whom he had just been married, and accompanied by Messrs. Crudgington, Hartland and W. Holman Bentley, he again went forth. On their arrival at Mussuca, the brethren determined to proceed to San Salvador in two detachments, Mr. Crudgington and Mr. Bentley starting first with thirty-six carriers and two caputas (head-men), Mr. and Mrs. Comber with Mr. Hartland following. Mr. Comber, however, accompanied as far as Ayongo, returning thence to Mussuca. Both divisions met with an expression of kindly feelings and hospitality on the part of the sovereigns and chiefs through whose towns they passed. At Tumbi, the first found an escort awaiting them, and a letter from the secretary of the king, Dom Pedro, was there presented to them, informing them that he had instructions to receive them; and with their own flag in front, followed by the Portuguese, and the new flag of Congo—dark blue silk with gold star in centre—they marched into San Salvador, being favored with an interview with his majesty about half an hour after their arrival.

The Advance Party

A Journey to Makuta.

was, however, again projected, as that was the most direct route to Stanley Pool. It was, as the young missionaries knew, an enterprise of peril, but trusting in God they set out. No sooner, however, had they entered the town than they were set upon with great violence. The first natives who met them shouted "Fetch the guns, kill the white men;" and arming themselves with great sticks, huge pieces of stone, knives, cutlasses, and guns, the townspeople, without any word of "palaver" danced around them, brandishing their weapons. Appeals were in vain, though the missionaries expressed themselves ready to go back. Nothing was left them but to fly, though escape seemed hopeless, as stones were falling thickly upon them. At length

Mr. Comber was shot down (See Illustration No. 2), but mercifully the slug did not touch any vital part, and the effusion of blood was not great. He was, therefore, after a short time able to rise, and overtaking his comrade and Cam, they continued their flight.

On the 8th of January, 1881, another effort to reach Stanley Pool was made by Messrs. Crudgington and Bentley, who traveled on the north bank of the Congo. To their great joy, after twenty-one days' walking from Vivi, the long-desired end was attained. On the 10th of February they entered a fine woodland country, with many sandy streams and some beautiful open spaces, covered with a short grass. "At one of these open spaces," says Mr. Crudgington, in his notes of the journey, "I sighted a wide stretch of water on the horizon, which appeared to be a long streak of cloud. I exclaimed to Mr. Bentley, 'Look, there's Stanley Pool!' We thought we must be mistaken, but another view a little farther on made it unmistakable." Thus, by God's blessing, the patient toil and intense desires of many a weary month were at length rewarded.

The importance of Stanley Pool, in connection with the Mission, lies in the fact that it separates the waters of the Upper from those of the Lower river. In itself, it is an extensive sheet of water, "its total length being about twenty-four miles, and its breadth as much in some places." Animal life abounds in and around these waters—alligators and hippopotami being especially numerous. When Mr. Comber and Mr. Bentley were exploring the Pool in the autumn of 1883, in company with Dr. Sims, a huge crocodile pursued their boat, and was only arrested in its wild career by a well-directed rifle shot. (See Illustration No. 3.)

After a variety of thrilling adventures, and resting for two days at the station of the Livingstone Inland Mission, a little below the Itumzima Falls, with Messrs. Lancely and Clark, the brethren found themselves at a point where they espied the white tents of the Belgian Expedition, and were heartily welcomed and hospitably

Entertained by Mr. Stanley, who sent them to Vivi in his steamer, from which point they proceeded to Mussuca. There a conference was held between the missionaries, and it was finally decided to use the north bank of the river as the regular route, but if possible, to obtain a steel steamer for easier and more rapid communication. No sooner was their need made known, than Mr. Arthington again came to their relief. He gave $5,000 toward the cost of building a steamer, and invested $15,000, the interest of which was to be applied to its maintenance, and an anonymous friend furnished the balance needed for the construction account. This, with another sum of $5,000 brought Mr. Arthington's gifts up to a total of $30,000.

After Six Months'

labor under these improved circumstances, Mr. Bentley was able to write: "At first the people were cautious and suspicious of us in little things. There are one or two among those with whom we can converse, concerning whom we cannot but feel that their hearts have been prepared to receive the seed of the Kingdom."

"The King," wrote Mr. Comber, "professes himself a Christian, as do some others here; but we need to see evidences of changed heart before we can call them so. He likes to hear God's Word, is very much interested in it, and we are very hopeful about Dom Pedro. Every Sunday afternoon one of us has a special audience with the King, and an hour's conversation on exclusively religious subjects. His earnestly expressed thanks to us, and to the God who sent us to lighten his darkness, and the earnest, fixed attention he pays to our words makes our hearts very glad and thankful; and the tenor of his life leads us to the conviction I have expressed. He is doing all he can to help us forward." (See Illustration No 5.)

ANECDOTES RELATED AT RECENT EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS.

The Act of a Drowning Madman.—At a crowded meeting in Glasgow Mr. Allan, an evangelist, said: "A man on board of a vessel recently went mad, and in a paroxysm of frenzy threw himself overboard. Those on deck immediately threw a rope to him, when he was struggling in the water, and a cheer arose from the vessel when the man grasped it; but to their dismay he proceeded to coil it up, and threw it back to them, and the next moment he sank, and was seen no more. How many there are like this insane man around us: they are, as it were, coiling up all mercy and love of God and defiantly throwing it back to Him. Ah, we can scarcely dare to look at what the end will be of such madmen, for God will assuredly not have His own beloved Son scorned for ever."

A Foolhardy Chieftain.—A Friend of Christian mission work observes: "About 200 years ago a rebellion arose in the Highlands of Scotland. King William III., of England, sent word that all persons upon a certain date were to lay down their arms and send in their allegiance. All obeyed the command except one famous chieftain, who said, 'I will be the last to lay down my arms, or to send in my allegiance.' He did not mean to disobey the command, but only to be the very last to submit. When, at length, he set out to the appointed place to tender his submission, a great snow-storm came on and hindered him in his journey. He was too late, and his delay brought terrible woe to himself and his trusting people, for a fearful massacre followed, in which the old chieftain, his sons, and the greater part of his clan perished. So it is that people are often too long in laying down the arms of their unreasonable rebellion against God; they say they certainly mean to do it some time or other, but delay, until it is too late."

Drinking the Bride's Health.—Richard Weaver said: "I heard recently of a lady who being pressed to become a total abstainer, replied, 'I do not see why I should do anything of the kind. Why, it was only last week that I was at a marriage where our minister officiated, and at the supper he was the first to take a glass of whisky and drink the health of the bride.' 'And I suppose that consecrated the whisky,' observed the other. 'Well, not exactly that, but it showed that there was no harm in it,' was the reply. That minister, by that one act, did more harm than could be undone by a dozen temperance lectures. Let us be watchful, lest any of us put a stumbling-block in our neighbor's way. Once I was speaking at a Gospel Temperance meeting in the open air; a man came out of a public-house just opposite, and staggering across, he got to the outside of the crowd, and as he stood there staring at me he cried out, 'Weaver, are you not ashamed of yourself?' 'Yes, I replied, 'I am ashamed, deeply ashamed of myself, but I am not ashamed of Jesus Christ nor of His glorious Gospel.'"

In a Theatre at Gibraltar.—"In Edinburgh last year an intelligent, manly fellow told me at the close of our meeting that several years ago he was converted through the preaching of one of our Evangelists in the theatre at Gibraltar. 'At that time,' he said, 'I was a soldier. A Christian man in the same regiment took me to the service. When I left that meeting I was more angry I think than ever I was in my whole life. I was taunted and pointed at by bad men, because I was considered to be the most moral soldier on the Rock. You will therefore understand what made me angry when I tell you that the text was, "All our righteousnesses are as filthy rags." The preaching was as plain as the text,' he continued, 'and for the first time in my life I saw that morality wouldn't save me. The next day I was, if possible, more angry still, when the same man asked me to go again. His gentle manner towards me made me keep in a good deal of what I felt, however, and, almost without knowing it, I went with him. That night the text was, "I sat down under His shadow with great delight . . . . and His banner over me was love." While the preaching was going on my heart was deeply touched, and more than once I found it hard work to keep the tears back. In the after meeting, with many others, I took refuge under "His shadow," and "His banner of love," and that has been my place of rest and safety ever since.'"

A Delightful Surprise.—"Some Years Ago, I knew a dear young lad. During his health and strength he had been a zealous worker for Christ, but he was laid low by consumption, and it became evident that death would quickly follow. One day, when visiting him, his mother said to me, 'He is very ill to-day, he has never had a minute's sleep, and he is continually asking for you.' When I entered his room he was eagerly expecting me. 'Well,' I said, 'what is the matter? Are you not safe in Christ? Just you trust Him to carry you through.' 'Yes,' he responded, 'I know that I am safe, and that after death I shall be all right; but what I am afraid of is the death-struggle.' 'Why,' I said, 'you are dying now; this is all the death-struggle you will ever know.' 'What,' he exclaimed, 'this death.' Then raising his arms in the air, he clasped his hands, and shouted, 'God be praised, it is so easy.' For the next two hours he was praising God, and thanking Him for thus carrying him through the valley of the shadow, and his last words were, 'For me to live is Christ, to die is gain.'"

Bitten by a Large Dog.—A well-known Minister of the Gospel relates: "I can remember an event in my early life. I had come home from school for a holiday. My father had just bought a fine, large dog. Of course, I was rather afraid of the powerful animal; and as we were going out to walk, I was rather uneasy when I saw that my father was to take the dog along with us. But he bade me to relinquish all fear, as he would keep the animal under his own command, and he assured me that the dog would do me no harm if I let him alone. I found that my father spoke the truth, and as I walked on cheerfully by his side I soon lost all dread. But seeing that the animal was peaceful, I became bold and forward, and began to tease him when my father's back was turned. The consequence was, that soon the blood streamed down my hand, and my cries filled the air. 'You promised me that the dog should not hurt me,' I said, sobbing. 'Yes,' was the answer, 'but you did not tell me that you were going to torment him. It was understood that you were to let him alone. I always look at this scar of mine when I think of God's promises to His children with reference to their protection against evil. It is understood that we shall keep aloof."

Very Wary, but Caught at Last.—Mr. White remarks: "I was asked, not long ago, to speak to a young lady about her soul, and just waited for a fitting opportunity. I got it; but the poor creature said, before I had time to speak, 'I know what you are going to ask me—you are going to ask me if my soul is saved.' 'You are mistaken,' I replied, 'I was not going to do any thing of the kind.' 'Well, you are going to ask if I have given my heart to Jesus.' 'You are wrong again,' I answered; 'I had no intention of asking such a thing. You are going to the South of Scotland soon,' I continued, 'and if, when you arrive at your friends' home they hurriedly said to you as you entered the door, "Our family doctor is upstairs, had you not better go up and see him at once?" what would you say?' 'I would tell them that I was not ill, and had no intention of seeing him,' the girl replied. 'I was going to tell you of the Great Physician who has come to heal your diseased soul, but it seems you do not need Him.' The girl fairly broke down, and opened up her heart to me at once, and it was not long before she had accepted the Saviour. Christian workers should take care how they approach a soul in need of Christ, for we may do more harm than good by putting abrupt and rude questions to such."

FROM DUNGEON TO PALACE.

Dr. Talmage's First Vacation Sermon.

"The time of my departure is at hand." II Timothy, 4 : 6.

Wrong Views of Death—The Dead Body a Heap of Chains—Death a Starting-point—Paul's Last Abode—The Mamertine Prison—The Septuagenarian Prisoner—His Wounds and Bruises—His Joyful Declaration—An Invitation Carried by Executioners—A Coronation—Paul's Change of Kings—From Nero to Jesus—The Needless Dread of the Aged—The Pang of Parting—The Census of Living and Dead Friends—Going to a Place of Health—Curiosity to be Satisfied—The Glorious Explanation—The Best Society of the Universe—A Talk With Jesus.

THE way out of this world is so blocked up with coffin and hearse, and undertaker's spade and screw-driver, that the Christian can hardly think as he ought of the most cheerful passage in all his history. We hang black instead of white over the place where the good man gets his last victory. We stand weeping over which the freed soul has shaken off, and we say: "Poor man! What a pity it was he had to come to this!" Come to what? By the time the people have assembled at the obsequies, that man has been three days so happy that all the joy of earth accumulated would be wretchedness beside it, and he might better weep over you because you have to stay, than you weep over him because he has to go. It is a fortunate thing that a good man does not have to wait to see his own obsequies, they would be so discordant with his own experience. If the Israelites should go back to Egypt and mourn over the brick-kilns they once left, they would not be any more silly than that Christian who should forsake heaven and come down and mourn because he had to leave this world. Our ideas of the Christian's death are morbid and sickly. We look upon it as a dark hole in which a man stumbles when his breath gives out. This whole subject is odorous with varnish and disinfectants, instead of being sweet with mignonette. Paul, in my text, takes that great clod of a word "death," and throws it away, and speaks of his "departure"—a beautiful, bright, suggestive word, descriptive of every Christian's release.

A Heap of Chains

Now, departure implies a starting-place and a place of destination. When Paul left this world, what was the starting-point? It was a scene of great physical distress. It was the Tullianum, of the Mamertine prison. The top dungeon was bad enough, it having no means of ingress or egress but through an opening in the top. Through that the prisoner was lowered, and through that came all the food and air and light received. It was a terrible place, that upper dungeon; but the Tullianum was the lower dungeon, and that was still more wretched, the only light and the only air coming through the roof, and that roof the floor of the upper dungeon. That was Paul's last earthly residence. It was a dungeon just six feet and a half high. It was a doleful place. It had the chill of long centuries of dampness. It was filthy with the long incarcerations of miserable wretches. It was there that Paul spent his last days on earth, and it is there that I see him to-day, in the fearful dungeon, shivering, blue with the cold, waiting for that old overcoat which he had sent for up to Troas, and which they had not yet sent down, notwithstanding he had written for it.

The Lower Dungeon

If some skillful surgeon should go into that dungeon where Paul is incarcerated, we might find out what are the prospects of Paul's living through the rough imprisonment. In the first place, he is an old man, only two years short of seventy. At that very time, when he most needs the warmth and the sunlight and the fresh air, he is shut out from the sun. What are those scars on his ankles? Why, those were gotten when he was made fast, with his feet in the stocks. Every time he turned, the flesh on his ancles started. What are those scars on his back? You know he was whipped five times, each time getting thirty-nine strokes—one hundred and ninety-five bruises on the back (count them!) made by the Jews with rods of elm-wood, each one of the one hundred and ninety-five strokes bringing the blood. Look at Paul's face and look at his arms. Where did he get those bruises? I think it was when he was struggling ashore amidst the shivered timbers of the shipwreck. I see

A Gash in Paul's Side.

Where did he get that? I think he got that in the tussle with highwaymen, for he had been in peril of robbers, and he had money of his own. He was a mechanic as well as an apostle, and I think the tents he made were as good as his sermons. There is a wanness about Paul's looks. What makes that? I think a part of that came from the fact that he was for twenty-four hours on a plank in the Mediterranean Sea, suffering terribly, before he was rescued; for he says positively, "I was a night and a day in the deep."

Oh, wornout, emaciated old man! surely you must be melancholy, no constitution could endure this and be cheerful. But I press my way through the prison until I come up close to where he is, and by the faint light that streams through the opening, I see on his face a supernatural joy, and I bow before him, and I say, "Aged man, how can you keep cheerful amidst all this gloom?" His voice startles the darkness of the place as he cries out, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." Hark! what is that shuffling of feet in the upper dungeon? Why, Paul has

An Invitation to a Banquet, and he is going to dine to-day with the King. Those shuffling feet are the feet of the executioners. They come, and they cry down through the hole of the dungeon, "Hurry up, old man; come, now, and get yourself ready." Why, Paul was ready. He had nothing to pack up; he had no baggage to take; he had been ready a good while. I see him rising up and straightening out his stiffened limbs, and pushing back his white hair from his creviced forehead, and see him looking up through the hole in the roof of the dungeon into the face of his executioner, and hear him say, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." Then they lift him out of the dungeon, and they start with him to the place of execution. They say, "Hurry along, old man, or you will feel the weight of our spears; hurry along." "How far is it," says Paul, "we have to travel?" "Three miles." Three miles is a good way for an old man to travel after he has been whipped, and crippled with maltreatment. But they soon get to

The Place of Execution

—Acquae Salvia—and he is fastened to the pillar of martyrdom. It does not take any strength to tie him fast. He makes no resistance. Oh, Paul! why not strike for your life? You have a great many friends here. With that withered hand just launch the thunderbolt of the people upon those infamous soldiers. No! Paul was not going to interfere with his own coronation. He was too glad to go. I see him looking up in the face of his executioner; and, as the grim official draws the sword, Paul calmly says, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." But I put my hand over my eyes; I want not to see that last struggle. One sharp, keen stroke, and Paul does go to the banquet, and Paul does dine with the King.

What a Transition it Was from the malaria of Rome to the finest climate in all the universe, the zone of eternal beauty and health. His ashes were put in the catacombs of Rome, but in one moment the air of Heaven bathed from his soul the last ache. From shipwreck, from dungeon, from the biting pain of the elm-wood rods, from the sharp swords of the headsman, he goes into the most brilliant assemblage of heaven, a king among kings, multitudes of the sainthood rushing out and stretching forth hands of welcome; for I do really think that as on the right hand of God is Christ, so on the right hand of Christ is Paul, the second great in Heaven.

He changed kings likewise. Before the hour of death, and up to the last moment, he was under Nero, the thick-necked, the cruel-eyed, the filthy-lipped; the sculptured features of that man bringing down to us to this very day the horrible possibilities of his nature—seated as he was amidst pictured marbles of Egypt, under a roof adorned with mother-of-pearl, in a dining-room which by machinery was kept whirling day and night with most bewitching magnificence; his horses standing in stalls of solid gold, and the grounds around his palace lighted at night by human victims, who were daubed with tar and pitch and then set on fire to illumine the darkness. That was Paul's King.

But the next moment he goes into the realm of Him whose reign is love, and whose courts are paved with love, and whose throne is set on pillars of love, and whose scepture is adorned with jewels of love, and whose palace is lighted with love, and whose lifetime is an eternity of love. When Paul was leaving so much on this side, the pillar of martyrdom, to gain so much on the other side, do you wonder at the cheerful valedictory of the text: "The time of my departure is at hand?"

Now, why cannot all the aged people of this congregation have the same holy glee as that old man had? Charles I., when he was combing his head, found a gray hair, and he sent it to the queen as a great joke; but old age is really no joke at all. For the last forty years you have been dreading that which ought to have been an exhilaration. You say

You fear the Struggle, at the moment the soul and body part. But millions have endured that moment, and why not we as well? They got through with it, and so can we. Besides this, all medical men agree in saying that there is probably no struggle at all at the last moment—not so much pain as the prick of a pin, the seeming signs of distress being altogether involuntary. But you say, "It is the uncertainty of the future." Now, child of God, do not play the infidel. After God has filled the Bible, till it can hold no more, with stories of the good things ahead, better not talk of uncertainties.

But you say, "I cannot bear to think of parting from friends here." If you are old, you have

More Friends in Heaven

than here. Just take the census. Take some large sheets of paper and begin to record the names of those who have emigrated to the other shore; the companions of your school-days, your early business associates, the friends of mid-life, and those who more recently went away. Can it be that they have been gone so long you do not care any more about them, and you do not want their society? Oh, no! There have been days when you have felt that you could not endure it another moment away from their blessed companionship. They have gone. You say you would not like to bring them back to this world of trouble, even if you had the power. It would not do to trust you. God would not give you the resurrection power. Before to-morrow morning you would be rattling at the gates of the cemetery, crying to the departed, "Come back to the cradle where you slept! come back to the hall where you used to play! come back to the table where you used to sit!" and there would be a great burglary in heaven. No, no! God will not trust you with resurrection power; but He compromises the matter, and says, "You cannot bring them where you are, but you can go where they are." They are more lovely now than ever. Were they beautiful here they are more beautiful there. Besides that, it is for you than here, aged man; better climate there than these hot summers and cold winters and late springs; better hearing; better eyesight; more tonic in the air; more perfume in the bloom; more sweetness in the song. Do you not feel, aged man, sometimes, as though you would like to get your arm and foot free? Do you not feel as though you would like to throw away spectacles and canes and crutches? Would you not like to feel the spring and elasticity and mirth of an eternal boyhood? When the point at which you start from this world is old age, and the point to which you go is eternal juvenescence, aged man, clap your hands at the anticipation, and say, in perfect rapture of soul, "The time of my departure is at hand."

More Healthy There

I remark, again, all those ought to feel this joy of the text who have to know what is beyond this earthly terminus. And who has not any curiosity about it? Paul, I suppose, had the most satisfactory view of heaven, and he says: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." It is like looking through a broken telescope; "Now we see through a glass darkly." Can you tell me any thing about that heavenly place? You ask me a thousand questions about it that I cannot answer. I ask you a thousand questions about it that you cannot answer. And do you wonder that Paul was so glad when martyrdom gave him a chance to go over and make discoveries in that blessed country?

A Holy Curiosity

I hope some day, by the grace of God, to go over and see for myself; but not now. No well man, no prospered man, I think, wants to go now. But the time will come, I think, when I shall go over. I want to see what they do there, and I want to see how they do it. I do not want to be looking through "the gates ajar" forever. I want them to swing wide open. There are ten thousand things I want explained—about you, about myself, about the government of this world, about God, about everything. We start in a plain path of what we know, and in a minute come up against a high wall of what we do not know.

I Wonder How it Looks over there. Somebody tells me it is like a paved city—paved with gold; and another man tells me it is like a fountain, and it is like a tree, and it is like a triumphal procession; and the next man I meet tells me it is all figurative. I really want to know, after the body is resurrected, what they wear and what they eat; and I have an immeasurable curiosity to know what it is, and how it is, and where it is. Columbus risked his life to find this continent, and shall we shudder to go out on a voyage of discovery which shall reveal a vaster and more brilliant country? John Franklin risked his life to find a passage between icebergs, and shall we dread to find a passage to eternal summer? Men in Switzerland travel up the heights of

The Matterhorn

with alpenstock and guides, and rockets and ropes, and getting half-way up stumble and fall down in a horrible massacre. They just want to say they had been on the tops of those high peaks. And shall we fear to go out for the ascent of the eternal hills which start a thousand miles beyond where stop the highest peaks of the Alps, and when in that ascent there is no peril? A man doomed to die stepped on the scaffold, and said in joy: "Now, in ten minutes I will know the great secret." One minute after the vital functions ceased. The little child that died last night in Montague Street knows more than Jonathan Edwards, or St. Paul himself, before he died. Friends, the exit from this world, or death, if you please to call it, to the Christian is Glorious Explanation.

It is demonstration. It is illumination. It is sunburst. It is the opening of all the windows. It is shutting up the catechism of doubt, and the unrolling of all the scrolls of positive and accurate information. Instead of standing at the foot of the ladder and looking up, it is standing at the top of the ladder and looking down. It is the last mystery taken out of botany and geology and astronomy and theology. O, will it not be grand to have all questions answered? The perpetually recurring interrogation point changed for the mark of exclamation. All riddles solved. Who will fear to go out on that discovery, when all the questions are to be decided which we have been discussing all our lives? Who shall not clap his hands in the anticipation of that blessed country, if it be no better than through holy curiosity, crying, "The time of my departure is at hand?"

I remark, again, we ought to have the joy of the text, because, leaving this world, we move into

The Best Society

of the universe. You see a great crowd of people in some street, and you say: "Who is passing there? What general, what prince is going up there?" Well, I see a great throng in heaven. I say: "Who is the focus of all that admiration? Who is the centre of that glittering company?" It is Jesus, the champion of all worlds, the favorite of all ages. Do you know what is the first question the soul will ask when it comes through the gate of heaven? I think the first question will be: "Where is Jesus, the Saviour that pardoned my sin; that carried my sorrows; that fought my battles; that won my victories?" O radiant One! how I would like to see Thee! Thou of the manger, but without its humiliation; Thou of the Cross, but without its pangs; Thou of the grave, but without its darkness.

The Bible intimates that we will talk with Jesus in heaven just as a brother talks with a brother. Now, what will you ask Him first? I do not know. I can think

What I would ask Paul first, if I saw him in heaven. I think I would like to hear him describe the storm that came upon the ship when there were two hundred and seventy-five souls on the vessel. Paul being the only man on board cool enough to describe the storm. There is a fascination about a ship and the sea that I shall never get over, and I think I would like to hear him talk about that first. But when I meet my Lord Jesus Christ, of what shall I first delight to hear Him speak? Now I think what it is. I shall first want to hear the tragedy of His last hours, and then, Luke's account of the crucifixion and Mark's account of the crucifixion, and John's account of the crucifixion will be nothing, while from the living lips of Christ the story shall be told of the gloom that fell, and the devils that arose, and the fact that upon His endurance depended

The Rescue of a Race;

and there was darkness in the sky, and there was darkness in the soul, and the pain became more sharp, and the burdens became more heavy, until the scene began to swim away from the dying vision of Christ, and the cursing of the mob came to His ear more faintly, and His hands were fastened to the horizontal piece of the cross, and His feet were fastened to the perpendicular piece of the cross and His head fell forward in a swoon as He uttered the last moan and cried: "It is finished!" All heaven will stop to listen until the story is done, and every harp will be put down, and every lip closed, and all eyes fixed upon

The Divine Narrator,

until the story is done; and then, at the tap of the baton, the eternal orchestra will rouse up; finger on string of harp, and lips to the mouth of trumpet, there shall roll forth the oratorio of the Messiah: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive blessing and riches and honor and glory and power, world without end!"

"What He endured, oh, who can tell,
To save our souls from death and hell!"

When there was between Paul and that magnificent personage only the thinness of the sharp edge of the sword of the executioner, do you wonder that he wanted to go? O, my Lord Jesus, let one wave of that glory roll over this auditory! Hark! I hear the wedding-bells of heaven ringing now. The marriage of the Lamb has come, and the bride hath made herself ready.

SCIATICA HEALED.

THE following testimony given at a recent meeting at Bethshan is published in Thy Healer for July: Mr. C. Webb, of Reading, said: "I have to praise the Lord for what He has done for me. When in America I received a severe injury to my sciatic nerve, from which I suffered for fourteen years and a half. I was put under the treatment of doctors, and underwent two operations. In the second, every one thought I should die, for I had been so reduced as to become a living skeleton All this time also I was unconverted. I found, however, the secret of my preservation, and it was a praying father in England. The doctor said I should not get over it, but I did get over it, thank God. My right thigh was drawn together, and I never knew what it was to be without pain during the fourteen years and a half. Dr. Payne told me that the sheath of the nerve was exposed, and it was this that caused such acute pain.

"When the little Hall was opened at Bethshan, I went there, though the devil made a great effort to prevent me. In spite of his temptations, I said, 'I will go;' and so I went, terribly racked with pain. I remember that there was a little place on the side of the building unfinished, and there was a draught coming through where I sat. This seemed to affect my sciatic nerve so much that it gave me the most intense pain; and what made it worse was, that I had to go many miles after the meeting. When in this condition, I gave myself over to the Lord, and He relieved me and enabled me to go home.

"Three weeks after this, as I was writing in my office, I was moved suddenly to bless the Lord. I threw my pen down quickly, and I knew in a moment that the Lord had healed me. I did not know it until then; but a clear knowledge of the fact was then given me. Two gentlemen, who were present, said they could not make me out. They thought I was crazy, and they said I was only shamming and was not healed. But I assured them it was the fact, and went down on my knees and prayed and praised the Lord for what He had done."

TWO CHINESE CONVERTS.

THE missionaries who are laboring for Christ in China meet with many discouragements owing to the people being wedded to idolatry and opium, but they are cheered everywhere by seeing that God is blessing their labors. Two instances in point are mentioned in a recent letter from Mr. Sturman, who belongs to the Inland Mission. He writes: "Last Sunday I had just returned from school, and was feeling a little downcast, because of the seeming hardness of the hearts of those to whom I had been speaking, when a man came and looked in at my window. I asked him in, and, as soon as he was seated, I said to him, 'Why do you not give your heart to God, and let Him hereafter be your Master?' And he replied, 'That is just what I wanted to tell you; I have done it, and I believe fully in Jesus,' he said, with great stress. I could not help saying, 'Praise God!' and then went on to talk with him. After a little he said, 'But my heart is not happy.' I asked why. He said, 'You know I have a brother and mother at home; they do not know about Jesus.' 'Well,' I said, 'you must go home now and tell them what you know. He said he would do so.

"Another man was here on Saturday. He came once before, and seemed very much interested; but one could not make him feel the real need of a Saviour. He took away a New Testament, then, and has been reading it. He was here fully two hours. He wanted to have Christ and Buddha, and for a long time was proof against all I could say. At last I inquired, 'Have you a son?' He said, 'Yes.' 'Well, now,' I said, 'if your son came in here and honored me as his father, and took no notice of you, how should you like it? Would it be right or wrong?' 'Ah,' he said, lifting both hands, 'that is right. It is wrong to worship a man (for he admitted Buddha was only such) and forget the Father of all.' He accepted Christ."

AN ESCAPE FROM A GEYSER.

A REMARKABLE escape from death is related in the Inter-Mountain of Montana. It states that a tourist who with three companions visited the hot water spring at Firehole River, descended into the crater to secure a beautiful piece of stalactite as a memento of his visit. He reached the formations, secured what he desired, and attempted to ascend. Reaching overhead, he grasped a projection, and, putting his entire weight upon it, it gave way, and he was precipitated into the yawning abyss. His companions, who were watching his movements, shrieked as they saw him fall. They immediately procured a light and lowered it into the crater for as great a distance as they could with the means at their command. Nothing could be seen; but by dropping pebbles and bits of wood they discovered that at the depth of about fifty feet the crater was filled with water. They gave him up as lost, and with sad hearts left the scene. They carried the news to Bozeman, but before any measures could be taken to rescue their companion he appeared among them alive. He stated that he fell into the water feet foremost, but quickly rose to the surface and caught hold of a projecting rock, by which he supported himself. The water was warm and buoyant, and soon began to rise rapidly. As he rose with it, he grasped the rocks that jutted out from the sides until he was able to crawl out just as the water became very hot, when he fainted on the edge of the crater from sheer exhaustion. Such an experience is said to be without parallel, but there are many who could tell of efforts to secure something which seemed desirable that have led them into spiritual peril more terrible, and from which only divine intervention has delivered them (Isa. 38: 17).

MR. H. M. STANLEY AND THE MISSIONARIES.

THE animadversions of the New York daily press on the difficulty that arose between Mr. Stanley and the missionaries have doubtless pained many of our readers who were reluctant to think evil of a missionary, and yet could not answer the charge of churlishness and inhumanity brought against Mr. Billington. The difficulty appears to have arisen through Mr. Billington's conscientious desire to be faithful to his trust. When Mr. Stanley demanded the steamer belonging to the mission to carry his men up the river, Mr. Billington remembering that he was not the owner of the ship but merely the representative of the owners, was not satisfied that he would be held justified in lending the property of the mission to Mr. Stanley, as doubtless he would have done freely had the steamer been his own. The following report of the affair, which Mrs. Guinness has written for publication, places a different construction upon it from that published by the secular journals: Mr. Stanley was naturally anxious to be detained as little as possible at Leopoldville, and the more so, as food was scarce there at the time. He got possession of all the boats he could, and wished to get the mission steamer Henry Reed as well as the rest. Now this steamer had just returned from an eight months' trip on the Upper Congo and Mobangi, and was in need of repairs and painting. Moreover, Mr Billington, in whose charge it was, had no authority from his Board in Boston, and, consequently, no right either to lend or charter it. He was expected to have it ready to take up to the Equator station some missionaries who were to arrive shortly by the Afrikaan, and the interval would have been employed in preparing the vessel. He did not feel free, consequently, to accede to Mr. Stanley's wish. He is a cautious, conscientious man, and one who is peculiarly careful to do what he deems his duty, however difficult and distasteful, and he took the ground that he was not at liberty to lend the little steamer.

Setting aside all law and justice, Mr. Stanley—who had no government authority whatever, but was simply a private individual legally—claimed the property of the Mission for the use of his expedition, and said he would enforce the claim "at all costs to all concerned." He posted Soudanese soldiers with fixed bayonets around the mission house, under the command of Major Barthelet, drove the mission servants off the steamer, and put twenty black soldiers on board, and demanded instant concession. This was clearly unjustifiable conduct, and no wonder Mr. Stanley is anxious to excuse it.

The Governor of Leopoldville under the Congo Free State interfered, obliged the Soudanese soldiers to leave the Henry Reed, and obliged Stanley to withdraw the guard round the house. He then relieved Mr. Billington of all responsibility in the matter by requisitioning the steamer on behalf of the Government for Stanley's expedition, and it was chartered accordingly, as the missionaries would not, of course, resist the constituted authority. The same sense of duty which bound them to refuse an unauthorized demand bound them equally to obey the Government.

FASHION IN JAPAN.

THE fact that the Japanese are adopting Western customs does not appear to have given the unalloyed satisfaction to the missionaries that it has to western merchants and exporters. One lady missionary in that country, writing to Woman's Work, says:

"The Empress of Japan lately visited the schools of Osaka in European costume, and, through the public press has favored its adoption by her country-women. The effect has been to give a great impetus to the desire of Japanese girls for everything in our Western civilization. We might be expected to congratulate ourselves on this movement by the Empress. On the contray, we regret it. The best thing the West has for women in Japan, is not Paris gowns. They already have a national and becoming costume. There are cheap materials for the poor, and "costly as their purse can buy," for the rich; all girls learn to do their dress-making at home, and as garments are in the same style from one generation to another, they are spared the fatigue and expense of following changeful fashions. The innovation threatens a loss to the simplicity of the home. It is calculated to distract the school-girl from higher study to have to master Parisian trimmings and pockets and drapery, at this stage of her mental development, and she is not likely to make a success of it, at once. She will, now and then, appear grotesque to foreign eyes, with her incongruous blending of Dai Nippon and French fashions, and for a season, be very little at her ease in the unwonted boots and hats and sleeves. We would rather not see this phase of the western fever in Japan.

A MISSIONARY'S ASTRONOMICAL CLASS.

THE singular ways in which a missionary meets with opportunities to preach the gospel may be seen from a letter recently received by the Missionary Herald, from Dr. Porter of Pang Chuang, in China. He says: "On Saturday a company of ten or more Taoists came to make me a visit The immediate occasion of their coming was the recent eclipse, which is always a mystery to the uninstructed. One of the men had been asking various scholars and well-read men about the eclipses. Of course they could tell nothing. So these men came to me. Among them was an old man of seventy-three years, famous as the teacher of many a priest, and as the expounder of Buddhist and Taoist texts. My callers came in a body, and listened to a full description of the eclipses, with blackboard drawings in colored crayons. Having been thus enlightened, they withdrew to the hospital chapel-room, where I talked for a couple of hours with them.

"The next day, Sunday, they formed part of the audience and listened attentively to the theme, 'How shall men worship God?' They departed with many expressions of thanks for all they had seen and heard. I learn that three of the younger ones have renounced their ritual singing and affirmed they will have nothing to do with such folly. Some of the others said: 'We're worse off now than before we went; for then we practised idolatry with a good conscience, but now we shall never be at peace.' Another said: 'We shall be greater sinners than ever, since we know something now of the truth.' A few have begun to read our books. The old man said: 'It is all true, but I am too old to change now.' Thus it is that bread is cast upon the waters. Shall we find the harvest after many days?"

A SAILOR'S EXAMPLE.

SOME Christian people have established a Mission for sailors at Marseilles, in the south of France. There, as in all ports, are vile boarding-houses where the sailor is robbed of his money and tempted to drunkenness and vice. To counteract these places, a "Rest" has been added to the mission, with the best results. Several sailors have been converted there. One of these, whose conversion was most distinct produced such an impression in his ship, whilst loading for a long voyage, that the mate came to inquire into the cause. Said he, "There must be something real in religion after all, for Tim was the worst sailor I ever sailed with." This mate became so impressed by what he saw and heard that he came nightly until the ship left, accompanied with three others of the crew, to converse about the truth. On leaving, their captain, a Christian, declared that all his men were the better for their stay in port. A most suspicious Swede came to lodge; he declared that all who had to do with sailors were "thieves and robbers." The kind and gentle influence exercised by the matron, acted like a charm, and the first evening all his savings were deposited with her. A few days after, he said to her in broken English, "Why you here, and so kind to us? Sailors bad men." She replied, cheerfully, "Oh! because I like to; I love them." He said nothing then, but the following day he beckoned to her, and whispered in her ear, "Do you love God?" On receiving an affirmative reply, his whole face shone, and from that moment all want of confidence in anyone in the "Rest" disappeared. They frequently saw this man sitting in his comfortable room reading his large family Bible.

JUMPING FROM RAILROAD CARS.

THE question Christ propounded, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" (Mark 8: 36) can have but one answer, yet men continue to barter their souls for a very small portion of the world. It would appear that there are instances in ordinary life of persons displaying a criminal recklessness similarly suggestive of dementia, though not with such appalling results. The novelist, James Payn, writing to the Independent recently, mentions some of them. He says:

Within the last ten days there have been no less than three cases (two of them fatal) of persons jumping out of railway carriages, because they find themselves in the wrong trains. Most of these rash acts, no doubt, arise from impulse; on the instant that the individual discovers his mistake, he seeks to repair it. But a good many have no such excuse; many people jump because they have no sense of proportion. They are aware that their error will cause them to lose an appointment, or their dinners, whereupon they resolve to risk their lives to avert these trifling inconveniences. Their fellow-creatures read the coroner's inquest at breakfast-time, and exclaim, "What a fool that man must have been," and an hour afterward will cross the street on a slippery pavement, two inches in front of a railway van, rather than wait one instant, though they are only going to read the newspapers at the office. A woman shrinks from such mad folly, but with incipient inflammation of the lungs, she will not hesitate to go to a ball half clad, or to sit at an open window in a hail-storm to see the Queen's closed carriage whirl by. The very commonest form of human weakness is risk out of all proportion to gain.

MR. GEORGE MULLER'S RETURN.

THE preaching tour of this eminent Christian philanthropist, who is over eighty-one years of age, has occupied nineteen months, and has extended over 37,000 miles. On his return to his home at the Bristol Orphanages he was visited by a reporter of the Bristol Mercury, and the following conversation occurred:

Mr. Muller said: We left England with the intention of spending the winter preaching in the United States. We went by way of Liverpool to New York, arriving there in December, 1885; but while in the States I had a pressing letter from a stranger to go to Australia. I had at four different periods since commencing my preaching tours spent thirty months in the States, so we decided to accept the Invitation to go to Australia.

After a fortnight at New York, we therefore traveled across the continent of North America to San Francisco, where we arrived on Christmas Day, 1885. There we embarked on board a steamer, and within twenty-three days we arrived at Sydney, New South Wales, after touching at the Sandwich Islands.

Did you remain long in Australia? Nearly eight months in Sydney, Bathurst, and then Victoria, remaining a long time, and preaching much in Melbourne; thence to Geelong, Ballarat, Maryborough, Sandhurst, and Castlemaine. After that we went to Queensland, and stayed for a time at Brisbane. From Brisbane we journeyed to the Straits of Malacca, and stayed at Batavia, in the Island of Java. Leaving the Straits, we went to China, staying at Hong Kong, Shanghai, Hankow, Nankin, and Ching Kiang. We then went on to Japan, stopping at Yokohama, where I stayed several weeks preaching, and Tokio, where I also preached, and afterwards at Kobe, Osaka, and Kioto.

You preached at all these places to many persons?—Yes; to very many—in some places to 2,500, 3,000, and 3,900. I had very Large Congregations in Japan.

The greater part of them had been converted from idolatry and were decided Christians. I preached in English and German, and sometimes, by means of translation, to the Japanese and the Chinese. We afterwards went back to the Straits of Malacca. I preached for some weeks, and then we began our return journey to Europe. On reaching Nice we stayed there some time, and I preached in English and German, but here the congregations were not large, many of the visitors having left during the panic caused by the earthquake. Went through Italy and Switzerland, and were five days on our journey to Calais and Dover, thence to London and home.

In some places you have met with very large congregations?—In the large Town Hall at Melbourne I preached to crowded congregations of 5,000 persons. I preached three times in the Theatre, to 3,000 people each time.—But is not this too trying for your advanced age?—I shall be eighty-two years of age in September next, but I feel no fatigue in these efforts.

Nine years ago, in the year '78, I preached six Sundays following, to between 6,000 and 7,000 persons at Liverpool at the large Victoria Hall, which was built for Messrs. Moody and Sankey; besides this, I preached twice every week day at noon and seven o'clock in the evening, to congregations of 2,000 to 3,000. Are you able to fulfil all the requests you receive to preach on your tours?—No; I have almost invariably far more invitations than I can possibly accept. When I was the first time in the United States, though I preached 308 times there, I had to leave 108 invitations unaccepted when I left the country. And on the second visit, though I preached again 299 times, I had to leave 154 invitations which I could not accept. In Australia, on the present occasion, there was far more work than I could do. Have you any difficulty about obtaining buildings?—Not in the least. Even in Japan and other places I had buildings in abundance placed at my disposal.—You must have addressed hundreds of thousands on these tours?—I estimate that I have in these fourteen preaching tours, and I am glad to say I feel no breaking down in health or vigor.

Addressed a Million Persons

SIGNS OF THE COMING END.

By P. H. Pember, M. A.*

The Important Crisis—God Seated on His Rainbow-Encircled Throne—Human Disregard of Cosmic Laws—Seven Types of Rebellion—Men Instructed by Demons—A Predicted Apostacy—A Solemn Event Approaching.

IN the fourth chapter of the Apocalypse there is a grand description of the Almighty seated upon his throne of Judgment. The crisis as discovered by the context and other prophecies is important: for the Church has just been removed from earth, because the time to restore the kingdom to Israel has come. But since that kingdom was formerly transferred to the nations in the days of Nebuchadnezzar, its surrender cannot be demanded without just cause: for which reason the Lord would seem to have come down in awful majesty, that he may hold his great controversy with the Gentiles, and after judging their failure, close the times of their dominion.

The accessories of the throne are significant, and point to the Noachian covenant: for the rainbow encircles it, and at its base sit the Cherubim, the representatives of those earth-tribes to which the promises were made. But this covenant was to the world to arrange its government in accordance with divine principles. A call, which, as the rebellion of Babel and the history of the cities of the plain too evidently testify, was utterly disregarded. Then the Almighty, restricting his more direct dealings for a time, within narrower limits, made two successive elections from the great masses of mankind. First his choice fell upon the children of Abraham, whom he placed under a special covenant; subsequently the Church was separated off, from Jew as well as Gentile, by peculiar laws, and by privileges and promises available only to such as should pass within her pale.

God's Final Call

But the remainder of men are neither Israelites by natural, nor members of Christ by spiritual, birth, cannot at least avoid their responsibility to obey laws which were imposed without distinction upon the whole race of Adam, which have never been repealed, and the violation of which will, consequently, be visited with punishment at the hands of the Creator, the Lord God Almighty. Indeed, it is manifestly to judge the world for its disobedience to these laws that God sits on the rainbow-encircled throne.

Now it is a grave fact that the advocates of modern thought array themselves against every principle of these early revelations of the Divine will. In proof of this the reader will need little more than a bare enumeration of the

Cosmic or Universal Laws:

I. The law of the Sabbath. It was to the world that God declared the seventh day sanctified, not to Israelites: therefore the world is responsible. To the Israelites God merely said, "Remember the Sabbath Day, to Keep it Holy," thus admonishing them not on their part to neglect the old-established and universal ordinance.

II. The headship of the man over the woman. This is now not simply denied; attempts are actually being made to reverse it.

III. The institution of marriage and its indissolubility during life, on the ground that the man and woman become one flesh. The varied antagonism to this law, resulting in part from the false teaching that the really married are one spirit rather than one flesh, has been sufficiently mainfested.

IV. The law of substitution, that life must atone for life, and that without shedding of blood there is no remission, as taught in type by animal sacrifices. Latter day philosophers affect the utmost horror of such a salvation, and will have none of Christ.

V. The command to use the flesh of animals as food. This is rejected by many spiritualists, and by all Theosophists and Buddhists.

VI. The decree that whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed. This is opposed on the ground of its inhumanity, and because by the execution of a murderer "you cut him off debased, degraded, sensual ignorant."

VII. The direction to multiply and replenish the earth. A mandate which implied dispersion and the forming of those nations for which, as Moses tells us, God divided out the earth, and which are to remain till the close of the millennium. At Babel the world resisted this ordinance, and now men are renewing their efforts to the same end by maintaining that we should be humanitarians, cosmopolitans, anything but lovers of our own country. This is perhaps a preparation for the reign of Antichrist "over every people and tribe and tongue and nation." Cosmopolitanism will apparently be as necessary to his development as it was to the primal insurrection of Nimrod.

The New Phases of Thought are, then, obliterating all the first principles which God laid down for the human race as the basis of its mode of life, society and government—a fact ominous of coming judgment.

It is also, as the reader will perceive, fulfilling to the letter the important prophecy in the first epistle to Timothy. Men are confessedly receiving instruction from demons; and if we glance at the published specimens of spirit teachings we have no difficulty in detecting the lies spoken in hypocrisy. Many are teaching abstinence from flesh; the abolition of marriage, either avowed or virtual, is being unscrupulously preached. And these signs are appearing, as Paul predicted they would, coincidently, with apostacy, or falling away, from the great truths respecting the Godhead and Incarnation.

Lastly: the characteristic features of the days of Noah are reappearing, and, above all, a free communication has been established between the spirits of the air and the human race with a view, apparently, to a sojourn once more of Nephilim Upon The Earth.

Unlawful secrets known in past times only to those few who seem to have acted as Satan's agents in directing the course of this world, are now freely offered to all men. The remembrance of that appalling scene when their brethren were hurled by omnipotent lightings into pits of darkness, would seem to be fading from the minds of fallen angels; and the usual course of sin, most frightful of insanities, is urging them on to the brink of the precipice from the abysmal depths of which the groans of their blasted companions ascend. Meanwhile numbers of the puny inhabitants of the earth are ready at their bidding to essay any deeds of madness. For not a few even of the learned and wise, unable by reason of vanity to maintain the bare conception of a God, unless His awful majesty be displayed before their eyes, have resolved either avowedly or virtually, that there is none greater than themselves, or, at least, than their possibility.

All things seem to be prepared for the fulfilment of

The Solemn Prediction

in the twelfth chapter of the Apocalypse, when Michael leading the van of the host which will come with Christ to take the kingdom, shall drive the rebel high ones down to earth. And in the following chapter we see the consequences of that marvellous event: the peoples of Satan's last refuge, of the only remaining portion of his once vast dominions must be organized for the final struggle. And so out of the troubled sea of anarchy and perplexity of nations, there arises, in greater majesty and power than it ever before possessed, the resuscitated empire of Rome under the immediate direction and government of the wicked one.

---

* From his work entitled "Earth's Earliest Ages," 500 pages; Price $1 50; for sale at the office of this journal, 63 Bible House, New York.

Five Cents, Postage Free.

END OF THIS AGE ABOUT THE END OF THIS CENTURY,

and its Last Week Passover Week, Ending on Thursday, April 11, 1901,

As shown by Daniel's 2300 and 1335 and 1290 Years—this being the termination also of the 6000 Years from the Creation of Man, and the 2520 Years from Nebuchadnezzar, and the 360 Years from Luther's Reformation, according to the Bible periods—a pamphlet of 29 pages—by Rev. M. Baxter, Episcopal Clergyman and one of the Editors of the "Christian Herald." Author of "Forty Coming Wonders," "Coming Wars," etc. Address Manager "Christian Herald," 63 Bible House, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS.

The President Has Decided to Withdraw his acceptance of the invitation to attend the Grand Army Encampment at St. Louis. In a letter to the Mayor of that city he explains his reasons for so doing. He states that as it is most important that the first encampment held since the war in a Southern State should be a happy and harmonious one, he would be sorry to introduce any element of discord on the occasion. That his presence would be such an element, he perceives. He does not think the Grand Army, as a whole, would regard him as an unwelcome guest, but certain prominent members of it have given expression to sentiments which show that they, at any rate, would resent his presence, and he has heard that some posts would refrain from attending if he went. In order that he may not embarrass any one he has, therefore, concluded not to go. He concludes by saying: "My presence in your city at the time you have indicated can be of but little moment compared with the importance of a cordial and harmonious entertainment of your other guests. I assure you that I abandon my plan without the least personal feeling or regret, constrained thereto by a sense of duty, actuated by a desire to save any embarrassment to the people of St. Louis or their expected guests, and with a heart full of grateful appreciation of the sincere and unaffected kindness of your citizens." The decision is a wise and kind one. The political friends and enemies of the President will alike appreciate the delicacy of the motives which have prompted it.

The Approaching Hot Wave, the Most Severe of the season, which is stated to be at hand by the New York Herald, a journal singularly accurate in its meteorological predictions, leads it editorially to suggest a warning to parents. It says, that although the temperature in New York and the Middle States has been during the past week ninety-five degrees in the shade each day, it has not been as dangerous to the health as the conditions on which we are entering, because the dry air we have had cools more quickly at night, than the vapor-laden air that we may expect. This is the period above all others when the infant population suffers most terribly. Too much pains cannot be taken to see that the little ones get the purest milk and the purest air, and that they are kept clean and free from strong draughts of air. Stanley, the African explorer, states that one of the greatest perils to which a strong man in the African climate is subjected, is exposure, when heated, to a draught which cools the body too suddenly. With attention to these matters hundreds of infants may be saved who without such care must perish.

The Fourth of July Orations, Especially Those of men having claims to be regarded as statesmen were noticeable this year, for their references to the important question of immigration. It is evident that at last public opinion is being awakened to the danger to our institutions, which is caused by allowing America to become the dumping ground for the moral refuse of Europe. An extract from the oration of Senator Palmer, of Michigan, fairly illustrates the general character of the utterances of many others. He said: "We have shut out one race because it was alien and uncongenial, and it only awaits a public demand to close, in whole or in part, the gates upon the other shore. In the confidential relations of life we demand of those coming to us certificates of character, and I know of no reason why we should not demand the same from those coming to form a part of our great national family. Why should they not bring certificates of character, properly authenticated by our diplomatic or consular officers as to their value and validity, to be scrutinized by our national officers on their entry into the United States? We have now a quarantine system to protect us against physical contagion; why is it not our duty as well as our right to make a moral and political quarantine mandatory—to the end that men entertaining convictions or vagaries, as the case may be, hostile to our theory of government, Anarchical, Nihilistic, and destructive of our institutions, should be excluded?"

The Crafty Mormon Device to Disarm the suspicion of the people of the United States, which the Constitutional Convention, sitting in Salt Lake City, has devised, should not put them off their guard. The Convention proposes to have an article incorporated in the Constitution making polygamy for ever illegal and never to be restored without the consent of Congress. This is merely a specious offer of no real value. With a Governor, Legislature, and judges elected by Mormon influence and by Mormon votes the Constitution might be treated as a dead letter in a sovereign State. It would be impossible for Congress to enforce the law against polygamy if once it surrenders the power it now possesses over the Territory. In the present temper of the Mormon leaders it is certain that only such men would be elected as could be trusted to refrain from initiating proceedings against polygamists, and who would not enforce the anti-polygamy laws. It will be a matter for deep regret if Congress allows itself to be imposed upon by any constitutional safeguard and concedes to Utah the power to execute the laws.

A Scientific Report of the Earthquakes at Bavispe was published last week at Tucson, Arizona. Prof. F. S. Clark had been there nine days under the auspices of the Hawaiian Government, engaged in the investigation of the traces left by the earthquake. He states that the destruction at Bavispe is complete. There is not a house left uninjured, and by far the greater number are shapeless ruins. The people of the ruined town are now living in rude shelter, hastily erected on the Upper Misa. One hundred and sixty-nine were buried in the ruins caused by the first shock. Of this number thirty-six were taken out dead, twenty-seven more or less hurt, and the remainder unhurt. From the time of the first shock there has been a succession of shocks noted, and Prof. Clark is of the opinion that with the exception of the week included between the 8th and 15th of June there has not been any appreciable interval of time when the earth in that region has been "at rest." The centre of disturbance is northwest of Bavispe. An active volcano is reported seventy-five miles southeast of that place, to which point a party of explorers have been dispatched.

An Appalling Disaster Occurred in Switzerland on July 6. A portion of the land bordering on the lake at Zug, the capital of the canton of that name, gave way, carrying a new quay and streets and houses into the lake. For several days crevices had been observed in the new quay, which cost $40,000. At half-past two o'clock on Tuesday afternoon the lake in front of the stone work began to bubble. The quay then cracked and eighty feet of it fell into the lake. A dozen persons who rushed from an adjoining café were precipitated into the water and drowned. After a short interval another slip dragged several houses into the water. The landing stage followed, and a steamer which had just arrived was hurled a hundred yards forward. At four o'clock two boats which were going to the rescue were engulfed, only one boatman rising again to the surface. At the same moment a boatman's hut, in which there were three children, fell into the water. At seven o'clock the landslips began again, and several carts which were removing property sank into the lake. The Hotel de Zurich, fifteen houses and ten huts disappeared within a few minutes. A café, in which were ten customers, was next engulfed, and 150 metres of a neighboring street then slowly vanished, the people jumping from the windows of the houses to escape being drowned. The third landslip occurred at eleven o'clock, P. M., carrying five houses into the lake and damaging many others. Seventy persons are missing and six hundred are homeless.

The Election of a New Prince of Bulgaria was achieved by the Sobranje on July 7. Prince Alexander of Battenberg, who would evidently have been the national choice in spite of Russia's opposition, firmly and definitely refused to be a candidate. The national assembly, therefore, selected an Austrian prince, thereby incurring the risk of again offending Russia. The prince selected is Prince Ferdinand Maximilian, who on his mother's side is a grandson of King Louis Philippe of France. His eldest brother, who is heir to the Dukedom of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, is married to the Princess Louise, daughter of the King of Belgium. His other brother, Prince Auguste, is married to a daughter of Dom Pedro II. of Brazil. One sister, Princess Clotilde, is the wife of the Archduke Joseph of Austria, and the other, Princess Amélie, is married to Duke Maximilian of Bavaria. Prince Ferdinand is only twenty-six years old, having been born in Vienna, in 1861.

The Coercion Bill for Ireland Entered Upon its last stage in the British House of Commons on July 7. Mr. Gladstone made a vigorous speech urging its rejection: first, on the ground that the state of crime in Ireland did not justify the enactment of so severe a measure, and that for the prevailing discontent, the existence of which all admitted, the coercion bill was no remedy. Mr. Balfour, Lord Salisbury's nephew, in reply contended that Government was mainly justified in introducing its proposals by the state of social tyranny which had recently been created in Ireland, a tyranny that attacked the rights and liberties of minorities and most of those elementary principles without which a country could never be prosperous. He contended that crime was worse now in Ireland than in 1870, when Mr. Gladstone promoted coercion. The bill has passed the House by a majority of 87, and if it pass quickly through the House of Lords, will become law in a few weeks.

The Sultan of Turkey has Finally Declined to sign the convention with England on the Egyptian question. The British Government has therefore recalled its special commissioner, Sir Henry Drummond Wolff. The indications are that the Sultan's course has been taken in deference to the opposition of France supported by Russia. It will now remain for those Powers to take the initiative in further negotiation. If the convention had been ratified, England would have been pledged to evacuate Egypt within a fixed time. Now she is under no pledge, and if the time she may choose for evacuation does not suit her opponents, it is difficult to see what means short of war can compel her to hasten her departure. Turkey is little likely to move in the matter, and France and Russia will have but poor ground beside international jealousy to force her to leave Egypt. The relations between the Powers are said to be strained, and more than one French statesman has intimated that France will fight rather than be thwarted.

The Gospel Union (or Gospel Army, as it has been styled in some places), of which the Rev. M. Baxter is President, has now about fifteen mission stations in the United States and Canada, besides more than seventy mission stations in Britain. Evangelistic Gospel meetings are held at these stations generally every week evening, and Sundays, in halls rented permanently by evangelists, and many sinners are being converted by this Gospel work. Contributions, which are urgently needed for carrying on and extending the movement, should be sent to Rev. M. Baxter, 63 Bible House, New York, N. Y.

The Prohibition Fight in Texas is Being waged with vigor. Money, however, is sorely needed to pay the expenses of speakers from place to place, and for the dissemination of temperance literature, printing, etc. It is earnestly hoped that the appeal of our friends in Texas, who are working against desperate odds, will not be forgotten by Temperance conventions nor by private philanthropists. Even if the Prohibitionists are defeated the money will not be lost. It will educate the people and strengthen the cause for a renewal of the struggle. Money may be sent to the Treasurer, Mr. Thomas Moore, Waco, Texas.

The Convention of the United Societies of Christian endeavor which was held last week at Saratoga, New York, was a remarkable success. Not until the Societies came together did even the members know how enthusiastic and extensive the movement has become. The Secretary's report showed that during the past year the number of Societies has grown from 850 to 2,314 and the membership is now over 140,000. The work now extends to China, Japan and Great Britain, and almost every denomination is represented in the Societies. An interesting feature of the Convention was an address by President Van Patten on July 6, in the course of which he gave a brief but exhaustive history of the, movement which commenced at Portland Maine, in 1880, in an effort to render help to the converts at a revival in the Rev. J. E. Clarke's church.

The Bethany Institute for Training of Women for Christian work has issued its fifteenth annual report. It has moved to more commodious quarters at 105 East Seventeenth Street New York, and is now able more efficiently to carry out the objects for which it was established. Twenty-eight ladies availed themselves of its facilities last year, and while passing through the course of training and Bible study, engaged in mission work in the homes of the poor, the hospitals, chapels and public institutions. These ladies have now separated to engage in their life work. Two have gone South, two as missionaries to Alaska, and others have been engaged to labor, by churches in New York or adjacent States. Since the Institute was established, fifteen years ago, two hundred and ninety-three ladies have been trained there, forty of whom went out as missionaries to heathen lands, eight of them with medical diplomas. Young ladies desiring to enter the Institute may obtain particulars by writing to the Superintendent, Rev. A. G. Ruliffson, 105 East Seventeenth Street, New York.

A New Electrical Submarine Signal is Being perfected by Mr. Edison. On July 5, he explained its principles to a reporter at Orange N. J. It is based on the known facility of water for transmitting sound. Divers in the ocean have heard the swish of a steamers' wheels fifteen miles away, and Mr. Edison thinks he can transmit his message from ship to ship a distance of at least seven miles. What he purposes doing is to have the large ocean steamers equipped with steam whistles attached to transmitters. Under the water line of each steamer will be a sounder, connected with the captain's cabin by a wire. When the captain of one vessel wants to signal another, he will sit down to his key board, turn the steam on his whistle, manipulate the keys, and send the message out into the waves that break against the sounder. This sound will pass unbroken from wave to wave with remarkable velocity, until it runs up against the sounder of some vessel which may happen to be within reach of the volume of sound. As soon as the wave containing the sound strikes the sounder on the hull of the vessel within reach, the message will run over the electrical wire to the captain's cabin, where it will ring an electrical bell, and the captain can then receive the message as it comes from the water, as comfortably and correctly as though he was sitting in a telegraph office ashore. This it is hoped will diminish the risk of collisions at sea. Sometimes when the whistle of a steamer is heard it is too late to avert disaster. But the new invention will be of no service to a vessel not equipped with the sounder. Though a message of the utmost importance might be palpitating in the waves around a ship it would not be heard by the captain unless the sounder was on his ship to receive it. It is so with God's voice to men. only those hear who have the listening ear which the Spirit gives (1 Cor. 2: 13, 14).

Three Precious Letters Have Been Found in Philadelphia. The Call of that city publishes a letter from a gentleman, who says: "It is strange how few people know the value of old papers. It's all rubbish, they think, and must be sent to the paper mills. Last week I saw a lot of papers, that had been stored for almost a century in the loft of a farmhouse, brought down to be sold to a ragman. In five minutes' fumbling among the yellow-looking mass, I found a small very rare book, a fine autograph letter of General Washington, and two from Aaron Burr, both love-letters, too." In many houses there is a book rarely, if ever, opened in which there are letters not only written by the greatest men the world has ever seen, but letters containing matter of priceless value to the reader. As the writer justly remarks, "It is strange how few people know the value of old papers" (2 Tim. 3 : 14–17).

A Man with a Marble Leg is Said to be Living near Mount Sterling, Ky. A despatch from that place to the New York Times, says that a well-known farmer in that neighborhood, is just now an object of much attention and the subject of no little sympathy. Some six months ago he noticed that the fleshy part of his left leg seemed harder than that of his right. Since that time this hardness has grown more and more perceptible, and though the patient has had the attention of excellent medical skill, the limb has increased in hardness till it is now to all appearance a piece of sculptured marble. The farmer suffers no pain, but as his leg is stone from the hip down he finds locomotion difficult, the more so on account of the toes of his foot, which are so spread apart that he is in constant dread of breaking them off. The man's peculiar affliction entitles him to the sympathy he is receiving, but his case is not nearly so sad as that of large numbers of persons who are afflicted with petrifaction, not in their limbs but in their hearts and consciences. For them, however, God has provided a remedy (Ezek. 36: 26).

A Premature Explosion Occurred in New York on July 6. The workmen in No. 6 Shaft of the new Aqueduct had completed the drilling of a number of holes for a dynamite charge, and placed the dynamite in them. One or two more holes were being drilled, and it was intended to discharge the blast when they were ready. While the work was going forward a thunderstorm came on and a flash of lightning struck the wire attached to the dynamite charges, which was lying ready to connect with the battery. Instantly there was a terrific explosion, and a man who was working near, was blown to fragments. There would have been a great loss of life had it not been that providentially the other men had just been called to another part of the work. The wire which the lightning struck was not connected with the battery, but the lightning took the place of the battery with terrific potency. The men had apparently forgotten that there was explosive force around them of the same kind as that they intended to use, but which was beyond their control. The same forgetfulness is seen in daily life. There is a growing tendency to ignore God, and to devise plans without regard to Him, as if He did not now interfere in the ways of men (Ps. 9: 15).

A Dispute Among Firemen Led to a Heavy loss on July 1, at Long Branch, N. J. At that place there is a large block of buildings expensively and elaborately fitted up as stables and coach-houses for the use of four millionaires, who keep their horses and carriages in them during the summer. On the evening of July 1, fire was discovered there, and it soon made rapid progress, having obtained hold of a quantity of hay and provender. An alarm was sent over the wires to the Fire Department and an engine was sent to the scene of the conflagration. But when the engine arrived the firemen discovered that they had left the hose in the engine house behind them. Then there was a squabble as to who would return to the engine house for it, as none of the firemen seemed to fancy the idea of doing a heavy work that any of the others might do. This caused a delay of thirty minutes. During all this time valuable property, consisting of stables, horses and carriages, was being consumed by the flames. The millionaire owners worked hard to save their property, but after they had brought out some of the horses they were compelled by the heat to leave the remainder to their fate. When the hose arrived it was too late to save much, and property worth many thousands of dollars was consumed. It is very deplorable when men spend in disputing among themselves time which ought to be spent in working; especially when every moment so spent is fraught with loss. Never is it more deplorable than when such disputes hinder the work of preaching the Gospel to perishing souls (2 Tim. 2 : 23–26).

BRIEF NOTES.

The Prohibitionists of Ohio have placed a full ticket in the field. Morris Sharpe is the candidate for Governor.

An International Congress for the discussion of the best means to prevent and cure drunkenness was held recently in Westminster Hall, London.

Reports of marvellous activity in Jerusalem are being received. A large number of houses are being erected outside the walls and on the Mount of Olives.

A temperance camp-meeting will be held at Sea Beach, N. J., August 2. The Rev. Dr. J. C. Price, Edward Carswell and J. N. Stearns are to be among the speakers.

Of the twelve young men who recently graduated at Oberlin Theological Seminary, two will seek foreign fields of labor—C. A. Clark going to Japan, and J. King to South Natal, Africa.

The Board of Police Commissioners of New York have declined to grant permission to the Rev. John Dooly, of the Broome Street Tabernacle, to run a "Gospel wagon," with a choir and music.

The Protestant Episcopal Church building presented by Mrs. M. Packer Cummings to Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pa., has been consecrated and opened for religious service. It cost $300,000.

The new High License Law has gone into effect in Minnesota. In cities of over ten thousand population, the license is $1,000. In smaller places, $500. The number of licenses is 1,866, as against 2,296 last year.

The Shah of Persia has authorized the American missionaries to establish at Teheran a hospital in which, without regard to nationality or religion, all applicants for relief may be received for treatment. Dr. Torrence —who is physician to the mission—has been appointed director of the hospital.

At Mr. Moody's Summer School for College Students, 342 delegates attended the opening exercises. Of these about 40 are Y. M. C. A. secretaries, and 75 are workers sent by local associations. The remainder are students representing nearly every important college in these United States and Canada.

The gift of $150,000 and a large tract of land has been made to Cambridge, Mass., for a public library. The donor is Mr. Frederick H. Rindge, a young millionaire. He stipulates that certain tablets should be placed in conspicuous positions. On one of them is the following inscription: "It is noble to be pure; it is right to be honest; it is necessary to be temperate; it is wise to be industrious; but to know God is best of all."

The first annual meeting of the religious and benevolent society known as the King's Daughters, held in the Young Women's Christian Association Hall in New York, shows that the work is growing in favor. Its badge is a small silver Maltese cross on which are the letters I. H. N. (In His Name). The members of the society are divided into tens for special work. Some of these visit the sick, and other tens take up other branches of Christian work.

The Rev. A. B. Simpson has issued the usual annual invitation to the Convention on Christian Holiness, Faith-Healing and the Lord's Second Coming. It will be held at Old Orchard Beach, Me., from July 31 to August 9. Two days will be devoted to Foreign Missions, and the subject will be illustrated by a large map and various addresses, showing the needs of the world and the claims of this great work. Particulars as to special rates of fare, board, etc., may be obtained by writing to Rev. A. B. Simpson, Bible and Tract Repository, Madison Avenue and 45th Street, New York.

THE KING'S JUBILEE.

A New Sermon by Pastor C. H. Spurgeon.

"Let the children of Zion be joyful in their King."—Psalm 149 : 2.

Religion to Sanctify Loyalty—A King to Rejoice in—I. Jesus as King—To be Obeyed—Supreme in the Church—His Kingship to be Recognized at His Second Advent—II. His Royal Character—His Deeds of Love—His Achievements—His Principles of Government—III. The Benefits of His Reign—The Creator of His Nation—A Peaceful Reign—The Lost Souls of the Golden Horn—IV. The Continuance of His Reign—The Undying King of an Undying Nation—V. A Delightful Obedience—Illumination and Decoration.

YOUR streets will ring with joyous acclamations when the Queen and court pass through them to the Abbey; and well they may! The jubilee of a good and great Queen is an event to be celebrated with enthusiasm. Our hearts are fully in accord with those who bless and praise God for his goodness to this country in giving us fifty years of the peaceful reign of Victoria.

God save the Queen! None pronounce these words with a more emphatic meaning and fervor than we do this day. We not only do not grudge our fellow-countrymen all the joy they have in their Queen, but we share with them to the full their loyalty and gratitude. Had we known what some countries have known of tyranny, war, or anarchy, we should have a much more vivid sense of the benefits bestowed upon us through the long and happy reign of our well-beloved Sovereign. Let us take care to blend a holy gratitude to God with our fervent patriotism. Be it ours to praise and bless the God who has sent us these favors. Wishing boundless blessings upon our earthly Queen, we ascribe all her prosperity and ours to from whom all blessings flow. Religion must ever sanctify loyalty. It would be idolatrous to think of the human and forget the divine. "Wherefore should the heathen say, Where is now their God?" But, brethren, let us learn from the citizens of an earthly kingdom to rejoice in our heavenly King. Let us elevate our fervor into the higher sphere. There is another King, one Jesus; and, as believers in him, we are more truly citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem than of any city or country upon earth. Our divine Lord has called out believers from among the sons of men to make them a peculiar people, a nation set apart unto himself. The text under the term "children of Zion," indicates all who fear God, put their trust in him, and yield joyful service to his crown. Are we "children of Zion?" This is the question for each man's heart and conscience.

That Higher King

There have been kings in whom nobody could be joyful; they have been tyrannical, cruel, selfish, and their rule has oppresed their people. England has no such burden to bear. Under God our forefathers delivered us from despotism, and our Queen has faithfully observed those covenants which harmonize monarchy with liberty. For this may God be praised! Looking, however, to the higher sphere, we are joyful that Zion's King is of such a sort that his government is an unmingled blessing. We rejoice in our King, because our King makes us rejoice.

I. In order that we may carry out the exhortation of the text, let us begin by feeling that Jesus is Our King.

Alas! many who should be of a better mind are forgetful of this truth; they are not joyful in their King, for they have not yet learned his sovereignty. Brethren, Jesus must have the pre-eminence among men, since he is in person and character pre-eminent. Who among the sons of the mighty can be compared unto the Lord? When the princes of the earth are gathered in their glory, who among them can be named in the same day with the Prince of Peace? Jesus is the best, therefore is he the chief. His person and character wear about them a superlative majesty; let every hand present a crown to him. "He is the standard-bearer among ten thousand, and the altogether lovely." Since the Lord Jesus has no equal nor even rival, he is a born King; and were not men most blind and foolish, they would all salute him with loyal homage.

When we have remembered that he is thus the best and noblest, let us recollect that to each believer he is

A King to be Obeyed.

He said, "Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am." It is easy to think of Christ as a Saviour, and yet to forget that he is Lord; but the thought is as evil as it is easy. Do any of you accept the promises of our Lord and neglect his precepts? This is to sin against Him in a grievous manner. You proclaim yourselves rebels, and yet wish to share in the pardon which He brings. Is not this to act the part of hypocrites? Is His cross precious to you? How can it be if you turn your back on His crown? For once I will reverse a time-honored motto, and say, "No crown, no cross." Jesus will not be your Saviour if you refuse to let Him be your Sovereign. You cannot have half of your Lord.

Do not attempt to divide your Lord's offices, The robe of Christ is without seam; and if even the rough soldiers cried, "Let us not rend it," we earnestly beg you not to tear it. Let us accept sanctification as well as justification, righteousness, as well as peace, the cleansing water, as well as the pardoning blood. If we have a special joy in Jesus in any one capacity more than another, let us be joyful in Him as our King. It should be bliss to us to be subject to His holy rule. If there seems anything hard about His claim of over heart and life, why, then, at the outset, we are disqualified from rejoicing in our King.

Absolute Sovereignty

Further, let us follow this thought into a region where it is much needed. Jesus is King in the midst of His church How often is this truth overlooked! Certain churches refer to the minutes of deceased leaders, or to the decisions of councils, or to the theological systems of eminent reformers; but all this is forgetfulness of the one supreme authority. We have no king in the church but Christ. There is but one law-book in the church, and that is the Holy Scripture, inspired of the Spirit of God. There can be no unity in the church except in Jesus, and in obedience to His undivided rule.

Jesus will be seen to be king in the day of

His Second Advent.

If you will listen, and your ears have been opened, you may hear this day the trumpet which announces his speedy arrival. "Behold the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him," is the voice of these latter days to a church that slumbers. Both wise and foolish virgins sleep. The midnight starts at His clarion note: "He comes! He comes!" "He shall reign in Mount Zion before his ancients gloriously." We are to look for this, and to pray for this, saying every day in our prayer, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven; for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever and ever." O ye saints, at this hour set your Lord on His throne. You have seen him in his crimson vesture, bowing in the garden of his agony; you have seen Him "despised and rejected of men;" you have seen Him on the tree of doom. Dry your eyes. He is no more the 'man of sorrows" nor the "acquaintance of grief;" heaven adores Him, He hath gone up to His throne again amid the hosannas of the angels and the hallelujahs of the redeemed. Let us praise and adore Him this day.

II. Secondly, let us go on to study

His Royal Character,

